Lina said actual drills on anti-terrorist measures should be carried out to ensure that public safety plans are really working.

GMA promotes tourism potentials of Boracay, other Visayan islands

BAIS CITY, Negros Oriental – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today described as “good, clean fun” Tuesday night’s dancing at the world-renowned Boracay Island.

The President stressed this as she dismissed reports criticizing how she could dance the night away in Boracay in the face of various problems confronting the country.

“I prefer Boracay dancing than those politicians who love to bash me at every opportunity,” she explained. “It was nothing but good, clean fun with the First Gentleman (Atty. Jose Miguel Arroyo).”

She noted that her official party and participants to the Strong Republic Nautical Highway caravan enjoyed the hospitality of islanders.

This and the island’s natural splendor have made Boracay a major tourist destination in the Philippines. Many have called it Paradise Island.

The President and her delegation spent the night in Boracay after ending the second day of a three-day Roll-on Roll-off (Ro-Ro) caravan that would showcase the country’s eastern seaboard route for Ro-Ro passenger and cargo transit and tourism potentials.

Today, the President went dolphin watching at the Bais City port in eastern Negros Island. The city is fast becoming another tourist attraction.

She was thrilled at the sight of dolphins breaching, spinning and riding the bow of the Presidential pumpboat that also had on board Atty. Arroyo and local officials led by Negros Oriental Governor George Arnaiz.

Meanwhile, Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said the President wanted to show domestic and foreign tourists that the places the caravan visited “are now easy to reach and safe.”

Bunye also brushed aside criticisms on the President, saying that despite her hectic schedule, she continued to be on top of the situation.

“I hope they were only joking,” Bunye said when asked to comment on calls for the President to stop the caravan and focus on other more important concerns.

The three-day caravan started in Batangas City and would end in Dapitan City, Zamboanga del Norte Thursday (April 3).

GMA appoints Dayrit as SARS Crisis Manager

BAIS CITY, Negros Oriental – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today named Health Secretary Manuel Dayrit as Crisis Manager for the Severe Acute Respiratory Syndrome (SARS) malady.

The President made the announcement in the course of a three-day Strong Republic Nautical Highway caravan that launched the government's Roll-on Roll-off (Ro-Ro) program while promoting tourism in islands in the Visayas and Mindanao.

She said Dayrit's team resembled that of the Middle East Preparedness Team (MEPT) under Ambassador Roy Cimatu.

While Cimatu's MEPT are looking after the safety and welfare Filipino expatriates in the Middle East against acts of terrorism spawned by the Iraq war, Dayrit's group will look after the safety and welfare of the people against the deadly SARS which has afflicted people in many countries, she added.

In a press briefing aboard a Ro-Ro vessel cruising the Iloilo City-Bacolod City route late Tuesday afternoon, the President directed the Department of Health (DOH) to coordinate with the Coast Guard and other agencies to protect seafarers coming in and going out of all major ports.

"We must try to lock out the disease as much as possible" and contain threats from SARS, she said.

The SARS should be dealt with in as much the same way as the government is dealing with the other crisis, she pointed out.

She also took the occasion to congratulate the DOH for doing its best to make the country SARS-free.

Meanwhile, the President ordered the police and the military to sustain heightened alert in the wake of continued threats from terrorists.

She said the visibility of security forces at the Ninoy Aquino International Airport "must be brought to all major ports," she said.

On Kuratong Baleleng Case

Instead of bashing the Supreme Court by innuendo, Senator Lacson should welcome the opportunity to clear himself once and for all. Falsely attributing political motives to the decision constitutes an assault against the integrity of the judicial system and is a disservice to our country.

On SARS

Senator Joker Arroyo was probably kidding. But if he was serious, his remarks are based on the wrong premise as they tend to portray a situation worse than it really is. For the record, we don't have a single confirmed case of SARS. The problem is adequately attended to not only by the Department of Health but also the other agencies of government. The President is on top of the situation and she is in close touch with Health Secretary Manuel Dayrit whom she has designated as crisis manager to deal with this emergency.

Filipino domestics file case before HK High Court questioning legality of wage cut, levy

ON BOARD THE M/V DON RAMON DE BOHOL (from Dumaguete to Dapitan) – The Philippine Consul General in Hong Kong, Vicky Bataclan, informed President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo during a teleconference today that Filipino domestics have filed a case before the High Court of the Hong Kong Special Administrative Region (HKSAR) questioning the legality of the levy or wage cut imposed on foreign domestic workers by the HKSAR government.

Named respondents in the case filed yesterday, the day the wage cut took effect, were HKSAR chief executive in Council, the director of immigration and the Employees Retraining Board.

The case was filed by five Filipino and two Indonesian domestics, two migrant organizations and a Filipino lawyer residing in Hong Kong, who is an employer of a domestic worker.

The case is being handled pro bono by Massie and Clement Solicitors, and barristers Gerard McCoy SC (Queens Counsel), Philip Ross and Neil Thomson.

The case is seeking a court order to set aside and declare as illegal and unconstitutional the decision by the Chief Executive in Council on February 25, 2003 to reduce the minimum allowable wage of domestics by HK$400 per month and impose a levy of HK$400 on the employers. The lawyers also are filing for damages, on behalf of the plaintiffs, for money wrongly expropriated by the HKSAR government.

The President earlier announced that the Philippine government will fully support Filipino workers in Hong Kong who will avail themselves of all possible mechanism to contest the levy or wage cut even as efforts of Philippine official will continue to explore all means possible in calling upon the sense of fair play of the Hong Kong government for it to reconsider the implementation of this discriminatory policy.

First Gentleman Atty. Jose Miguel Arroyo visited Hong Kong recently and met with lawyers of Massie and Clement who have volunteered to assist and handle the case for free as an expression of their belief in the justness of the cause of the Filipino domestics.

The lawyers of the domestics claim that the decision of the HKSAR Chief Executive in Council imposing a wage cut is ultra vires (exceeded its authority) on technical grounds and based on "irrelevant consideration." They also said the levy on the employers is actually a tax imposed on the domestics which is illegal and unconstitutional.

It was noted that the HKSAR government made the decision imposing the levy and wage cut without the passage of a substantive law and therefore is without any legal effect. As the levy is a form of taxation, the Legislative Council should have approved the imposition of this tax as required by Article 73 (3) of the Hong Kong Basic Law, the lawyers of the domestics said.

GMA orders crackdown on Davao City Wharf bombers

DAPITAN CITY, Zamboanga del Norte — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo last night ordered the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) and the Philippine National Police (PNP) to do a crackdown on the lawless elements and terrorists who bombed the Sasa Wharf in Davao City.

The bombing killed 15 persons and injured more than 40 other individuals, according to the latest reports.

The President stressed that the AFP as well as the PNP must take appropriate measures, including the setting up of visible checkpoints, for the arrest of these lawless elements and terrorists. She vowed that they, together with the Davao City airport bombers, will be hunted down and made to face the full force of the law.

The President said the wharf incident is part of the renewed challenge of terrorism she warned about in the past weeks.

“This is a grim reminder that we must always be alert and watchful, and those who wish to do us harm in a manner that creates a wide swath of fear must not intimidate us,” the President said.

The President pointed out that the police and military alone cannot do the job. “This is a total war requiring the full attention and resources of the entire community,” the President said.

Asked if Mindanao would be placed under a state of emergency, the President replied that only Davao City and Davao Provinces would be declared under a state of lawless violence. “And under a state of lawless violence, I can empower the military to do these crackdowns, and I am doing so,” the President said.

The President will proceed to Davao today to assess the situation.

Justice will be done, GMA assures victims of Davao bombing

DAVAO CITY – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo assured victims of the April 2 bombing in front of the Philippine Ports Authority wharf at the Sasa district here that “justice will be done.”

“A speedy and thorough investigation is in order. The authorities will issue the necessary bulletins as evidence is gathered,” said the President during a press briefing at the Marco Polo Hotel here.

The President visited the scene of the bombing that killed 16 people and left 55 others injured.

There was an eerie atmosphere as the President, joined by some members of her Cabinet, stood over the exact spot where the bomb was exploded to offer prayers and flowers to the victims. There were still traces of blood on the scene, and pieces of slippers and footwear lay scattered all around.

The President then proceeded to the Davao Medical Center where 37 of those injured were brought. The others injured were brought to San Pedro Hospital (13), Davao Doctors Hospital (three), Davao Medical Mission (one), and Brokenshire (one).

During the press briefing, the President noted that “the threat of terror will be relentless.”

“It will be contained only by the extent of our collective vigilance at all times (because) it will rise and escalate to the extent it can exploit our own complacency,” said the President.

The Sasa bombing came less than a month after a bomb ripped through a waiting shed at the airport terminal that left 21 dead and 117 injured.

The President underscored that she had actually started counter terrorism inspections in Metro Manila last week, particularly her surprise check of the security measures being undertaken at the Ninoy Aquino International Airport.

The President, who is coming off a four-day launch of the Strong Republic Nautical Highway from Batangas to Dapitan in Zamboanga del Norte, also said that she had raised the same warning as she traversed several ports throughout her trip from Luzon to Mindanao.

“Our alertness must be all encompassing, penetrating and nationwide,” she said. She likewise emphasized that both the government and the public “cannot leave an opening for the enemy that strikes when it sees us relax our guard.”

“We must harden potential targets by demonstrating collective vigilance,” said the President, who added that the fight against terrorism is a “total war requiring the full attention and resources of the entire community.”

“Each citizen must be the eyes and ears to sense danger and must have the initiative to immediately report to the authority,” she said.

Davao united against terrorism, lawlessness

DAVAO CITY—The united Davao community who defied and crushed lawlessness and insurgency here through the Alsa Masa Group in the 80s have again risen to the occasion to support President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo’s declaration of a state of lawless violence in the Davao provinces.

Two bombing incidents within a month of each other in this otherwise peaceful southern city have made Davaoenos both indignant and vigilant.

But other than this, they fully supported the President’s declaration, according to City Mayor Rodrigo Duterte.

“Anybody who is under fear would welcome such a declaration,” he said. “This gives us the legal backing to run after the culprit.”

The declaration, an offshoot of Wednesday night’s bombing at the Sasa wharf here that killed at least 16 persons and wounded 55 others, empowered the President to call on the Armed Forces of the Philippines to suppress lawlessness in the Davao area.

Covered under the declaration are Davao City and the provinces of Davao del Norte, Davao del Sur and Davao Oriental.

The President had earlier appointed Duterte as crisis manager for Southern and Central Mindanao (Regions 11 and 12 respectively) in the aftermath of the March 4 bombing at the arrival area of the Davao City International Airport.

Despite the tension brought about by Wednesday night's bomb blast, people here are not panicking. Earlier, Duterte called on his constituents to remain calm and unfazed by the terrorist attack.

"The target of terrorism is to bring you down to your knees and force you to negotiate," he said. "Deaths are only incidental."

The wharf bomb explosion was the 17th bombing incident in Mindanao since January and the second to strike this city.

Despite the heightened security alert, Duterte said nobody could prevent bombings from happening 100 percent, "unless, of course, we close Davao City and ask everybody to strip."

Davaoenos calm but alert in wake of Sasa blast

DAVAO CITY—Despite President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's declaration of a state of lawless violence here, Davaoenos went about their usual routine, unmindful of Wednesday night's bomb blast at the Sasa wharf here, the second that rocked the city in a month's time.

There were no cancelled flights, no abrupt troop movement, no nothing. Only heightened security in the wake of the latest terrorist attack that killed at least 16 people and wounded 55 more.

Department of the Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose Lina, Jr. liked what he is seeing. "That's the way things should be," he said. "People should remain calm although vigilant."

He dismissed fears that the declaration of lawless violence would mean curtailment of people's right, saying it is only intended to allow the military to take a more active role in suppressing violence in support of the crisis manager.

"According to the President, hindi lang tayo umasa sa pulis at (we do not only depend on the police and the military)," he said, adding that citizens and barangay officials should also be involved in the anti-terrorism campaign.

"Terrorism knows no time, no boundaries. We should never lower our guard," he added.

Shattered pieces of glass, slippers and torn pieces of clothing were the only grim reminder left of the senseless bombing at the Davao City port.

Among the victims was 15-year-old Janet Brillantes, a junior high school student at the Sto. Tomas Temple High School, who was among those visited by President Macapagal-Arroyo today at the Davao City Medical Center.

Janet's mother said her daughter was only fetching a neighbor at the port when the bomb exploded.

Janet sustained head, back and leg wounds and could hardly talk to the President.

She, however, managed to put on a faint smile when the President approached her bed.

DFA instructs all RP missions abroad to adopt contingency plan against S.A.R.S.

The Department of Foreign Affairs has instructed all Philippine foreign missions to adopt a contingency plan against the severe acute respiratory syndrome (SARS) to avoid its spread among overseas Filipino workers (OFWs), including Filipino seafarers.

In a report to Malacañang, Foreign Affairs Secretary Blas F. Ople said the contingency measures that the DFA has adopted include the setting up of a SARS desk in every embassy and consulate where Filipinos can receive updated information about the disease.

Earlier, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo ordered all concerned government agencies “to lock out the disease as much as possible and contain its threats.”

She has appointed Health Secretary Manuel Dayrit as crisis manager for the SARS, authorizing him to take all the necessary measures to prevent the killer pneumonia from spreading to the Philippines.

The President said that SARS should be dealt with in much the same way that the government has dealt with other crisis.

According to Ople, the directive that he has issued to all foreign missions is in compliance with the preventive measures ordered by the President.

Ople stressed that access to official reports of the World Health Organization and Department of Health would help reduce panic among Filipinos abroad.

He said that the Philippines is fortunate to have no known SARS case to date while maintaining that special care should be given to the health needs of OFWs including Filipino seafarers who travel from port to port.

Recently, SARS claimed the life of Adela Dalingay, a Filipino domestic helper based in Hong Kong.

Ople also ordered embassy officials in China to make sure that all Filipinos working there are properly informed about the symptoms related to SARS.

He cited reports that China remains the country with the largest number of SARS cases. According to the World Health Organization, 806 cases with 34 deaths have been reported in China.

There are 700 Filipinos in Guangdong province where SARS was said to have originated.

According to the DFA, Filipinos in China remain calm and have kept to their normal routine despite the SARS outbreak. Hospital employees, however, are required to don surgical masks while on duty.

Ople said Filipino seafarers, particularly those visiting ports situated in countries with known SARS cases, are a special concern following a report from the Philippine embassy in Jakarta that an Indonesian crewman died of suspected SARS on the way to Singapore from Hong Kong.

Another six Indonesian crewmen are still in quarantine at Singapore’s seaport.

“We have slightly more than two hundred thousand seafarers deployed overseas and I urge them to take the necessary preventive measures against SARS during these port calls,” Ople added.

He suggested that the Department of Labor and Employment and Department of Health work closely with the different manning agencies and local maritime associations in providing SARS updates to Filipino seafarers.

Embassies and consulates were also given strict instructions to meet with seafarers’ groups and their dependents abroad in a bid to expand the reach of the Philippine government’s SARS preventive education campaign, Ople said.

Meanwhile, Ople approved the purchase of 3,400 surgical masks to be sent to the Philippine Consulate-General in Hong Kong for use of personnel and daily visitors to the consulate.

The request for surgical masks came from Consul-General Victoria Bataclan who said she has formed a monitoring team to visit 16 Filipinos confined in various hospitals, including five who are confirmed SARS patients.

Bataclan cited difficulties encountered by the Consulate in sourcing the WHO-recommended masks as well as its prohibitive cost at HK$4.00 a piece.

Consulate officials noted that the SARS outbreak in Hong Kong has led most Filipino domestic helpers to spend their usual weekend day-offs at home with their employers instead of going to the park or mall.

“Our Filipino workers in Hong Kong are quite aware of the health risks posed by SARS and have become very cautious with their movements within Hong Kong,” Bataclan said.

She added that the Special Administrative Region of Hong Kong recently turned over 180,000 primers on SARS specifically for Filipino OFWs.

“The Information Ministry sought the help of the Consulate in having its official SARS primer translated to Pilipino for the benefit of our OFWs,” Bataclan explained.

The primers have already been distributed to members of the Filipino community.

GMA happy over acquittal of 5 OFWs in Kuwait

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo Thursday night expressed elation over the acquittal of five Filipinos in Kuwait on charges of conspiracy and murder.

Philippine Ambassador to Kuwait Bayani Mangibin, in a report to the President during the regular daily teleconference in Malacañang, identified the five acquitted overseas Filipino workers (OFWs) as Mary Jane Bitos, Teddy Tomara, Jimmy Binuya, Rosalia Baclig and Norayza Esich.

The five Filipinos were charged with the murder of Bitos' husband, Luc Echier, in 2002.

They were released by the Kuwaiti police last October 2002 on the condition that they would be housed at the Philippine Embassy.

On Thursday (April 3), the Court of Cassation (Kuwait Supreme Court) issued a release order for the five Filipinos, as it found no evidence of the crime imputed to them.

The Philippine embassy has provided legal assistance to the five.

During the teleconference, the President asked Mary Jane how she is and if she would be coming home soon.

"Congratulations on your acquittal," the President said.

During the President's state visit to Kuwait last February, the foreign government pardoned 20 Filipino prisoners who have been jailed for various offenses.

On top of this, the Kuwait government has also allowed the return to the Philippines of some 200 OFWs who ran away from their employers during the past several months or even years.

Davao Incident

The President will not let terrorists succeed in turning Davao into a city ruled by fear.

She is confident that Mayor Rodrigo Duterte, aided by the AFP, PNP and the entire citizenry, will catch the culprits soon and will return the city back to normalcy. Duterte has done this before. He can do it again.

Meantime, the President asks for a strong inter-faith solidarity, unity and forbearance. She says there is no way we can win against terror if there are ethnic and religious barriers among our people.

Mawanay

Ador Mawanay has more comic and entertainment rather than evidentiary value. He is the same person Senator Lacson once called a liar. He is such a good acrobat and should join the circus.

Gov't has enough resources to meet S.A.R.S. threat — GMA

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today assured the public that the government has the expertise and enough resources in the public health system to adequately manage any possible severe acute respiratory syndrome (SARS) case.

In a press briefing in Malacañang this morning, the President announced her formal creation of a SARS management team in response to the public's growing concern on the dangers which SARS poses to Filipinos.

Although there has been no documented SARS case yet in the Philippines as reported by the World Health Organization, countries and territories like China, Hong Kong, Vietnam, Singapore, Canada and the United States have recorded cases of the killer pneumonia.

The SARS management team is headed by Health Secretary Manuel Dayrit with the following as members: Labor and Employment Secretary Patricia Sto. Tomas, Foreign Affairs Undersecretary Lauro Baja, Immigration Commissioner Andrea Domingo, Interior and Local Government Undersecretary Ed Soliman, Press Undersecretary Milton Alingod, Commodore Ruben Lista of the Philippine Coast Guard, Ninoy Aquino International Airport General Manager Edgar Manda, and Dr. Jaime Montoya of the Philippine Society of Microbiology and Infectious Diseases.

The President designated National Security Adviser Roilo Golez as the adviser of the crisis management team on SARS.

According to the President, the Department of Health has already put in place all measures and strategies to prevent the entry and spread of SARS in the Philippines.

The team will be on top of a well-coordinated implementation of a system that consists of the following components:

1. A rapid identification, isolation and management of suspected SARS cases in hospitals;
2. The prevention of the entry into the country and spread of possible cases through an effective quarantine system at Philippine ports of entry; and
3. A communication system that will not only be able to manage the flow of vital information to the public but also handle public anxiety on the deadly viral infection.

In the event of an outbreak of SARS in the country, the President said that the San Lazaro Hospital and Research Institute of Tropical Medicine will be at the apex of the hospital system that is properly equipped to handle the influx of large numbers of cases.

The President enjoined everyone to contribute to the government's collective effort to manage the situation. "Do not entertain rumors spread by text messages, e-mail or any other means," she said.

She said that if the public has any concerns, call up any of the SARS hotlines for information and help.

The President likewise called on the people to be calm but prepare for the worst. "This was our policy for the Iraq war and we are reaping the dividends of our collective efforts," she said.

What the country needs today, the President said, is education, information, alertness, sobriety and a sense of public responsibility among all Filipinos.

After making a formal statement on SARS, the President then met with the newly-formed SARS management team at the Ramos Room of Malacañang.

PNP sees need to defend, not just secure, country's ports and installations

DAVAO CITY—In the aftermath of the April 2 bombing of the Sasa Wharf here, merely securing the country's ports and installations may no longer be enough.

"There is now a need to defend our vital installations far more than just securing them," said PNP Deputy Director for Administration Edgardo Aglipay.

Aglipay was directed by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo Thursday to create a task force that would integrate all security efforts at the air and seaports of Davao, which have reeled from a second bombing attack in less than a month.

Last Wednesday night, a bomb ripped a crowd of passengers and well-wishers just outside Philippine Port Authority (PPA) compound here that left 15 dead and scores injured.

Under the newly-created task force, all the agencies operating within and immediately outside the port's premises will be integrated into a defense unit tasked with securing the port.

The authority of the task force will extend to as far as two kilometers from the port, according to Aglipay.

Aglipay has actually implemented a similar scheme in Zamboanga City, which has so far been successful in deterring terrorist attacks.

The port manager will act as task force commander, with representatives from the PNP, AFP, the local government, Bureau of Customs and Bureau of Immigration as members.

The task force will have intelligence, investigation, security, logistics and technical capabilities enough to frustrate or cope with any terrorist attack.

Earlier, The President underscored the need for the task force to stage regular security drills to develop the port as "target hardened".

The President has also called for "extraordinary security measures" in this city after the Sasa wharf bombing.

First Gentleman refuses to give credence to Mawanay's 'tale,' says guy has zero credibility

First Gentleman Jose Miguel Arroyo today dismissed suggestions from some quarters that he files libel or perjury complaints against Angelo "Ador" Mawanay, saying that he would rather ignore the latter's allegations.

In a radio interview, the First Gentleman said that if you file a case against Mawanay, you would only give importance to a person who has no credibility at all.

Mawanay, who was earlier tagged by the Intelligence Service of the Armed Forces of the Philippines (ISAFP) as its star witness against opposition Senator Panfilo Lacson, has made a turnabout and implicated the First Gentleman in his so-called expose on Lacson.

The First Gentleman said that Senator Lacson himself has called Mawanay a congenital liar and an incredible witness.

He said that he and President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo were in Davao City Thursday to personally attend to the needs of the victims of the bombing incident in the city when they heard of Mawanay's fantastic tale.

"Kaya pinagtatawanan na lang namin (That's why we just laughed)," the First Gentleman said.

In a separate statement, Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said that Mawanay has more comic and entertainment rather than evidentiary value.

"He us a good acrobat and should join the circus," Bunye said.

Statement of Presidential Spokesman Ignacio R. Bunye on President's birthday tomorrow

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo is foregoing her birthday celebration tomorrow. She has decided instead to earmark the amount of One Million Pesos to help in the campaign against terrorism.

The President is making available the amount as reward money for any information which would lead to the early arrest of the Davao City bombers and bring them to justice.

GMA elated over lower inflation rate

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today expressed elation over the report that the country's inflation rate has slipped to 2.9 percent in March compared to 3.1 percent in February.

The President took note of the decrease in inflation, which also dipped from 3.6 percent a year ago, after receiving a report from Socio-economic Planning Secretary Romulo Neri.

Inflation is defined as any sustained or continuous increase in the prices of consumer goods and services.

In his report, Neri said inflation went down due to the slowdown in the inflation of food, beverages and tobacco that mitigated the faster increases in the prices of fuel, light and water.

He said the abundant supply of some food items – to include fish, corn, eggs, fruits and vegetables — led to lower prices.

Neri added that fuel and services remained as the main sources of inflation.

The prices of fuel rose 13.7 percent compared to last year's level but electricity prices were lower by 3.5 percent year-on-year due to the reduction in the power purchase adjustment last June 2002, Neri noted.

The price of water went up by 11.1 percent compared to year ago levels due to the increase in water prices last January.

Neri added that inflation is expected to remain manageable in the coming months.

GMA directs officials to return normalcy in Davao

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today issued three directives aimed at immediately bringing back normalcy in Davao City and the Davao provinces.

In a brief statement during her regular daily teleconference, the President directed Chief Superintendent Edgardo Aglipay, Philippine National Police (PNP) Deputy Director for Administration, and Chief Superintendent Isidro Lapena, Regional Commander of the PNP Regional Command 11, to:

- Maintain law and order with an even hand to prevent inter-religious strife, and
- Speedily identify and get the culprits and return the normal course of community life and commerce (in Davao City) as soon as possible,

The President also directed Presidential Adviser on the Peace Process Eduardo Ermita and Office of the Muslim Affairs Executive Director Zamzamin Ampatuan “to work closely with Davao City Mayor Rodrigo Duterte in restoring the rampart of inter-faith solidarity in Davao City.”

“Mayor Duterte is on top of the situation and must have the full cooperation of the military, law enforcement and related agencies. Let us contain the physical and psychological consequences of this event,” she said.

“Terrorists want to put our lives in disarray, to institute suspicion and paranoia, to divide and to rule with the weapon of fear. Let us show them we are not afraid,” she said.

“We will put up a good fight for law and order and we will work together to rebuild our lives,” she added.

The President also called on the people to unite as she noted that “there is no way we can win against terror if we put up ethnic and religious barriers against each other.”

Filipino soldiers will do the fighting in Balikatan 03-1 — Ople

Regardless of how either side characterizes the planned Balikatan 03-1, there has never been any question that it will be Filipino soldiers who will do the fighting, according to Foreign Affairs Secretary Blas F. Ople.

Ople made the statement in response to speculations that Balikatan 03-1 will allow US troops to engage in combat.

“The objective basis that should characterize our military cooperation with the US will be the terms of reference for Balikatan 03-1. There is a clear understanding that Balikatan 03-1 will be based on and build on the success of Balikatan 02-1 which was held in Basilan,” Ople said.

Ople said that before the government even began discussions with the US on Balikatan 03-1, it already had a clear idea of what it wanted to achieve and “what we would allow to be done and what we would not allow to be done.”

“In crafting this policy, we were guided by the framework established by the Supreme Court when the constitutionality of the Balikatan in Basilan was challenged. And the policy is this: US forces will not be allowed to engage in combat in Balikatan 03-1. The fighting will be, and will always be, done by our soldiers,” Ople stressed.

The secretary said that this policy will admit only one exception, and it is an exception that will be interpreted in its most restrictive sense. He said that this exception is the exercise of the right of self-defense, adding that “it is an exception that will be subject to clear limitations. That is, the use of force should be reasonable and proportionate, and shall only be used for the duration of the direct threat.”

Ople said that like in the Balikatan 02-1 in Basilan, the US will provide training, assistance and advice to our soldiers, which our soldiers can then directly apply in the field, and where US soldiers will monitor, assess, provide feedback as well as provide exposure to modern communication, transport and other technologies and capabilities.

Tomas.

GMA orders Domingo to go after human smugglers

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo Friday night ordered the Bureau of Immigration to tighten its campaign against syndicated human smugglers who endanger the lives of Filipinos who want to work abroad even without legal documents to leave the country.

The President directed Immigration Commissioner Andrea Domingo to stop human smuggling during her regular daily teleconference, this time with Ambassador to Jordan Ruperto Dizon, at Malacañang's briefing room.

She told Domingo to deploy agents to arrest human smugglers who, in most times, disguise themselves as staff members of escort services in airports.

During the teleconference, the President learned that Lea Cordero, a native of Sultan Kudarat, illegally left the Philippines for Jordan with the help of an escort service agency.

Cordero is having problems, after running away from her employer recently but having no legal documents to show.

The President asked Cordero if she remembered the name of her escort but the latter did not recall it.

"Ma'am, pasensiya na po pero hindi ko po matandaan kung sino po iyon. Basta na lang dumating kami sa airport at (sila ang) nagturo sa amin kung ano ang gagawin namin (I can't recall the escort service's name. We arrived at the airport and they gave me instructions on how to go about)," Cordero told the President.

The President assured Cordero that she would talk to Commissioner Domingo to end the nefarious activities of human smuggling rings, and have the perpetrators arrested and prosecuted.

Cordero praised the President's immediate action, saying that the President's move would protect Filipinos from human smugglers.

Cordero, together with 20 other overseas Filipino workers who ran away from their employers, also asked the help of the President to return to the Philippines.

Cordero and her companions are in the custody of the Philippine Embassy in Jordan, waiting for the regularization of their documents.

President's radio address to the nation

Mga minamahal kong kababayan, tayo ay nabubuhay sa mapanganib na panahon. Ang pinakahuling insidente ng pambobomba sa Davao City ay nagtuturo sa atin na ang pinakamahalagang leksiyon sa ngayon ay maging mapagbantay. Kailangang maging listo tayo laban sa di-nakikitang kaaway, na walang suot na uniporme at walang dalang watawat. Isang kaaway na ang tanging misyon ay maghasik ng takot at sirain ang ating hinahon at pagkakaisa bilang isang bansa.

Ito ang panahon para tanggapin ng bawat Pilipino ang hamon sa kanya. Maari tayong magpadala sa takot na maghahatid lamang sa atin sa pamamanhid at kawalang pag-asa, o maari tayong tumayo at lumaban. Mangangahulugan ng matitinding sakripisyo para pangalagaan ang ating katatagan bilang isang bansa, at ang ating pagkaka-isa bilang isang lahi.

We are faced with a serious challenge. We must find within ourselves, within our own hands and resources, within our solidarity as a people—the capacity to fight, to prevail and to win.

Walang sinumang dapat bale-walain ang hangad nating kapayapaan. Nakahanda tayong ibigay ang ating buhay at karangalan para dito.

Pero ang kapalit ng kapayapaan ay palagiang pagbabantay. Hindi ko tinutukoy dito ang kaalistuhan lamang ng mga sundalo at kapulisan na nasa unahan ng laban. Ibig ko ring sabihin nito ang pagmamatyag ng mga ordinaryong mamamayan na nagtrabaho sa kalye o bukid man. Tinutukoy ko ang pagmamatyag ng mga Pilipino na may pananagutan para sa seguridad at kapakanan ng kanilang mga kapuwa. Tinutukoy ko ang bawa't Pilipino na handang maging mata at tainga ng komunidad para alamin ang pangamba at kikilos para ito ay supilin.

The price of freedom is perpetual vigilance. Complacency will only bring us ruin and peril.

Sa Mindanao, ang tungkulin ng pagbabantay ay naka-atang sa mga komunidad ng Muslim at Kristiyano man. Ang ating pinag-isang paghahanda para labanan ang terorismo ay mahalaga hindi lamang para sa katahimikan at kaayusan, mahalaga rin ito para sa ating katataganang politikal at pagsulong na ekonomikal.

Ang mga terorista ay patuloy tayong paghahati-hatiin pero dapat nating lagpasan ang hangganan ng paniniwala at lipi para bumuo ng isang kasunduan ng kapayapaan at kaunlaran. Hanapin natin ang mga katangian na magpapayabong sa ating pagkaka-isa, kalayaan, paggalang sa buhay at pag-aari, damdamin ng komunidad at kapakanan ng lahat.

Ang mensahe ko para sa mga taga-Mindanao ay ini-uukol ko rin sa buong bansa. Nahaharap tayo ngayon sa mabibigat at matitinding mga problema. Ang banta ng SARS ay patuloy na lumalaganap at idinadalangin natin na hindi ito makakarating sa ating bansa. Ang ating mga manggagawa sa Gitnang Silangan ay nabubuhay pa rin sa ilalim ng pangamba, bagama't handa sila sa anumang krisis. Ang pinakahuling pambobomba sa Davao ay nagdulot ng panibagong takot sa ating mga kababayan.

Ang inyong pamahalaan ay gagawin ang lahat ng makakaya upang malampasan ang mga ganitong krisis. Sisiguruhin natin na mapipigilan ang banta ng SARS. Titiyakin natin na ang ating OFWs ay magiging ligtas sa panganib. Hindi tayo titigil hangga't hindi nahuhuli ang nasa likod ng pambobomba at mabigyan ng katarungan ang mga biktima ng terorismo.

Pero, kahit ang lahat ng ito ay hindi matutugunan ng ating paghahangad ng kapayapaan, pagkaka-isa, katatagan at pagbabalik sa normal, sa dakong huli, ang kailangan natin ay damdamin ng pagka-bansa na nagmumula sa damdamin ng pananagutan sa ating kapwa Pilipino. Hanggang hindi tayo natututong mangalaga sa bawa't isa at igalang ang ating kapwa, hindi natin makakamit ang mga biyayang ating inaasam.

Muli, ako ay nananawagan para sa moratorium ng pamumulitika. Marami tayong naririnig na tinig sa mga lansangan, pakinggan natin silang lahat. Maaring paminsan-minsan ay hindi nagtutugma ang ating mga boses, pero huwag nating kalimutan na tayo ay isang bansa sa ilalim ng isang bandila. Huwag nating hayaang mabawasan ang ating pagkakaisa at paninindigan. Magkakasama tayong palalampasin ang unos.

Nananawagan ako sa lahat ng ating mga mamamayan saan man kayo naroroon, sa mga lansangan at bukirin o nasa laot ng karagatan, sa mga bahay at paaralan, sa mga lugar ng trabaho at pagsasaya — ang inyong Pangulo ay pamumunuan ang ating bansa sa pinakamagaling na paraang aking kakayanin, kasama ang lahat ng lakas na aking matitipon.

Pero kailangan ko ang inyong tulong at suporta. Samahan niyo ako para pangalagaan ang ating bansa at isulong ito tungo sa kaunlaran.

Stay with me. Let us keep our nation secure, and march onward to a strong Republic.

Nawa'y patnubayan tayong lahat ng Maykapal. Maraming salamat po.

GMA happy over performance of RP stocks, exports

LUBAO, Pampanga – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today announced that despite negative global developments spawned by the ongoing war in Iraq, the Philippine stock market performed well in Asia and the country's export to the United States grew and remained competitive.

The President made the announcement in a short message she delivered before the end of a Thanksgiving Mass for her 56th birth anniversary celebration at the San Agustin Parish Church here.

In her message, she said she received two pieces of good news from an international analyst who said the country's stock market performed very well in Asia and the export industry became more competitive compared with other nations.

The news provided her one of the best birthday gifts she received today, she added.

“Again, we have the best performing stock market in (the Asian) region today. And even though the United States, our main market, is weakening, again our exports are still growing, which means that they are growing not because the market is growing but because they get more market share,” she said.

The President arrived here at 8:30 a.m. and attended the Thanksgiving Mass offered by her townmates. Pampanga Bishop Paciano Aniceto officiated the Mass.

The presidential convoy encountered temporary delay because of the ongoing rehabilitation work being made by the Philippine National Construction Corporation (PNCC) at the North Luzon Expressway.

First Gentleman Jose Miguel Arroyo and presidential children Pampanga Vice Governor Juan Miguel, Evangeline Lourdes and Diosdado accompanied the President.

The President said she prayed to the Almighty God to bring “peace and prosperity in our country, peace and reconciliation for our people and the peoples of the world, and peace in the next elections so that it will be a culmination of the new politics that we are trying to bring about.”

“I’m wishing for peace and reconciliation so that we can heal the deep division in our society. And I’m wishing for peace, and honest elections, so that the new politics can be the legacy of my administration,” she told reporters after the Mass.

The President also joined for breakfast the clergy and local officials led by Bishop Aniceto and Governor Lito Lapid, respectively, at the patio of the San Agustin Parish Church.

She likewise visited and inspected the booths of the local Kabuhayan fair being conducted in front of the Lubao municipal hall, some 50 meters away from the church.

The Cabinet Secretaries and local officials who attended the Mass included Executive Secretary Alberto Romulo, Foreign Affairs Secretary Blas Ople, Agriculture Secretary Luis Lorenzo, Jr., Agrarian Reform Secretary Roberto Pagdanganan, Governor Lapid and Lubao Mayor Dennis Pineda.

GMA enjoins people to help nation overcome crisis

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today challenged every Filipino to rise up to the times and be ready to make sacrifices to safeguard the stability of the nation.

In her regular weekly radio message, the President warned against complacency, saying it would only lead the nation to ruin.

“We are faced with a serious challenge. We must find within ourselves, within our own hands and resources, within our solidarity as a people – the capacity to fight, to prevail and to win,” she said.

Saying peace could only be attained through vigilance, she called on the citizenry to help the police and the military in securing the nation against terrorists.

She enjoined the people to be the eyes and ears of the community in the fight against terrorism.

“The price of freedom is perpetual vigilance,” she said. “Complacency will only bring us to ruin and peril.

Citing that terrorists would always seek to divide communities to be able to succeed in their objectives, the President called on both Muslims and Christians to see beyond their faith to forge a united front for peace and progress.

“Hanapin natin ang mga katangian na magpapayabong sa ating pagkakaisa, kalayaan, paggalang sa buhay at pag-aari, damdamin ng komunidad at kapakanan ng lahat (Let us find the virtues that will enhance our unity, freedom, respect for life and property and community belongingness),” she said.

Despite the crises that the country is facing like the SARS epidemic, the terrorist threats and the plight of overseas Filipino workers caught in the war in Iraq, the President assured the people that the government is doing everything within its resources to overcome these crises.

However, she said, the government needs the support of everyone.

“Sa dakong huli, ang kailangan natin ay damdamin ng pagkabansa na nagmumula sa damdamin ng pananagutan sa ating kapwa Pilipino (In the end, what we need is a strong sense of nationhood that comes from our sense of responsibility to our fellow Filipinos),” she said.

“Hanggang hindi tayo natututong mangalaga sa bawat isa at igalang ang ating kapwa, hindi natin makakamit ang mga biyayang ating inaasam (Until we learn to care for each other and respect one another, we will never attain the blessings that we have been longing for),” she added.

GMA cites Kabuhayan Fair set up in Lubao

LUBAO, Pampanga – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today noted the Kabuhayan (Livelihood) Fair various government agencies conducted here to promote productivity among the people of Pampanga.

The President visited the different fair booths located at the mini-park in front of the Lubao municipal hall, about 50 meters away from the San Agustin Parish Church where she earlier attended a Thanksgiving Mass held for her 56th birth anniversary celebration.

Officials said the fair opened before the President arrived here at 8:30 a.m.

Among the agencies that participated in the fair were PAG-IBIG, Department of Social Welfare and Development (DSWD), Department of Agriculture (DA), Philippine Charity Sweepstakes Office (PCSO), Department of Labor and Employment (DOLE), Technical Education and Skills Development Authority (TESDA), Technological and Livelihood Research Center (TLRC), Philippine National Police (PNP) and National Bureau of Investigation (NBI), PhilHealth, and Overseas Workers Welfare Administration (OWWA).

The PAG-IBIG released a P6-million check representing its loan assistance to qualified beneficiaries while the DSWD released P474,000, also in checks, to qualified Lubao residents.

The DA distributed sacks of assorted hybrid rice and corn seeds and turned over one four-wheeler truck worth P2 million to Lubao Mayor Dennis Pineda.

The DOLE, TESDA and TLRC set up a booth for jobs. The booth was an attraction for new graduates in the province.

PhilHealth also distributed 457 health cards to indigent families of Lubao, while the OWWA put up a call center so that residents could call their relatives working in the Middle East.

The PNP and NBI disseminated information about their thrusts, programs and projects.

A feature of the Kabuhayan fair was the tent of presidential daughter Evangeline Lourdes “Luli” Arroyo.

The tent, aptly labeled “Libreng Gupit Handog ni Presidente,” offered free haircuts to some 300 adults and children.

GMA opens LRT Line 2 Santolan-Cubao stretch

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today inaugurated the Santolan, Pasig City to Cubao, Quezon City stretch of the Light Rail Transit (LRT) Line 2, marking another achievement in her administration’s efforts to ease traffic through mass transit in Metro Manila.

After the President graced the Job Fair Program at the Kabuhayan 2003 Action Center at the SM Megamall in Mandaluyong City where she also had her daily teleconference with Middle East Preparedness Team Head

Ambassador Roy Cimatu, the President went to Santolan to lead in the inaugural ride aboard the Light Rail Transit Authority (LRTA)-Megatren Line 2.

With the President in the initial ride were former President Corazon Aquino, First Gentleman Atty. Jose Miguel Arroyo, daughter Evangeline Lourdes Arroyo, Transportation and Communications Secretary Leandro Mendoza, LRTA Administrator Teddy Cruz, Jr., local government officials and representatives from the Japanese government.

“Sana mapanatiling maganda at malinis ang mga train (I hope the trains would be well-maintained),” the President said after the inauguration ceremonies wherein she poured a bottle of champagne at the front part of the inaugural train.

The Santolan-Cubao stretch, representing Phase I of the project, spans 4.3 kilometers and traverses Aurora Blvd., a traffic-heavy route. It has four stations – Santolan (where the depot is located), Katipunan, Anonas and Cubao.

According to LRTA Administrator Cruz, Phase 2 of the rail system – from Cubao to Recto Avenue in Manila – is being fast tracked to meet its 2004 deadline.

Once fully operational, the entire line will span 13.8 kilometers and traverse Aurora Blvd., Ramon Magsaysay Blvd., Legarda St. and Recto Avenue.

Line 2, also dubbed as the “Megatren,” is at par in terms of facilities and technology with those in other parts of the world.

The trains are electrically-driven, using a solid state propulsion technology powered by electric motors of 1,500 volts. This enables the train to travel anywhere from 40 kilometers per hour to 80 kilometers per hour.

With such speed, travel time between Santolan and Cubao will take only from 10 to 15 minutes. At present, travel time between the two points takes from 45 minutes to more than an hour during rush hours.

A flat fare of P12 per trip will be charged from passengers after the free rides from today, April 5 to April 9.

The regular stored-value ticket will cost P120 each and the discounted ticket for senior citizens and persons with disability is priced at P96.

The megatren is commuter-friendly, specially for the mobility-impaired like the blind.

There are Braille engravings in the elevators to allow the visually-impaired to access the stations as well as path-finding tiles to guide them around the station concourse and platform levels.

For passengers using wheelchairs, there are reserved space for them inside the trains. Likewise, elevators have been installed in the stations for the use of the disabled.

Statement of the President on MILF

I call on our people to be vigilant and alert against more terrorist depredations and acts of cruelty against civilians. We shall not appease those who kill and maim the innocent. We shall not allow the peace talks to be held hostage by the threat of terror – and no more double talk. The MILF must unequivocally and unambiguously renounce terrorism in the pursuit of its objectives, and yield to the government all those who have engaged in terrorist acts – before expecting any relief from legal sanctions and punitive actions. Meanwhile, I call upon our vulnerable communities to strengthen their defense systems against terrorism, sharpen their crisis management plans; and tighten inter-community coordination to check terrorist movements. The government shall bring its case before Malaysia and Indonesia, the OIC and the whole Islamic world. We shall combine military action, stringent legal measures, community preparedness and full diplomatic pressure to bear upon this threat.

Statement of the President on SARS

The vigilance of our health authorities is commendable. They have quickly identified new cases and unearthed loopholes in the quarantine system. We shall maintain this policy of transparency and extreme care. The government is already taking corrective measures and will see through the recovery of the patients. Once more, I would like our people to remain calm, but fully alert. Review the preventive measures prescribed by the health department and religiously observe these. The key to fighting this disease is individual diligence and discipline. Be accountable for yourself and for the welfare of others.

Statement of the President on PIATCO

The government shall operate the NAIA Terminal 3 in the meantime, until the time is feasible for its privatization. The operation of the terminal shall adhere to full international standards of passenger safety and security. All legitimate commercial claims shall be justly compensated. There will be absolute fairness, transparency and due regard to the public interest. Further legal actions against errant parties are now within the purview of the Ombudsman. The legal process will be threshed out expeditiously and systematically, while airport operations will push through a comprehensive road map that will maximize economic impact, tourism gains and public convenience.

Statement of the President on surveys

Ratings will come and go. We are bent to sticking to our course unburdened by issues of popularity.

Statement of the President on Cha Cha

We are not involved in this debate. The Executive branch has its hands full on vital issues needing immediate attention. But one thing is sure as the sun rises in the morning – there will be elections in May 2004 under a cleaner, modernized electoral process that is part of the legacy of this administration.

Statement of the Presidential Spokesman Ignacio R. Bunye

On PIATCO

1. The President has instructed Justice Secretary Simeon Datumanong to refer the Supreme Court decision on PIATCO to the Office of the Ombudsman for the latter's appropriate action. The SC earlier ruled that those responsible for the flawed bidding should be held accountable.
2. The President has instructed Philippine Ambassador to Germany, Minerva Jean Falcon, to brief the German government on the SC decision and the possible action to be taken by the administration to see to it that foreign investors (in this instance, Franprot) are treated fairly and equitably.
3. The President said that Terminal 3 would eventually be privatized but she would prefer that its privatization be handled by the next administration. The immediate task at hand would be to open the terminal at the earliest possible time.

Bogus memo links OPAPP chief to sinister plan

Presidential Adviser on the Peace Process Eduardo R. Ermita today denied having crafted a memorandum for President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo entitled "The President's Four-Point Policy Framework in Addressing the Southern Philippines Secessionist/MILF Problem" which defines an action plan for the so-called Oplan Greenbase.

Ermita contended that the format, language, and subject matter of the memo is "totally out of line with how and why I do things."

"This grand and sinister plan to subsume the peace process under the supervision of the Department of National Defense even tends to undermine the mandate of my office. Now why would I do such a thing?," Ermita explained.

Moreover, Ermita added, the scope of the activities described in the memo spans areas that are way beyond his authority and capacity as Presidential Adviser on the Peace Process. "Who am I to dictate what NEDA and the AFP should do doing?" he asked.

Added Ermita: "There is no such thing as Oplan Greenbase which is supposedly being orchestrated by Malacañang, to capture (Moro Islamic Liberation Front) Chairman Hashim Salamat dead or alive, to clear the way for the entry of foreign investors interested in petroleum exploration, and a psywar operation to justify Balikatan 03-1."

Government agencies, including the Office of the Presidential Adviser on the Peace Process (OPAPP), have been receiving faxed copies of said bogus memo in an effort "to sow confusion and malign the peace process," according to Ermita.

GMA bats for anti-terrorism, anti-SARS, socio-economic bills in LEDAC meeting

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today certified at least 14 bills as priority measures that Congress could attend to immediately to resolve a number of national concerns, particularly terrorism, the dreaded Severe Acute Respiratory Syndrome (SARS) and socio-economic inadequacies.

In the meeting of the Legislative-Executive Development Advisory Council at Malacañang, the President classified seven of the bills as first priority and the other seven, second priority.

The seven first priority bills included the:

- Anti-Terrorism Act that defines the crime of terrorism and provides penalties therefore. It seeks to prevent the commission and financing of terrorist activities. The act is up for interpellations in the House of Representatives and the Senate.
- Quarantine Program to Prevent SARS that prevents the entry and/or spread of SARS and other diseases inimical to public health. The bill, pending in the committees of health in both the House and the Senate, introduces safeguards such as quarantine and other programs and provides penalties for violations.
- Farmland as Collateral Bill that intends to spur agricultural productivity, especially in the countryside. The bill provides beneficiaries of the Comprehensive Agrarian Reform Program and small farmland owners access to mainstream credit facilities. The bill, on third reading in the House and on second reading in the Senate, recognizes the use of certificates of land ownership as loan collateral with formal banking institutions.

The President expressed her desire to have this piece of legislation acted upon immediately, noting its benefits to the greater number of Filipinos involved in agriculture.

- Anti-Trafficking of Minors and Women Bill that will uphold the welfare and safety of Filipino women and children and accord them the full protection of their civil, political, economic and cultural rights. Up for bicameral review, the bill also aims to put in place a legal framework to stop and prevent various acts and other forms of trafficking of persons.
- Rationalizing the Pay Scale of the Judiciary Bill that seeks to enhance the system of administration of justice by adopting a rationalized compensation structure for the justices, judges and lawyers in the Judiciary. This will enable government to recruit and retain the best and brightest legal minds in the country. This bill is ready for third reading in the House and approved on third reading in the Senate.
- Rationalizing the Excise Tax on Automobiles Bill that will address the inequities brought about by the current definition of automobile by removing the bias against smaller cars with seating capacity of less than 10. It will also address the distortions in terms of engine displacements and fuel type used. The bill, projected to generate additional state revenues of P1.4 billion, is approved on third reading in the House and on second reading in the Senate.
- Rationalizing the Documentary Stamp Tax Bill that aims to expand the coverage of a certificate of deposit subject to documentary stamp tax. The bill's approval will mean P7.86 billion more in revenues while removing the key impediment to increased volume of financial instruments traded in the secondary market. It is approved on third reading in the House and on second reading in the Senate.

Another bill, the Optical Media Act, was earlier noted as a first priority bill. But Senator Manuel Villar, in the LEDAC meeting, proposed that the Debt Cap Bill be given due attention. President Macapagal-Arroyo agreed.

The other seven bills classified as second priority included the:

- Securitization Law that intends to improve liquidity in the domestic capital market, particularly within the mortgage housing finance sector. It provides the necessary infrastructure and market environment for a wide range of asset-backed securities that allow present valuations and the use of future stream of revenue. The bill is up for third reading in the House and second reading in the Senate.
- Dual Citizenship Law that allows dual citizenship to strengthen unity among Filipinos here and abroad and pave the way for their return while enticing them to invest in the Philippines. Interpellations on the bill will commence in the House while the Senate has approved it on third reading.
- Franchise for the National Transmission Corporation that will enhance the value of transmission assets of the National Power Corporation. It allows the government to recover more proceeds from its privatization, thus reducing the potential stranded cost and universal charge that will translate into benefits for electric users. The bill is approved on third reading by Congress and passed second reading in the Senate,
- Compensation to Human Rights Victims that recognizes the rightful claim for compensation by human rights victims during the Marcos regime. It gives the Presidential Commission on Good Government the authority to enter into compromise agreements relative to the Marcos ill-gotten wealth. The bill sets aside $200 million (about P10 billion) from any future judgment in civil Case 41 pending before the Sandiganbayan. The case involves Swiss bank deposits, placed at some $650 million of the Marcoses uncovered by the PCGG and being held in escrow.

- Indexation of Sin Taxes that imposes excise tax on tobacco and alcoholic beverages. This will update the basis of taxation to the present level and will index the same to inflation rate. It is projected that some P3.22 billion and P10.62 billion will be generated as revenue from the imposition tax on beer and tobacco products, respectively.
- National Revenue Administration Act that creates a new entry to address institutional problems and enhance tax administration.
- Department of Housing and Urban Development bill that ensures the holistic and focused implementation of the government's shelter program while rationalizing the management of urban growth and optimum use of available resources for the provision of shelter and related services.

GMA certifies as urgent public health threat and quarantine bill of 2003

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, during the Legislative-Executive Development Advisory Council (LEDAC) meeting in Malacañang today, certified as urgent a bill strengthening the regulatory capacity of the Department of Health and the Bureau of Quarantine Services on Public Health Threats.

This Quarantine Program to Prevent SARS was also included among the priority bills that Congress will pass before its adjournment sine die on June 6.

In the proposed bill, the President will declare the existence of a contagion or disease considered a threat to public health.

In this case, the Health Secretary through the Bureau of Quarantine Services would prevent the entry of persons, properties, vessels, from the country of origin or otherwise implement quarantine and other measures until such time as the President declares the contagion or disease as no longer posing a threat to public health.

According to the President, the present quarantine laws have very, very light penalties.

This act, which will be known as the "Public Health Threat and Quarantine Act of 2003," upgrades the penalties and powers on quarantine regulations.

The proposed bill penalizes any person who violates any regulation, guideline, and condition of quarantine, or knowingly conceals or falsely provides material information on matters requiring full disclosure a fine of no less than P10,000 nor more than P100,000 or its equivalent in subsidiary imprisonment.

The bill also provides that any vessel or aircraft violating quarantine procedures and/or fails to, or falsely submits, requisite documentation and clearances shall suffer the penalty of a fine in the amount of P100,000 but not more than P1 million without prejudice to the confiscation and/or destruction of the apprehended vessel or aircraft.

On the suspension of classes in the event of SARS problem, the Executive Order 201 gives the Department of Education the authority to close schools or suspend classes, but upon the advise of the DOH.

Education Secretary Edilberto de Jesus said "the thinking now is that it is not likely that we will have a general epidemic that will require the resetting of schedules across the country," he said.

Present during the LEDAC meeting were: Vice President Teofisto Guingona Jr., Senate President Franklin Drilon, Speaker Jose de Venecia, Jr., Senators Francisco Pangilinan, Ralph Recto, Ramon Magsaysay, Jr., Rodolfo Biazon, Manuel Villar, Vicente Sotto, Loren Legarda, Juan Flavio, Robert Barbers, Robert Jaworski; Congressmen Raul Gonzales, Propero Pichay, Agapito Aquino, Apolinario Lozada; Executive Secretary Alberto Romulo, Justice Secretary Simeon Datumanong, Trade and Industry Secretary Manuel Roxas II, Education Secretary Edilberto de Jesus, Budget and Management Secretary Emilia Boncodin, Health Secretary Manuel Dayrit, Agrarian Reform

GMA presents plaques to U.K. envoy, Bulacan governor for support vs transnational crimes

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today awarded plaques of recognition to Ambassador Paul Stephen Dimond of the United Kingdom and Bulacan Governor Josefina de la Cruz for actively supporting the worldwide concerted program for the prevention and control of transnational crimes.

The awarding was held at the Ceremonial Hall in Malacañang during a cocktail reception on the fourth anniversary of the Philippine Center on Transnational Crimes (PCTC).

Ambassador Dimond was recognized for his continuing support in broadening the cooperation in the campaign against terrorism and transnational crimes, particularly in the successful conduct of crisis management exercises in Bulacan on January this year.

Gov. De la Cruz, supported and assisted the PCTC in its pioneering effort in institutionalizing the Crisis Management for Local Governments and for specifically allowing the province of Bulacan to serve as the pilot project in said exercises as part of the PCTC Capacity Building Program.

Other PCTC awardees were Senior Supt. Artemio Hicban, Police Officer of the Year for Operations; Supt. Gracito Bing Barangan, Senior Officer of the Year for Administration; Chief Insp. Ronald Anonuevo, Junior Officer of the Year for Operations; Senior Insp. Edwin Quilates, Junior Officer of the Year for Administration; SPO2 Luis Andal, Employee of the Year (uniformed category); and Myla Dy, Employee of the Year (non-uniformed category).

Police Deputy Director General and PCTC executive director Florencio Fianza earlier reported to the President that several intelligence exchanges and case management fora were regularly conducted with local and foreign counterparts to further ties in the collaborative effort in combating the growing menace of transnational crimes. These crimes include terrorism, money laundering, kidnapping, trafficking of firearms, human and illegal drugs, illegal recruitment, and violations of intellectual property rights.

Present during the awarding rites were Russian Ambassador Anatoll Vladimirovich Nebogatov, Ambassador Phiane Philakone of the Lao People's Democratic Republic, Ambassador Din Tich of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam, Malaysian Ambassador Mohd Taufik Mohd Noor, French Ambassador Renee Beyret, and Saudi Arabia Charge d' Affaires Fahad Bin Bkheet.

Statement of the President on Gracia Burnham revelation

Under any circumstances, the information given by Mrs. Burnham is a very serious matter. We cannot leave this story hanging, as it has grave implications on the image and stature of our Armed Forces. As Commander-in-Chief, I will not allow the military to live under the cloud of public doubt. This is why we must get into the root of this matter soonest. Let us not make this issue a media or political feast. As in the past, the DND-AFP will fully cooperate in this investigation. Let us all join hands in search of the truth, so that the innocent can be spared and any guilty parties, punished. Let us give justice both to Mrs. Burnham and to our Armed Forces.

Statement of the President on Cha Cha

I have already said what I have to say on this matter. We must ensure that elections will be held in 2004. We must respect the desire of the people to have the direct power to install their leaders. I will resist all attempts to breach this principle.

Statement of the President on SARS

The effectiveness of our effort against SARS is proven and unrelenting. I commend all those involved in this valiant fight, including our health authorities and workers, local leaders and communities and most of all, our vigilant public. We will continue to work for a SARS-free clearance from WHO as a reward for the effort. With transparency combined with compassion, superior coordination and solidarity, we will defeat this menace. Once more, I would like our people to remain calm, but fully alert. Review the preventive measures prescribed by the health department and religiously observe these. The key to fighting this disease is individual diligence and discipline. Be accountable for yourself and for the welfare of others.

Statement of the President on PIATCO

The Government will operate the NAIA terminal III under three policy guidelines: First, the safety and security of all travelers and facilities against terrorism is of paramount concern; second, the interest of the public must be fully taken into consideration in determining terminal fees and other charges; and third, the grant of business concessions to third parties will be treated with utmost transparency and fairness. These guidelines will be followed in the roadmap for the opening and operation of the terminal once we have the green light from the High Court.

Statement of the President on PEA-Amari

Let the axe fall where it may. I am certain that all officials mentioned at one time or another by the media to have had something to do with this contract would welcome a thorough and conclusive probe. Let us pursue the cases to the end so that the innocent may be cleared and any culprits can be held to account for their deeds. Let us use this chance to show our people that we are determined to uphold good governance and sound business practices. In this manner, the credibility of our Government and our nation will ring through across the domestic and international business community.

Statement of the President on opening of classes

Any decision on this issue shall be guided first, by the health and safety of our millions of students; and second, feasibility and practicality. I would like our health and education authorities to undertake quick consultations with the private education sector as well as teachers organizations and even some PTAs so that we can have a clear view of the field of issues and concerns, and the options we can take. All stakeholders will be involved in this decision.

GMA satisfied with response to SARS threat

Despite the absence of high-tech gadgets and equipment in the prevention of SARS or Severe Acute Respiratory Syndrome, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo said today she is satisfied with the way the country has responded to the threat of the dreaded killer disease.

In her weekly television program, The Working President, the Chief Executive cited a World Health Organization report congratulating the Philippines for its good response to the SARS problem.

“Kaya nga isa tayo sa mga bansa na kahit na pumasok na ang SARS—kasi hindi natin maiiwasan dahil mayroon tayong overseas Filipinos – ay kontrolado pa rin (That is why we are one of the few countries, which despite few SARS cases—have managed to control the spread of the disease),” the President said.

She said that it is important for the people to know the truth “for them to stay alert but calm.”

She told program host Jolina Magdangal when the disease was just starting to spread, Hong Kong and Singapore were touted as the best prepared and the Philippines among the least countries to be able to contain the disease.

But according to her, events of the past weeks showed otherwise, that “we are the least hit by the killer pneumonia while Hong Kong and Singapore were among those with a sizable number of SARS cases.”

She attributed this to the Filipinos’ hygienic ways.

“Yan ang pinakamagaling na paraan kung paano makakaiwas ng SARS. Hindi yung mga maskara, maskara (That’s the most effective way of preventing the spread of the disease. Not masks),” she said.

The President took pride in the fact that the Philippines is not among those listed by WHO as SARS countries.

“Kasi ‘yung Pilipinas pitong kaso, sampung kaso at yung sa sampung kaso, dalawa ang namatay. Pero yung pito, gumaling na at saka yung isa, kasalukuyang gumagaling. So hindi laganap. (This is because the Philippines has only seven cases, 10 cases. And in these 10 cases, two died, but the seven others were able to recover and get well. The other one is already recovering. So it’s not widespread), the President said.

The Working President features the different activities of the President and other documentaries on government agencies, projects and programs.

It is aired Thursdays on RPN 9, 10-11 a.m. and NBN 4, 6-7 p.m.; Fridays on IBC 13, 11:30 p.m.-12:30 p.m.; Saturdays on NBN 4, 8-9 a.m. and/or 8-9 p.m. (replays); ANC 21, 8-9 a.m.; Pinoy Channel (The Global Cable, Inc.)

GMA honors eight T.O.W.E.R. awardees

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today congratulated eight TOWER (The Outstanding Workers of the Republic) awardees and thanked the Rotary Club of Manila for its annual search for outstanding “blue collar” workers of the country.

The TOWER awardees, who were presented to the President at the State Dining Room of Malacañang this morning, were recognized as among those legions of skilled workers who constitute the backbone of the country’s industrial capacity.

According to TOWER Awards 2003 Chairman Bienvenido Laguesma, the awards program transcended the confines of the Rotary Club’s concern because of its nationwide significance in uplifting the Filipino workers’ morale and social status leading to greater prestige at the workplace while enhancing individual career opportunities and industrial peace.

The TOWER 2003 Awardees, who were each given trophies and a cash prize of P50,000 during an awarding ceremonies held at the Centennial Hall of the Manila Hotel on May 8, 2003, were the following:

- Mark Andrada, Senior Assembly Technician in the Moog Controls Corporation, Baguio City;
- Pablo Davis, Plant Electrician in the Pagadian City Water District;
- Jerry Lapara, Mechanic in the Del Monte Philippines, Bukidnon;
- Roberto Nabo Non Revenue Water Operative 2 in the Manila Water Company, Inc.;
- Roberto Pangan, winding/twisting head mechanic autoconer in the Indo/Phil Acrylic Manufacturing Corporation;
- Romeo Pascua, machinist in the Mobile Equipment Department of the Philex Mining Corporation in Benguet;
- Enrico Sapitan, electrician Class B in the Indo/Phil Textile Mills, Inc.; and
- Alfredo Surigao, mechanic in the Philippine Phosphate Fertilizer Corporation, Isabel, Leyte.

Founded in 1975, the TOWER Awards were suspended for ten years but was revived in 1996 in response to the call to revitalize excellence and productivity at the workplace and energize collective skills of our workers for global competition.

Aside from the Rotary Club of Manila, the supporters of the TOWERS Awards includes Metrobank Foundation, Philippine Long Distance Telephone Company, International Labour Organization, San Miguel Corporation, Chinese Filipino Business Club, Occupational Health and Safety Center, Shoemart Foundation, Nestle Philippines, Sybase Philippines, the Manila Electric Company, Century Park Hotel, Technological University of the Philippines, Pamantasan ng Lungsod ng Maynila, Central Colleges of the Philippines and the Personnel Management Association of the Philippines.

White House announces GMA state visit to the U.S.

The White House today announced that President George W. Bush would welcome President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo for a state visit to Washington, D. C. on May 19, saying that it is an expression of gratitude to the country’s support to the US in the global fight against terrorism.

In a press briefing at the White House, Press Secretary Ari Fleischer said that President Bush and First Lady Laura Bush would host a state dinner at the White House in honor of the visiting President.

During the visit, the two leaders would also hold bilateral talks at the Oval Office.

The President's state visit to the United States was originally scheduled last April but this was postponed due to the outbreak of the war in Iraq.

"The Philippines is a close friend and stalwart ally in the war on terror, and the President and the First Lady will host the (Philippine) President for a state visit and a state dinner later that evening," Fleischer said.

Fleischer said that by hosting the state visit, President Bush just wanted to express the gratitude and appreciation of the American people and himself to President Arroyo and to the Filipino people.

According to Fleischer, the President's state visit is only the third that President Bush has hosted since he assumed office in 2001. Bush earlier received as state visitors only the leaders of Mexico and Poland.

When asked why the Philippine President is being given this "rare honor" of being welcomed for a state visit, Fleischer said: "This is the President's way of saying, thank you, to the government of the Philippines, to President Arroyo and to the people of the Philippines for their stalwart efforts in fighting the war on terror, for being such a good and reliable ally to the United States."

The President was one of the first world leaders who supported the US-led global campaign against terrorism launched after the September 11, 2001 attacks.

The Philippines was also a member of the US-led "coalition of the willing" in the war in Iraq although it did not send combat troops.

Fleischer said the Philippines is an area of the world that has not received much notice in the fight against terrorism because the focus was on Afghanistan or Iraq or other places.

"The Philippines have suffered mightily at the hands of terrorists, and the Philippine government and President Arroyo have shown great courage in taking on the terrorists inside the Philippines, and particularly on some of the more remote islands in the Philippines," Fleischer said, referring to the terrorist Abu Sayyaf in Mindanao.

Last year, the US sent about 1,000 special forces to help train Philippine police and military authorities in fighting the Abu Sayyaf in Basilan and Zamboanga under the Balikatan 02-1.

The Balikatan 03-1, also to be participated in by US special forces, is scheduled to be held sometime this year in Jolo.

The President's state visit to the US has a four-fold objective, namely: to further enhance RP-US cooperation in security and counter-terrorism; to expand trade and investment cooperation; to highlight importance of the Philippines to US political and business leaders; and to advance the welfare of Filipinos and Filipino-Americans in the US.

This will be the second time that the President would meet with President Bush at the White House.

On Nov. 20, 2001, President Bush also received the President at the White House during a working visit to the US.

The two leaders also met at the 10th Economic Leaders' Meeting of the Asia Pacific Economic Cooperation held last October 27, 2002 at Los Cabos, Mexico.

Balikatan civic projects benefit townfolk

Apart from the two weeks of intensive military training, the Balikatan 03 exercise that officially ended today produced socio-civic projects by US servicemen and AFP troops that benefited thousands of Filipinos living in remote areas.

“Together with the AFP, we have renovated some buildings, working together to exchange procedures and doctrines that will lead to the betterment of us both. It’s important for us to stress that this has been a cooperative effort aimed at helping the people of the Philippines. The goal is to show the people that both forces care and will help when we can,” said US Army Lt. Col. Stephen Mortimer, Engineer Civic Action Project officer-in-charge.

As in previous Balikatan training exercises, the two forces have developed a variety of civil affairs projects which advanced the quality of life of Filipinos living in remote places, showing that the military exercise between the US and the Philippines is not purely military in nature but also involves humanitarian projects.

Among the civic projects undertaken by both forces during the Balikatan 03 exercises are:

- Construction of two-classroom school building in Talisay, Tagaytay through the joint efforts of the Naval Construction Brigade, Philippine Navy Seabees and the Naval Mobile Construction Battalion 28th ,US Navy;
- Construction of a three-classroom school building and the renovation of the Tamakaw Elementary School canteen in Amadeo, Cavite;
- Humanitarian projects that include medical and dental missions in various areas in Luzon. In Talisay, Tagaytay alone, more than 10,423 people received help. There were 7,591 medical check-ups, 1,401 dental check-ups, and 803 eye examinations. A temporary veterinary clinic was also set up for people who brought their animals for health checks and rabies shots. Other sites that operated during the community relations component of Balikatan 03 included health missions conducted in Amadeo, Cavite, Mabalacat and in Nueva Ecija among others.
- A farewell dinner-fund raising project for the street children of Pampanga, held at the Holiday Inn Resort, Clark Field. The proceeds of the project were donated to the Bahay Bata Foundation. The foundation takes care of around 21 street children, aged 7 to 18 years old, making sure that their health and educational needs are adequately provided.

On the military aspect of the exercise, Balikatan 03 was designed to better train Philippine and US air, ground and naval forces to handle any contingencies, emergencies or disasters which may arise throughout the Asia-Pacific region.

Balikatan 03, according to Marine Capt. Burrell Parmer, Exercise Balikatan 2003 Public Affairs Officer, is not related to the on-going counter-terrorism training in the southern Philippines. The exercise is participated in by 2,900 Philippine troops and 1,300 US military personnel.

“This is a regular scheduled event. The armed forces of both countries need to conduct joint military exercises to ensure interoperability. This exercise will ensure a well-coordinated response when the need arises,” Parmer said.

The first phase of Balikatan 03 involved the training of a combined/joint task force headquarters staff and personnel on crisis planning and execution on an operational level that focused on peace enforcement operations.

The second phase consisted of cross-training, field training and humanitarian civil assistance exercises aimed to enhance interoperability between the AFP and US forces.

Training exercises such as live fire exercises, sniper training, reconnaissance, artillery and first-aid training, are expected to improve the fighting capability of the AFP against terrorist cells operating in the Philippines.

The Balikatan joint training exercise is a continuing process aimed to help better train troops against the threat of lawlessness and terrorism and is part of the Philippines’ long-term security cooperation with the US. The recently concluded Balikatan 03 did not only bring benefits to the country in terms of national security, but economic and social benefits as well.

As in the past, training events for the exercise were held at three venues in Luzon: Clark Special Economic Zone, Fort Magsaysay and in the vicinity of Ternate in Cavite. Exercise Balikatan 03 is the 19th of a series of exercises involving the Philippines and the United States, dating back to 1981.

Dureza quits as peace negotiator but stays as Presidential Assistant for Mindanao

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today formally accepted the resignation of Jesus Dureza as chairman of the government peace panel negotiating with the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF).

The President said Dureza would now concentrate on his role as Presidential Assistant for Mindanao and concurrent chairman of the Mindanao Economic Development Council (MEDCO).

“In fact, he was so identified with the peace panel that people didn’t know he was my Presidential Assistant for Mindanao and my chairman of the Mindanao Development Council,” the President said.

The President said Dureza has to give more emphasis now on his role as chairman of MEDCO and Presidential Assistant for Mindanao.

“Everybody has been asking me to put a Mindanao czar, I do have a Mindanao czar, that’s Jess Dureza,” the President said.

The President said there is no rush to look for the appropriate replacement for Dureza because the exploratory talks with the MILF scheduled to start today in Malaysia have been deferred.

“What we have to rush is the economic development of Mindanao,” the President stressed.

Presidential Chief of Staff Rigoberto Tiglao said that what the President would want now is to exert all efforts in stabilizing security and in speeding up completion of development projects and other initiatives in Mindanao.

“Secretary Dureza has lots of experience on this and the President actually asked him to start focusing on that,” Tiglao said.

Tiglao said the resignation is just a formality as the President and Dureza had thoroughly discussed the matter.

Gracia Burnham cites bravery of soldiers who died to rescue Abu Sayyaf hostages

American missionary Gracia Burnham cited the bravery of Filipino soldiers as she stressed that she had never alleged any collusion between the Philippine military and the terrorist Abu Sayyaf Group (ASG) in her book “In the Presence of My Enemies” that described her experiences at the hands of the ASG in Basilan.

“I do not like that word – allegations. I am not pointing an accusing finger at anyone,” Burnham said in a statement released today by the United States Embassy Public Affairs Section.

“I will let my book speak for itself. We were told many things by the Abu Sayyaf; some of them true and some of them lies,” she said.

“If there was collusion between the military and the Abu Sayyaf, God is the righteous judge and someday that will be made right,” she added.

Burnham said the “bad guys” were the Abu Sayyaf. She recalled that she and her husband Martin “were aware that many Philippine soldiers died as they attempted to end our captivity.”

“The goal of those brave soldiers was to rescue us, and nothing more. We want their loved ones to know that we appreciate the sacrifice they made for us and we honor their memory,” she said.

In a related development, John Miller, legislative director of the Office of US Senator Sam Brownback, hinted that media might have misquoted Ms. Burnham in a recent interview over American television about her book.

Miller provided the office of National Security Adviser Roilo Golez a transcript of excerpts from Burnham’s interview over Fox News Network.

In the excerpts, Fox News host Colmes asked Burnham the latter’s comment on claims that the Philippine military was in cahoots with the ASG and wanted to split the ransom money with the terrorists.

Burnham’s reply was: “That was what I was told, and I always preface that in my book by ‘That was what I was told.’ I didn’t really accuse anyone.”

Burnham also told Colmes that she did not believe any collusion between the military and the ASG.

She said she thought the military “were doing all they could to locate us,” recalling the gunbattle when husband Martin was killed. “And I think their agenda was to get us out of there safe.”

GMA urges ERC to order MERALCO to immediately release lump-sum refund to small power users

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today urged the Energy Regulatory Commission (ERC) to order the Manila Electric Company (MERALCO) to immediately release the lump-sum refund to small power consumers.

“I urged the Energy Regulatory Commission (ERC) to order a lump-sum refund for Meralco’s more residential consumers,” the President said during a briefing in Malacañang.

In her Labor Day message last May 1, the President assured the nation that there would be full compliance and implementation of the Supreme Court’s final ruling that Meralco should refund the amount of P28.1-billion that the company had overcharged its consumers.

“The refund justifies the long wait for justice by our people,” the President said.

The President said the ERC should find the best formula to give back to the poor consumers the financial relief given them by the Supreme Court.

“But we must do this at the soonest possible time. Justice has been served and we must not let our people wait,” the President stressed.

Presidential Chief of Staff Rigoberto Tiglao said the refund would be made likely within the month primarily to those consuming zero to 100 kilowatts per month.

“The President wouldn’t want any delays here. She would want the checks issued for the refund as soon as possible. If the technical aspects are resolved, MERALCO could very well issue a check and put it in the bills by next week or maybe in the next two weeks,” Tiglao added.

Meanwhile, the ERC and the MERALCO have assured the public that the checks for the refund to small electric users would be ready by June in time for the opening of classes.

The President's Day: May 10, 2003

10 MAY 2003

- President's radio address to the nation
- GMA wants to leave behind legacy after term

President's radio address to the nation

Magandang araw sa lahat ng ating mga taga-pakinig.

Ang sunud-sunod na pag-atake ng mga rebeldeng MILF sa mga sibilyang komunidad ng Maigo, Lanao del Norte, at Siocon, Zamboanga del Norte, gayundin sa isang evacuation center sa Pikit, North Cotabato ay maliwanag na mga akto ng terorismo na hindi natin dapat ipagwalang-bahala. Kailangang managot ang liderato ng MILF sa mga karahasang ito at isuko sa gobyerno ang mga may kagagawan.

Maliwanag ding pagyurak ito sa hangad nating pagpapatuloy ng peace talks kaya patunay ito ng kawalan ng sinseridad ng MILF na makamit ang kapayapaan. Nagkakamali ang MILF kung inaakala nilang makakakuha sila ng concessions sa usapang pangkapayapaan dahil sa mga kaganapang ito.

We shall not allow the peace talks to be held hostage by the threat of terror. We shall pursue an all out legal offensive against the leaders of the MILF while conducting punitive action against the direct perpetrators of terrorist acts.

Dapat itakwil ng walang pasubali ng MILF ang terorismo bilang paraan sa pagkamit ng kanilang mga layunin kung nais nilang maka-iwas sa kaparusahan. Hindi lulubag kailanman ang ating galit sa mga pumapatay o sumasalanta sa mga taong walang kalaban-laban.

Ang gobyerno ay hindi maaring balewalain ang pagdanas ng mga inosenteng pamayanan ng di makataong pamiminsala. Hindi natin papayagang maganap ang terorismo na nagkukunwaring bahagi ng pakikipag-laban para sa kalayaan. Isusulong lamang natin ang kapayapaan sa ilalim ng batas at kautusan ng Konstitusyon.

Kaya naman, inatasan ko na ang ating peace negotiators na ipabatid sa Malaysian government ang ating hangaring ipagpaliban ang exploratory talks sa Kuala Lumpur hanggang makatiyak tayo ng mas mabuting kalagayan para isulong ang prosesong pangkapayapaan. Idudulog din natin ang panig ng pamahalaan sa harap ng Malaysia at Indonesia, sa Organization of Islamic Conference o OIC sa buong daigdig ng Islam.

We shall deploy all the local instruments of the state to end this conflict and bring peace to the homes of our people. Meanwhile, I call on everyone to be vigilant and alert against terrorist trepidation and acts of cruelty against civilians.

Tinatawagan ko lalung-lalo na ang mga komunidad na madaling masakabay ng kalaban na palakasin pa ang kanilang mga depensa laban sa terorismo. Paghusayin ang kanilang crisis management plans at higpitan ang pakikipag-ugnayan sa ibang bayan para matyagan ang pagkilos ng mga terorista.

Hinihiling ko ang ating buo at tapat na pagmamatyag sapagkat ang terorismo ay malakas ang loob. Hindi sapat ang pagkilos ng pamahalaang nasyonal lamang. Ang pakikipagtulungan at pagbabantay ng buong komunidad at lahat ng pamahalaang lokal ay kailangan upang ang ating bansa ay mailigtas para sa mga mamamayan. Ang banta ng terorismo ay kailangan ang puspusang kilos ng buong pamahalaan hanggang sa hanay ng barangay para subaybayan ang mga nakakahinalang tao, gawain, at kagamitan.

But, I also ask forbearance from the Christians of Mindanao. Do not take the law into your own hands and harm innocent Muslim communities with anger. I will apply the full force of the law against any form of vigilantism. This is not a fight between Muslims and Christians. It is a fight between the evil forces of terror on one side and all civilized and peace-loving Filipinos on the other.

Ginagawa ng gobyerno ang lahat para harapin ang krisis na ito pero hindi tayo dapat maging kampante at luwagan ang ating pagbabantay. Suportahan natin ang inyong pamahalaang lokal at ang crisis management council nito sa kanilang pagpapatupad ng contingency plans laban sa terorismo.

We shall combine military actions, stringent legal measures, full diplomatic pressure, and community preparedness to bear upon the MILF threats. I've instructed that all the terrorist acts of the MILF be fully documented and be brought before the OIC and especially before the OIC Committee of the Eight that is charged with monitoring the Mindanao problem. We will not allow the MILF to continue fooling the Islamic world. It is an insurgent organization with legitimate aims engaging in murdering innocent civilians.

Madalas kong sabihin na lahat ng ating pagsisikap na umunlad ang ating bansa ay mababale-wala kung hindi tayo magkakaroon ng kapayapaan sa Mindanao. Kaya naman sa simula pa lamang ng aking panunungkulan bilang Pangulo, pinag-tuunan na natin ng pansin ang paghahatid ng kapayapaan at kaunlaran sa Mindanao pero huwag nating hayaang masayang ang ating mga pagsisikap dahil sa paghahasik ng takot ng iilang rebelde at terorista.

Sa ating pagkaka-isa nakasalalay ang kapayapaan at seguridad ng ating bansa. Kaya hinihiling ko ang inyong mahalagang tulong, magsama-sama tayo at magtulungan na wakasan ang kaguluhan at bigyang katuparan ang pangako ng Mindanao. Ang tagumpay ng Mindanao ay tagumpay ng ating bansa at ng buong sambayanan. Ang ating pagkaka-isa sa ilalim ng isang bandila ang maghahatid sa atin tungo sa mapayapang pamumuhay at sa isang matatag at matibay na Republika.

Magandang araw muli at maraming salamat po.

GMA wants to leave behind legacy after term

When President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo steps down from office next year to give way to her successor, she wants to leave behind three things as her legacy to the nation – a strong Republic, a healed nation, and a clean, modern 2004 election.

The President revealed this Thursday (May 8) during the weekly television program, The Working President, which is celebrating its 100th episode.

In the program aired over NBN 4, the Chief Executive told program host Jolina Magdangal that for the nation to stamp out poverty, it must have a strong Republic founded on a robust economy where jobs are aplenty and prices of basic commodities are stable.

“Kaya nga inilunsad natin itong roll-on roll-off (nautical highway) para magmura yung mga bilihan na nanggagaling sa Mindanao patungong Luzon (That is why we launched this roll-on, roll-off nautical highway to bring down prices of basic goods),” she said.

To strengthen public institutions, the President said the government has raised the salaries of judges, policemen and the soldiers because they are among the lowest paid “when I sat as President.”

She also expressed hope that the wounds of division she said she inherited when she came into power would be healed.

She urged the Filipino people to work for a clean and honest election next year, saying a modernized system of elections is one important reform that she wants to leave behind as a legacy to the nation.

The President took the occasion to thank the Filipino people for their continued trust in her government despite the bad times, as shown in the latest Pulse Asia survey which gave her high approval ratings.

“Nagpapasalamat ako dito dahil sa kabila ng napakahirap na panahon ngayon hindi lamang sa Pilipinas kungdi sa buong mundo ay yung tiwala naman ng taong bayan ay tuloy-tuloy pa rin (I would like to express my gratitude to the people for their continued trust despite the bad times not only here but also worldwide),” the President said.

She added that surveys are important to her because they serve as her guide in formulating important decisions.

“Alam naman natin na minsan mataas, minsan mababa. Ang importante ay ginagawa natin ang ating trabaho (We know that sometimes our approval ratings are high, sometimes low. What is important is that we are doing our job),” she added.

The Working President features the different activities of the President and other documentaries on government agencies, projects and programs.

Datumanong hails Congress moves to pass bill raising pays of justices, judges

Justice Secretary Simeon Datumanong has hailed the approval on third reading of Senate Bill No. 2018 authored by Senator Francis Pangilinan.

The bill sought to standardize or increase the salary of justices and judges to a level commensurate to the dignity of the court and the gravity of the task.

It likewise looked forward to bringing about immediate reforms and changes resulting in the better and more efficient dispensation of justice in the country.

Datumanong said that once approved into law, the legislative action would entice brilliant lawyers and practitioners to join the judiciary.

He said there were a number of unfilled court vacancies in many judicial districts in Mindanao and the Visayas, a reason why there has been a growing backlog of unresolved cases in those areas.

In supporting the bill's passage, the Justice Secretary noted the length of time the salary of judges and court personnel have remained in its present level.

This had spawned non-interest among qualified lawyers to join the judicial branch of government, thus jeopardizing the delivery of judicial services and derailing the prevention of crime.

Senate Bill 2018, once approved, would provide the courts the dignity and respect they deserve, Datumanong said.

W.H.O. does not recommend travel bans to RP

The World Health Organization (WHO) today stressed that it "does not recommend any restrictions on travel to the Philippines," because of the dreaded Severe Acute Respiratory Syndrome (SARS).

In a statement reaching Malacañang, the WHO's Communicable Disease Surveillance and Response (CSR) unit said the WHO had considered the cluster of SARS cases in the country as "well contained."

"There appears to be no increased transmission risk in the Philippines," the CSR noted.

As of May 10, the Philippines has reported a cumulative total of 10 probable SARS cases, with two deaths, the WHO-CSR statement said.

Health authorities have determined that all 10 cases were part of a chain of transmission linked to a single imported case. All cases were placed in isolation in hospital.

The WHO-CSR added that the contacts of the 10 cases have been traced, and authorities were confident that all contacts have been identified and placed in isolation.

The last two cases that could have transmitted infection were isolated on April 30. All contacts have completed their period of observation and none has developed SARS, the agency said.

The cluster of SARS cases in the Philippines began with the importation of a case who returned to the Philippines from Toronto, Canada. The imported case died from SARS, as did her father.

Two of the remaining eight patients have been discharged while the others are still in the hospital, the WHO-CSR said.

Statement of the President on terrorist bombing

There is an obvious link between the attack on isolated civilian communities on one hand, and urban bombings on the other, both of which are terrorist acts. Time is running out for the MILF to prove its sincerity in the peace process. It must cut the double talk and make a clear statement on whether it is allied with the Abu Sayyaf and foreign terrorist groups such as the Jemaah Islamiyah or the Al Qaeda, or unequivocally reject them. The MILF can no longer hide behind a veil of legitimacy under the growing suspicion that it is involved in the entire web of terrorism, domestically and regionally. We shall hold the option of peace talks open, while we hunt down the bombers of Koronadal and step up our punitive action against terrorist bands victimizing innocent communities.

Statement of the President on SARS

The World Health Organization already spoke on our behalf and I have instructed the DFA to communicate this finding to countries hosting our OFWs. It is unfair for some countries to include the Philippines in travel bans or advisories but this could be a result merely of miscommunication or the lack of information. We are working with the WHO on this issue and we will ensure that the jobs of our OFWs are protected.

Statement of the President on PIATCO

The government is ready to handle all attendant problems in this case under effective guidelines of transparency, fairness and full protection of the public interest.

GMA leads commemoration of centennial anniversary of death of Mabini

Simultaneous flag-raising and wreath-laying ceremonies in Pandacan and Tanauan City in Batangas will usher today's nationwide commemoration of the Death Centenary of Apolinario Mabini with President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo and Vice President Teofisto Guingona as guest of honors respectively.

The President, through Proclamation 377, has declared a day of remembering for the national hero also known as the Sublime Paralytic for leaving "an enduring legacy to our people."

The Proclamation means all flags of government buildings and installations throughout the country will be flown at half-mast.

The President has appointed the National Historical Institute under chair Ambeth Ocampo and Executive Director Ludovico Badoy to spearhead the commemoration under the theme, “Mabini: Sandigan ng Matatag na Republika.”

The Chief Executive will lead the celebration at the Mabini Shrine in Pandacan. She will be introduced in her speech by Foreign Affairs Secretary Blas Ople.

Postmaster General Diomedio Villanueva will also present the Mabini Centenary Stamps and Commemorative Medal following the welcome remarks by Manila Mayor Lito Atienza.

In attendance at the Mabini Shrine in Tanauan City with Vice President Guingona will be Batangas Governor Hermilando Mandanas, Rep. Victoria Hernandez-Reyes, Tanauan Mayor Alfredo C. Corona, the Kaanak ng Bayaning Pilipino, Descendants of the Heroes of the Filipino-American War and other provincial and city officials.

Mabini served in the First Republic Cabinet as President of the Council of Secretaries and as Secretary of Foreign Affairs. He penned most of President Emilio Aguinaldo’s decrees.

An important document he produced was the “Programa Constitucional de la Republica Filipina,” a proposed constitution for the first Philippine Republic. An introduction to the draft of the Constitution was the “El Verdadero Decalogo,” written to arouse the patriotic spirit of the people.

Various programs are in store for today’s commemoration, including a Paligsahan sa Makabayang Pag-awit at the Leandro Locsin Auditorium in Intramuros, an “Alay Kay Mabini” concert at the Mabini Shrines in Pandacan and Tanauan, and a stage play on Mabini’s Life and Heroism also in both shrines.

A history quiz is scheduled at the San Sebastian Library of Arts in Lipa City, photo exhibits at SM Megamall and awarding of Mabini medals to selected students from 17 DepEd regions of academic excellence.

Palace calls on participants to Youth Fellowship Program to be role models in Society

Malacañang today called on the 100 participants to the Presidential Youth Fellowship Program to be the role models in society in the fight to restore morality and decency in government.

Participants to the First Presidential Youth Fellowship Program under the National Youth Commission (NYC) were chosen from among the top university and college graduates nationwide to provide a venue for the young people to directly help the government in the implementation of the administration’s eight-point agenda.

From May 11 to 19, the participants would be given lectures on the eight-point agenda of the government. Afterwards, they would undergo a two-week internship in the different government offices, including the Office of the President.

During the second day of the fellowship program in Malacañang, Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye congratulated the chosen presidential youth fellows consisting of very intelligent, very active and very promising young men and women.

“Rightfully, we can consider all of you as role models whom the other youths can emulate,” Bunye said.

Bunye told the participants that President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo believes in transparency and full accountability. “She keeps on reminding us that public office is a public trust, and all government officials must at all times be accountable to the people. This core belief enshrined in our Constitution is one of several guiding principles upon which our President is building a strong Republic,” Bunye said.

In addition to transparency, Bunye said the President believes that the people must be bold in realizing the national ambition to win the fight against poverty within the decade; improve moral standards in government and society in order to provide a strong foundation for good governance; and change the character of our politics in order to create social ground for true reforms.

“Our politics of personality and patronage must give way to a new politics of party programs and process of dialogue with the people,” Bunye said.

Bunye also told the young leaders that the President believes in leadership by example and in promoting solid traits such as work ethics and a dignified lifestyle and performance rather than grandstanding.

Bunye said the government’s goal of transparency in its transaction could be best attained by keeping the people informed.

“The President believes very strongly that an informed citizenry is an effective and empowered citizenry. And what better way to keep the people informed of the programs of government than to literally and figuratively open its doors and corridors to the people,” Bunye said

Bunye told the young participants that the open house and open door fellowship program would provide them the exposure and training and gives flesh to the administration’s policy on transparency.

“We hope that you will emerge from this program with a better understanding, appreciation and acceptance of what President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo and her administration stand for, and what good governance is all about. We wish you Godspeed as you eventually go back to your respective communities as our ambassadors of goodwill,” Bunye said.

President’s statement in Siocon

I admire the people of Siocon (Zamboanga del Norte) and Maigo (Lanao del Norte) for their valiant effort to pick up the pieces of their lives. While we grieve for the victims of terrorism, there is a time for rising up again and restoring what have been destroyed.

We must never allow terrorism to permanently damage the institutions of our community, the institutions of law and order, solidarity, and economic progress. To do so would mean a surrender to evil, and enable it to strike again with impunity.

I have come here to help in the immediate task of community restoration.

We have already released the resources to repair the damaged facilities. I have ordered the release of P5 million for the immediate reconstruction of your palengke (market). I understand that Gov. Isagani Amatong is starting to clear the area to pave the way for the immediate start of the construction.

The infrastructure program will be looked into by the GEM program of the USAID like some farm-to-market roads and the upgrading of your pier facilities.

I have also requested Smart to put up a temporary cell site to assist in the communications needs of the community.

Ang mga programa alang sa kauswagan sa (Programs for the) SSSB region is about P800 million worth.

We are also seeing to the immediate needs of the families of the victims. I have directed the Quedancor and Land Bank to provide start-up capital for small enterprises.

I salute the soldiers and policemen who gave up their lives in the defense of the community.

To support the young children of the eight policemen and army personnel who were killed, we have approved the scholarship trust fund in the amount of P400,000 so that their children will have the opportunity to go to school.

It is important to us to get the pace of normal livelihood and business moving.

Terrorism is the worst form of dictatorship. It aims for the total submission, total subjugation and total defeat of human freedom.

We shall strengthen the military and the police units in Siocon and Maigo to protect the people.

But it is important for all of us to show the enemy that we are not going to be cowed or intimidated, that we will answer their worst by doing our best – in terms of community vigilance, in terms of economic recovery and most of all, in terms of caring for each other.

President's statement in Koronadal

This is a tragic scene that has repeated itself in Mindanao over the past months.

It is a sad price we have to pay to fight terrorism and once more, I condole with the families of the victims. I am deeply aggrieved by these continuing acts of inhumanity.

We have warned our people about this but we know that the innocent would never expect such a depredation to be committed upon a most peaceful community.

This is blackmail of the highest order. This is an attempt to force us to seek peace in the hope that we can buy time, and allow the terrorists to spite us even more.

We have patiently tried the road of principled peace talks but we have been rebuffed by bombing after bombing.

There are well-meaning leaders who believe that we must take that road at all costs, but I cannot take the perpetual risk of putting the life of Filipinos in graver peril.

There is an obvious link between the attacks on isolated civilian communities, on the one hand, and urban bombings, on the other, both of which are terrorist acts.

Time is running out for the MILF to prove its sincerity in the peace process.

It must cut the double talk and make a clear statement on whether it is allied with the Abu Sayyaf and foreign terrorist groups such as the Jemaah Islamiya or the Al-Qaeda, or unequivocally reject them.

The MILF can no longer hide behind a veil of legitimacy under the growing suspicion that it is involved in the entire web of terrorism, domestically and regionally.

Even as we hold the option of peace talks open, we will hunt down the bombers of Koronadal and step up our punitive action against terrorist bands victimizing innocent communities.

The stakes are escalating. I ask our people to step up their vigilance in tandem with the punitive operation now being undertaken by the government.

All local government units are put on notice to step up contingency plans and assume full vigilance.

I ask the media for full cooperation in the war against terrorism, to now desist from giving space or time for terrorist statements or overtures that plead a false cause, or are aimed to confuse and mislead our people. Let us not air terrorist propaganda in the guise of serving the end of objectivity.

Palace body to decide soon on reported PIATCO offer to negotiate on NAIA-3 issue

Malacañang today said that an inter-agency committee would meet within the week to decide on the reported willingness of the Philippine International Air Terminals Co. (PIATCO) to negotiate with the government in resolving the issue of the NAIA-3 terminal project.

In his regular press briefing in Malacañang, Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said, however, that what the government has been saying all along is that the earlier the matter is taken out of court, the better for all of us.

“Enough time and enough opportunities have already been wasted,” Bunye said.

In a statement released earlier, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo said the government is ready to handle “all attendant problems” in the PIATCO case under effective guidance of transparency, fairness and full protection of the public interest.

Bunye said that Transportation and Communications Secretary Leandro Mendoza “is very much on top of the situation” and would have something to report to Malacañang after the scheduled meeting of the committee on May 15.

He said that aside from Mendoza, the other members of the committee are Executive Secretary Alberto Romulo, Trade and Industry Secretary Manuel Roxas II, Chief Presidential Legal Counsel Avelino Cruz, and Justice Undersecretary Manuel Teehankee.

“I believe during their next meeting, they may have a recommendation to the President,” Bunye said.

Mendoza has also said that the NAIA-3 could be opened to the public in four months time after the government formally takes over the facility from PIATCO.

GMA dares MILF to show true color, tread path to peace

KORONADAL CITY — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today dared the separatist Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) to show its true color and to tell the world if it is a terror group or if it rejects terrorism.

In a statement here, the President said “(the MILF) must cut the double talk and make a clear statement on whether it is allied with the Abu Sayyaf and foreign terrorist groups such as the Jemaah Islamiya or the Al-Qaeda, or unequivocally reject them.”

The MILF had been tagged as responsible for last Saturday’s bomb blast at the public market here. The blast killed and wounded at least 50 people.

The President said the atrocity was “blackmail of the highest order, an attempt to force us to seek peace in the hope that we can buy time, and allow the terrorists to spite us even more.”

She noted how the government had patiently tried the road of principled peace talks, “but we have been rebuffed by bombing after bombing.”

While there were sincere leaders who believed that the road to peace should be taken at all cost, the President insisted that she could not take the perpetual risk of putting the life of Filipinos in graver peril.

She cited the obvious link between attacks on isolated civilian communities and urban bombings, tagging them as terrorist acts.

She challenged the MILF to prove its sincerity in the peace process.

“Time is running out for the MILF to prove its sincerity in the peace process,” she said.

“The MILF can no longer hide behind a veil of legitimacy under the growing suspicion that it is involved in the entire web of terrorism, domestically and regionally,” she noted.

The President vowed that “even as we hold the option of peace talks open, we will hunt down the bombers of Koronadal and step up our punitive action against terrorist bands victimizing innocent communities.”

As this developed, she rallied the people to step up their vigilance in tandem with the government’s all-out punitive action against the terrorists. She said the “stakes are escalating.”

She placed all local government units on notice to step up contingency plans and assume full vigilance, in the wake of the terrorist attacks.

GMA asks media to ban terrorist propaganda

KORONADAL CITY — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today appealed to print and radio/TV entities to ban terrorist groups from using the press and broadcast facilities as propaganda tools.

In a short message, the President sought the “full cooperation” of media “in the war against terrorism.”

She enjoined media “to now desist from giving space or time for terrorist statements or overtures that plead a false cause, or are aimed to confuse and mislead our people.”

“Let us not air terrorist propaganda in the guise of serving the end of objectivity,” she said.

The President visited this booming city in South Cotabato today to personally look into the grim aftermath of last Saturday’s bombing at the public market here that left at least 50 persons either killed or wounded.

In a statement, the President said the bombing was “a tragic scene that has repeated itself in Mindanao over the past months... a sad price we have to pay to fight terrorism.”

She condoled with the families of the victims, saying she was “deeply aggrieved by these continuing acts of inhumanity.”

GMA earmarks P905.3M for rehabilitation of conflict-affected areas in Zambo del Norte

SIOCON, Zamboanga del Norte—President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today announced that she has earmarked a total of P905.3 million for rehabilitation projects in conflict-affected areas in Zamboanga del Norte, particularly the Siocon, Sibuco, Sirawai and Baliguian complex.

During a visit here, the President met with local officials of Zamboanga del Norte led by Governor Isagani Amatong.

“We bleed for the victims of terrorism but there is a time for rising up again and restoring what has been destroyed,” the President told some 4,000 residents of this town, which was ravaged by the May 4 rebel attack that left 22 people dead and scores injured.

Earlier, the President also declared the towns of Pikit and Carmen in North Cotabato as areas for rehabilitation.

The Mindanao National Initiative or Mindanao NATIN Program would provide P85.3 million worth of support to the projects in the SSSB area while P820 million would come from the Official Development Assistance (ODA) funds.

In a recent forum at the Manila Hotel attended by Muslim leaders, the President announced an initial P5.5-billion funding for Mindanao NATIN program to be implemented within 14 months for projects in Muslim areas in Mindanao.

On top of this, there is also the $1.4 billion of ODA funds for projects to be implemented in the next three to five years.

The Mindanao NATIN Program would provide:

- 2-million livelihood support through micro and small and medium enterprises (SME) credit, distance learning and demand-driven skills training programs;
- 9 million for small scale projects such as warehouses, dryers, health centers, school buildings, training centers, deep wells, and pedestrian bridges; and
- 2 million worth of local allocation for the ZAMBAS Integrated Agricultural Development Program for year 2003.

The P820-million ODA for major infrastructure projects include the solar power technology support to agrarian reform communities (ARCs), $43.55 million; and the Western Mindanao Community Initiative (DAR-IFAD) with $14.79 million.

GMA visits 3 Mindanao provinces in one day

GENERAL SANTOS CITY—The energetic President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today visited three provinces in Mindanao to show to the people that her administration is really sincere in its campaign to fight poverty and terrorism particularly in this region.

The President arrived at the Edwin Andrews Air Base in Zamboanga City around 8:30 in the morning via Lear jet and then transferred to a Bell helicopter to visit Sirawai town in Zamboanga del Norte.

In Sirawai, the President presided over a command conference at the headquarters of the 44th Infantry Division, 1st Infantry Tabak Division. After her meeting with the military officials, she flew to Siocon, also in Zamboanga del Norte.

Upon her arrival in Siocon, the President visited the wake of four policemen—SPO1 Nestor Dizon and SPO2s Manuel Tagaloguin, Espiridion Cardenas, and Sabeniano Timusa. The four were among the eight police officers killed by the Moro Islamic Liberation Front rebels during the May 4 siege in Siocon.

The President gave P100,000 financial assistance each to the families and scholarship grant to the children of the police and military officials killed during the MILF attack.

The President also announced that the Palarong Pambansa would still be conducted in Lanao del Norte although the final venue and date are still to be evaluated.

The President then went to Koronadal, South Cotabato and visited the Koronadal public market where innocent civilians were killed during a terrorist bombing on Saturday.

Statement of the President on MILF

The Government is nearing a decision point on whether to declare the MILF a terrorist organization, and to take the necessary operational and diplomatic measures to strengthen this prospective policy. We are holding this decision in abeyance upon the recommendation of the Cabinet Oversight Committee on Internal Security, until after the forthcoming OIC Conference of Foreign Ministers to be held towards the end of this month.

Meanwhile, the security of our civilian communities is our utmost concern. Punitive actions will continue and peace talks remain suspended. We will treat those who attack civilians as plain terrorists.

Statement of the President on SARS

So far we are winning the fight against SARS. Every Filipino must continue to take responsibility for the health and welfare of the entire national community. Everybody has a stake in making the Philippines SARS free.

Statement of the President on lifestyle checks

Investigations and lifestyle checks are ongoing on those who are suspected of corruption. We will not tolerate any corrupt officials in the government. We will go after all thieves and punish them accordingly. The people are squarely behind us.

Gov't nearing decision on whether to tag MILF as terrorist, says GMA

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said the government is nearing a decision on whether to declare the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) a terrorist organization and to take the necessary operational and diplomatic measures to strengthen such prospective policy.

In her speech marking the death centenary of Apolinario Mabini at the Mabini Shrine in Malacañang Park, the President said the government is also in consultation with its friends who want peace in the country, especially in Mindanao.

The President explained that the government is holding this decision in abeyance upon the recommendation of the Cabinet Oversight Committee on Internal Security (COCIS), until after the forthcoming conference of the foreign ministers of the Organization of Islamic Conference (OIC) to be held later this month.

In citing the Philippines' friends in the search for peace in the South, the President singled out Malaysia for continuing to patiently help the country achieve "principled peace" in Mindanao.

"Even as we fight terrorism together, we want to thank our foreign friends, especially Malaysia, whose ambassador is here, and I gave him our thanks today for continuing to patiently help the Philippines achieve principled peace here in Mindanao," the President said.

She reiterated her statement made in Mindanao yesterday that "time is running out" for the MILF to prove its sincerity in the peace process.

"Punitive actions will continue and the peace talks remain suspended," she added.

The President stressed that the security of the civilian communities is of utmost concern.

The Chief Executive said the government will treat those who attack civilians as plain terrorists.

"It (MILF) must cut its double talk and make a clear statement on whether it's allied with the Abu Sayyaf and foreign terrorist groups such as Jemaah Islamiyah or Al-Qaeda, or unequivocally reject them," she said.

She said the MILF can no longer hide behind the veil of legitimacy under the growing suspicion that it is uninvolved in the entire web of terrorism domestically and regionally.

GMA designates Alingod as Acting Press Secretary

Executive Secretary Alberto Romulo, by authority of the President, has designated Press Undersecretary Milton Alingod, a veteran journalist, as Acting Press Secretary for the period from April 20, 2003 to May 30, 2003.

Alingod, who was appointed Press Undersecretary on January 30, 2003, also concurrently serves as executive director of the Philippine Broadcasting Service-Radio Television Malacañang (PBS-RTVM), a position he held since December 2002.

Before his Malacañang stint, Alingod was vice president for news of the GMA Network, Inc. (Channel 7), from May 1993 to August 2002.

Alingod started his career as a news writer of the defunct DZMT, the radio station of the old Manila Times.

From the DZMT, Alingod moved on to become the news editor, news director and station manager of DZHP, the radio station of the then Philippines Herald.

Later as a sportscaster of the Voice of the Philippines, Alingod covered such prestigious international sports events as the Southeast Asian Games, the World Basketball Championship, Asian Basketball Championship and the Jones Cup Basketball Championship.

After the declaration of martial law, Alingod became a special assistant and general manager for radio of the Office of Media Affairs (OMA), the forerunner of the Office of the Press Secretary.

He was later appointed as director of the Bureau of Broadcast, the broadcast arm of the OPS.

Since the appointment of Press Secretary Hernani Braganza early this year, Alingod has been designated OPS officer-in-charge whenever the former went on official leave.

Malaysia backs RP condemnation of MILF attacks

Malaysia today supported the Philippines in condemning the recent successive attacks of the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) against civilians in Mindanao.

Ambassador Mohamed Taufik, who attended the death centenary of Apolinario Mabini at Malacañang Park as a member of the diplomatic corps, said Malaysia respect the decision of the Philippine government in questioning the MILF's real identity – if it is allied with terrorist groups or not.

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, in Koronadal City Monday (May 12), said the MILF must cut its double talk and make a clear statement on whether it is allied with the Abu Sayyaf and foreign terrorist groups such as Jemaah Islamiya or the Al-Qaeda, or unequivocally reject them.

Taufik said: “We support whatever its (the Philippines) decision because the MILF is not a Malaysian organization, neither is it an Organization of Islamic Countries (OIC) organization and I do not think we have much to say in what is essentially a Filipino domestic issue.”

Taufik also said Malaysia seriously hopes the MILF would disprove what they have been up to. “Of course, after Siocon, they admitted it was a technical mistake in attacking civilians. Well, any action against civilians clearly is an act of terrorism.”

“And so I think time is running out so we hope that the MILF would seriously consider and see what they want themselves to be regarded,” Taufik added.

He also reiterated that Malaysia does not support efforts of any party in the Philippines to seek secession or whatever. “With the MILF, I presume if it is what they want, it's quite clear that we have told them time and time again, any solution to the problem should be in the context of the Philippine Constitution.”

Taufik noted that the OIC as a whole has committed itself to respect the territorial integrity of the Philippines.

The Malaysian envoy further noted that the OIC does not recognize the MILF although it is interested in what is happening to Muslim minorities in any part of the world.

GMA accepts credentials of 3 new envoy

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today accepted the credentials of the ambassadors of Sri Lanka, Singapore and Argentina in simple ceremonies in Malacañang.

Ambassador Ariya Bandara Rekawa of the Democratic Socialist Republic of Sri Lanka, Lady Ambassador Lim Kheng Hua of the Republic of Singapore, and Ambassador Mario Schuff of the Argentine Republic, arrived one after the other before noon in Malacañang.

Assistant Secretary Jose Abeto Zaide, chief protocol of the Department of Foreign Affairs (DFA), then accompanied the newly designated ambassadors before the President for the presentation of their credentials.

“I hope you will be successful during your tenure,” the President told the ambassadors.

For their part, the ambassadors wished the President good health and promised to further improve cooperation and bilateral relations between the Philippines and their countries during their tour of duties.

GMA likens today's Filipino health workers to Mabini

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today likened today's Filipino health workers to national hero Apolinario Mabini, the brains of the Philippine Revolution, who despite his handicap, served to free Filipinos.

The President, who made the comparison during the death centenary of Mabini at the Mabini Shrine at the Malacañang Park, said just like Mabini, the Filipino health workers are the heroes in the battle against the dreaded Severe Acute Respiratory Syndrome (SARS).

“Sila ang ating mga bayani ng mga araw na ito (they are the heroes of today),” she said.

“Kaya kung pinaparangalan natin si Mabini, bigyan din natin ng parangal ang ating mga health workers na napakagaling at may malasakit (if we are honoring Mabini today, we should likewise pay tribute to our health workers who are facing battles against diseases around the world),” she said.

“Because of them, so far, we’re winning the fight against SARS,” she said.

The President said what the firefighters and the New York police were in 9-11, our health workers are the heroes in the battle against SARS, not only in the Philippines but in Hong Kong, Singapore, and wherever we have health workers all over the world,” she said.

“Every Filipino must continue to take responsibility for the health and welfare of the entire national community. Everybody has a stake in making the Philippines SARS-free,” she said.

Mabini is one of the brightest and famous national heroes. Despite his disability, he served as beacon in Philippine history and culture. Born of poor parents, he served as the meaningful leaders of the Philippine revolution. He supported his law studies by taking on odd jobs. He eventually became a lawyer.

Mabini also served in the cabinet of the President Aguinaldo as president of the council of secretaries, and secretary of foreign affairs.

“He was the (Executive Secretary) Bert Romulo and the (Foreign Secretary) Blas Ople combined,” she said.

During his term, Mabini was able to create several towns, provinces and courts and eventually the nucleus of the Philippine Constitution.

He was banished in Guam and eventually died at the age of 39.

Among the officials in attendance during the ceremonies were National Historical Institute Executive Director Ludovico Badoy, Manila Mayor Jose “Lito” Atienza, Jr., Tourism Undersecretary Evelyn Pantig and Metro Manila and Development Authority Chairman Bayani Fernando.

Before delivering her speech, the President laid a wreath at the bust of Mabini. She also led the flag-raising ceremony.

Badoy also presented to the President the Mabini Centenary Stamps and commemorative medal.

GMA orders speedy work on South Luzon Expressway infra

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today directed the fast tracking of vital transportation support projects such as the two segments of the South Luzon Expressway — the Calamba-Sto. Tomas road and Alabang viaduct and the Lipa-Batangas City road.

The 7.48-kilometer road project from Calamba to Sto. Tomas will be implemented by the Philippine National Construction Corporation (PNCC), by virtue of PD 1113, as amended. The project costs P1.6 billion. The rehabilitation of the Alabang viaduct is included in the segment.

The construction of the 20-kilometer Lipa-Batangas City segment, including the right of way, costs about P2.2 billion. This is under the franchise of the Study Infrastructure Development Corporation (SIDC).

Briefing the National Economic and Development Authority (NEDA) Executive Committee in a meeting in Malacañang, Public Works and Highways Undersecretary Teodoro Encarnacion said the implementing parties agreed to work within the PNCC franchise so as not to disturb the present direction of the projects.

The National Development Corporation (NDC) will provide project financing through a loan for the design and construction, including the right of way, to PNCC.

Actual construction will be undertaken within 12 months — from September 2003 to September 2004.

The Lipa-Batangas City road will be made operational under the Toll Concession Agreement between the SIDC and DPWH. The actual construction will take place on October 2003 up to March 2004.

The NEDA Execom also discussed DPWH foreign-assisted high impact projects, 50 percent of which are road networks all over the country.

The DPWH said the projects are being fast tracked without sacrificing the quality of work.

In Metro Manila, roads and bridges worth some P6.8 billion are being implemented and scheduled to be completed before the term of the President ends in 2004.

PAGC looking into charges against BIR officials

Malacañang today said the Presidential Anti-Graft Commission (PAGC) is already looking into the allegations made against some officials of the Bureau of Internal Revenue (BIR).

“Chairman Dario Rama of the Presidential Anti-Graft Commission (PAGC) is already on the look out as far as the investigations of this particular matter is concerned,” Presidential Spokesman Ignacio R. Bunye said during a media briefing in Malacañang.

Bunye said President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has clearly mandated the PAGC to inquire into the lifestyles of the government officials, especially those who have been appointed by the President.

The President earlier said investigations and lifestyle checks are ongoing on those suspected of corruption.

“We will not tolerate any corrupt officials in government. We will go after all thieves and punish them accordingly. The people are squarely behind us,” the President said.

Bunye said BIR Commissioner Guillermo Parayno Jr. has already decided to leave the investigations to the PAGC to avert insinuations of a possible whitewash.

“Well, what we know is that Chairman Rama is already stepping in as far as this investigation is concerned. And we also monitored the report that the BIR Commissioner is leaving it to the PAGC. They prefer a neutral body to investigate the BIR officers,” Bunye said.

RP bats for OIC observer status, may send representative to OIC Khartoum meeting

The Philippines may send a representative to attend the meeting of the Organization of Islamic Conference (OIC) in Khartoum, the Sudan from June 25 to 27.

Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye stressed this today as he disclosed moves to impose on the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) a two-week deadline to make a categorical stand on whether or not they want to pursue the peace talks.

The MILF had been tagged as responsible for a series of bombings in southern Philippines.

The government is contemplating on labeling the MILF as a terrorist group in the wake of deaths and injuries of innocent civilians in the bombings and armed attacks on peaceful communities.

In his regular press briefing, Bunye said President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo and other officials “are nearing a decision” on sending a representative to the OIC foreign ministers’ meeting.

He said the Philippines is “batting for observer status” in the influential 56-member Islamic states grouping, but “that has not been granted yet.”

The mechanics of sending a representative to the OIC meeting is being threshed out by the Department of Foreign Affairs, “but it is an ideal situation if we could be granted observer status” within the OIC, he added.

At the same time, Bunye said the government has given the MILF two weeks, to expire on June 1, to show its “sincerity or honest effort” to push through with the Mindanao peace process.

He said that President Macapagal-Arroyo — during her visits Monday (May 12) to Koronadal City, South Cotabato and Siocon, Zamboanga del Norte – dared the MILF to make a categorical stand on the peace talks.

“If they want to pursue peace, they will have to dissociate themselves from known terrorist organizations like the Abu Sayyaf, the Jemaah Islamiya and the Al-Qaeda,” he reiterated.

He also stressed that the MILF would have to police their ranks, turn over the perpetrators of the Mindanao bombings and refrain from committing similar atrocities in the future.

If the MILF shows a change of heart or indicates good faith in their interest to pursue peace, then the government may further defer or put aside proposals of the Cabinet Oversight Committee on Internal Security to brand the rebels as a terrorist group, he said.

He clarified that the COCIS discussions were “centered on the objective evaluation of the activities of the MILF... whether there is a basis for actually declaring them as a terrorist organization.”

“There is a possibility of foreclosing the (Government-MILF) peace talks, if the MILF is eventually declared as a terrorist organization,” but this would not necessarily prevent future negotiations to happen, he added.

Bunye likewise clarified that the President’s call on media to ban propaganda from terrorists was an “appeal and we are not thinking of any possible sanctions.”

What the government wants is to deliver its message of its “sincere effort to have a peaceful solution of the situation,” he said.

GMA to leave May 17 for state visit to U.S. — Palace

Malacañang today announced that President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo will leave Saturday, May 17, for a one-week state visit to the United States, to be highlighted by a meeting with US President George W. Bush in Washington, D. C.

In his regular press briefing in Malacañang, Presidential Spokesman Ignacio R. Bunye said the President, who would be taking the regular Philippines Airlines flight, will arrive in Los Angeles, California on the same day.

During her overnight stay in Los Angeles, the President would meet with the members of the Fil-American community in the city and surrounding areas following a brief visit to Cardinal Mahony of the Cathedral of Our Lady of Angels.

Bunye said the President will then proceed to Washington where she will be welcomed by President Bush and First Lady Laura Bush in the White House.

In an earlier announcement, the White House said President Bush would welcome President Macapagal-Arroyo as an expression of the American people's gratitude to her, the Philippine government and the Filipino nation "for their stalwart efforts in fighting the war on terror, for being such a good and reliable ally to the United States."

Bunye said that during her visit to Washington, President Bush would host a state dinner for her and the official Philippine delegation on May 19. Also on that date, the US State Department would tender a state lunch for the President and the Philippine delegation.

While in Washington, the President will have business meetings with Shengman Zhang, vice president for policies and programs of the World Bank; Peter Voicke, head and managing director of International Finance Corp.; and Hoerst Kohler, managing director of the International Monetary Fund.

She is also scheduled to meet Sen. Richard Lugar, chairman of the US Senate Foreign Relations Committee and hold a round table conference with the US-ASEAN Business Council.

From the US capital, the President would fly to New York where she will meet with American business leaders.

The President will also be conferred an honorary doctorate degree of laws by the Fordham University.

The conferment, to be held May 21 at the McNally Amphitheater of Fordham, will highlight her brief stint in New York, which will also see her attending luncheon meetings with various business groups as well as possible one-on-one meetings with contractors such as Western Wats and Vision X International.

One of those scheduled to call on the President at the Waldorf Astoria while she is in New York is Maurice Greenberg, chairman and chief executive of AIG, the parent company of Phil-Am and officials of Prudential, Convergys and Ford.

From New York, the President flies back to San Francisco to meet with some members of the Fil-American community there. She departs San Francisco for Manila on May 24.

Bunye said the talking points for a possible bilateral agreement with the United States are still being finalized by the Department of Foreign Affairs.

GMA orders DFA, DOLE to extend all possible assistance to Filipino victims in Riyadh bombings

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today ordered the Department of Foreign Affairs and the Department of Labor and Employment to extend all possible assistance to the Filipino victims of the terrorist car bombings in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia, on Monday.

The President, who received a report on the terrorist attacks in the Saudi Arabian capital from Foreign Affairs Secretary Blas Ople, also extended her condolences and sympathy to the families of the Filipino victims of the bombings.

Philippine Ambassador to Saudi Arabia Bahnarim Guinomla informed the DFA that at least two Filipinos were killed in a series of attacks and explosions at a housing complex in Riyadh.

Some Filipinos were also reportedly injured in the incident.

Statement of the President on Riyadh bombing

I sympathize with the families of the victims in the Riyadh bombing. This is a risk inherent to the deployment of millions of Filipinos worldwide. It is also a risk we carry for being part of the global coalition against terrorism. The world has known for a long time that the tentacles of terrorism stretch across borders and can only be destroyed by international action. Our embassy in Saudi Arabia will work closely with Saudi authorities in Riyadh to get at the root of this incident and obtain justice for the victims. The OWWA will see to the welfare of their bereaved families. This tragedy shows the utter helplessness of the civilians against the agents of terror. We are experiencing this in our own country where we now in the thick of a punitive campaign against terrorists in Mindanao. We will not relent in this campaign until we achieve justice for the victims of senseless murder.

Statement of the President on SARS

We shall continue to work with the WHO to comply with all international standards to counter the SARS. So far we are winning the fight, both in containing the threat internally and to prevent its entry or exit from the Philippines. Everybody has a stake in making the Philippines and the world SARS free. Prohibitions being imposed against the mobility of our OFWs are unfair and misplaced. I direct all our embassies to step up the information campaign and diplomatic measures to protect the jobs of Filipinos and ensure their freedom to travel.

Statement of the President on MILF

The MILF must renounce links with international terrorists, surrender the terrorists who murdered innocent civilians, and stop all forms of terrorism. The people would like to read this from the lips of the MILF leadership. Anything short of these will be considered half measures, which will not do. Punitive actions will continue and we will escalate political and military measures as necessary. This is not a fight against Muslims. This is a fight against terror being waged by all decent and civilized Filipinos. We will not acknowledge false offers of peace and succumb to political pressure. To retreat now would only invite more depredations. I have the duty to protect the national interest from greater harm.

Statement of the President on lifestyle checks

Investigations and lifestyle checks are ongoing on those who are suspected of corruption. We are undertaking institutional and procedural reforms to reinforce good governance. Proactive measures, prosecution and public support are the key to success in this long-term effort.

GMA names Aguiluz special envoy to Gulf Cooperation Council

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today announced the appointment of Dr. Amable Aguiluz V, founder and chairman of the AMA Education System, as her special envoy to the Gulf Cooperation Council.

The council is composed of Bahrain, Kuwait, Oman, Qatar, the United Arab Emirates and Saudi Arabia.

Speaking at the first synchronized webcast graduation of the AMA Education System at the Araneta Coliseum, the President asked Dr. Aguiluz to go to Saudi Arabia to extend the President's condolence to Filipinos killed in Monday's bombings in Riyadh.

"This is a risk inherent in the deployment of millions of Filipinos worldwide. It is also a risk we carry for being part of the global war against terrorism," she said.

"The world has known for a long time that the tentacles of terrorism stretch across borders and can only be destroyed by international action," she said.

The President directed the Philippine Embassy in Saudi Arabia to work closely with Saudi authorities in Riyadh to get at the root of the incident and "obtain justice for the victims."

The Chief Executive likewise directed the Overseas Workers Welfare Administration (OWWA) to see to the welfare of the bereaved families of the bombing victims.

Reports said more than 30 people, including two Filipinos, were killed in suicide bombings that rocked three expatriate housing compounds in Riyadh.

The President lamented that the tragedy showed the utter helplessness of civilians against agents of terror.

"We are experiencing this in our own country where we are now taking punitive actions against terrorists in Mindanao," the President said.

She stressed she would not relent in the campaign until justice is achieved for the victims of senseless murder.

The President said the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) must renounce links with international terrorists.

Surrender the terrorists who murdered innocent civilians and stop all forms of terrorism," the President stressed, saying that the people would like to read this from the lips of the MILF leadership.

Anything short of this, she declared, would be considered half measures which would not do.

She said that punitive actions would continue and political and military measures escalated as necessary.

The President stressed that this is not a fight against Muslims. "This is a fight against terror being waged by all decent and civilized Filipinos," the President said.

"We will not acknowledge the false offers of peace or succumb to political pressure," she said.

She added that to retreat now would only invite more depredations. "I have the duty to protect the national interests from greater harm."

June 13 declared special non-working day, June 12 regular working day

It's going to be another long weekend for the working class on the week of Independence Day next month.

Thanks to the administration's holiday economics, families who have been longing to find time for themselves and travel together can do just that as President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo declared Friday, June 13, as a special non-working day and Thursday, June 12 as a regular working day.

The President, through Proclamation 373, however said "all activities and celebrations in observance of Independence Day shall remain to be observed on June 12 to enable all government officials and employees to participate fully in the activities and celebration for the historical commemoration."

She directed the Department of Labor and Employment to issue appropriate circulars to implement the proclamation in the private sector.

In her proclamation, the President said a longer weekend "encourages families to travel and get together with a view to strengthening their relationship towards a more productive society."

"A longer weekend promotes domestic tourism and enables employers to plan their work schedules effectively and efficiently, resulting in improved productivity," she said.

In another proclamation, the President also declared Oct. 31, a Friday, as a special non-working day throughout the country for the public sector.

This, according to Proclamation 374, would give the people full opportunity "to properly observe the day with all its religious fervors which invariably requires them to travel to and from different regions of the country."

All Saints Day, Nov. 1, falls on a Saturday.

Heads of departments, offices, instrumentalities or government-owned or controlled corporations (GOCCs) may, if required by the exigencies of public service, direct their employees to observe regular working hours and provide regular services to the public on Oct. 31.

Also exempted by the proclamation are employees of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, Bureau of Customs and other government agencies/instrumentalities that impose deadlines on the transacting public for payment of taxes and those that provide police, security, fire protection, custodial, rescue, emergency, medical and other similar services.

A surprise reunion at AMA graduation

For Ana Marie Liamzon, it was overwhelming enough that no less than President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo was there when she stood on stage to deliver her response in behalf of some 12,000 graduates of the AMA Computer University today.

After all, the presence of the country's highest official taking time out from hectic routine to be with the graduates, was for her already a big, big honor.

But when her dad, an overseas Filipino worker in Dubai whom she had not seen for 18 years, appeared on stage to personally greet her, she got the grandest surprise gift of all.

Ana Marie, chosen by school officials to represent this year's batch, acknowledged the great support and sacrifice of her parents for her education as she tried to contain her tears as she had a grand reunion with her family on stage of the Big Dome.

It was a heart-tugging scene witnessed by the President and the AMA graduates and their parents during the synchronized graduation held at the Araneta Coliseum, Folk Arts Theater, Cebu Grand Convention Center and Davao Convention Center.

AMA Computer University flew Mr. Liamzon to Manila, all expenses paid, for this event.

Ana did not know that her father will be appearing personally to be with her. After delivering her message and after calling her Mommy on stage, the host, Marie Kaimo, announced that Ana has a message from her father in Dubai.

While delivering the message to her daughter, Daddy Liamzon walked in from back stage to the surprise of her family.

The President, in her speech, related that in United States where she studied, as soon as a student graduates, all she or he wants is to get away from his old home and live by himself alone, independent of his parents.

“Here we witnessed that the student graduates acknowledge the great support of their parents and they dedicate their education to their parents. Family life continues beyond graduation,” the President said.

Greeting all the graduates and their parents represented by Mr. Liamzon, “Malaking sakripisyo para makapag-aral sa magandang universidad ang kanyang anak. Ganoon din ang sakripisyo ng lahat ng mga magulang na nagtratrabaho at nagsakripisyo,” the President said.

Through AMA’s webcast facilities, the event was also beamed live through the internet, accessible to more than 650-million internet users worldwide.

Distinguished guests from AMA’s international partners also arrived to honor this year’s graduates. Present were Dr. Allan Fisher, president and CEO of iCarnegie, Inc., a subsidiary of the prestigious Carnegie Mellon University in Pittsburgh, USA, the No. 1 Computer Science school in the world.

AMA’s partnership with iCarnegie is expected to boost AMA’s computer science curriculum and provide its students the most advanced tools in software systems development through e-Learning and other online facilities.

The National Computing Center of the United Kingdom (NCC-UK), AMA’s London-based partner in its Double Diploma program, also sent its representative, Michael Haigh, Head of Quality and Standards.

AMA’s partnership with the NCC-UK entitles graduates with a second international diploma recognized in more than 80 countries worldwide. This Double Diploma system, another pioneering program of AMA, gives students the striking advantage of competitiveness and high-employability in the Philippines and abroad.

AMA Education System, has an annual student population of 150,000 in its 200 campuses in the Philippines and in other parts of the world.

Since its establishment in 1980, AMA has graduated more than 160,000 students who are now gainfully employed in top IT companies all over the world.

Gov't ready against possible terrorist attacks

The police, the military and local government units are ready to either prevent or ward off any attack the separatist Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) may launch in the wake of possibilities that the latter may be classified as a terrorist group.

Presidential Spokesman Ignacio R. Bunye today stressed this as he noted that the terrorist "attacks are expected and anticipated."

Bunye, however said the government remained hopeful that the MILF would return to the negotiating table to thresh out a lasting, meaningful and peaceful resolution to the Mindanao problem.

He said the Cabinet Oversight Committee on Internal Security, after careful deliberation, decided to give the MILF at least two weeks to show they are sincere in pursuing the peace process.

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo had earlier dared the MILF to make a categorical and unequivocal declaration that the rebel group is not allied with any of the terrorist groups like Abu Sayyaf, Jemaah Islamiya or Al-Qaeda.

The President also demanded that the MILF turn over the perpetrators of the bombings in Mindanao – particularly those in Davao City, Siocon, Zamboanga del Norte and Koronadal City, South Cotabato.

She likewise challenged the MILF to stop committing further atrocities against innocent civilians and peaceful communities in the South.

Bunye said the MILF should show the "indication that they are prepared to talk."

"That would probably pave the way for the resumption of the exploratory talks" between the government and the separatist group, he said.

He also raised the likelihood that the MILF issue might be discussed during the President's visit to Washington next week.

“Perhaps, not specifically, not in very specific terms. But it is expected that regional security cooperation will be discussed during the state visit,” he added.

Be models of electronically-enabled RP, GMA urges graduates of AMA

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today challenged the graduates of AMA Education System to continue to be model citizens of an electronically enabled Philippines.

In a speech at the synchronized graduation of some 12,000 students of the AMA Education System at the Araneta Coliseum, Folk Arts Theater, Cebu Grand Convention Center and Davao Convention Center, the President said that as government install more ICT and ICT-based projects in the different programs of effective governance, investment promotion, agriculture modernization and poverty alleviation, the demand for ICT workers, especially those graduating from an excellent school like AMA is bound to increase.

The Chief Executive said the graduates of AMA have what it takes to succeed. “I ask you to help others do the same,” she said, stressing that as model citizens, they should never lose sight of their equally important roles in the fight against poverty.

To some of the graduates who will be looking for jobs after graduation, the President reminded them of the jobs fair at the SM Megamall under the auspices of the Department of Labor and Employment. This was started last April and will end on June 10, this year.

Available are some 100,000 jobs, the President said, out of which some 16,000 have been applied for.

“So there are still 84,000 jobs being offered for new graduates,” the President said.

The President also told the graduates of her determination to make ICT ensure clean and honest elections from 2004 onwards.

“I am determined to lead and support all efforts, as I have made a budget available from many sources, to ensure that the national elections next year will make full use of computerized canvassing of returns and thereby minimize if not totally eradicate the cheating that’s usually done through the traditional mode,” the President said.

The President said she will continue to depend on the graduates unremitting excellence and patriotism.

Graduates of AMA University, you are blessed with an excellent education, the President said.

According to Dr. Amable Aguiluz V, founder and chairman of the AMA Education System, for the first time in the history of AMA and of Philippine education, the first nationwide graduation among AMA’s campuses in Luzon, Visayas and Mindanao was held.

Through the power of the internet and AMA’s webcast facilities, the event was also beamed live over the world, thus allowing an estimated 600 million people to view the graduation proceedings.

GMA announces passage of bill on trafficking of women, children

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today announced that both houses of Congress had just passed the bill against the trafficking of women and children.

The President made the announcement after she accepted from women legislators and local chief executives the Manila Declaration on Gender-Responsive and Good Governance that articulates the priority issues, principles and actions pertaining to women in governance and decision-making.

The three-day summit was convened by the National Commission on the Role of Filipino Women (NCRFW) and the Department of the Interior and Local Government (DILG), in collaboration with the Lady Local Legislators League (4L), Lady Municipal Mayors Association of the Philippines (LMMAP), Philippine Councilors League (PCL), and the League of Cities of the Philippines (LCP).

The declaration was crafted during the three-day National Summit of Women and Local Chief Executives and Legislators that ended today at the Manila Pavilion Hotel.

The President received the declaration from Tandag, Surigao del Sur Mayor Mary Elizabeth Delgado, LMMAP president; 4L president and Board Member Mariant Villegas; City of San Fernando Mayor Mary Jane Ortega, LCP secretary general; and PCL treasurer Councilor Corazon del Mundo.

The President was supposed to sign the bill into law during the summit but this was deferred as many women leaders also wanted to be present during the signing of the law that protects the rights of women and children.

“I would have wanted to sign the bill into law today right here in this summit, except that many women leaders, who are not part of this summit meeting, want to be present at the signing,” the President said.

“As a woman political leader of the Philippines, I’m one with you in the commitment to build a more humane, just and peace-loving constituency free of gender biases,” the President said.

The NCRFW was established under the Office of the President on Jan. 7, 1975 to review, evaluate and recommend measures, including priorities to ensure the full integration of women for economic, social and cultural development and ensure further equality between men and women.

During the term of President Macapagal-Arroyo, the NCRFW is focused on three priority issues:

- Promoting women’s economic empowerment;
- Upholding women’s human rights; and
- Promoting gender-responsive good governance

International partners that sponsored the event were the Canadian International Development Agency (CIDA), United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) and the United Nations Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific.

The international development partners, represented by UNDP Resident Representative and UN Resident Coordinator Terence Jones, also presented to the President a joint statement of support to the Philippine government and its partners in their effort to promote gender equality and the empowerment of women.

GMA challenges women execs to be crisis managers

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today challenged women executives to be crisis managers ready to confront all kinds of social and security concerns, particularly against the spread of terrorism and the dreaded Severe Acute Respiratory Syndrome (SARS).

The President said terrorism strikes anywhere, from the remotest barangays in Mindanao to the capitals of the world.

“The world in the post-Iraq period has achieved greater strategic stability. But this has driven militant cells to deeper desperation,” the President said during the closing of the National Summit of Women Local Chief Executives and Legislators at the Manila Pavilion Hotel.

The President said all Filipinos must be always vigilant, including the overseas Filipino workers (OFWs) who must work with their host communities to secure themselves and their loved ones.

“We must show the terrorists that humanity will not be cowed, that life goes on and that they will be brought to justice. We will intensify our intelligence work at home and strengthen international security cooperation,” the President said.

The President said the government is currently engaged in a “punitive campaign” against terrorists responsible for specific atrocities, particularly against innocent civilians.

“The campaign will be selective and limited to these terrorist cells. Women executives, this is a challenge to you, to us, not only as executives but as women executives,” she said.

The President cited the role of Zamboanga City Mayor Maria Clara Lobregat and South Cotabato Governor Daisy Avance Fuentes who has been taking the leadership in the fight against terrorism in their respective areas.

“They are at the forefront and sometimes it is said that they have shown their leadership. But they have to show it by being better than the men just to be treated equally in the field of the fight against terrorism,” the President said.

On the threat of SARS, the President said the World Health Organization’s (WHO) forthcoming decision to remove the Philippines from the list of SARS-prone countries “will serve as a trophy for the efforts our people have done in controlling the spread of the virus.”

While we await this eventuality, the President said the security measures against SARS must go on with the same intensity until the threat has been decisively diminished.

The President said this is where women local government leaders surely stand out because it is second nature for women to keep their surroundings clean.

“But we go beyond just what is our trait as women. The local government official as crisis manager must lead whether it’s terrorism or whether it’s SARS,” the President said.

The President said the success of the women executives in the fight against terrorism and SARS is also part of the fight for the advancement of women.

“This is a time for all women executives to show that we are equal to those threats. Therefore, let’s continue to bond together to advance the cause of women as vanguards in building a strong and caring nation,” the President said.

GMA calls on rebel-returnees to forget about violent past and lead new life

STA. CRUZ, Laguna—President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today called on the rebel returnees to forget about their turbulent past and turn a new leaf in their lives as she renewed her pledge to eradicate poverty in order to finally win the war against terrorism.

“Kalimutan na natin ang inyong marahas na kahapon. Hindi kayo kasama doon sa ating mga kalabang organisado (Let us now forget your violent past. You are no longer a part of our organized enemy,” the President said in her remarks in a ceremony here welcoming back to society a total of 123 rebel returnees.

The homecoming of the former combatants of the Communist Party of the Philippines-New People’s Army (CPP-NPA) marked the end of a successful military offensive and the start of a socio-economic program in the 33 rebel-infested barangays in seven municipalities of this province.

The President told the returnees that now that they are free, they should start a new and prosperous life.

She said that one of the things that really gives her a feeling of fulfillment as President and as the mother of the nation is to welcome our countrymen who want to return to normal life.

“Ako ay nasisiyahan sapagkat ito ay tanda rin ng ating mga pagsisikap tungo sa pagkakaisa at kapayapaan dahil ito ay nagtatagumpay (I am happy because this is a signal that our efforts in forging peace and unity are succeeding),” the President said.

She said that because of her gratitude, she has ordered various government agencies to provide the rebel returnees with a package of benefits that would help them lead a productive life.

The President said that she was aware that poverty is the root of rebellion and terrorism in the country.

“Kaya nilalabanan natin hindi ang mga rebelyon, hindi lamang ang sindikatong krimen, hindi lamang ang terorismo, nilalabanan natin ang kahirapan (That is why we are not fighting rebellion, nor the crime syndicates or terrorism; what we are fighting is poverty),” the President said.

GMA creates inter-agency task force to wipe out drug trafficking in country

STA. CRUZ, Laguna—President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today announced the signing of an executive order creating a multi-agency task force that would help the Philippine Drug Enforcement Agency (PDEA) in eliminating illegal drug syndicates in the country.

In her remarks at the ceremonies here welcoming 153 rebel-returnees back to the folds of the law, the President said that other government agencies should help the PDEA and the Dangerous Drugs Board headed by Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose Lina, Jr. in wiping out illegal drug syndicates, especially in the Southern Tagalog region.

The President said that in the Southern Tagalog provinces, the drug problem is more critical than rebellion, adding that there is now a need to have a concerted effort in wiping out this problem.

Under the executive order, the President also ordered the Philippine Charity Sweepstakes Office (PCSO) to earmark P1 billion from lotto receipts to be used by the task force in the fight against drug trafficking.

He said that earlier, she ordered the Overseas Workers' Welfare Administration (OWWA) to set aside P1 billion for overseas Filipino workers (OFWs) in the Middle East affected by the war in Iraq.

He President has also ordered the PCSO to set aside P1 billion to combat the dreaded severe acute respiratory syndrome (SARS) even if only two Filipinos have been confirmed to have died from the disease.

“So, if we can provide P1 billion for the OFWs in Kuwait and the Middle East, and another P1 billion for SARS that has only affected eight with two deaths, what more for illegal drugs that had already victimized many people particularly, in Southern Tagalog,” the President said in Filipino.

The President said it had already been proven that illegal drug syndicates respect no race, religion nor ideology.

She also said that her administration's poverty-alleviation program would be stepped up since poverty is the root cause of terrorism, rebellion and other syndicated crimes.

The President said that the government would intensify its intelligence work and strengthen security cooperation with other countries to defeat terrorism either in Mindanao or elsewhere in the country.

Press Statement of Secretary Rigoberto D. Tiglao, Presidential Chief of Staff

In order to intensify and accelerate her administration's war against illegal drugs, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today ordered the organization of task forces within the Philippine National Police, the National Bureau of Investigation, the Bureau of Customs, and the Office of the President. She ordered the creation of a standby fund of P1 billion for these units' operations, to augment funds from their mother agencies.

The P1-billion standby fund will come from the revenues of the Philippine Charity Sweepstakes Office' lotto operations.

In her Executive Order No. 206 signed this morning, the President stressed the “urgent need to pursue a forceful, intensive, and unrelenting campaign against drug trafficking and the use of illegal drugs, whether syndicated or at street-level.”

The President noted in her executive order that the Philippine Drug Enforcement Agency (PDEA) – the lead agency under the Comprehensive Dangerous Drug Act of 2002 tasked to wage the campaign against illegal drugs – is presently in a transition period, and still has to develop its institutional capacities. Thus the need for the modernization of the task forces, the main one of which will be organized by the PNP.

The PDEA will exercise operational supervision and provide technical support to the main task force created by the PNP. In the case of the task forces, the President herself will determine whether the Dangerous Drugs Board or the PDEA will exercise operational supervision.

GMA leaves tomorrow for state visit to U.S.

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo will leave tomorrow for an eight-day state visit to the United States to further strengthen RP-US partnership in security and counter-terrorism and to expand the level of cooperation in trade and investments between the two countries.

The President said that her Washington visit is deemed crucial since the world has changed after the March 20, 2003 US-led action against Iraq ushering in a new global environment that requires a fresh perspective on regional political and economic security.

Earlier, the White House announced that US President George W. Bush would welcome President Macapagal-Arroyo for a state visit as an expression of gratitude to the country's support to the US in the global fight against terrorism.

In his announcement, White House Press Secretary Ari Fleischer said that in welcoming the Philippine President, President Bush would like to thank President Macapagal-Arroyo, the people and the government of the Philippines "for their stalwart efforts in fighting the war on terror, for being such a good and reliable ally to the United States."

The President will leave tomorrow night for Los Angeles, California, the first leg of her state visit, through the regular flight of the Philippine Airlines.

After an overnight stay in Los Angeles where she will address a gathering of the members of the Filipino-American community in the West Coast, the President will fly to Washington, D. C. the following day.

Upon arrival at the Dulles Airport in Washington, D. C. the President, First Gentleman Jose Miguel Arroyo and some of the members of her official party would be flown to Washington Monument Grounds by two helicopters provided by the US government.

The President and the First Gentleman would then motor to the Blair House, the official guesthouse of the American government for visiting foreign dignitaries, where she will stay during her Washington visit.

The following day, Monday (Tuesday in Manila), President Bush and First Lady Laura Bush would formally welcome the President and the First Gentleman in arrival ceremonies to be held at the South Lawn of the White House, after which President Bush would escort the visiting President to the Oval Office for a bilateral meeting, the highlight of her state visit.

Immediately after their meeting at the Oval Office, the two leaders and their respective panels would hold an expanded bilateral meeting at the Cabinet Room in the White House.

During the bilateral talks, the two leaders are expected to discuss defense and security cooperation, especially in the fight against terrorism, and other issues affecting the two countries.

The two leaders are also expected to talk about the humanitarian and reconstruction efforts in Iraq, which is being participated in by the Philippines.

The Philippines was among the 20 countries that supported the US-led “coalition of the willing” in the war against the tyrannical regime of Saddam Hussein although it did not send combat troops to the war.

As part of its international commitment, the President has approved the sending of a 175-man peacekeeping and humanitarian mission, composed mostly of medical staff, to help restore normalcy and stability to Iraq.

She has said that stability in the Middle East is crucial to global stability and for the Philippines, this is particularly important because this means the long-term safety of some 1.5-million Filipino workers in the region.

During her talks with Bush, the President is also expected to touch on such sensitive issues as preferential trade arrangements, intellectual property protection, and equal benefits for Filipino World War II veterans.

The US Department of State will host a state lunch for the President and her official delegation after her talks with President Bush at the White House.

President Bush and First Lady Laura Bush would then tender a state dinner at the White House for the visiting Philippine leader and her official party.

On her second day in Washington, leaders of US financial institutions would call on the President at the Blair House, among them Shengman Zhang, vice president for policies and programs of the World Bank; Peter Voicke, head and managing director of the International Finance Corporation; and Horst Kohler, managing director of the International Monetary Fund.

In between her official engagements, the President would be interviewed by NBC News’ Andrea Mitchell and Wolf Blitzer of CNN International.

The President would also call on Senator Richard Lugar, chairman of the Senate foreign relations committee, at his office in the US Senate. Mr. Lugar is an old friend of the Philippines.

A number of government-to-government memorandums of agreement (MOAs) and private sector agreements would be signed by the Philippine and American panels during the Washington leg of the President’s visit to the US.

This would be the second time that President Bush meets with President Macapagal-Arroyo at the White House. On Nov. 20, 2001, President Bush also welcomed the President to the White House during a weeklong working visit to the US.

The two leaders also met at the 10th Economic Leaders’ Meeting of the Asia Pacific Economic Cooperation (APEC) held last October 27, 2002 in Los Cabos, Mexico.

From Washington, D. C., the President will proceed to New York where she will meet with US business leaders and receive a honorary doctorate degree of laws at the prestigious Fordham University.

GMA hands over P120,000, vows more aid to kin of OFWs killed in Riyadh bombings

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today handed over P120,000 each to the families of three overseas Filipino workers (OFW) who were killed during the recent bomb attacks by terrorists in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia.

The President spared time to condole with the families of deceased OFWs Serafin Hernandez, Getulio Templo and Rogelio Pababero at the Overseas Workers Welfare Administration (OWWA) office in Pasay City despite a hectic schedule.

She told the Hernandez, Templo and Pababero families that the checks represented the insurance gratuities and benefits of the late Filipino expatriates.

She said the bereaved families would also be eligible for the scholarship program, entrepreneurship development training, repatriation and airport assistance and others.

She disclosed that relatives of the workers could avail themselves of scholarships that the AMA Computer College is offering.

The President took time to reiterate her belief that the OFWs serve not only as modern-day heroes but “martyrs” of the land.

She cited her government’s determination to seek the best for OFWs.

OWWA Administrator Virgilio Angelo said Labor Secretary Patricia Sto. Tomas had ordered labor officials in Riyadh to closely coordinate with Saudi authorities to work out the earliest repatriation of the bodies of Hernandez, Templo and Pababero.

Angelo said labor officials have also been negotiating with the employers of the three OFWs for the release of monetary claims, including unpaid salaries.

MILF showed true terrorist color in past three months

Is the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) a secessionist group or a band of terrorists out to sow havoc in war-torn Mindanao?

Events of the past three months and documents recovered from the capture of the Buliok complex in the Liguasan Marsh area tend to belie the rebel groups’ claims that they are not allied with any of the terrorist groups like the Abu Sayyaf, Jemaah Islamiya or Al Qaeda.

While the government has been consistent in its policy of keeping its doors open to the peace process, the MILF has been clandestinely building up its armed capability and influence in its areas of operation as well as conniving with criminal elements in kidnapping operations.

In particular, it was monitored that the MILF gives kidnap for ransom gangs (KFRGs) and extortion rings training support and sanctuary in the Liguasan Marsh in exchange for money.

MILF documents in the area last February 13 confirmed a standing plan by the MILF to conduct bombing operations.

The documents showed that the MILF has conducted training on bomb-making, particularly the pencil bomb type explosives, and demolition techniques.

The group has also recruited minors as combatants, signed a deal to buy military hardware from a foreign source and generated substantial funds from foreign and local supporters.

From all of these findings, it seems that the MILF has been preparing to launch terrorist activities while deceiving the government on the peace talks.

Declassified military information shows that MILF hostile actions have escalated after the Buliok operations and prior to the signing of the joint statement for the cessation of hostilities last March 28.

A total of 251 MILF-caused hostile incidents were recorded, resulting in the death of 70 civilians and the wounding of 222 others.

The most notable incidents were the massacre of 19 hapless farmers in Kalawit, Zamboanga del Norte last February 19; the bombing of Cotabato airport on February 20 resulting in the death of one soldier, wounding of six civilians and conflagration of 15 commercial establishments; and in front of the Davao international airport on March 4 killing 23 people and wounding 127 others.

MILF actions also resulted in the destruction of 54 NAPOCOR towers, causing significant disruption of business activity and millions of pesos in revenue loss.

Despite the signing of the joint statement, the MILF continued to conduct armed offensives targeting communities and public installations.

The MILF had conducted 142 armed attacks in Maguindanao, Lanao del Sur, Lanao del Norte, Cotabato, Sultan Kudarat, South Cotabato, Davao City, Davao Oriental, Zamboanga del Norte, Zamboanga del Sur and Zamboanga Sibugay.

The bulk of these attacks were in the form of harassments, bombings/sabotage and raids not only against military and police positions but also civilian communities and urban centers particularly in Central and Western Mindanao.

The most notable of these are the bombing of the Sasa Wharf in Davao City on April 2 which killed 19 innocent civilians and wounded 39 others; the execution of 13 civilians on board a passenger jeep following a road blockade in Maigo, Lanao del Norte last April 24; and the attack on the municipality of Siocon in Zamboanga del Norte last May 4 resulting in the death of 10 civilians, six policemen, five soldiers and the wounding of 29 others.

Because of the Armed Forces of the Philippines' (AFP) active defense posture in the first four months of the year, MILF-initiated armed atrocities escalated to 426 incidents, a dramatic 171 percent increase compared to the 157 recorded for the whole year of 2002.

What is discernible, according to the AFP's declassified information, is that the civilians are the ones absorbing the brunt of MILF atrocities, particularly after the Buliok incident.

This did not escape the eyes of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo who personally condoled with the victims of the recent Koronadal bombing which again had civilians as victims.

While the government, she said, is hopeful that the MILF would return to the negotiating table to thresh out a lasting, meaningful and peaceful resolution to the Mindanao problem, she dared the rebel group to make a categorical and unequivocal declaration that it is not allied with any of the terrorist groups like the Abu Sayyaf, Jemaah Islamiya or Al Qaeda.

The President also demanded that the MILF turn over the perpetrators of the bombings in Mindanao, particularly those in Davao City, Siocon, and Koronadal.

She likewise challenged the MILF to stop committing further atrocities against innocent civilians and peaceful communities in the South and show an indication that they are prepared to talk.

"Anything short of these will be considered half measures, which will not do," the President said. "Punitive action will continue and we will escalate political and military measures as necessary. This is not a fight against Muslims. This is a fight against terror being waged by all decent and civilized Filipinos."

She also said that the government would not acknowledge false offers of peace and succumb to political pressure.

“To retreat now would only invite more depredations,” she said. “I have the duty to protect the national interest from greater harm.”

Rebel returnees get package of benefits

STA. CRUZ, Laguna – Aware that poverty is the root of rebellion and terrorism in the country, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo yesterday ordered all government agencies to provide rebel returnees a package of benefits that would help them lead a new and productive life.

The President gave the order during a homecoming ceremony at the Laguna Cultural Center here for 123 former dissidents from the CPP-NPA who returned to the folds of the law.

She told the rebel returnees to forget about their turbulent past and turn a new leaf after distributing a financial assistance of P4,500, a sack of rice, free lots and construction materials to build their houses, health cards and life insurance.

“Thank you for your decision to bring your faith to the justice of our government,” the President said in her welcome remarks. “Kalimutan na natin and inyong marahas na kahapon. Hindi kayo kasama doon sa ating mga kalabang organisado (Let us now forget your violent past. You are no longer a part of the our organized enemy).”

The President announced that Secretary Michael Defensor of the Housing and Urban Development Coordinating Council (HUDCC) has already received an assurance from General Manager Felixto Cataquiz of the Laguna Lake Development Authority (LLDA) that the agency would provide free lots and lumber for the construction of houses to 123 rebel returnees.

She also informed the former rebels that PhilHealth president Francisco T. Duque, Jr. would give them free PhilHealth cards to help them in their medical check-up, medical consultation and operation, if necessary.

While the President made her speech, Duque distributed certification and health cards to all rebel beneficiaries.

The President also said that all rebel returnees who want to farm would be given coconut seedlings to start their livelihood project.

She also asked the former rebels wishing to become fishermen to form a cooperative so they could be given fish nets and permit from the LLDA to operate fish pens in Laguna Lake.

The President reiterated that the kind of benefits she would provide to all rebel returnees is the same thing she wants to give to all marginalized sectors in the province of Laguna.

The President ordered Secretary Jose D. Lina, Jr. of the Department of Interior and Local Government to locate all poor fisherman and farmers in his hometown to help and provide them the same benefits and assistance given to all rebel returnees.

“They need to locate and help them so that they cannot be easily brainwashed by the communist rebels to join and fight against the government,” the President said.

The Cabinet secretaries and other top officials who accompanied the President were Corazon Juliano-Soliman of the Department of Social Welfare and Development; Angelo Reyes of the Department of National Defense; Teresita “Ding” Deles of the National Anti-Poverty Commission; Eduardo Ermita of the Presidential Adviser on the Peace Process; Lina; Michael Defensor of the HUDCC; Armed Forces Chief of Staff General Narciso Abaya; Philippine Chairman Ma. Livia “Honey Girl” de Leon; PhilHealth president Francisco Duque III; and general manager Felixto Cataquiz of the LLDA.

GMA graces text2teach launching

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today witnessed the launching of the text2teach, the initial Philippine-wide pilot project of BridgeIT that would allow public elementary schools gain access to international learning materials with the use of mobile technology.

At the launching at the Hotel Intercontinental in Makati City, the President began the simulation process of the project by pressing and sending T2T from a Nokia Globe cellphone.

Immediately after, a two-minute presentation was run showing the simulation process from the time a teacher sends a request from a cellular phone until a satellite feed downloads her requested module into a digital recorder connected to a television set in the classroom.

BridgeIT is a global program developed jointly by Nokia, the International Youth Foundation (IYF), Pearson and the United Nations Development Program (UNDP).

The Ayala Foundation spearheaded the text2teach in the country in cooperation with the Department of Education (DepEd) and local partners Globe Telecom, Nokia-Philippines, SEAMEO INNOTECH, PMSI-Dream Broadcasting, and service provider Chikka Asia.

text2teach would enable teachers to use Nokia-supplied mobile phones to request more than 80 full-length videos, each of which introduces and illustrates a key component of the Philippine science curriculum.

The project implementation would begin in June for Grades 5 and 6 students of 40 schools in selected areas in Quezon City, Batangas, Laguna and Cotabato City.

The IYF has begun training 80 teachers to use the technology that would initially benefit more than 10,000 students nationwide.

The Philippines was selected as the pilot venue for BridgeIT because of its good telecommunications infrastructure, the Filipinos’ good command of English, and the government’s focus on education as a means to overcome poverty.

The Philippine pilot would provide a “blueprint” for replicating programs in other less developed countries.

Among those who graced the launching were DepEd Secretary Edilberto de Jesus, Presidential Assistant for Poverty Alleviation Victoria Garchitorena, Transportation and Communications Undersecretary Virgilio Peña, Ayala Corporation president Jaime Augusto Zobel de Ayala, and Nokia executive vice president Veli Sundback.

TOR for planned Balikatan in Sulu similar to Basilan exercise

Malacañang today said the terms of reference (TOR) of the projected conduct of a Balikatan in Sulu would be similar to the joint US-RP military exercises in Basilan last year.

Presidential Management Staff chief Secretary Silvestre Afafe Jr. said the consensus was reached between the Cabinet Oversight Committee on Internal Security (COCIS), the leaders of Congress, and officials from the province of Sulu during a consultation meeting this morning in Malacañang.

Afafe said the consultation was in relation to the planned conduct of the Balikatan in Sulu sometime by the end of June or mid-July.

“I cannot announce the details of the consultation except that a consensus has been reached on a, let’s say, a consensus has gelled between the Office of the President, the LGUs (local government units) concerned and the leaders of Congress on a new set of terms of reference,” Afable said. “The terms of reference would basically be the same as the Balikatan that was held in Basilan last year.”

In terms of principle, he said the new TOR would contain provisions that would adhere to constitutional standards, and the United Nations resolutions on the fight against terrorism.

“And this term of reference would be made public once they are finalized upon mutual agreement between the Philippines and the US government,” he added.

Afable said the TOR in the Balikatan in Basilan last year provided that US troops would not be involved in any offensive combat operations.

“They can only fire back in self-defense,” he said.

He said Executive Secretary Alberto Romulo presided over the meeting.

Others in attendance were Senate President Franklin Drilon, House Speaker Jose de Venecia, Senator Ramon Magsaysay, Sulu Governor Yusuf Jikiri, Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao Governor Parouk Hussin, Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes, National Security Adviser Secretary Roilo Golez, Presidential Adviser on the Peace Process Secretary Eduardo Ermita, and others involved in the security establishment.

From Washington, D. C., the President will proceed to New York where she will meet with US business leaders and receive a honorary doctorate degree of laws at the prestigious Fordham University.

GMA’s U.S. state visit crucial after the March 20 U.S.-led action on Iraq

The state visit of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo to the United States, which starts tomorrow, is deemed crucial at this time since the new global environment brought about by the March 20 US-led action against Iraq requires a new perspective on regional political and economic security.

The President said that this new perspective must take into consideration the millions of overseas Filipino workers (OFWs) who are contributing to the development of economies in countries around the world.

She said the continuing threat of terrorism and the tensions in the Korean peninsula could further exacerbate the situation and would need more concerted efforts on the part of the countries in the Asia Pacific.

The President said that strong relations with the United States would contribute to regional prosperity and stability, especially in addressing the threat of terrorism.

“A way to support continued engagement with the US must be found at a time when there are strong forces in the region working against this relationship,” the President said.

According to the President, the March 20 US-led action against Iraq has led many nations, especially in the Arab world, to believe that the US action was an unjustified aggression against a Muslim country.

She said that unfortunately, many groups “with very dangerous agendas,” have already capitalized on this development and have tried to ignite some religious tensions around the world.

Given the region’s religious diversity, the Asia Pacific nations should be resolute in their efforts to promote peace and order within their borders and throughout the region, the President said.

The President said that definitely nations like the Philippines, will have to continue to seek military assistance from the US so that the fight against terrorism, as well as against poverty, be won.

GMA only the third head of state that Bush had welcomed to the White House for a state visit

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, who leaves tonight for an eight-day state visit to the United States, is only the third head of state that US President George W. Bush had welcomed to the White House for a state visit since he assumed office in early 2001.

Although there had been a number of foreign heads of state and government who visited Washington, D. C., and had audience with President Bush, only Mexican President Vicente Fox and Polish President Aleksander Kwasniewski have been welcomed by Bush as state visitors.

Fox made a state visit to Washington on Sept. 5-6, 2001 while Kwasniewski was state guest of the United States last Jan. 8, 2003.

After the US-led war on Iraq, the President is the fourth to be welcomed by Bush at the White House, after British Prime Minister Tony Blair, Australian Prime Minister John Howard and Spanish Prime Minister Jose Maria Aznar.

The three leaders were the main allies of the US in the “coalition of the willing” that toppled the Saddam Hussein regime in Iraq.

The Philippines was among those that openly supported the US-led coalition although it did not send combat troops to the war.

As part of its international commitment, the Philippines, however, is sending a 175-member peacekeeping and humanitarian mission to Iraq. The contingent, composed mostly of medical staff, will leave for Baghdad soon.

When asked in a recent press briefing at the White House why the President of a small country like the Philippines is given the “rare honor” of being welcomed for a state visit, US Press Secretary Ari Fleischer said that this was

President Bush's way of thanking the Philippines and the Filipino people for their unequivocal support to the US-led fight against global terrorism and for "being such a good and reliable ally."

The President was one of the first world leaders who expressed full support to the global campaign against terrorism that was launched by the US after the Sept. 11, 2001 attacks.

GMA announces rescue of Abu Sayyaf hostages

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has announced the rescue at dawn today of the remaining Jehovah Witness hostages of the terrorist Abu Sayyaf.

"May progreso ang laban sa terorismo ngunit hindi pa tapos (There is progress in our continuing fight against terrorism)," the President stressed during the signing of Republic Act 9207 or the National Government Center (NGC) Housing and Land Utilization Act at the Commonwealth Elementary School in Quezon City.

"Let's not take anything for granted in our vigilance against terrorist reprisals," she said as she urged the Filipino citizenry to watch over their communities and be accountable for each other.

She cited the close cooperation of local government units and the national government through synergistic linkages in the anti-terrorism campaign.

She asked the people to be calm but fully alert in their homes and their places of work and livelihood.

The battle against terrorists could not be won overnight and it demanded the utmost sense of duty and concern for each and every Filipino, she added.

"This is not a fight of the government alone, it is a fight of all our people and the whole world," she said.

On the dreaded disease called SARS, the President said the opening of classes would demand among the people another round of alertness to protect the health of students.

"We already scored big against SARS and we must follow through," she said.

She pointed out that all schools and related sectors should focus on cooperation and unified action.

The President directed the Department of Health and the Department of Education to work closely with school administrators, Parent-Teachers Associations and student organizations, emphasizing that the information drive among students must be comprehensive and penetrating.

"Extraordinary precautions are needed," she said.

GMA to work out anti-poverty campaign with US officials

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said that she would remind top United States officials to be conscious of the fight against poverty which breeds terrorism.

Speaking at the signing of Republic Act 9207 or "The National Government Center (NGC) Housing and Land Utilization Act," the President said: Kaya kung gusto nating tuluyang sugpuin ang terorismo, hindi dapat balewalain ang pagsisikap na mai-ahon sa kahirapan ang marami nating kababayan (If we are to crush terrorism, let us strive to get many of our countrymen out of poverty)."

She asked the new NGC homeowners to share with her the prayer that her trip to the United States with Senate President Franklin Drilon and Speaker Jose de Venecia would be a success.

“Ito ay bahagi ng ating pagtahak tungo sa magandang kinabukasan (This is part of our moves towards a brighter future),” she said.

The President will be leaving tonight for an eight-day state visit to the United States.

She said her US trip is expected to further strengthen the RP-US partnership in security and counter-terrorism. It also aims at expanding the level of cooperation in trade and investments.

GMA signs into law NGC housing, land use act

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today signed into law Republic Act 9207, also known as the National Government Center (NGC) Housing and Land Utilization Act of 2003, confirming the disposition of the NGC site to bona fide residents.

“This forms a big part in the implementation of our priority programs for the urban poor,” the President said, stressing that she is doing everything to put into proper perspective various programs for housing despite the many problems facing the nation today such as terrorism and SARS.

The law finally resolved the status of residents in the NGC area. “They are no longer squatters in their own country because government is now giving them the opportunity to finally own the houses they have been living in for so long,” the President said.

Aside from confirming the legal status of the possession of lots that have long been disposed of in favor of the beneficiaries, the law also provides the:

- Creation of an NGC Administration Committee to administer and implement the land disposition. The committee is led by the Housing and Urban Development Coordinating Council (HUDCC), the Presidential Commission on Urban Poor (PCUP), the Quezon City Local Government Unit, the National Housing Authority (NHA), the Department of Environment and Natural Resources, the Department of Public Works and Highways, and representatives from NGC Westside and Eastside;
- Designation of the NHA as trustee of the NGC Housing Program except the Commonwealth Enterprise Zone under the Home Guarantee Corporation; and
- Grant of tax exemption on the lands sold and to be disposed under the housing program.

After the signing ceremony, the President awarded 1,100 certificates of lot reservation and 100 medium-rise building units to qualified Quezon City beneficiaries.

The Chief Executive also distributed 907 Certificates of Project Qualification for beneficiaries who have qualified but have no community development plans yet.

In 1979, then President Marcos had reserved more than 400 hectares of private domain in Constitution Hills, Quezon City as the National Government Center site pursuant to Proclamation 1826.

In 1987, then President Aquino issued Proclamation 137 that excluded 150 hectares from the total area covered by Proclamation 1826 for disposition to qualified residents.

In a similar move, then President Ramos further expanded the area open for disposition through Proclamation 1169 by excluding more than 230 hectares from the coverage of Proclamation 1826.

The Supreme Court, however, rendered null and void President Aquino's proclamation and gave a ruling that a proclamation issued by then President Marcos could only be amended by an equally valid act of legislation.

The new NGC Housing law addressed that concern.

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's statement on Mindanao punitive operations

Today I authorized the Armed Forces of the Philippines to employ selective aerial and artillery attacks to dislodge embedded terrorist cells that have attacked hapless civilian communities and murdered scores of innocent Filipinos in Mindanao.

This is in support of military operations that have been ongoing, in varying degrees of intensity, over the past week in the Zamboanga Peninsula, the Lanao provinces and Maguindanao.

We've decided to use extraordinary punitive forces not merely in view of tactical necessity, but to signify the determination of the government to bring terrorists to justice.

I ask Congress to stand behind the people and the government in this action. The local government units in the areas affected have been informed and many of them have heightened their vigilance against reprisals.

This is a time for all Filipinos to stand together, to fight and sacrifice together.

The relief agencies of government are on alert for a possible surge of evacuees in the affected areas. We shall work with local communities to provide food, shelter and medicine to temporarily dislocated families.

I encourage the private sector to gather resources for humanitarian assistance.

We have seen that terrorism strikes anywhere, anytime, from the remotest barangays in Mindanao to the capitals of the world. The world in the post-Iraq war period has achieved greater strategic stability, but this has driven militant cells to deeper desperation.

Our country has been under terrorist attack—sporadic, intermittent but nevertheless, deadly. Davao City has been bombed twice. Siocon and Maigo have been assaulted with impunity. Koronadal has been attacked. Christians and Muslims have been killed.

Filipinos have also been killed and wounded in a terrorist attack in Riyadh. We're victims in our own land and elsewhere. We must fight back now or face greater peril in the future.

All Filipinos must be vigilant wherever they are.

Secretary Renato de Villa, my adviser on strategic concerns, will help me coordinate the holistic approach to this campaign.

The holistic approach will encompass the political, diplomatic, military, cultural, economic, humanitarian, and information aspects of the campaign.

Regular information briefings on the tactical and humanitarian situation will be handled by the military division commanders teaming up with the regional directors of the DSWD.

I shall embark on a state visit to the United States tonight bearing in mind the need to bolster our strategic relationship with the United States as well as with our neighbors in the fight against terrorism as we face a new global horizon cast by post-war Iraq.

We have to continue to reach out to the Islamic nations through the OIC to press our principled stand against a common enemy, while seeking consensus for the security and welfare of Muslim Filipinos.

This is not simply a war of guns and bullets. It's a strategic war of will and vision. We shall tighten the noose of military operations, anti-poverty programs and diplomatic initiatives until the threat of terrorism is beaten.

We will nurture the seeds of a principled, secure and enduring peace. We will banish despair and bring a new light of hope.

We shall build the ramparts of the strong Republic in Mindanao.

I order our soldiers to carry on; I ask our people to stand behind them.

Thank you and May God bless us all.

GMA orders selective military attacks against terrorists in Mindanao

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo authorized today the Armed Forces of the Philippines to employ selective aerial and artillery attacks to dislodge embedded terrorist cells that have attacked hapless civilian communities and murdered scores of innocent Filipinos in Mindanao.

COMELEC to hold seminars on Absentee Voting in Philippine Embassy, consulates in U.S.

LOS ANGELES (via PLDT) — Philippine authorities here are ready to implement the Absentee Voting Law, which would allow qualified Filipinos in the United States numbering close to a million to vote in next year's national elections.

Philippine Consul General Marciano Paynor, in an interview here on the eve of the arrival of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo for an eight-day state visit, said Commission on Elections (COMELEC) officials will start conducting a series of seminars on the implementation of the law in Philippine Consulates all over the US, and the Philippine Embassy in Washington, D. C. starting May 27.

Paynor said COMELEC representatives, assisted by Embassy and Consulate officials, will brief the numerous leaders of the Filipino community "to inform them of the nuances" of the Absentee Voting Law.

During the seminar, the COMELEC, Embassy and Consulate officials will discuss the details of the registration and the manner of the actual voting for the Filipinos.

Paynor said that with the COMELEC seminar, Philippine diplomatic officials would be able to determine the number of voters who will be involved in the electoral exercise and, subsequently, the number of polling places that would have to be set up.

"This is something that we need to do. We will need to thresh out, first of all, how do we register. After we shall have registered and found out the demographics, what is the concentration and so on and so forth," he said.

Paynor likewise noted that with the seminar, the manner of the actual voting — whether it will be computerized or manual — would be determined.

"These issues we do not know, and not until we are told by COMELEC officially what the manner of registration and voting would be, can we plan our course of action," he added.

The Consul General explained that as far as the experience of some Central American countries like Guatemala, Chile and Peru was concerned, absentee voting has been successful in the US and especially in Los Angeles.

Under the law, Philippine diplomatic officials will be deputized, just like the teachers back in the Philippines, to officiate the actual poll.

Paynor thus stressed the importance of the information drive undertaken by the Filipino communities on the absentee voting.

He said several Filipino community newspapers and radio stations are able to inform Filipinos on important announcements on the forthcoming elections – on how votes will be cast.

There are at least 20 Filipino-American publications, a Filipino television channel and at least two radio stations in California and other parts of the US.

Paynor also noted possible developments back in the Philippines that would affect the manner of elections overseas such as the expected passage of the Dual Citizenship bill — which would allow foreign citizens who were once Filipino citizens to likewise vote in the elections.

Filipinos in Los Angeles to join GMA in special mass, reception

LOS ANGELES (via PLDT) – Filipino-Americans here, who for months have been looking forward to the visit of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, finally get a chance to meet or even just get a glimpse of the Philippine leader Saturday night and Sunday morning (California time).

The President will make an overnight trip here Sunday (Manila time), her first stop on her way to Washington, D. C., for a state visit and meeting with United States President George W. Bush.

Upon her arrival in California, host to one of the largest Filipino communities in the US, the President will go to the Cathedral of Our Lady of Angels in downtown Los Angeles to join the Fil-American community for a special Mass.

As she always does whenever she travels abroad, the President will then meet with the overseas Filipino workers and professionals from California and nearby states.

Philippine Consul General Marciano Paynor said at least 3,500 tickets were given free of charge to Filipino and Fil-Americans who will attend the special Mass slated at 9 p.m. (Los Angeles time, 12 noon Sunday, Manila time) to be officiated by no less than His Eminence Cardinal Roger Michael Mahoney.

Paynor said the Cathedral can only fit 3,000 people and this is what prompted Philippine authorities to issue tickets to control the crowd.

“We had to give out tickets because there are more people asking for tickets than there are tickets available,” the Consul General said.

Paynor said the desire of the huge Filipino crowd is “really an honest and sincere wish to for them to see the President.”

Paynor noted that although the Cathedral can accommodate only 3,000 people, more than 5,000 Filipinos flocked a special Simbang Gabi (midnight Mass) last December arranged by Fil-Am community leaders.

The new Cathedral is bounded by Temple Street, Grand Avenue, Hill Street and the Hollywood Freeway.

The title of Our Lady of the Angel was adapted following the 1781 founding of the City, originally called El Pueblo de Nuestra Señora Reina de los Angeles.

The Consul General said that after the Mass, the President would mingle with the Filipino community leaders during a cocktail reception in a special venue at the Cathedral around 10:30 in the evening here.

“We have invited the leaders, the community leaders, basically. This is a mix and mingle with notable personalities,” he said.

Based on a study using a 1990 US census, Filipinos belong to the upper tier among ethnic groups in Los Angeles county in terms of socio-economic indicators.

While constituting the second largest ethnic group next to the Mexicans, a significant portion of the Filipino community is gainfully employed in white-collar and blue-collar occupations. A number of them hold managerial, executive and administrative positions in government, both federal and local.

Filipinos in the US workforce are engaged in a variety of professions such as doctors, nurses, engineers, accountants, teachers, information technology technicians, among others.

Others are in the service industry, working in hotels, aviation, insurance and brokerage firms, sales, restaurants, public utilities as well as in the entertainment industry.

There is also a growing number of Filipino-owned businesses such as nursing-home facilities, restaurants, advertising, travel agencies, consultancies and cargo handling.

After a brief rest at Beverly Wilshire Hotel and a breakfast meeting with young Filipino professionals here, the President will leave at around 9 a.m. Sunday (12 midnight Monday in Manila) for Washington, D. C. for the actual state visit and meeting with President Bush.

GMA arrives in Los Angeles on first leg of visit

LOS ANGELES (via PLDT) — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo arrived here Saturday night (Sunday morning in Manila) for an eight-day state visit to the United States.

She was accorded brief and simple arrival honors at the Los Angeles International Airport after her plane, a Philippine Airlines commercial flight from Manila, touched down at around 6:30 p.m. Saturday (9:30 a.m. Sunday in Manila).

On hand to welcome her and other members of her party, including First Gentleman Atty. Jose Miguel Arroyo, were Philippine Consul General to Los Angeles Marciano Paynor and members of the Filipino community here.

The President will be given elaborate military honors appropriate for a state visitor when she arrives in Washington, D. C. on Monday.

Arriving ahead of schedule, the President proceeded to the Beverly Wilshire Hotel before proceeding to the Cathedral of Our Lady of Angels to attend a special Mass to be attended by more than 3,000 overseas Filipinos here.

After Mass, she will meet with His Eminence Cardinal Roger Michael Mahoney and then attend a reception with Filipino community leaders at the second level of the Cathedral.

She will spend the night at the Beverly Wilshire Hotel and, in the morning, board a chartered plane for Washington for the formal state visit.

The President's state visit to the US has a four-fold objective. These are: to further enhance Philippine-American cooperation in security and counter-terrorism; to expand trade and investment cooperation; to highlight the importance of the Philippines to US political and business leaders; and to advance the welfare of Filipinos and Filipino-Americans.

This will be the second time that the President would meet with President George W. Bush at the White House. Last November 2001, Bush received the President during a working visit.

The President is one of the first world leaders who supported the US-led global campaign against terrorism launched after the September 11, 2001 attacks.

The Philippines was also a member of the US-led coalition of the willing in the war in Iraq.

Meanwhile, the US last year sent around 1,000 special forces to help train Philippine police and military authorities in fighting the Abu Sayyaf in Basilan and Zamboanga under the Balikatan 02-1.

This year's Balikatan 03-1 will likewise be participated in by US special forces in Jolo, Sulu.

GMA says success of U.S.-led coalition against terror opens new perspective on global security

LOS ANGELES (via PLDT) — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo Saturday night here (Sunday in Manila) said the success of the United States-led coalition against terrorism and weapons of mass destruction has led to new perspectives on political and economic security of the world.

These are: that Asia must take greater responsibility for its own political and economic security and that strong relations with the U.S. will contribute greatly to regional stability and progress in Asia as well as greater success in addressing terrorism.

“Asian self-reliance will promote immediate and effective response to clear and present dangers before they get out of control,” the President said in her remarks following a special Mass for Filipino-Americans at the Cathedral of Our Lady of the Angels.

The President said that for the Philippines, such new perspective must also take into account that there are over 7 million overseas Filipinos who are making significant contributions to the economic development of many countries.

“Filipinos and Filipino-Americans contribute remarkably to American life, not just in the economy but in the social sector as well,” the President said.

She noted that during her administration, the government was able to pass the Overseas Absentee Voting Act, “so that those who help their country may have a hand in shaping its future as well.”

The President noted that on the part of the Bush administration, the U.S. is launching a project to facilitate the flow of remittances from Filipino workers around the world back to the Philippines.

“This project will improve the lives of millions of Filipinos by lowering the cost of remittance transactions and making it easier for funds to flow to the Philippines from the U.S. and around the world,” she said.

She noted the pivotal role of OFWs in nation-building as she said Filipino-Americans constitute 34 percent of OFWs, “but you contribute 71 percent of foreign exchange remittances.”

“This contribution translates to education, housing and anti-poverty programs in the Philippines. That is why I always say that you are not overseas Filipino workers. Rather, you are overseas Filipino investors,” she said.

She said she renews her call for overseas Filipino investors to continue supporting the economy so that the aspiration of liberating the people from poverty could be fully realized.

She recalled that during her last visit to LA in October last year, she made an appeal to fellow kababayans to help her build a strong Republic in the Philippines.

Now, she said she is pleased to report that the Philippines has made great progress in that direction.

For instance, in strengthening the institutions of security, the government has contained the Abu Sayyaf threat.

She said that last night, before she left Manila, she welcomed back the last two hostages of the Abu Sayyaf Group.

“We are working with the United States on a new set of joint military exercises to finish off the threat,” she said.

The President also noted that with the economy, the Philippines is one of the few countries in the region expected to grow at least four percent this year.

Aside from First Gentleman Atty. Jose Miguel Arroyo, the President was accompanied on the trip by Senate President Franklin Drilon, Speaker Jose de Venecia, Jr., Executive Secretary Alberto Romulo, Philippine Ambassador to the United States Alberto del Rosario, Philippine Consul General to Los Angeles Marciano Paynor, Jr., Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes, Tourism Secretary Richard Gordon, National Security Adviser J. Roilo Golez, Representatives Teodoro Locsin Jr., and Monico Puentevella, President Adviser on Overseas Filipino Workers Heherson Alvarez, Presidential Adviser on Overseas Development Assistance Absorption Marita Jimenez, Presidential Adviser on the North Quadrangle Luis “Chavit” Singson, Olongapo City Mayor Kate Gordon and Batangas Gov. Hermilando Mandanas.

U.S. to help fast track flow of funds from OFWs, reduce remittance costs

LOS ANGELES (Via PLDT) — The United States government has committed to help fast track the flow of remittances of money from Filipinos in the US to the Philippines and, in the process, reduce the cost of remitting money.

This was announced today by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo as she addressed a crowd of nearly 4,000 Filipinos here who gathered to catch a glimpse of the visiting Chief Executive.

The President said the US government gave its commitment even before she could set foot on Washington for the official start of her eight-day state visit.

She arrived here at 6:30 p.m. (California time) along with First Gentleman Jose Miguel Arroyo, daughter Evangeline Lourdes, son Diosdado “Dato” Arroyo and daughter-in-law Kakai Manotok-Arroyo, and a lean official delegation.

“On the part of the Bush administration, the United States is launching a project to facilitate the flow of remittances from Filipino workers around the world back to the Philippines,” she said.

The President said the plan, once carried out, shall “improve the lives of millions of Filipinos by lowering the cost of remittance transactions and making it easier for funds to flow to the Philippines from the United States and around the world.”

The details of the project are still being worked out, and no clear amount was given as to how much the remittance cost could go down.

Remittances from overseas Filipino workers (OFWs) in Asia, except Japan, are normally charged from a low $1 to $2 per $100 transaction.

The rate varies since it is determined by the private banks through which the remittances are coursed.

Citibank, for example, charges a wiring fee of $50 per transaction, regardless of amount, for money deposited to an account with the same bank in the Philippines, if the deposits are made abroad, particularly the US.

Presidential Adviser on OFWs Heherson Alvarez said a study to be conducted by the Asian Development Bank (ADB) shall be undertaken to determine how to fast track the remittances and reduce the cost.

Government authorities are hopeful that remittances would dramatically go up once the reduction on cost is effected.

Inward foreign remittances last year reached $7 billion, of which, the President said, 74 percent came from the US.

Thousands of Fil-Ams give GMA warm welcome in L.A., join mass

LOS ANGELES (via PLDT) — Close to 4,000 Filipinos here gave President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo a very auspicious and warm welcome Saturday night (Sunday in Manila) during a special Mass for the Philippine delegation and the Filipino communities at the Cathedral of Our Lady of the Angels.

The President, who arrived an hour earlier than expected at Los Angeles after an almost 12-hour flight from Manila, is the first head of state to visit the new Cathedral following the formal blessing of the church last September 2002, according to His Eminence Cardinal Roger Mahony.

Before she proceeded to the church, she met the Cardinal at a conference room in the 5.6-acre (2.3 hectare) Cathedral complex.

Immediately after she entered the church wearing a piña barong-like pantsuit, the President was warmly applauded by the huge crowd.

The Cathedral has a capacity of 3,000 but the actual attendance reached almost 4,000.

The Philippine Consulate General in LA had to issue tickets to control the crowd because there were more people who expresses their desire to attend the Mass than the church can accomodate.

The new Cathedral rises in powerful blocks of architectural concrete. Soft earthen tones evoked the spirit of early California's adobe mission churches.

Visible behind the glass exterior windows, wide panels of alabaster form the interior windows at 27,000 square feet, the largest architectural use of alabaster in the world, according to church authorities.

Despite the huge crowd, the Mass was solemn and meaningful, with Filipino church hymns performed by the Filipino-American singers like Nonoy Alsaybar and Melody del Mundo and the Filipino Choir of Southern California, Gospel Philippines Missionary Choir USA and the Kayumanggi, a group of music students from various Southern California universities.

In her brief remarks after the Mass, the President noted that the vestment of Cardinal Mahony was specially made in the Philippines from piña fiber.

She also thanked the clergy for hosting such a kind gesture for her and the Filipino communities.

She said like churches everywhere, "this place feels like home."

"This large gathering of Filipinos and Filipino-Americans, including the more than 500 Filipino volunteers from this Cathedral alone attest to the deep faith of the Filipino people, wherever they are," she said.

She said churches are filled with the Filipino faithful, testifying to their deep and abiding trust in God.

The President noted that recent events call for a renewal of faith and a reaffirmation of such trust. “To the cowardly acts of terrorism and the threats of more war using methods and weapons of mass destruction, comes now the spread of a deadly disease whose nature and cure still eludes the scientists.”

“But progress is being made and not just in that front but in others. Perhaps the greatest progress has been in our attitudes to these threats. We have progressed beyond fear and wonder to action. Already, there are promising results,” she said.

The President noted that Filipinos and Filipino-Americans contribute immensely to American life, not just to the economy but in the social sector as well.

She noted that the Filipino experience in the US, particularly in Los Angeles, is a positive outcome of a time-honored friendship based on shared values and traditions.

“You find a natural home in your host country as you embrace and advocate the ideals of freedom, democracy and the free market,” she said.

She further noted that Fil-Ams thrive in LA, home to the largest concentration of Filipinos in the US because of a common political and economic bridge between the two nations across the Pacific.

“The pivotal role of overseas Filipinos in national-building cannot be overemphasized. Fil-Ams constitute 34 percent of overseas Filipinos, but you contribute 71 percent of foreign exchange remittances,” she said.

After the Mass, the President attended a cocktail reception at the Cathedral complex for the leaders of the Filipino communities. She acceded to countless photo opportunities.

Tomorrow, she will immediately fly to Washington for the formal state visit to the White House.

Los Angeles is home to the largest concentration of Filipinos in the US.

Based on U.S. census in 2000, there are 260,158 Filipinos residing in the county of LA alone.

The population is broken down in the Counties of L.A., Orange, San Bernardino, Riverside, and Ventura.

Aside from Philippine government officials, the President was accompanied by First Gentleman Atty. Jose Miguel “Mike” Arroyo, daughter Evangeline Lourdes “Luli,” son Diosdado “Dato” and new daughter-in-law Kakai Manotok Arroyo.

Fil-Ams in L.A. support GMA’s anti-terrorism stand

LOS ANGELES (Via PLDT) – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo found herself in the company of Filipino-American friends who have consistently supported her stand against terrorism, when she met with members of the Filipino community here.

Applauding about 15 times during the delivery of the President’s speech, Filipino-Americans here displayed their positive reaction to the visiting President’s pronouncements on various issues, including the safe return of two hostages of the Abu Sayyaf.

Filipino-American Community of Los Angeles (FACLA) president Jose Baldonado and Federation of Filipino American Associations (FFAA) executive director Paul Blanco both aired their members’ support for the moves taken by the Arroyo administration in backing up the United States in its fight against terrorism, and in the war against Iraq.

Blanco and Baldonado shared the view that it was only right that the Philippines supported the US in its fight against Iraq, considering that terrorists have been the two countries' common enemy.

The Philippines has been battling against the Abu Sayyaf and the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) which have recently launched massive attacks that left hundreds dead in Mindanao bombings.

Veterans' Federation of the Philippines head Jose Samonte, on the other hand, aired the sentiments of a small number of Filipinos here who expressed concern over the efforts of the US and the Philippines in the fight against terrorism.

Like most militants in the Philippines, Samonte expressed fear that the alliance between the US and the Philippines could place Manila at a disadvantage susceptible to terror attacks.

The President has many times argued that the attacks launched by extremist groups were in no way related to the RP-US anti-terrorism alliance.

She had cited the case of Indonesia in stressing that attacks were launched, regardless of whether a country is supportive of the US or not.

Samonte, however, admitted that majority of Filipino-Americans favored the actions taken by the government, and strongly supported the moves of the Bush administration in neutralizing terror cells.

GMA state visit to boost RP-U.S. economic, financial and security cooperation

WASHINGTON, D. C. (via PLDT) – The three-day state visit of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo to the United States that formally starts here tomorrow, Monday morning (Monday evening in Manila), is expected to boost the financial and economic cooperation between the Philippines and the United States on top of renewed vigor in the two countries' security and defense alliance, particularly in the fight against terrorism.

In a pre-visit press briefing at the Willard Hotel here this morning (Sunday evening in Manila), Finance Secretary Jose Isidro Camacho said that in his initial discussions with officials of the US Department of Treasury and Department of Trade, they have pledged to continue to extend assistance to the Philippine government in its economic development program.

He said he briefed these officials on economic updates and the reform programs that the government had implemented, including measures to reduce the budget deficit.

Camacho was part of the advance team that facilitated the state visit here of the President.

He said that he had already met with officials of the World Bank (WB), the International Monetary Fund (IMF) and the International Finance Corporation (IFC).

When asked if the Americans expressed concerns on the peace and order situation in the Philippines, Camacho said that since there is a framework of cooperation in security and defense, the subject could not be avoided.

Camacho said that during the visit, the President would witness the signing of a number of government-to-government and private sector agreements that would generate billions of dollars in new investments for the country.

He, however, declined to name these agreements so as not to preempt the President.

But Camacho said that economic-related projects that would be finalized during the visit are those in the power sector, rural electrification, port construction, meat processing, and solar-powered irrigation systems in the countryside.

In the same briefing, Acting Press Secretary Milton Alingod also cited the political and security aspects of the state visit, particularly the alliance between the two countries in fighting global terrorism.

Alingod said that the visit is all the more auspicious in the light of continued terrorist activities in the Southern Philippines and the announced US desire to help train and equip Filipino troops so that the terrorist threat in the country can be finally eradicated.

Alingod said that the Philippines and the US have shared a long and proud history, standing shoulder-to-shoulder in conflicts from World War II, Korea and Vietnam and lately in the war against terrorism.

He said that since the closure of the American military facilities in 1991, the relationship between the two countries had moved to a more comprehensive and modern framework based on mutual respect and shared values.

According to Alingod, the state visit is a testament to the new enhanced relationship between the two countries and a recognition by the US and President Bush of the many successes of President Macapagal-Arroyo in reforming the Philippine economy and society and in her deep commitment to the war against terrorism.

Earlier, in a statement the President said that a new Asian perspective on political and economic security has emerged in the aftermath of the March 20 US-led action against Iraq.

This new perspective, the President said, must be based on the recognition that while Asia must take greater responsibility for its own political and economic security, it must also recognize that strong relations with the US will contribute greatly in the attainment of regional prosperity and stability.

In her talks with President Bush tomorrow at the White House, the two leaders are expected to tackle defense and security cooperation to include US assistance to the AFP modernization program, and specific anti-terrorism and anti-narcotics measures.

The President has said that there is a need for continuing US support for her administration's anti-poverty program that would include the following components:

- investment priorities to create jobs for the Filipino people;
- agricultural modernization program with social equity;
- social development; and
- improved public governance.

She said that poverty in the Philippines must be eradicated since poverty is the ultimate breeding ground for terrorism, which is now the world's number one scourge.

GMA state visit to help push passage of the long-delayed Filipino Veterans' Equity Bill

WASHINGTON, D. C. (Via PLDT) — The long-delayed recognition by the United States of the right of Filipino World War II veterans to equal benefits is being given a big boost with the state visit of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo that formally starts here tomorrow (late Monday in Manila).

In an expanded bilateral meeting at the Cabinet Room at the White House, the President is expected to appeal to President Bush for help in pushing for the passage of Senate Bill No. 68, also known as the "Filipino Veterans Benefits Improvement Act," sponsored by Hawaii Sen. Daniel Inouye.

Leaders of the Filipino World War II veterans from various parts of the US have been invited to attend the arrival ceremonies for the President tomorrow at the South Lawn of the White House.

On the second day of her state visit, the President will have a breakfast meeting at the Blair House with Senator Inouye and Senator Ted Stevens, both steadfast supporters of the veterans' equity bill in the US Senate.

Another big break for the final approval of this bill was the introduction of another legislation in the US House of Representatives that would provide additional health care benefits for the Filipino veterans, all of them now in the twilight of their years.

The bill was introduced last week by Rep. Rob Simmons (R-Connecticut), chairman of the US House veterans' affairs sub-committee on health benefits.

The President said that benefits provided by the US government should apply to all veterans and their survivors regardless of their country of residence.

Earlier, Filipino World War II veterans in the United States appealed to the President to urge President Bush to support the Inouye bill that would provide equitable package of benefits to 11,000 US-based and 34,000 veterans in the Philippines.

In an open letter to the President, the American Coalition for Filipino Veterans (ACFV) said that her three-day state visit to Washington, D. C. "could be the historic opportunity to settle our Filipino WW-II veterans' claims once and for all."

If passed into law, the Inouye bill would allow Philippine-based veterans to receive $43 million annually in medical benefits and $100-a-month disability pension, while Filipino veterans in the US could get $17 million every year.

"With your successful partnership with President Bush and the grassroots support of two million plus Filipino-Americans, we can win our veterans bill, a legacy of your administration," the coalition said.

Early last year, in a visit to Manila, US Veterans Affairs Secretary Anthony Principi assured the President he would exert his best efforts in pushing for the speedy passage of the equity bill.

Drilon, De Venecia, other Congress leaders form part of GMA official entourage in state visit

WASHINGTON, D. C (via PLDT)—The leaders of both the Senate and the House of Representatives have shown their unqualified support for the objectives of the three-day state visit here of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo that formally starts tomorrow (late Monday evening in Manila).

Senate President Franklin Drilon, Speaker Jose de Venecia, Jr., and Congressmen Teodoro Locsin, Oscar Moreno and Monico Fuentesbella are part of the official delegation of the President that would attend state functions, including the state dinner hosted by U.S. President George W. Bush and First Lady Laura Bush at the White House.

From the Executive Department, the members of the official entourage include Executive Secretary Alberto Romulo, Foreign Affairs Secretary Blas Ople, Finance Secretary Jose Isidro Camacho, Agriculture Secretary Luis Lorenzo, Jr., Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes, Trade and Industry Secretary Manuel Roxas II, Energy Secretary Vincent Perez, Jr., Tourism Secretary Richard Gordon, National Security Adviser J. Roilo Golez, Philippine Ambassador to Washington, D. C. Albert del Rosario, and Ambassador Roberto Romulo for International Competitiveness.

The local governments were represented in the official delegation by Batangas Governor Hermilando Mandanas, Sulu Governor Yusoph Jikiri and Pampanga Vice Governor Juan Miguel "Mikey" Arroyo.

Both Senate President Drilon and Speaker de Venecia would sit in with other Cabinet members in the expanded meeting with President Bush and his Cabinet at the White House where the two sides would discuss issues of vital interests to their two countries.

The two congressional leaders would also join the President at the state luncheon hosted for her tomorrow by the US State Department and later at the state dinner at the White House.

Sulu governor joins GMA in state visit to Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON, D. C. (via PLDT)—Sulu Governor Yusoph Jikiri is part of the official entourage of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo in her state visit to the United States to emphasize the need for a strong RP-US alliance in the fight against terrorism, especially in Mindanao.

Jikiri and the other Muslim leaders in Sulu have earlier signified their approval for the holding soon of the Balikatan 03-1, a joint Philippine-US military training, in the Sulu.

The Balikatan military exercises are aimed at wiping out the threat of terrorist groups, like the Abu Sayyaf, and other criminal elements in Mindanao.

Like in the Balikatan 02-1 held last year in Basilan, the Sulu Balikatan will also have its socio-civic component that would include the construction of roads and other infrastructure projects as well as livelihood programs.

Aside from helping train Filipino troops, the United States, notably the US Aid for International Development (USAID), had also pledged to improve the lives of the rural poor and former combatants in Mindanao.

The inclusion of the Filipino Muslim leader in the official delegation of the President would also show that despite cultural differences, there is solidarity and brotherhood among Muslim and Christian Filipinos.

In his briefing for the Philippine media this morning at the Willard Hotel here, Finance Secretary Jose Isidro Camacho said that one of the major topics he discussed with American financial institutions was the continued US assistance to projects in Mindanao aimed at improving the lives of Muslim Filipinos, especially those in the former conflict areas.

Assistance from U.S. financial groups to focus on Mindanao, says Camacho

WASHINGTON, D. C. (via PLDT)—Finance Secretary Jose Isidro Camacho today said that the focus of assistance by American financial institutions is on the development of Mindanao, especially in conflict areas in Muslim Mindanao.

In a pre-visit press briefing held this morning (Sunday evening in Manila), Camacho said that the World Bank (WB) has led a consultative group for Mindanao.

“The focus of this WB-led consultative group is to harmonize all the different official development assistance (ODAs) for the rehabilitation and development of Mindanao,” Camacho said.

Camacho has been a part of the advance team that has facilitated the state visit here of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo.

He said the World Bank has always been a strong partner of the Macapagal-Arroyo administration in its poverty alleviation program.

Camacho also said that the International Finance Corporation (IFC), the private sector component of the WB, has been very active in the Philippines. "Its pipeline on the Philippines is very heavy," he said.

He also clarified the reported sale of government properties in the United States, saying that there are ways of disposing these properties without necessarily selling them.

Camacho cited as example the "redevelopment" of the Philippine property in Roponggi, in Tokyo, which has now become economically viable after it was developed by the private sector but still remains as government property.

GMA state visit signals new era in RP-U.S. relations, says Philippine envoy to Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON, D. C. (via PLDT)—Philippine Ambassador to the United States Albert del Rosario today said that the state visit of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo "signals a new era in Philippines-US relations."

In a statement, del Rosario said that Philippine-American ties are no longer characterized by patronage nor transaction-driven based purely on consideration of compensation.

The relationship between the two countries, according to del Rosario, has developed into a "vigorous and quality partnership" based on shared values, mutual respect and mutual benefit.

Del Rosario said this transformation did not happen overnight as he credited the "forward-looking" foreign policy of the President for shaping and accelerating this process.

According to del Rosario, the state visit of the President "is a very much-awaited event by the Filipino-American community because it brings pride to them as a people and dignity to their native country."

Del Rosario said that this is only the third state visit accorded so far by US President George W. Bush since he assumed office and the second time that the American leader has invited the President to visit him at the White House.

In November 2001, President Bush also invited the President to the White House during a weeklong official visit to the US.

The Filipino-American community is scheduled to host a dinner tonight (early Monday morning in Manila) for the President and her official entourage.

Tomorrow, President Bush and First Lady Laura Bush would officially welcome the President at the White House where they will hold talks at the Oval Office.

Gov't not closing door to peace with MILF — GMA

WASHINGTON, D. C. (Via PLDT) – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo said here Sunday night (Monday in Manila) that her administration is not closing its doors to a possible peace with the Moro Islamic Liberation Front.

During a briefing with the media at the Willard Hotel here, the President said that in her administration, "there is always room for peace for those who turn their backs on terrorism."

"They can come individually, or they can come in groups, or they can come as one whole group. But I said they must turn their backs on terrorism publicly," she said.

"They must surrender those among them who are guilty of the terrorist attacks that have repulsed Philippine and world opinion and they must not only stop but also explicitly renounce terrorism," the President added.

She said that although she called on the MILF to prove that it is not linked to known terrorist organizations or undertaking terrorist activities, she said she didn't set a June 1 deadline for the MILF.

"The reported June 1 deadline for the group to renounce terrorism never came from me," the President said.

"In any case, declaring or not declaring doesn't really mean much. The important thing is that we are engaging punitive actions against those who committed terrorist acts," she said.

The President noted that the individuals who committed terrorist acts "are terrorists and we are running after them."

"It doesn't mean much whether a specific organization with a proper noun is declared terrorist or not, because whatever their affiliation, if they commit terrorism, they violate the law and we run after them," she said.

The President earlier said she is awaiting the result of the meeting of the Organization of Islamic Conference (OIC) before deciding on declaring the MILF a terrorist group.

Before departing Manila for a state visit to the US, the President ordered the military to "launch aerial and artillery attacks on embedded terrorist lairs in Mindanao."

She said the order is the most forthright way to achieve peace after all warnings have come to naught.

"We will exact retribution for the slaughter of innocent civilians, and we shall not relent in our pursuit to annihilate terrorists with the help of allies in the region and the world. Our people must be calm but remain fully alert against reprisals. Threatened communities must put their contingency plans in action. We shall provide relief for those who are temporarily displaced by punitive operations," the President said.

"Compassion for the people shall be balanced against the use of force against evil," she added.

Dean Devlin to push for passage of equity bill for Filipino war veterans, says GMA

WASHINGTON, D. C. (Via PLDT) — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo announced here Sunday night (Monday in Manila) that Dean Devlin, the Filipino-American producer of Hollywood blockbuster movies like "The Patriot," "Independence Day" and "Godzilla," will help in pushing for the passage of the long-awaited equity bill for Philippine World War II veterans.

Speaking before the Filipino community gathering at the Capitol Hilton Hotel, the President said Devlin is willing to produce a video that would seek support for the Filipino veterans bill.

Devlin's plan surfaced, the President said, during a dinner meeting with the producer at the Regent Beverly Wilshire Hotel in Los Angeles.

The President said Devlin earlier produced a video documentary on Filipino veterans and revealed that he's willing to do another to help the veterans' cause.

The President also announced that there will be a film festival showcasing the movies of four Filipino-American Hollywood artists such as Devlin, Lou Diamond Phillips, Tia Carrere and Rob Schneider.

"Many Filipino do not know that these icons in mainstream Hollywood are Filipino-Americans," the President said.

She noted that the film festival would be held during the Philippine-American Friendship Week in July. Proceeds of the festival could go to the lobby funds for the equity bill.

“This is a great way to showcase Philippine-American ties. We should be proud of those Hollywood stars and big Hollywood producers who are very, very proud of their mothers who are Filipinos,” she said.

The President said she would raise the issue of the equity bill for Philippine veterans during her talks with President George W. Bush.

She said she is confident that at least as a beginning, President Bush will support legislation, extending full rate service-connected disability compensation, eligibility for burial at national cemeteries, burial benefits for new scouts lawfully residing in the United States, full rate dependency and indemnity compensation to the survivors of new scout, commonwealth army veterans and guerillas who lawfully reside in the US and the reauthorization for the regional veterans affairs in Manila.

“As a beginning, these benefits will come with an appropriation of $75 million,” she said.

The President also announced that she has appointed Jerry Adevos, the son of famous guerilla Terry Adevos, to be the representative to the US of the Philippine Veterans Administration.

Under the appointment, Adevos is tasked to coordinate lobby efforts for veterans legislation.

Fil-Ams in D. C. pay tribute to GMA

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Filipino-Americans here today paid visiting President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo a tribute, citing her “courage, intelligence and foresight” in leading the Philippines.

Speaking in behalf of the 700 representatives from various Filipino-American organizations all over the United States, Irene Natividad, head of the Philippine American Foundation, cited the President’s resolve in improving the peace and order situation and the country’s economy.

“You have been determined in stamping out violence against Filipino civilians at home from Mindanao to Manila,” Natividad said.

She also cited the fact that the President was among the first Asian leaders to express support to the US-led war against Iraq.

Natividad likewise noted the accomplishments of President Arroyo’s administration in “trying to turn around the economy by instituting fiscal reforms and inviting investors from all over the world to invest in the Philippines.”

“Most importantly, this President has been working to address poverty in the Philippines which is the root cause of conflict and terrorism,” she stressed.

Natividad noted that it is not only the Filipino-American community that recognizes the accomplishments of the Arroyo administration, but even the US government, which has exhibited this recognition with an invitation for a state visit.

“She is only the third to be honored during the tenure of this (US) President,” Natividad said.

Filipino-American businesswoman Loida Nicolas Lewis, on her part, noted that while the President has been determined to fight the war in Mindanao, she has not neglected the plight of the civilians victimized by violence.

She said the media have failed to convey to the public “that behind that firmness, behind that sense of justice, you are also merciful and compassionate. You are bleeding for the thousands of victims suffering in violence without education and without hope.”

GMA arrives in Washington for state visit

WASHINGTON, D. C. (via PLDT)—President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo and her official delegation arrived at the Dulles International Airport here at about 5:00 p.m. (5:00 a.m. Monday in Manila) from Los Angeles, California, the first leg of her state visit to the United States.

The President and her official party, that included Senate President Franklin Drilon and Speaker Jose de Venecia, Jr., were welcomed at the airport by Ambassador Donald Ensenat, US chief of protocol, and Philippine Ambassador to the US Albert del Rosario.

The President's official entourage, which included some Cabinet members and congressmen, took a chartered aircraft on their flight to the US capital from Los Angeles.

From the airport, the President, First Gentleman Jose Miguel Arroyo and 18 other members of her party were ferried by two helicopters provided by the US government to Fort McNair where a preliminary welcome ceremony was held for them.

The formal arrival ceremonies will be held Monday at the South Lawn of the White House where the President will be welcomed by President George W. Bush and First Lady Laura Bush.

At Fort McNair, the President was accorded with simple welcome ceremonies that included the playing of the national anthems of both countries.

She was also introduced by Ambassador Ensenat to the ambassadors of the ASEAN member-countries and other US officials.

Before being escorted to their vehicles for the motorcade to Blair House where she will stay during her visit here, the President shook hands with about a hundred members of the Filipino-American community here.

Later in the evening, the Filipino-American community hosted a black tie dinner for the President and her party at the Capitol Hilton Hotel.

'Washington Post' features GMA as rare invitee to Bush's state dinners

WASHINGTON, D. C. (Via PLDT)—The highly-prestigious Washington Post, featured in its Sunday edition the state dinner that US President George W. Bush would tender Monday at the White House for visiting President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo.

In her article entitled "When's Dinner? In May," Post staff writer Roxanne Roberts said that in contrast to his predecessors, Bush has only hosted three state dinners for the past three years of his presidency, or only once a year.

With the article's subtitle, "On W's Formal Menu, Everything is Rare," Roberts said that "if you're not invited to this one, don't hold your breath."

She said that Bush's dislike for formal events is an open secret "and terrorism and war have certainly put a damper on glitzy presidential socializing."

But even so, Roberts said, this was a sharp departure from the traditional displays of international friendships that characterized previous US governments.

She said President Reagan hosted more than 50 state dinners during his eight years in office; President Bush's father held more than 20 dinners in just four years; and President Clinton over 30 during his two terms.

The only other two world leaders who have been accorded state dinners by Bush were Mexican President Vicente Fox in 2001, and Polish President Aleksander Kwasniewski in 2002.

According to Roberts, Monday's state dinner at the White House is Bush's way of saying "thank you" to President Macapagal-Arroyo, to the Philippine government and the Filipino people for their "stalwart efforts" in fighting terrorism and as a reliable ally of the United States.

"The President wants to express the gratitude and appreciation of the American people and himself by hosting a state visit," Roberts quoted White House Press Secretary Ari Fleischer as saying in an earlier press briefing.

In a brief item on its World News section, the Post also published an AP wire report that said the President Macapagal-Arroyo has authorized the Philippine military to use bombing and artillery attacks on terrorist cells in Mindanao.

The wire report said that the President made the announcement in live television interview just hours before she left for the state visit to the US.

"Arroyo did not name the targeted groups, but communist guerrillas, the separatist Moro Islamic Liberation Front and the Abu Sayyaf militant groups are all active in the region," the wire report said.

MILF leaders start feeling the heat

Feeling the heat.

That probably best describes the on-the-run Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) at the onset of the punitive military attacks on selected rebel lairs in Mindanao today as the Armed Forces of the Philippines revealed several surrender feelers from top rebel commanders.

Southern Command chief Lt. Gen. Roy Kiamco confirmed in a press briefing that MILF commander Asis Marumadla, alias Kumander Tropikal, has already surrendered to the commanding officer of the 47th Infantry Battalion in Maguindanao.

Marumadla, commander of the Third Battalion of the 103rd Brigade of the Bangsa-Islamic Armed Forces, surrendered with four assorted high-powered firearms, according to Kiamco.

Kiamco said other surrenderees, whose names were withheld for their safety, were also received in Davao, far from the target areas, and Lanao, along with their firearms.

"In Maguindanao, there are also feelers but in the Lanao area, there are already firearms in the possession of our people who have received the surrenderees," Kiamco explained.

The Southcom chief refused to mention any specific timetable for the crackdown ordered by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo on armed groups that have been staging terrorist acts in Mindanao.

Instead, what he is happy about is how civilians are making things easier for the military to hunt the rebels because of their cooperation.

"If they (the rebels) continue to stay there, with the people's participation, I would say the operation would be accelerated and it would be faster," he said.

In the same briefing, Kiamco reported the capture of the headquarters of MILF Brigade Commander Bravo and Division Commander Yaya Luksa Datu in Munai.

Munai is a rebel base where Bravo, Yaya Luksa Datu and their men withdraw after every terrorist act they make in the populated communities.

“Most of them were the ones identified by the civilians as the ones who committed the atrocities in Maigo,” revealed Kiamco. “So after the atrocities they committed and when the government forces were making a counter-attack, these two guys were the ones who gave the go-signal to go up the mountains and Munai is the direction of their withdrawal.”

Filipinos in US commit to help develop SMEs in RP, provide assistance to those in distress

WASHINGTON, D. C.—President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today witnessed the signing of two agreements aimed at boosting the development of small and medium enterprises (SME) in the Philippines, and providing assistance to distressed Filipino nationals in the United States.

Under the first agreement, the Philippine-American Chamber of Commerce of the Metropolitan Washington D. C. area (PACC-DC) committed to undertake a program to support the development of SMEs in the Philippines.

The commitment was embodied in a memorandum of understanding (MOU) between the PACC-DC and the Counterpart International, Inc., (CPI), an organization composed of members of the Filipino community here.

Under the MOU, the PACC-DC commits to undertake projects selected from a list to be provided the CPI.

The second agreement signed between Foreign Affairs Secretary Blas Ople and National Federation of Filipino-American Associations (NAFFAA) chair Loida Nicolas-Lewis and Philippine-American Bar Association of Greater Washington, D. C. Inc. president Miriam Bustamante provides for a framework by which the Consular Posts in the US could collaborate with interested Filipino-American community organizations in providing protective consular assistance to Filipinos in distress.

“It aims to address the constraints and limitations on the resources of the government in providing consular assistance to Filipino nationals by involving the vast network of Filipino-American organizations,” a briefing paper on the agreement stated.

A Liaison and Joint Working Group shall be established to provide a better channel of communication between Consular Posts and the community organizations to be able to provide more dependable assistance to distressed Filipinos.

The second MOU also provides the grant of free legal assistance as well as the establishment by community organizations of a Legal Assistance Fund to “address recurring problem of lack of government resources to provide concrete legal assistance to distressed Filipino nationals.”

Gov’t focus on rehab efforts in Pikit

The government’s rehabilitation efforts in war-affected areas in Pikit, North Cotabato and Pagalungan, Maguindanao continue amid the heat of ongoing punitive military actions against the separatist Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) and the terrorist Abu Sanyaf kidnap-for-ransom group.

National Anti-Poverty Commission (NAPC) lead convenor Teresita Deles said relief and rehabilitation efforts included the construction of the road straddling Pikit and Pagalungan, major entry points of residents in the two adjacent towns to the Liguasan Marsh.

“The construction of the road is ongoing and almost to be completed so that the Liguasan Marsh will be accessible,” Deles said during a briefing in Malacañang.

Deles, who heads the rehabilitation in Pikit, said that while the hostilities are ongoing, concerned government agencies proceeded with the infrastructure project under guard by government troopers to ensure that work could continue and livelihood projects put in place.

She added the land tenure instruments for occupants to enable ownership or control of their respective areas in the Liguasan Marsh are being reviewed.

During the briefing, Social Welfare Secretary Corazon Juliano-Soliman said the agency has focused relief and rehabilitation efforts in Pikit which was declared earlier as a zone of peace by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo.

Soliman said relief operations continue in evacuation centers in Pikit even as some residents in affected barangays have started harvesting produce from their areas.

“We already began buying from the internally displaced people (IDP) who have returned,” she said.

She added that some P100,000 worth of mongo beans and P350,000 of “pangos” (dried fish) have been bought from the farmers in the Liguasan Marsh.

“So instead of sardines and noodles, we’re already giving out mongo beans and pangos fashioned and harvested by the IDPs themselves,” Soliman said.

She added the Department of Agriculture (DA) also handed out 25 bancas to affected residents in the Liguasan Marsh.

Among those present during the briefing were Philippine National Police chief Gen. Hermogenes Ebdane, Presidential Chief of Staff Rigoberto Tiglao, Sec. Renato de Villa, and Armed Forces spokesman and vice chief of staff Lt. Gen. Rodolfo Garcia.

Remarks by US President George W. Bush at the state arrival ceremony for President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo (The South Lawn, White House, Washington D. C.)

Madam President, Attorney Arroyo, members of the Philippine delegation, members of Congress, and distinguished guests: On behalf of the American people, Laura and I welcome you to the United States.

This is the first state visit by the leader of an Asian country during my administration. You honor the American people with your visit, because our two nations share special ties of history and friendship and family. And we share a commitment to the defense of democracy and the advance of freedom.

Just over a century ago, Americans and Filipinos worked side by side to liberate the Philippines. Nearly half a century later, in a world war, our soldiers fought and died together in places like Bataan and Corregidor. And on this foundation of common sacrifice, America and the Philippines built an alliance that remains strong, an alliance that is essential to the peace of the Pacific.

In this new century, both our nations are threatened by terrorism, and we are determined to fight that threat until it is defeated. Our diplomats, and law enforcement and intelligence officers are working arm-in-arm to disrupt terror plots, to cut off terrorist financing, and to bring the terrorists to justice.

President Arroyo has welcomed American troops to train and advise their Philippine counterparts in Philippine-led anti-terror operations. And she has been a leader in building broader cooperation against terror throughout the Asian Pacific region.

Madam President, for all you have done to make our world safer, America thanks you.

Last week's terrorist attacks in Saudi Arabia that killed innocent civilians from the United States, the Philippines, and many other nations, remind us that the war on terror continues. The world's free nations have the courage and the determination to fight this war. And together, we will defeat the forces of global terror.

President Arroyo also recognizes the threat posed by weapons of mass destruction. And she spoke with strength and conviction of the need to disarm the Iraqi dictator and to liberate the Iraqi people. Now the Philippines is helping Iraq take its place among free nations by sending military police and medical personnel. The President and I both recognize that a free and secure Iraq is good for the Philippines, is good for America, and is good for the world.

We share great goals in the world. We are committed to opening markets in Asia and around the world to bring more people into an expanding circle of development and prosperity. And we are committed to adding the moral and material resources of our countries to the global fight against poverty and hunger and disease.

The partnership between our nations is sustained by the friendship between our peoples. More than 2 million Americans trace their ancestry back to the Philippines, and they enrich our national life. Many Filipino Americans serve in our military, and I'm proud to recognize one of them today. Army Lieutenant General Edward Soriano is one of the highest-ranking Filipino Americans in the history of America's military. He brings pride to both our countries, and we honor his service in the cause of freedom.

The Philippines was the first democracy in Asia and has a proud tradition of democratic values, love of family and faith in God. President Arroyo, you are carrying this tradition forward, and I'm proud to call you friend. Today the First Lady and I are honored to welcome you and Attorney Arroyo to America and to the White House. Mabuhay!

Remarks by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo at the state arrival ceremony. (The South Lawn, White House, Washington D. C.)

President Bush, Mrs. Bush, Vice President Cheney, Mrs. Cheney, Secretary Powell, Mrs. Powell, Secretary Rumsfeld, General Myers, officials of the U.S. government, excellencies of the diplomatic corps, ladies and gentlemen. Thank you, President Bush, for inviting me to this state visit. It only confirms that relations between our two countries are deeper and warmer today than they have been in a very long time.

Today our two countries have a revitalized and maturing alliance, rooted in shared history, shared values, a common interest in global peace and prosperity, and a real commitment to combating terrorism and advancing freedom.

Our alliance abides strong as ever, even as the world today requires a new perspective on political and economic security in Asia Pacific. This new perspective must recognize that while Asia must take greater responsibility for its own political and economic security, it must also recognize that strong relations with the U.S. will contribute greatly to regional peace and prosperity, stability and security, especially from terrorism.

Thus we, your friends, must find a way to support continued and active engagement with the U.S. at a time when there are some forces in my region working against such a relationship. Although wisdom counsels commitment, in the face of terror the temptation to disengage is strong. We must fight that temptation, because the answer to fear is confrontation. Indeed, we must close ranks and stand firm against terrorist threats, however grave, however armed, and from whatever quarter.

To spare themselves, some countries might prefer an accommodation with terrorism. The Philippines has chosen to fight terrorism. We compensate for such modest means as we command with an unshakable resolve to defeat terrorism once and for all, and with faith in the justice of our cause and our friendship with the United States.

Our war on terrorism has made significant gains, but the threat is far from over. The war is not yet won. But it will be won, there can be no doubt. How long and at what cost are the only things in doubt. As the terrorist attack in Riyadh, which took both Filipino and American lives, shows, for the Philippines, the new perspective on economic and political security in Asia Pacific must take into account the over seven million of our men and women who, in seeking a better life abroad, contribute greatly to the development of economies around the world, not least that of the United States.

I am proud of these Filipino Americans. I am proud of the contributions that Filipinos and Filipino Americans make to the American economy and society. In a quiet, but equally substantive way, we can compare it to the contribution made by Philippine World War II veterans to the defense of our common freedom and security.

I also take pride in the robust economic and trade ties that bind the Philippines and the United States. The Philippines is pursuing long-needed economic reforms. The current and continuing reforms will strengthen the Philippine republic. They will make easier Philippine and American economic cooperation, and they will promote the cost of fighting world poverty.

I appreciate the help of President Bush in our work to alleviate poverty and other socio-economic ills from which terrorism draws its strength. Like the fear on which it feeds, terrorism can be contagious, and it will not be contained unless we agree on a comprehensive approach for defeating it in Southeast Asia.

And so, in looking forward to discussing that comprehensive approach, I look forward to my talks with President Bush and his officials in this administration. And I hope President Bush reciprocates this visit by accepting a state visit to the Philippines towards the end of this year. Thank you.

GMA, Pres. Bush promote global anti-poverty bid

WASHINGTON D. C. – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo and United States President George W. Bush Monday morning (Monday evening in Manila) equally noted the imperative need to wage an aggressive campaign against poverty as a way to counter global terrorism.

In a short speech following remarks by President Bush during state arrival rites at the White House's South Lawn here, President Macapagal-Arroyo cited the "robust economic and trade ties that bind the Philippines and the US."

She disclosed that the "Philippines is pursuing long-needed economic reforms" aimed to strengthen the Philippine republic.

"They will make easier Philippine and American economic cooperation and they will promote the cause of fighting world poverty," she said.

The President thanked President Bush for helping in the alleviation of global poverty and other socio-economic ills "from which terrorism draws its strength."

In welcoming President Macapagal-Arroyo as a state visitor, President Bush said the US and the Philippines are committed to "adding the moral and material resources of our countries to the global fight against poverty and hunger and disease."

The US President said America and the Philippines shared "special ties of history and friendship and family" and "great goals in the world."

He also disclosed the US commitment to open markets in Asia and around the world to bring more people "into an expanding circle of development and prosperity."

In their remarks, President Macapagal-Arroyo and President Bush traced the long-standing friendship between the Filipino and American people.

The Philippine Chief Executive thanked the US President for the invitation to visit the US that, she said, “confirms that relations between our two countries are deeper and warmer today than they have been in a very long time.”

She said “our two countries have a revitalized and maturing alliance, rooted in shared history, shared values, a common interest in global peace and prosperity, and a real commitment to combating terrorism and advancing freedom.”

On the other hand, President Bush said the partnership between the US and the Philippines “is sustained by the friendship between our two peoples.”

He cited the Philippines as the first democracy in Asia with a proud tradition of democratic values, love of family and faith in God.

He lauded President Macapagal-Arroyo for “carrying this tradition forward.”

“I’m proud to call you friend,” he beamed as he and US First Lady Laura Bush expressed their honor to welcome the Philippine President and First Gentleman Jose Miguel Arroyo into the White House.

GMA, Pres. Bush cite strong RP-US alliance against terrorism

WASHINGTON D. C. – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said strong relations with the United States would greatly contribute to regional peace and stability in the Asia Pacific, especially in the war against terrorism.

“While Asia must take greater responsibility for its own political and economic security, it must also recognize that strong relations with the U.S. will contribute greatly to regional peace and prosperity, stability and security, especially from terrorism,” the President said in her remarks during her arrival at the White House.

She said the Philippines is among the few countries in the region that has chosen to fight terrorism squarely alongside with the US particularly at this time when the country is also faced with such threats.

“The Philippines has chosen to fight terrorism. We compensate for such modest means as we command with an unshakeable resolve to defeat terrorism once and for all, and with faith in the justice of our cause and our friendship with the United States,” she added.

Although the Philippines has made some significant gains, the President said the war on terrorism is far from over.

On the other hand, President George W. Bush said the US and Philippine law enforcement agencies are working together to disrupt terror plots, cut off terrorist financing, and to bring the terrorists to justice.

Bush said President Macapagal-Arroyo has welcomed American troops to train and advise their Philippine counterparts in anti-terror operations aside from building broader cooperation against terrorism in the Asia Pacific region.

“Madam President, for all you have done to make our world safer, America thanks you,” he said.

He added the terrorist attack last week in Saudi Arabia that killed innocent civilians from many countries including Americans and Filipinos is a glaring reminder that the war against terrorism is far from over.

President Bush also recognized President Macapagal-Arroyo’s conviction to disarm Iraq of its suspected weapons of mass destruction and to liberate the Iraqi people.

“Now the Philippines is helping Iraq take its place among free nations by sending military police and medical personnel. The President and I both recognize that a free and secure Iraq is good for the Philippines, is good for America, and is good for the world,” he said.

Fil-Am organizations to help consular offices in providing assistance to distressed Filipinos

WASHINGTON, D. C. (via PLDT) – The vast network of Filipino-American organizations throughout the United States is now being harnessed to provide assistance, including free legal services, to Filipino-Americans in their times of need.

This was the substance of a memorandum of understanding (MOU) signed here Sunday (early Monday in Manila) by Foreign Affairs Secretary Blas Ople, Loida Nicolas Lewis, national chairman of the National Federation of Filipino-American Associations (NAFFAA); and Miriam Bustamante Riedmiller, president of Philippine-American Bar Association of Greater Washington, D. C.

The MOU was signed in the presence of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo at the Capitol Hilton Hotel here shortly after her arrival yesterday for the Washington D. C. leg of her state visit to the United States.

Ople said that the MOU would provide the general framework by which Philippine consular posts in the US could collaborate with interested Fil-Am community organizations in giving assistance to distressed Filipinos in their respective localities.

Through this MOU, Ople said, consular and other forms of assistance to distressed Filipinos could be provided on a wider scope since the Fil-Am organizations are going to backstop the consular offices, which, admittedly, have limited resources.

The MOU has set up a liaison and joint working group that would thresh out in detail the steps that would be taken in order to achieve the goals of the MOU and provide a channel of communication between the consular posts and the community organizations.

Ople said that the provision of free legal assistance under the MOU is most welcomed since a number of Filipino-Americans, especially those who are financially strapped, could ill-afford the high cost of legal services in the US.

He said that thousands of aging Filipino World War II veterans would largely benefit from this MOU which in a sense, according to him, is an extension of the innate bayanihan spirit of the Filipinos.

Pres. Bush says U.S. working to treat RP as non-NATO ally

WASHINGTON D. C. (via PLDT) — United States President George W. Bush Monday here announced that his government is moving to include the Philippines as one of its non-NATO (North Atlantic Treaty Organization) allies.

In his opening statement during the joint press conference of the two leaders at the East Room at the White House, Bush said he was pleased to inform President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo during their meeting at the Oval Office that the U.S. plans to designate the Philippines as a non-NATO ally.

“The step will allow our countries to work together on military research and development and give the Philippines greater access to American defense equipment and supply,” Bush said.

The American President also said that the non-NATO status would put the Philippines “right up there” with Australia, Egypt and Israel.

Bush said these countries are major non-NATO allies, “which means that it will be easier for us to answer requests of military equipment to provide parts and equipment.”

“To make sure that the defense capabilities of the Philippine military are modern, you know, that choppers fly, choppers are maintained, choppers move, when the President orders up a strike, it happens quickly, all this does is facilitate the capacity to interact on a better basis, on a priority basis.”

Bush also announced that there would be a comprehensive review of the needs of the Philippine military.

“That means the military is gonna be involved with your military, in such ways that determine needs and assess whether or not we got the capacity to help meet those needs,” Bush said.

In noting the long-standing U.S. and Philippine relations, Bush said the relations of the two countries has become “stronger today than at any time of our recent history.”

Pres. Bush renews U.S. commitment to help in RP anti-terrorism campaign

WASHINGTON D. C. — President George W. Bush Monday morning (Monday evening in Manila) reiterated the strong commitment of the US to help the Philippines in “defeating terrorists operating in its own part of the world.”

President Bush also reaffirmed his offer of assistance in efforts of Philippine President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo to push for the meaningful and lasting resolution of the Mindanao Problem.

But he stressed that “the US is committed to helping, when asked.”

On her part, Philippine President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo thanked President Bush for the offer to assist in her country’s fight against agents of terror, saying that “the US leadership and engagement with the US makes the world a safer place for all of us to live in.”

President Macapagal-Arroyo noted how the “world came to help us” in the country’s erstwhile lonely fight against terrorists.

“I welcome the support of the world, and I welcome the support of the US in our war against terrorism,” she said.

In a joint press availability with President Bush and President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo at the East Room of the White House, the US President said he and President Macapagal-Arroyo “reviewed last year’s highly successful deployment of US troops to the southern Philippines.”

“We agreed to a similar deployment in the near-term, in which US forces would support Philippine anti-terror operations,” he said.

In the past, US and Philippine armed forces have engaged in joint military exercises called Balikatan(shoulder-to-shoulder).

Balikatan included joint civilian-military actions that have resulted in socio-economic growth in communities where the exercises were conducted.

President Bush said he and President Macapagal-Arroyo also reviewed the developments with the separatist Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF).

He said the MILF should “abandon the path of violence.”

“If it does so, and addresses its grievances through peaceful negotiations, then the United States will provide diplomatic and financial support to a renewed peace process,” he pointed out.

He said that it depended on the MILF “in choosing peace as a peaceful reconciliation of issues.”

“If they continue to want to use terror and force, we will be involved to the extent that (President Macapagal-Arroyo) invites us to be involved,” he added.

However, US involvement would be “within the Constitution of the Philippine government,” President Bush stressed.

President Macapagal-Arroyo earlier said her administration is not closing its doors to a possible peace with the MILF.

“There is always room for peace for those who turn their backs on terrorism. They can come individually, or they can come in groups, or they can come as one whole group,” she said.

Before she left for the U.S., the President ordered selective aerial and artillery attacks on terrorist-embedded lairs in Mindanao.

The President noted that the individuals who committed terrorist acts (the killing of civilians) “are terrorist and we are running after them.”

Pres. Bush accepts GMA invitation to visit RP

WASHINGTON, D. C. – United States President George W. Bush has accepted the invitation of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo to visit the Philippines this year.

President Bush said his visit to the country would coincide with the Asia Pacific Economic Conference (APEC) leaders’ meeting in Bangkok, Thailand before the year ends.

“I’m honored to accept President Arroyo’s generous invitation to visit the Philippines this fall, when I intend to travel to Southeast Asia for the APEC leaders’ meeting,” he said.

He said he would also be sending other senior US officers to Manila, starting with US Secretary of Energy Spence Abraham.

The acceptance was made after President Macapagal-Arroyo earlier invited the American President, shortly after her arrival at the White House Monday morning (Monday evening in Manila) at the start of her three-day state visit here.

“I hope President Bush reciprocates this visit by accepting a state visit to the Philippines towards the end of this year,” she said during state arrival ceremonies at the South Lawn of the White House.

Bush, America thank GMA, Philippines ‘for all you have done to make our world safer’

WASHINGTON, D. C. (Via PLDT) – “Madam President, for all you have done to make our world safer, America thanks you.”

With these words, United States President George W. Bush poured praise not only on President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo but the entire Filipino nation.

Even before pouring out America's gratitude to an old friend and ally, Bush, official Washington and the American people welcomed the Philippine President with the pomp of a rare state visit — with full military honors and a 21-gun salute — at the South Lawn of the White House.

Bush and his wife, Mrs. Laura Bush, officially welcomed President Macapagal-Arroyo and First Gentleman Atty. Jose Miguel Arroyo as they arrived on board the presidential limousine. Also on hand were Vice President Dick Cheney, Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld and Secretary of State Colin Powell

The Honor Guard performed the "Raffles and Flourishes" and the "Hail to the Chief" ceremonies.

Filipinos, Filipino-Americans and Americans attending the ceremony warmly greeted the two Presidents by waving the flags of the two countries.

Meanwhile, the Philippine and US flags were hoisted by the Honor Guard around the South Portico of the White House.

Afterwards, President and Mrs. Bush escorted the President and Atty. Arroyo to introduce Vice President and Mrs. Dick Cheney, Secretary of State and Mrs. Colin Powell, Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld, and the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Richard Myers.

After the introduction, the two heads of state proceeded to the reviewing platform for the start of the military honors.

This was followed by the playing of the National Anthem of the Philippines by the Musical Troops while a 21-gun salute was executed. The playing of the United States National Anthem followed.

Afterwards, the two Presidents moved on to review the troops amid the cheers of the flag-waving crowd.

Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo was in a flaming red dress suit. Bush was in a blue suit and sky blue tie. Mrs. Bush was in sage dress suit.

The ceremonies were televised live by the US networks.

Bush has only deployed the pomp of a state visit on two previous occasions, to Polish President Aleksander Kwasniewski and Mexican President Vicente Fox.

Jon King, CNN White House correspondent, told Manila reporters that the President's state visit is a very significant event for the United States.

He said President Bush is very gratified for the "quick and decisive" decision of Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo to support the war against terror.

In brief remarks, President Bush noted that Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo's state visit is the first by a leader of an Asian country in his administration.

"You honor the American people with your visit, because our two nations share special ties of history and friendship and family and we share a commitment to the defense of democracy and the advance of freedom," Bush said.

Bush noted that just over a century ago, Americans and Filipinos worked side by side to liberate the Philippines.

"Nearly half a century later, in a world war, our soldiers fought and died together in places like Bataan and Corregidor and on this foundation of common sacrifice, America and the Philippines built an alliance that remains strong, an alliance that is essential to the peace of the Pacific," Bush said.

Bush further noted that Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo has become a leader in building broader cooperation against terror throughout the Asia-Pacific region.

Bush also said the partnership between the two nations is sustained by the friendship between the two peoples.

He said more than 2 million Americans trace their ancestry back to the Philippines and they enrich the national life.

Citing US Army Lt. Gen. Edward Soriano as one of the highest-ranking Filipino Americans in the history of America's military, Bush noted that many Filipino-Americans serve in the US armed forces.

"He brings pride to both our countries, and we honor his service in the cause of freedom," Bush said.

He said the Philippines is the first democracy in Asia and has a proud tradition of democratic values, love of family and faith in God.

"President Arroyo, you are carrying this tradition forward and I'm proud to call you friend. Today, the First Lady and I are honored to welcome you and Attorney Arroyo to America and to the White House. Mabuhay!," Bush said.

In her brief remarks, Macapagal-Arroyo thanked Bush for his invitation to the state visit.

"It only confirms that relations between our two countries are deeper and warmer today than they have been in a very long time," she said.

She said that today, the two countries have a revitalized and maturing alliance, rooted in shared history, shared values, a common interest in global peace and prosperity, and a real commitment to combating terrorism and advancing freedom.

"Our alliance abides strong as ever, even as the world today requires a new perspective on political and economic security in Asia-Pacific," she said.

Afterwards, the two leaders proceeded to the State Floor via the South Portico steps.

While the ceremonies were ongoing, Filipino government officials stood in attention at the left side of the lawn. Among them were Senate President Franklin Drilon, Speaker Jose de Venecia, Jr., Executive Secretary Alberto Romulo, Philippine Ambassador to United States Alberto del Rosario, Philippine Consul General to Los Angeles and Presidential Assistant on Foreign and State Visits Marciano Paynor Jr., Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes, Tourism Secretary Richard Gordon, National Security Adviser J. Roilo Golez, Representatives Teodoro Locsin Jr. and Monico Puentevella, Presidential Adviser on Overseas Filipino Workers Heherson Alvarez, and Presidential Adviser on Special Projects Marita Jimenez.

Bush: GMA is tough when it comes to terror

WASHINGTON, D. C. (Via PLDT) – US President George W. Bush had only words of praise for visiting Philippine President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo when the two appeared before members of the media after their bilateral meeting at the White House.

"I've got a great deal of respect for your President, and her courage and her willingness to fight for security of the Philippine people and to defend freedom," Bush said.

He referred to Mrs. Arroyo as "a great example of leadership in a part of the world that is a dangerous part of the world."

Southeast Asia, including the Philippines and Indonesia, suffered from a number of terrorist attacks, including bombings that left hundreds of innocent civilians, including foreigners, dead.

Praising her actions against terrorist groups in the Philippines including the Abu Sayyaf, Bush said Mrs. Arroyo “is tough when it comes to terror. She fully understands that in the face of terror, you’ve got to be strong, not weak. She knows, like I know, that the only way to deal with these people is to bring them to justice.”

For this reason, Bush said his administration is looking forward to the continued cooperation between the Philippines and the United States, especially in addressing terrorism.

“We’ve got a lot of work to do, which means we’ve got to continue to work together to share information, cut off money, share intelligence, and hunt these people down and get them,” he said.

And that’s why I appreciate President Arroyo’s leadership,” Bush stressed.

He recalled that right after the September 11 terror attacks on the US, Mrs. Arroyo called him.

“There was no doubt in my mind where she stood. It was more than the condolence call. It was a let’s-get-after-them,” he said.

Pleased with Mrs. Arroyo resolve to join the US in putting an end to terrorism, Bush said he knew he “had a strong ally and a friend when it came to chasing these people down, which is precisely what we have to do. And she knows that. And that’s the strategy she’s employed.”

U.S. to provide 30 helicopters to AFP, says GMA

WASHINGTON, D. C. (Via PLDT)—President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo announced Monday (Tuesday in Manila) that the United States would provide 30 helicopters to the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) as part of its continuing military assistance to the Philippines.

The President made the announcement at a press briefing at the Philippine Embassy here after her meeting with US President George W. Bush at the White House.

She said that the new helicopters would boost the fighting capability of the AFP, adding that the Philippine Air Force has now only nine helicopters.

The President said that in her meeting with President Bush, they have agreed to launch a comprehensive review of the security needs of the Philippines and how best the US could support to the AFP modernization program.

She said that the donation of 30 helicopters is part of Bush’s commitment to help address the pressing needs of the AFP, particularly in the area of mobility and spare parts.

A joint statement issued after their bilateral talks said that the two Presidents agreed that the US-Philippine security partnership has never been healthier as they emphasized the importance of US support for continuing efforts to improve the capabilities of the AFP.

The two Presidents also reaffirmed their commitment to destroy the Abu Sayyaf “once and for all.”

Toward this end, the two leaders agreed to hold another joint military exercise “in the near term” where the US would provide support to the AFP in its ongoing operations against the Abu Sayyaf.

In a joint press briefing at the White House later, President Bush clarified that the US would work to maintain freedom and security in Mindanao and other parts of the country “only at her (President’s) request and along the guidelines that are necessary in your Constitution.”

Inclusion of RP products in GSP could help ease poverty, particularly in Mindanao — GMA

WASHINGTON, D. C. (Via PLDT)—President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo said that the expected $1-billion windfall from the inclusion by the United States of some products from the Philippines under the generalized system of preferences (GSP) would help ease poverty, particularly in Mindanao.

In a press briefing at the Philippine Embassy here after her talks with US President George W. Bush at the White House, the President said the inclusion of carrageenin, tuna and pineapple juice in the next cycle of the GSP has a “very, very great economic impact” in Mindanao where these products mostly come from and where there is widespread poverty.

“These are all good measures to inspire market access, particularly in Mindanao where there is much poverty,” the President said.

Trade and Industry Secretary Manuel A. Roxas II, who was also present at the press briefing, explained that the rough estimate of $1 billion is in the form of tax perks that the country would get if products like carrageenin, pineapple juice, dried mangoes and tuna are included in the GSP.

The GSP is a scheme whereby the US grants preferential treatment to some 4,000 products from 139 beneficiary countries, including the Philippines, in the form of duty-free access.

The scheme was reauthorized by the US Congress from Sept. 30, 2001 up to Dec. 31, 2006.

Roxas said that in the aftermath of the September 11 terrorist attacks in the US, President Bush pledged to work with the US Congress to grant the GSP benefit to the Philippines.

In fact, Roxas said, the pledge was embodied in the joint statement issued by President Bush and President Macapagal-Arroyo during the latter’s working visit to the US in November 2001.

A press statement by the DTI said that while the Philippine carrageenin or seaweed industry sees the GSP as a vehicle to further enhance its foothold in the US market, the US will also benefit in the process because of the presence of American companies engaged in the carrageenin business in the Philippines.

In 2001, carrageenin exports to the US reached $24.1 billion or 26 percent share of the country’s total export receipts.

The DTI said with the inclusion of pineapple juice as eligible article in the GSP would bring additional foreign exchange revenues for the country, not to mention the jobs that it will be able to generate.

Some 400,000 people, mostly in Mindanao, are currently engaged in the pineapple business from farming to manufacturing. Dole Philippines leads the pack in this business.

Bush impressed with RP’s tax reform programs

WASHINGTON, D. C. (Via PLDT) – US President George W. Bush today said he was impressed with the tax reform the Philippine government is set to undertake to solve its deficit problem.

In a press conference called after his bilateral meeting with visiting Philippine President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, Bush's issued statement dismissed earlier reports indicating that the US was concerned that the Philippines may not be able to contain its deficit.

"I was very impressed by the discussions on tax reform. The President put out a bold initiative," Bush said, referring to his discussions with Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo during their bilateral meeting at the White House.

Bush said he was convinced that "some of the tax proposals that the President laid out "would make sure that the government would be "more efficient in collecting revenues."

"And so in other words, it's comprehensive approach, and it's one (issue) we spent a lot of time discussing," he said.

Bush was also confident that the Philippine legislature will enact soon the tax reforms being pushed by the Arroyo administration.

"I was most pleased that the Speaker and the head of the Senate were here in Washington, D. C. and they were very receptive," Bush said, referring to Senate President Franklin Drilon and Speaker Jose de Venecia, Jr.

The two were among a small group of official accompanying the President to her state visit here.

RP-US relations evolve from dependency to partnership between equals

WASHINGTON, D. C. (Via PLDT) – From diplomacy of dependency to a partnership between equals.

This was how President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo described today, the maturing relations between the United States and the Philippines during her bilateral meeting with US President George W. Bush.

"I did not come here to be a mendicant or a mercenary," President Arroyo said as she refused to quantify the success of her state visit here, based on how much economic aid and military assistance her country would get from the United States.

Instead, he said she came to the US to discuss with President Bush her ideas for a stronger partnership between the two countries, particularly in the fight against poverty and terrorism.

"Poverty and terrorism are twin evils we must fight. For the Philippines, we consider the US a strategic partner not only in security matters, but also in the economy, in the fight against poverty," she said.

President Bush also recognized the importance of keeping the Philippines as an ally in the global fight against terrorism, and the need to maintain the partnership of the two countries to win this war.

According to the American President, Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo "is tough when it comes to terror. She fully understands that in the face of terror, you've got to be strong, not weak. She knows, like I know, that the only way to deal with these people is to bring them to justice."

For this reason, Bush said his administration is looking forward to the continued cooperation between Philippines and the United States, especially in addressing terrorism.

"We've got a lot of work to do, which means we've got to continue to work together to share information, cut off money, share intelligence, and hunt these people down and get them," he said.

Bush also expressed gratitude to the President for being the first leader in Southeast Asia to openly support the US fight against terrorism.

Because of this, Bush said the US has decided to name the Philippines as a Major Non-NATO Ally (MNNA), putting it on the same level as Israel, Egypt and Australia.

With this, Bush said his administration will find it easier to “answer requests on military equipment to provide parts and equipment, to make sure that the defense capabilities of the Philippine military are modern and the choppers fly when the President orders up a strike.”

Bush was also impressed with the tax reforms the Philippine government is undertaking to solve its deficit problem.

He was also confident that the Philippine legislature will enact soon, the tax reforms being pushed by the Arroyo administration.

On the President’s third and last day here, World Bank vice-president for policies Shengman Shang and International Finance Corp. Peter Woicke are scheduled to pay her a courtesy call.

After that, International Monetary Fund managing director Horst Kohler will also make a call at the Blair House which is the official residence of visiting heads of state in the US.

Later in the day, the President will grace a reception called by members of the Philippine Friendship Caucus.

She will have a coffee meeting with US Sen. Richard Lugar, chairman of the Senate foreign relations committee.

After that, she will be meeting with the chief executive officers in a dinner hosted by the US-ASEAN Business Council.

Before the end of the day, the President will depart for New York for another set of official activities.

Remarks by GMA, Bush in exchange of toasts (The State Dining Room, White House, May 19, 2003)

PRESIDENT BUSH: Madam President, Attorney Arroyo, it is a high honor for Laura and me to host you at the White House. Madam President, I know you attended college here in Washington, so perhaps I should say, welcome back — or, as they say at Georgetown, Hoya Saxa. (Laughter.)

With your visit, the Philippines and the United States affirm our strong friendship, our common commitment the fighting terror, and our shared determination to promote freedom.

Our nations are natural partners. We are connected by an ocean, united by a shared history, and sustained by the bonds of family and culture. More than 2 million Americans have family ties to the Philippines. Some are with us tonight, and you’re welcome. Filipino Americans strengthen America’s culture, our economy, and our government. And we are privileged that they call this country their home.

The United States and the Philippines are also joined by common values, especially the value of human freedom. And when freedom comes under attack, our countries respond.

Madam President, you’ve been a fierce fighter of terrorism in your own country. You’ve earned the respect of the American people for your resolve. And after September the 11th, you were one of the first leaders to contact me and express your strong support for the war against terror. And you have not wavered.

The President was also a strong and persuasive voice on the need to disarm Saddam Hussein and to liberate the Iraqi people.

Madam President, for your leadership and for your friendship, I thank you.

Seventeen years ago, the Filipino people restored their nation's democratic tradition and inspired lovers of freedom across the globe. In the years since, the Philippines has emerged as a stronger and more confident nation. The Philippines is building its prosperity on the foundation of markets, and building its future on a foundation of democracy. These commitments are opening new opportunities for the Filipino people, and setting a hopeful example for other nations traveling the road to freedom.

President Arroyo is playing a large role in her nation's success. Her bold and determined leadership has opened a new chapter in the friendship between our countries, and is responsible for revitalizing our strong alliance.

In his last poem, Jose Rizal, one of the founders of the Filipino independence, referred to his native land as the "Pearl of the Orient Seas." More than a century later, this "pearl" is admired the world over for its beauty, its progress, and its wonderful people.

Madam President, it will be my pleasure to visit the Philippines later this year, with you as my host. And Laura and I, and the American people are honored to have you and your husband as our guests here tonight. Would you please join me in a toast to the enduring friendship between the Philippines and the United States.

PRESIDENT ARROYO: Thank you, President Bush, and Mrs. Bush. Thank you on behalf of the 8 million Filipinos for honoring our country with this state visit.

The bonds between our two countries run deep. We've stood side-by-side at every crucial point in modern history. World War, the Second; the Cold War; Korea; Vietnam; and now, the war against terrorism.

I visit you at a time of great change — change in the way economies work; change in the way wars are fought; change in the way countries organize or disintegrate. But in two things, there must be no change — in the way governments treat people; and in the manner by which friends stand by each other. In the first case, with care and justice; and in the second case, with courage and steadfastness. In a time of crisis, friends do not ask, why; they ask, how.

The Philippines and America are friends. To guide our friendship in the 21st century, our meeting today was essential, so that we can develop a strategic framework for this century based on mutual respect and mutual help. Our talks focused on stopping terrorism, fighting poverty, and undertaking economic reform on both sides — meaning, offering more markets to each other, and less resistance to mutual trade and investment.

My fundamental concern in the Philippines is the need to lick mass poverty. Central to this concern is the task of building a strong republic — a republic able to keep crime and terrorism totally at bay; a republic free from vested and corrupt interests that subvert free markets; a strong republic empowered to execute good policy and provide essential services to all our people.

In this task, we value America as a partner, a partner in our common desire to create the kind of world in which we want both our countries to exist — a world of progress and ever-widening prosperity; a world of justice, freedom, and peace. These are within the grasp of modern economies and modern technology, and men and women of firm resolve and goodwill.

And how do we define a man or a woman of firm resolve and goodwill? It was once thought difficult to take a firm stand against tyranny, and nearly impossible to cope with terrorism. Now, the world knows better, especially after March 20th. Indeed, it's not easy, but, clearly, it can be done, with fearless leadership and iron resolve, combined with a bold strategic vision, and an unflinching sense of justice. I'm describing President Bush.

Only a strong and steadfast partnership, such as that between our two countries, can respond to the manifold and threats and challenges that the world working towards freedom and prosperity must face. I hope ever more countries join this partnership. Two are better than one. Three are harder to break. Four and more, nothing can prevail against them.

On that note of hope for an ever-widening partnership of the good to complete the greater task of the coalition of the willing, I invite you all to join me in a toast for the continued success and good health of President and Mrs. Bush, and the relations between our two countries. Mabuhay!

Menu for state dinner was like marriage between two countries

WASHINGTON D. C. – When Assistant White House chef Cris Comerford, born in the Philippines and now a US citizen, said she sought a common ground between the two nations as she prepared the menu for the state dinner accorded President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo by President George W. Bush, little did she know that among the guests were Fil-Americans like her.

“It was like a marriage between the two countries,” she told reporters before the dinner.

True enough, among the 130 guests who attended the state dinner aside from government officials are dignitaries and staff with Philippine ancestry.

There was US Army Maj. Gen. Edward Soriano, the first Philippine-born soldier to become a general in the US Armed Forces.

The 55-year-old Soriano, a native of Alcala, Pangasinan, became the highest-ranking Fil-Am in the US Army history when he received his third star and took over command of Fort Lewis.

Also in the state dinner were Miss America 2001 Angela Perez Baraquio, daughter of Filipino immigrants who became the first woman of Asian-American heritage to win the coveted crown; former Daly City mayor now Councilman Michael Guingona; and Milpitas, California Mayor Jose Esteves.

Baraquio, eighth of the 10 children of Hawaii immigrants Claudio and Letty Baraquio, is a teacher in Hawaii who went on to become the first Asian and Filipina Miss America.

Guingona was born in San Francisco and raised in Daly City. He was only 31 years old in 1993 when he became the first Fil-Am elected to the City Council of Daly City. Two years later, he became Daly’s youngest mayor ever.

There’s also a sportsman in boxer Brian Vitoria who represented the United States in the 2000 Sydney Olympics. Vitoria is also a Fil-Am.

President Macapagal-Arroyo, clad in a simple purple terno with a lime green sash, was joined by First Gentleman Jose Miguel-Arroyo, Senate President Franklin Drilon and Mrs. Mila Drilon, Speaker Jose de Venecia and Mrs. Gina de Venecia, Jr. and other government officials in the strictly black tie affair that started promptly shortly after seven in the evening.

Upon arrival, President Macapagal-Arroyo gave US First Lady Laura Bush a state gift of 14 mm South Sea pearl earrings mounted on finely worked flowers and leaves of Philippine-mined 18-karat yellow gold.

The Marine Orchestra rendered pieces during the guest reception in the Grand Foyer and throughout dinner. Brass horns and strolling strings played during dessert. Opera singer Susan Graham warmed up in the East Room as the White House put the finishing touches on the State Dining Room.

Bouquets of pink and white peonies graced each table and flanked a portrait of Abraham Lincoln.

In finding a common ground between the two nations, chef Comerford featured in the first course crabs which the Philippines and Maryland are known for. Mango sorbets, filled with coconut mousse, were draped with brightly-colored leis made of sugar and chocolate, said pastry chef Roland Mesnier.

The main course included lamb, achiote polenta, fava beans and cipollini onion.

The wines were a 2001 Pride Mountain Viognier and a 2000 DuMol Pinot Noir “Finn,” both from California, said White House usher Daniel Shanks.

Shanks said he goes out of his way to find American wines and did not try to keep French wines off the White House tables.

White House chief usher Gary Walters said the rarity of state dinners did not heighten the excitement for the staff.

“I don’t know how in the world you can make a state dinner any more exciting or tension-building – they’re all the same,” Walters said. “It’s a head of state that we’re celebrating here, that the President has invited to the room, and it’s very important that we do it and do it right.”

Mainstream U.S. media cite Bush-GMA concerted efforts in the fight against terrorism

WASHINGTON, D. C. (via PLDT)—American mainstream media, both in print and broadcast, today carried in their main headlines and prime newscasts the historic meeting at the White House Monday (Tuesday in Manila) between US President George Bush and visiting President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo.

In their news stories, the two major Washington newspapers, the Washington Post and the Washington Times, as well as the wire organizations and news channels, described the President as a staunch supporter of the United States in the fight against terrorism.

In their early morning newscasts, the three major television networks, the CNN, NBC, and ABC, also carried the highlights of the meeting between Bush and the visiting Philippine president.

Yesterday, the President was interviewed live by CNN's Daljit Dhaliwal at her suite at the Blair House. Another interview with CNN, this time with veteran broadcast journalist Wolf Blitzer, is scheduled for today, also at the Blair House.

The caption of the photo says that President Bush called President Macapagal-Arroyo as his "strong ally in the war on terror" and pledged to deploy more US troops to help fight the Muslim rebels in Mindanao, referring to the Abu Syyaf.

The Times devoted the whole of its page A-10 to the meeting between the two presidents at the White House and the state dinner later in the evening.

Three more photos of the event, including an enlarged 5-column photo of smiling but aging World War II veterans welcoming the President when she arrived at the White House, was published on page A-10.

Another photo of the President and First Gentleman, Atty. Jose Miguel Arroyo, being escorted by President Bush and American First Lady Laura Bush for the state dinner, accompanied the sidebar to the main story, entitled “Bush Will Send More Troops to Fight Philippine Rebels.”

The sidebar, devoted mainly to the state dinner, quoted President Bush as describing the Philippine president, when he offered a toast, as “‘fierce fighter of terrorism in the Philippines.’”

The main Times story was devoted to the highlights of the meeting between the two leaders that included the continuing commitment of the US to the Philippines in its war against local terrorists and in uplifting the lives of the Filipino Muslims affected by the conflict.

The sidebar, written by Times staff writer Sharon Behn, carried a light touch which says that aides rushed to place a small foot stool “for the diminutive Philippine president to stand on behind the lectern set up in the dining room.”

The sidebar also said that the state dinner, which was only the third held since Mr. Bush took office “had a quiet tone, with a guest list free of the glitterati that adorned such evenings at the White House during Bill Clinton’s two terms.”

The more liberal Washington Post had a Page 1 teaser on the President’s visit, entitled “U.S.-Philippines Anti-Terror Accord,” saying that the US had promised the Philippines aid in fighting Muslim rebels under an expanded anti-terrorism effort.”

In its main story, the Post said that the two leaders have pledged to expand collaboration in their campaign against terrorism with the White House promising more than $95 million in military aid and new deployment of US forces to help defeat Muslim rebel groups in the Philippines.

Later in the joint press briefing, President Bush has clarified that the US plan to send troops to the Philippines in the fight against terrorism would be subject to the constitutional requirements of the Philippines.

The Post, known for its analytical pieces on international events, said that “while the Pentagon is not necessarily interested in moving back into Subic Bay, one of the world’s great deep-water ports, it is interested in negotiating agreements that could give US warships or aircraft access to that or other facilities in the event of a conflict in the region.

In its world section, the USA Today carried a brief item, also with an anti-terrorism bias. The item, entitled “US, Philippines Agree to Fight Islamic Rebel Group,” says that the two leaders have agreed to send an unspecified number of US troops to support operations against the Abu Sayyaf rebels in the Southern Philippines.

The USA Today said that Washington has linked the Abu Sayyaf to the al-Qaeda terrorist group.

Ople cites importance of RP’s designation as major no-NATO ally of the U.S.

WASHINGTON, D. C. (via PLDT)—Foreign Affairs Secretary Blas Ople today said the designation by President Bush of the Philippines as a major non-NATO ally would strengthen the Philippine government’s drive against terrorist cells operating in southern Philippines.

Ople said that this designation was an indication of the strong support of President Bush for President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo and the Philippine government.

NATO refers to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, a military alliance composed of the US and major European countries.

Ople said that countries granted major non-NATO status are limited to those with a close and strategic working relationship with the US defense forces.

Ople, who is part of the official delegation of the President, also said that during their meetings and subsequent media briefings, President Bush was effusive in his praise for President Macapagal-Arroyo for her “decisive and efficient leadership.”

He noted that as an indication of their immediate rapport, President Bush did not hesitate to accept the invitation extended by President Macapagal-Arroyo for him to visit the Philippines in October this year.

In a joint press briefing at the White House yesterday, President Bush said he was honored to accept the generous invitation of President Macapagal-Arroyo to visit the Philippines this fall when he intends to travel to Southeast Asia for the leaders’ meeting of the Asia Pacific Economic Cooperation (APEC).

Ople described the discussions between the two leaders as candid and cordial, with the US government, through President Bush, firmly committed to help the Philippine government in getting rid of the Abu Sayyaf.

In a joint press conference at the White House Monday (Tuesday in Manila), President Bush announced the inclusion of the Philippines in the MNNA category that includes Australia, Bahrain, Egypt, Israel, Japan, Jordan, Argentina, New Zealand and the Republic of Korea.

“The designation is symbolic of the high level of trust and friendship between the two countries and its leaders. It also boosts the relentless efforts of our military to fight terrorist in southern Philippines since it means the Philippines is now eligible for priority delivery of excess defense articles,” Ople said.

Under Section 516 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended, the US government has the authority to transfer surplus military equipment to foreign security forces.

Such defense articles, Ople said, could range from rations and uniforms to used vehicles, cargo aircraft and ships.

Ople explained that the designation given by President Bush to the Philippines, as a new MNNA, will take effect 30 days after the US Congress is notified in writing.

U.S. allocates $32.81M for reintegration of former MNLF combatants to society

WASHINGTON, D. C. (Via PLDT) — The United States government has allocated $32.81 million to help the Philippine government in its program of reintegration to society of some 25,000 former combatants of the Moro National Liberation Front (MNLF).

The memorandum of understanding (MOU) for the grant was signed Tuesday afternoon (Wednesday morning in Manila) at the Blair House by Foreign Affairs Secretary Blas Ople and Acting Administrator Frederick Schieck of the US Agency for International Development (USAID).

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, who is winding up her state visit here, and US Ambassador to Manila Francis Ricciardone, Jr. witnessed the signing.

Ople said the amount formed part of the $72-million program the USAID has earmarked to help conflict-affected areas in Mindanao.

He said the agreement is focused on direct humanitarian assistance to some 4,000 former MNLF combatants to enable them to lead productive lives and contribute to the government's quest for enduring peace in Mindanao.

According to Ople, the USAID also intends to provide the former MNLF fighters all inputs needed to start commercial production of corn, rice or seaweed, as well as post-harvest facilities in the communities.

Ople said that the USAID also intends to provide another $5 million, in addition to the $6 million it earlier provided, to help 500 communities in conflict-areas to build small infrastructure facilities such as water systems, bridges, and farm-to-market roads costing between $5,000 and $25,000 each.

The foreign secretary also stressed that a similar arrangement awaits members of the separatist Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) who would pursue the path to peace and abandon their armed struggle.

In a joint press conference Monday at the White House with President Macapagal-Arroyo, US President George W. Bush said he and President Macapagal-Arroyo have reviewed the developments concerning the MILF and they agreed that the MILF must abandon the path to violence.

"If it does so, and addresses its grievance through peaceful negotiations, then the United States will provide diplomatic and financial support to a peace process," Bush said.

GMA witnesses signing of several gov't to gov't agreements on topics of concern to RP. U.S.

WASHINGTON, D. C. (via PLDT) — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo witnessed the signing Tuesday afternoon (Wednesday morning in Manila) of several government to government agreements on areas of mutual concerns ranging from US assistance for the reintegration of former Muslim Filipino guerillas, to narcotics control and agricultural modernization.

Foreign Affairs Secretary Blas Ople and his counterpart, US Secretary of State Colin Powell, signed two agreements for their respective governments. The signing ceremony was held at the Blair House where the President is staying during his state visit here.

One of the agreements signed by Ople and Powell was on cooperation in science and technology that would enable scientists of both countries to embark on joint education and research.

The other accord signed by Ople and Powell was a Letter of Intent on Narcotics Control and Law Enforcement that sets aside $1.01 million to enhance policing and supervisory skills of the Philippine National Police (PNP) and other law enforcement agencies while supporting the institutional development of the Philippine criminal justice system.

US Ambassador to Manila Francis Ricciardone also witnessed the signing of the agreements.

The President and Ricciardone also witnessed the signing of other agreements that included the following:

- memorandum of understanding (MOU) that allocates $20 million to procure US rice for the purpose of assisting the Philippines improve its food security;
- an MOU on the establishment of an Agriculture Research and Endowment Fund directed towards agriculture development through science and technology;
- an MOU for the development of financing support for appropriate irrigation technologies to enhance agricultural productivity. This MOU directs the EximBank to finance irrigation projects in Mindanao;
- an MOU on the facilitation of remittances that will reduce the cost of transaction on overseas remittances to the Philippines;

- an MOU on technical assistance grant for a financing facility for rural electric cooperatives;
- an MOU on a project to extend the Manila-Cavite Expressway through a financing from the International Finance Corporation; and
- an MOU on the construction of a geothermal plant in cooperation with the Philippine National Oil Company (PNOC) and development of a 1,500 hectare-airport facility at the Fernando Air Base in Lipa City.

GMA winds up Washington leg of state visit

WASHINGTON, D. C. (via PLDT) — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo winds up her highly successful three-day state visit here Tuesday night (Wednesday morning in Manila) after a historic meeting with US President George W. Bush and other top US officials.

Before her departure, the President witnessed the signing of a number of government-to-government agreements worth millions of dollars in grants and loans aimed at speeding up the development of conflict areas in Mindanao, promoting food security, and setting a framework of cooperation in such areas as science and technology, narcotics control, and financing rural electric cooperatives and other irrigation projects.

Before the signing of the memorandums of agreement (MOUs), the President also received at her suite at the Blair House top-ranking officials from the public and private sector.

Among her callers were Senators Daniel Inouye and Ted Stevens; Jeffrey Alan Goldstein, managing director of the World Bank; Assad Joseph Jabre, vice president for operations of the International Finance Corporation; and Horst Kohler, managing director of the International Monetary Fund.

The President also had a coffee meeting with Senator Richard Lugar at the Capitol Building.

Senate President Franklin Drilon and Speaker Jose de Venecia, Jr. were also present during the President's meeting with Lugar and Senators Inouye and Stevens.

The President was also interviewed live by CNN's "Late Edition with Wolf Blitzer."

The President and her official delegation were scheduled to depart for New York, the last leg of her state visit, from Andrews Air Base at 10 p.m. (Wednesday morning in Manila).

WB, int'l financing institutions assures GMA of continued support for development agenda

WASHINGTON D. C. (via PLDT) — World Bank officials Tuesday (Wednesday in Manila) assured President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo that it would continue supporting the Philippine government's development agenda, specifically its efforts to reduce poverty and improve governance.

The President met Shengwan Zhang, vice president for policies and program of the World Bank, and Peter Voicke, head and managing director of International Financial Corporation as well as Horst Kohler, managing director of the International Monetary Fund (IMF).

IFC, a member of the World Bank Group, is headquartered in Washington, D. C. It shares the primary objective of all World Bank institutions to improve the quality of life of people in developing member countries.

During the meeting, an agreement was reached for the signing of two loans amounting to $33.6 million and $50 million for the Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao (ARMM) Social Fund and the Agrarian Reform Community Development Project II (ARCDP II) respectively.

Both loans are targeted for the poor members of society, providing them with social and community services and access to facilities to meet their basic needs.

The ARMM Social Fund addresses the needs of residents in ARMM to enhance the development of the region and upgrade the living standards of the people in the area.

The ARCDP II will continue the earlier support under the ARCD I to the government's Comprehensive Agrarian Reform Program (CARP), primarily by providing community development and capacity building of about 80 additional agrarian reform communities representing approximately 70,000 farming households.

The Philippines has also requested the World Bank to assist in the Judicial Reform Program of the Philippines.

The World Bank and other donor agencies such as the United Nations Development Program (UNDP), Asian Development Bank (ADB), Japan and Canada are providing assistance to the Philippine government in its judicial reform efforts.

In order to strengthen the judiciary, the Philippines is currently negotiating a loan in the amount of $22 million with the World Bank.

Another loan which is under advanced technical discussion with the World Bank is the Rural Power Project.

Rural electrification is a flagship program of the Department of Energy (DOE) which aims to improve the quality of life in rural areas through the provision of adequate, affordable and reliable energy services in partnership with the private sector.

The proposed loan of $10 million, together with a grant from the Global Environment Facility of another $10 million, will be a major contributor to achieving 100 percent barangay electrification by 2006 and 90 percent household electrification by 2017.

The World Bank and the Philippine government have just concluded the country programming exercise covering the World Bank's fiscal years (July-June) 2004 and 2005.

For fiscal year 2004, project and program loans amounting to $290 million have been programmed for judicial reform, rural power, health, environment, urban slum upgrading and land titling and management, while a public finance strengthening program loan will be considered in the fiscal year.

For fiscal year 2005, projects and program loans amounting to $360 million are tentatively scheduled for discussion.

Two groundbreaking program loans, namely the Public Finance Strengthening in the amount of $200 million and the Public Sector Reform program in the amount of $150 million, are in the process of being discussed.

These two program loans will lay the framework for the much-needed reform program in the public sector.

It is to be noted the World Bank portfolio performance has dramatically improved in the last two years from a disbursement ratio of 12 percent in fiscal year 2001 to a projected level of 22 percent in end of fiscal year 2003.

According to the World Bank, this virtual doubling in the disbursement ratio achieved by the government counterpart agencies of World Bank-financed projects implies a decline in the average project implementation period from eight years to 4.5 years, translating to faster delivery of services to project beneficiaries, primarily the poor.

Moreover, the World Bank recently provided non-lending assistance to help offset the negative impact of the Severe Acute Respiratory Syndrome (SARS) threat on the ongoing business of government, through the use of the videoconferencing facilities available at the Global Distance Learning Center at the Asian Institute of Management (AIM).

The GLDC was established by the World Bank in partnership with AIM, and provides state-of-the-art technology which will enable the government to conduct and participate in international meetings, dialogues and conferences that would otherwise be postponed or cancelled due to travel concerns over SARS.

Int'l alliances keep region safer, says GMA

WASHINGTON, D. C. (Via PLDT) — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo Tuesday (Wednesday in Manila) defended the decision of the United States to work for the inclusion of the Philippines as a major non-NATO (North Atlantic Treaty Organization) ally, saying the US can help wipe out terrorism back home as it wipes out terrorism within its own borders.

In her speech before the Chief Executive Officers (CEOs) Roundtable meeting of the US-ASEAN (Association of Southeast Asian Nations) Business Council at the Park Hyatt Hotel, the President said leading a nation means making tough choices.

“Some loud voices denounce a closer alliance with the US but let my state visit here send a message to those who peddle in the false currency of terror: The US can help us wipe out terrorism at home as it wipes out terrorism within its own borders,” the President said.

She noted that international alliances keep our region safer and provide economic stability and growth. “In turn, we can provide an island of friendship, stability and security in an uncertain world,” she said.

The President noted that the last time she was in Washington was just one month after the horrific events of September 11.

She said at this time, the US is again on heightened alert. (The US Department of Homeland Security placed parts of the country on orange alert Tuesday. Code Orange is the second highest level of alert and signifies a high risk of terrorist attack).

The President noted the state of heightened alert demonstrates that the new global environment requires a new perspective on political and economic security.

“That perspective must be based on a recognition that while each nation or region must take greater responsibility for its own political and economic security, it must also recognize that strong international relations will contribute greatly to regional prosperity and stability as well as greater success in addressing terrorism, the most significant threat to world peace and stability,” she said.

The President said “we must find a way to support continued engagement of ASEAN with the US at a time when there are forces working against this relationship, and when there are those with an evil agenda to disrupt it.”

Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo said that as she ends her state visit with profound thanks to President Bush and the American people, she would like to say that “we shall work side by side with the US to overcome the terrorism that knows no boundaries and transform fear into peace, progress and prosperity in the world.”

President Bush announced the decision of his government to work for the inclusion of the Philippines as a major non-NATO ally during their joint press conference following a one-on-one meeting with Macapagal-Arroyo at the Oval Office.

The major non-NATO status places the Philippines up there with other countries like Australia, Egypt, Japan, Bahrain, Jordan, Argentina and New Zealand for required military assistance.

In her remarks, the President said she is gratified to say that the relationship between the two countries has never been stronger.

RP must remain alert against SARS, says GMA

WASHINGTON, D. C. – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo said Tuesday (Wednesday in Manila) that the Philippines must remain alert against Severe Acute Respiratory Syndrome (SARS) even as the World Health Organization declared the country free from the dreaded disease.

The President announced to members of the Philippine media during a panel discussion at the Blair House that the WHO has removed the Philippines from its list of areas with recent local transmission of the deadly SARS virus.

WHO stressed in its announcement that it never advised that travel to the Philippines be restricted.

WHO also noted “the efficient surveillance and reporting system in the Philippines, which reflects strong political commitment and a high level of awareness among health staff.”

At the height of the SARS scare in the country, the President advised the people to remain calm but fully alert and to religiously observe health and sanitation measures.

“The delisting is very important to us,” said Consorcia Quizon-Lim, head of the Department of Health’s National Epidemiology Center, in an interview in Manila.

She said it would prompt countries that have banned Filipino workers due to the SARS scourge to lift the ban.

She also said countries that have issued travel advisories against the Philippines over SARS now have no reason to bar their citizens from visiting the Philippines.

Philippine health officials said the removal of the Philippines from the WHO list of countries affected by SARS is testimony to the success of the government’s efforts to prevent the spread of the killer virus.

The delisting of the Philippines from the WHO list of SARS-infected countries came 20 days after the country had no SARS case.

The WHO requires that there be no SARS infection in an area for 20 consecutive days before it removes that country from its list. Tuesday marked the 20th day the Philippines has had no new reported case of local transmission.

The last probable SARS case in the Philippines that was locally acquired was isolated on April 30, the WHO said in its SARS website, “meaning that opportunities for spread of the virus to others were significantly reduced.”

“As 20 days have now passed with no further cases detected, WHO can safely conclude that local transmission has been interrupted,” the international organization said.

Economy on track and RP is excellent place to do business, says U.S.-ASEAN Business Council

WASHINGTON, D. C. (Via PLDT) – The United States-ASEAN (Association of Southeast Asian Nations) Business Council Tuesday night (Wednesday in Manila) lauded the economic policies and programs of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo.

During the round-table discussion of the council at the Park Hyatt Hotel here, the businessmen conveyed their full trust in the present administration in making sure of the dividends in doing business in the Philippines.

Ernest Bower, president of the council, said “absolutely, the economy of the Philippines is on track.”

“It’s doing well. It (the Philippines) is an excellent place for American economists to go and do business,” he said.

“We appreciate the direction of the steady aim that the President and her Cabinet are taking toward economic reforms and stability in the Philippines,” Bower added.

Finance Secretary Jose Isidro Camacho, who accompanied the President during the round-table discussion, said the comments made by Bower is “a collective appreciation for the support that they have gotten from the administration of President Arroyo.”

In her remarks at the discussion, the President thanked the council anew for its hard work on behalf of the Philippines “and for sticking with us through thick and thin.”

“I am endeavoring to return your loyalty and dedication by working to build a strong Philippines, to strengthen our institutions so that we can all prosper,” she said.

The President said that aside from security and foreign policy, she is focusing on international business and economy during her state visit here.

She said not only is she responsible for a nation of 80-million people. “I am also the CEO of a global Philippine enterprise of 8 million Filipinos who live and work abroad and generate billions of dollars a year in revenue,” she said.

The President emphasized that the great comparative advantage of the Philippines is the rich human resources which are highly-skilled, well-educated and English-speaking.

“This includes the millions of Filipinos working in over 140 countries of the world and for the millions more employed in the Philippines in business process outsourcing, manufacturing and other service industries,” she added.

The President said her administration is addressing the legacies of the past.

“We’ve moved forward on Bureau of Internal Revenue reform. Revenues are up. That is why, despite last year’s large fiscal deficit, this year our deficit is smaller than expected because our revenues are higher than targeted. We’re continuing privatization and liberalization of the power sector,” she said.

The government, the President added, now has a strong anti-money laundering legislation to stop terrorists and government fraud.

Also, there is now a law empowering special purpose asset vehicles to direct greater liquidity into the banking system and provide relief for debt-burdened banks.

“And it is not just legislation, but real money that must be invested if we are to get a good return for the nation in the years ahead,” she added.

The Chief Executive likewise noted the new investments in infrastructure to help move people and goods and enhance the quality of life through expressways, fast railroads from Manila to Clark-Subic and CALABARZON and Batangas Port as well as roll-on, roll-off ferries around the nation.

The President further said that there are new investments in small and medium enterprises.

“Challenges remain, many economic, many social, many political, but I awake every day determined to make progress and I believe I have,” she said.

Reunion of old friends

WASHINGTON, D. C. – The scene was like a reunion of old friends as President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo met with United States Sen. Richard Lugar at the Senate foreign relations committee room at the Capitol Hill Building.

Lugar wore a big smile as he emerged from a one-hour meeting with visiting President Macapagal-Arroyo.

He described the relations between the Philippines and the US under the Macapagal-Arroyo administration as “very strong and beautiful.”

Lugar said he was pleased to see Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo again, saying “she is well acquainted with all of us.”

The President described Lugar as “a great and old friend of the Philippines and of Philippine democracy and it’s my pleasure to be here to exchange notes with him.”

Lugar was the head of the American observer team in the 1996 snap elections where former President Corazon Aquino was recognized as the legitimate winner.

He was believed to have been responsible in focusing the spotlight on the corrupt activities of ousted President Ferdinand Marcos, ultimately convincing then-President Ronald Reagan to support Mrs. Aquino.

During the meeting, the President expressed appreciation for the US Senate foreign relations committee’s continued interest and support for the Philippines.

The President reiterated to Lugar that her administration affirms the enduring importance of the Philippines’ alliance with the US.

She recalled how history has shown that the US and the Philippines have been on the same side in every major conflict over the years.

The President stressed that the depth of the partnership between the two countries is well reflected in the presence of thousands of Filipinos serving in the US Armed Forces, some of whom lost their lives in the service.

GMA to be conferred honorary Doctorate of Laws degree by the Fordham University

WASHINGTON, D. C. (Via PLDT) – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo will be conferred an honorary Doctor of Laws degree by the Fordham University in New York City today.

The conferment of a doctorate degree on the Filipino leader by Fordham University, one of the leading universities in the United States, is one of the major scheduled activities of the President during her one-day stay in the city.

The President, together with First Gentleman Jose Miguel T. Arroyo, flew Tuesday night (Wednesday morning in Manila) from Washington to New York.

The Washington Post headlined its story on the state dinner hosted by US President George W. Bush for President Macapagal-Arroyo at the White House Monday night (Washington time) as “Dinner with Two Tough Cookies.”

The Washington Post noted that President Bush, during his toast at the state dinner, said President Macapagal-Arroyo’s visit affirms “our strong friendship, our common commitment to fighting terror, and our shared determination to promote freedom.”

The newspaper also reported that Bush praised Arroyo as “a fierce fighter against terrorism in your own country. You’ve earned the respect of the American people for your resolve. And after September the 11th, you were one of the first leaders to contact me and expressed your strong support for the war against terror. And you have not wavered.”

“Friends stand by each other, in times of crisis. Friends do not ask why; they ask how,” the Washington Post quoted President Macapagal-Arroyo’s response.

While in New York, Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo will meet business leaders planning to set up or expand businesses in the Philippines and, in the process, create more jobs for Filipinos.

15 congressmen assure GMA of support for RP interests on 3 issues discussed in Congress

WASHINGTON, D. C. (Via PLDT) — Fifteen United States congressmen today met with President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, assuring her of their full support for Philippine interests on three important issues being deliberated upon in Congress.

At the meeting held at the House ways and means committee room at the Capitol Building in Capitol Hill, the 15 congressmen said they would support the Philippines on the security and global anti-terrorist cooperation, trade expansion between the US and the Philippines, and the passage of Senate Bill 68 or the Filipino Veterans Benefits Improvement Act.

Present during the meeting were Congressmen Darrel Issa (R. California), Bobby Scott (D. Virginia), Bob Filner (D. California), Duke Cunningham (R. California), Neil Abercrombie (D. Hawaii), Todd Tiahrt (R. Kansas), Dana Rohrabacher (R. California), Dennis Cardoza (D. California), Sam Farr (D. California), Mike Honda (D. California), Joseph Pitts (R. Pennsylvania), Charlie Rangel (D. New York), Ed Schrock (R. Virginia), Diane Watson (D. California) and Roger Wicker (R. Mississippi).

The 15 were part of the 70-man Philippine Caucus composed of Democratic and Republican congressmen.

The caucus was initiated by eight members of the US House of Representatives who sent a “Dear Colleague” letter last Oct. 2002 to all the House members, enjoining them to establish the caucus.

The eight members are Issa, Filner, Cunningham, Scott, Tiahrt, Abercrombie, Rohrabacher and Lane Evans (D. Illinois).

The letter underscored that “the Philippines has had a historically close and special relationship with the United States and has become the US’ most active Asian ally in the war on terrorism.”

No reason to doubt sincerity of U.S. in treating RP as ally –GMA

WASHINGTON, D. C. — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo said Tuesday (Wednesday morning in Manila) there is no reason to doubt the sincerity of the United States in treating the Philippines as a friend and major ally, saying what is important is “what will be good for the country.”

In a press conference with Filipino media here, the President said that if the offer of friendship will redound to the benefit of the Filipinos and the entire Asian region, “we shouldn’t hesitate to accept the offer.”

“Kaya’t yon ang isang nagustuhan ko rin. Iyong parating sinasabi ni Pangulong Bush na tutulongan tayo sa anyo na gusto kung tumulong sila sa atin. Ayon sa ating kumposisyon, sa ating interpretasyon, ayon sa ating pangangailangan (What I like in the offer is the way President Bush said that help will come in whatever form we want it — according to our needs, according to our composition and interpretation),” she said.

Speaking in the vernacular, the President stressed that she wouldn’t like to look at the relationship as an isometric one, meaning between a powerful nation – a superpower at that – and one that is not.

“Ang importante, ang relasyon natin sa bawat bansa at sa rehiyon ay ipinaiiral natin kung ano ang ikabubuti natin (what is important is we insist what will be good for us in our relationship with each country and the region as a whole),” the President said.

Saying she did not come to the United States as a mendicant or mercenary, the President claimed all the countries in the world are now interdependent on each other, each having something to share in the name of globalization.

“Mayroon din namang papel ang Pilipinas na maitutulong sa ibang bansa at makatutulong din sa atin. At hindi lamang Amerika ang pinag-uusapan natin. Pati na ang mga kapitbansa tulad ng Malaysia and Indonesia. (The Philippines also has something to share to other nations that will help us, including such neighbors as Malaysia and Indonesia),” she said.

One of her main bargaining points in her state visit, according to the Chief Executive, is to find jobs for millions of Filipinos who have been reeling from the economic downturn.

She mentioned several possible benefits of her state visit including the granting of a generalized system of preferences, lower transaction costs for Overseas Filipino Workers and additional concessions for Filipino World War II veterans and their dependents.

BIR officials involved in ‘birthday scam’ charged

Upon orders of the President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, the Department of Finance (DOF) together with the Transparency Group of the Office of the President yesterday filed criminal charges against three ranking officials of the Bureau of Internal Revenue (BIR) before the Office of the Ombudsman.

Charged were Aguinaldo L. Miravelles, Assistant Revenue Regional director; Kamil L. Bajunaid, Assistant Revenue District Officer; and Godofredo M. San Jose, Jr., a former Revenue District Officer.

The charges were filed based on evidence gathered by the Presidential Anti-Organized Crime Commission (PAOCC), which is conducting the lifestyle check ordered by President Arroyo.

The three BIR officials were involved in the so-called “birthday scam” by falsifying their date of birth to prolong their stay in the agency.

Presidential Chief of Staff Rigoberto D. Tiglao, who oversees the Transparency Group, said the BIR officials were also charged with perjury for misrepresenting their actual date of birth.

Tiglao said an administrative case will be filed before the Department of Foreign Affairs against Juanito M. Valdecantos, another BIR employee, for violation of passport laws.

Tiglao said that sometime in March this year, they received reliable information that some employees of the BIR were engaged in wanton falsification of their personal circumstances and credentials in their personal data sheets (PDS) in order to stay in their positions past their retirement age.

These allegations of unexplained wealth and falsification of public records by BIR officials were reported in several newspapers in the past several days.

Tiglao also announced lifestyle checks are ongoing on those who have acquired ill-gotten wealth and those involved in graft cases.

DOF officials hope the filing of these cases will bring about renewed interest on the part of the public to take an active part in preventing corruption in the BIR and the Bureau of Customs (BOC). Corruption has been blamed for the low tax collections of both agencies.

WHO lauds RP surveillance, reporting on SARS

The World Health Organization (WHO) has praised the strong political commitment and efficient surveillance and reporting system in the Philippines that removed the country from the list of areas with reported local transmission of the Severe Acute Respiratory Syndrome (SARS).

“The efficient surveillance and reporting system in the Philippines, which reflects strong political commitment and a high level of awareness among health staff confers an additional level of assurance that no local transmission is now occurring,” a recent WHO update said.

The WHO said the SARS situation in the Philippines illustrates the scale of the emergency effort needed to respond effectively to an imported case and ensure that an outbreak is swiftly contained.

Undersecretary Antonio Lopez, officer-in-charge of the Department of Health (DOH), thanked the Office of the President for its “forceful actions” that contained the spread of SARS in the country.

“The Department of Health thanks the Office of the President for its forceful actions in the combat against SARS,” Lopez said in his report to Malacañang.

The DOH has reported a total of 12 probable SARS cases to the WHO that had been promptly and extensively investigated.

Of the 12 SARS cases, five were imported. One of the imported cases, a female who carried the disease from Toronto, Canada, infected seven others in the only chain of secondary transmission that has occurred in the Philippines. She and her father were the only SARS deaths in the country.

While she traveled up to five provinces prior to her hospitalization, contact tracing by local officials identified 250 individuals who were closely followed up. Four of them developed fever and were quarantined until they were a diagnosed as SARS free.

Lopez said the DOH and other government agencies would continue to enforce vigilance and strict surveillance against the dreaded disease.

Top U.S. firms, mostly in I.T. sector, assure GMA of new investments in RP

NEW YORK (Via PLDT) — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo was assured today by the chief executive officers (CEOs) of top American corporations of new investments in the Philippines that would generate thousands of jobs.

In a series of calls at her suite at the Waldorf Astoria here, the CEOs, mostly in the information and technology (IT) sector, told the President of their multi-million dollar expansion plans in the Philippines starting this year.

The President is here for the last leg of her state visit to the United States, which was highlighted by her meeting with US President George W. Bush in Washington, D. C.

Convergys is one of the world's number one providers of outsourced billing and customer management solutions. The company employs more than 44,000 people in its contact centers, data centers and offices around the world.

Officials told the President that they have chosen the Philippines, rather than India, for their worldwide expansion plans.

They said that within two to three year timeframe, they expect to hire from 8,000 to 10,000 Filipino workers. Employers would be manning their call centers within the next two months in their maximum capacity of 880 seats.

Convergys officials said that their initial capital expenditures for their Philippine project is about $10.437 million.

During his call, Ron Lindorf, chairman and owner of Western Watts Center, also informed the President of the setting up of a call center site in Cebu.

The project, which will have an initial capital outlay of $3.125 million, will involve 300 seats and employ about 500 workers initially.

Officials of Vision-X, Inc. (VXI) led by its CEO, Eva Wang, informed the President of a $1.06 million call center facility in the Philippines that is expected to generate some 4,800 employees within a three-year time frame.

VXI is currently operating with over 1,600 workstations in three locations in the United States and in Shanghai, China. The company supports 20 foreign languages in addition to its core English language.

Another American firm, the Prudential Group, has linked up 77Global, a Philippine IT company, for a pilot project on business process outsourcing (BPO) and call center projects in the Philippines.

Prudential, one of the world's largest insurance companies, offers a variety of products and services, from life and property insurance, to asset management, securities brokerage, banking and trust services, real estate brokerage franchises and relocation services.

Fordham U confers honorary doctorate degree of laws to GMA

NEW YORK CITY (via PLDT) — Fordham University Wednesday here (Thursday night in Manila) conferred an honorary doctorate degree of laws to President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, making her and the late President Diosdado Macapagal the first ever father and daughter presidents to receive such an award.

Rev. Joseph O'Hare S. J., Fordham University president and who incidentally taught for eleven years at the Jesuit university Ateneo de Manila, conferred the degree on the President in ceremonies at the James McNally Amphitheater at the law school building along West 62nd Street here.

In the citation read by Fordham University Trustee and Rector of the Fordham Jesuit Community Rev. Vincent J. Duminico S. J., Fordham University "cherishes" the memory of an earlier visit of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo to our campus.

This was on October 9, 1964 when the President accompanied his father to a ceremony at Fordham's Rose Hill campus, where the latter received a doctorate of laws, honoris causa.

"Today, we welcome his daughter, the fourteenth president of the Republic of the Philippines, to receive a similar honor," he said.

The citation says that "in recognition of the many bonds that unite the people of the Philippines and the people of the United States and with admiration and respect for her intelligent and courageous leadership, Fordham University is proud to present President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo with the degree of Doctor of Laws, honoris causa."

Duminico said the President knows well the Jesuit mission in higher education.

At the undergraduate level, the President studied at Georgetown University and at the graduate level, she earned a Master of Arts degree in Economics from the Ateneo de Manila University.

And like her father, Duminico said the President also went on to earn the PhD. in Economics.

The citation also said that from 1973, the year after martial law was imposed in the Philippines, until 1987, the year after the restoration of democracy in the Philippines under President Corazon Aquino, the future president spent more than a decade as a member of the Economics faculty at ADMU.

He also said that when the President joined the Aquino administration as Trade and Industry Undersecretary in 1987, she was responsible in large part for the revitalization of Philippine textile exports.

"And in 1992, the President was elected to the Senate where she proved to be an outstanding leader, authoring 55 laws on economic and social reform that were a major component of the economic success of President Fidel Ramos' administration."

Meanwhile, as senator, the President championed the rights of women who were victims of domestic violence and in 1998, the people of the Philippines elected her vice president with 12.7 million votes, the most cast for that position in Philippine history.

Duminico said that on January 20, 2001, the President was sworn in as the 14th president of the Philippines, after the Supreme Court unanimously declared the position of President vacant.

He said like Aquino, the new President had been swept into presidency by a peaceful People Power revolution that rose up in protest against the corruption of the Estrada administration.

In her inaugural address, the President predicted that the 21st century would be a time of peril and opportunity. Eight months later, on September 11, attacks on New York City awakened the world to the threat of international terrorism.

Duminico noted that since that time, the Philippines, under the leadership of its President, has proven to be one of the major allies of the United States in this new struggle for the defense of civilization.

In receiving the degree, the President said she takes the Jesuit ideals seriously. “For the Greater Glory of God! A Person for Others!”

“Today, I stand here honored with the doctorate of laws by those who taught me a great deal of what I know and made me to a great extent what I have become,” she said.

She said in a very real sense, those who are honoring me with this degree today, led me as though by hand, to that White House Lawn. You honor me, Honorable fathers of the Jesuit community, you honor my country and you honor yourselves.”

Rev. Joseph O’Hare S. J., in brief remarks, noted that he has done some careful research and found that the President and his father are the only father and daughter presidents to receive honorary doctorate degrees from Fordham U.

He said the university conferred such an honorary degree to all Philippine presidents, except Presidents Marcos and Estrada.

O’Hare cited the President’s efforts to bring peace and development in the Philippines.

He also said that as a former colleague in ADMU, he has both institutional and personal pride to confer the degree to the President.

The conferment rite was also attended by Fordham University officials such as University Trustee and President of Fordham Preparatory School Rev. Joseph Parkes S. J., Faculty Senate President Rita Guare and Vice President for Academic Affairs John Hollwitz.

The President was accompanied by, aside from her family, Philippine officials such as Senate President Franklin Drilon and Speaker Jose de Venecia.

Twice in the family; Fordham revisited

NEW YORK (via PLDT) — This is what some call a case of déjà vu.

On October 9, 1964, when she was only 17, she was at the Fordham’s Rose Hill Campus to accompany her father, the late President Diosdado Macapagal, who was then conferred by the university with a doctorate of laws, honoris causa.

This morning (Wednesday evening in Manila), President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo was back at the same campus, this time to be conferred with the same doctorate degree that the prestigious Jesuit university had conferred on her father some 39 years ago.

In its citation, the Fordham University said it cherishes the memory of an earlier visit of the President, then a young girl, who was with her father during the conferment ceremony.

“Today, we welcome his daughter, the 14th President of the Republic of the Philippines, to receive a similar honor,” the Fordham University said in its citation.

The citation said that the President knows well the Jesuit mission in higher education.

At the undergraduate level, the President studied at Georgetown University but at the graduate level, she earned her Master of Arts degree in Economics from the Ateneo de Manila University.

Like her father, the citation said, the President also went on to earn her PhD in economics.

The Fordham University said that it was proud to confer the degree of doctor of laws, honoris causa, on the President “in recognition of the many bonds that unite the people of the Philippines and the people of the United States and with admiration and respect for her intelligent and courageous leadership.”

Visibly touched, in her response, the President said that she was greatly honored by the conferment of the honorary degree.

“You honor me, you honor my country, you honor yourselves. And you have done it twice in my family,” the President said in her acceptance speech.

The President said that in addition to the education that she got from the Ateneo de Manila University, she was now fortunate to be able to add a ram to her menagerie of mascots that include a blue eagle and a hoya.

She said that she has seriously taken the Jesuit ideals—Ad maiorem Dei gloriam (For the greater glory of God), and Homo pro aliis (A person for others).

“These ideals are ever so relevant to the responsibility entrusted to me as President of my country and to improve the lives of my countrymen, to ensure their safety, and realize their collective potential to become a strong nation,” the President said.

New framework for RP-U.S. ties now being forged after the state visit – GMA

NEW YORK (via PLDT) — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo Wednesday said that her state visit to the United States had enabled her and US President George W. Bush to develop a “modern framework” for Philippine-American relations in the decades to come.

In her speech this morning (late Wednesday evening in Manila) at the Fordham University here where she was conferred a doctor of laws degree, honoris causa, the President said that in the past, relations between the two countries have been marked by resentment from events long past and old misunderstandings.

The President arrived here early this morning for the last leg of her successful state visit to the United States. She is here not only to receive the honorary degree from Fordham University but also to meet with top chief executive officers (CEOs) of major American corporations.

The President said the Philippine-American relationship is not just back on the same old track but is forging ahead in a new direction, marked by mutual respect and reciprocal trust.

“Indeed, in my watch, a new and mature relationship has been developing between the Philippines and the United States,” the President said.

Today, she said, that relationship covers a wide range of critical issues, from security, to regional stability, trade and investments, economic reform, and good governance measures.

The President said that strengthening Philippine alliances with other countries through aggressive diplomacy like what she had achieve in her Washington visit is an integral part of what she termed as her “strategic vision.”

This strategic vision, the President explained, includes the recognition that terrorism in the Philippines must be eliminated if the country is to free its government resources for the task of wiping out poverty.

“In that regard, the US is an important ally. We face a common foe, identified by the same cowardly tactic of targeting the innocent and hitting those who cannot retaliate,” the President said.

The President said that her administration has come to grips with the terrorist threat in the Philippines but stressed she will not let go, because terrorism is still disrupting the world.

“Terrorism must be faced, and must be fought, to the bitter end,” the President stressed.

The President said that her travels abroad, which focus on business and investment promotion, are also part of her vision of eliminating poverty in the Philippines.

She said that she travels abroad not just as the head of state or a nation of 80 million Filipinos but also as an equivalent to a CEO of a global Philippine enterprise consisting of about eight million Filipino workers deployed in over 140 countries, generating billions of dollars a year for themselves, for their employers, and their families in the Philippines.

Philippines capable of building a strong republic, says GMA

NEW YORK (via PLDT) — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said that she is confident the Philippines can build a strong Republic that would lay the foundation for a speedier economic development and a better life for its people.

In her speech this morning (late Wednesday evening in Manila) at the Fordham University here where she was conferred a doctor of laws degree, honoris causa, the President said that with the help of friends like the United States, the Philippines can achieve this strong Republic dedicated to economic growth and good governance.

The President said that for others, a woman like her cannot do very much alone about the problem of poverty but added that a strong government can do infinitely more.

“As a necessary step towards the eradication of mass poverty in my country, I set my mind to creating a strong Republic that can tackle so great a challenge,” she said.

The President cited two essential features that are needed in building a strong Republic in the Philippines.

First, she said, is the independence from class and sectoral interests, so that the Republic stands for the interests of all, rather than a powerful minority.

The second, the President said, is the capacity to execute good policies and deliver essential services through strong institutions and an efficient bureaucracy.

“The results of good policies and empowered institutions is faster economic development and a more meaningful social reform,” the President said.

But the President also said that in order to achieve her vision of a strong Republic, sacrifices must be made, especially from those who have not had to make them by forces of circumstance.

She recalled that the late President Ramon Magsaysay had made famous his dictum that “those who have less in life should have more in law.”

“I say that those who have more in life shall have more to do to make life more livable for more of their fellowmen. This is the Jesuit sense of social justice that would have us all be men and women for others,” the President said.

GMA salutes courage of troops, support of communities in punitive operations vs terrorists

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today saluted the courage of the Armed Forces of the Philippines troops who have carried out punitive operations against the enemy in some terrorist enclaves in Mindanao as well as the civilian communities that have supported them.

In a teleconference beamed to Manila from New York, where she headed after a highly-successful state visit to Washington, the President, however, said the task of enhancing peace and order is far from over.

The Philippine National Police, she said, must be ready to hold the areas cleared by punitive operations while the national agencies and the local government units must consolidate relief and rehabilitation efforts.

The President also said she would proceed to Mindanao following her state visit to the United States “to evaluate the national security situation and to see how immediately we can apply the gains of this trip to addressing the issues of the security situation in Mindanao.”

The President said the punitive actions she ordered the military to carry out before she embarked on her US visit last May 17 have been successful. She added, however, that she could call them off anytime.

In response to surrender feelers from Moro rebels and suspected terrorists, the President said “I have been very clear about what I want from them. I want them to renounce terrorism. I want them to stop terrorist attacks. I want them to surrender the terrorists among them.”

While authorizing the AFP to employ “selective aerial and artillery attacks to dislodge embedded terrorist cells that have attacked hapless civilian communities and murdered scores of innocent Filipinos in Mindanao,” the President said the administration will step up anti-poverty programs, intensify diplomatic initiatives and maximize community preparedness and support until the threat of terrorism is beaten.

In Malacañang, Presidential Chief of Staff Rigoberto Tiglao said Social Welfare and Development Secretary Corazon Juliano Soliman and Presidential Adviser on Strategic Concerns Renato de Villa are now in Mindanao overseeing government operations and projects and preparing the way for the President’s visit next week.

More mature RP-U.S. ties, new investments mark GMA state visit to Washington

NEW YORK (via PLDT) – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said that as a result of her state visit to the United States, the overall framework of Philippine-American relations is now marked by mutual respect and reciprocal thrust.

Wrapping up her visit with a two-day trip to this city, the President said in a press briefing at the Waldorf Astoria here that her visit also resulted in new investments and financial assistance worth millions of dollars, citing in particular the expected bonanza of $1 billion in tax perks from the inclusion of some Philippine products under the US generalized system of preference (GSP).

She said the inclusion of such products as carrageenin or seaweed, pineapple juice and tuna in the GSP is particularly significant since these products come primarily from Mindanao where there is much poverty and where the threat of terrorism and violence continues to hang.

In terms of new investments and impact on the overall economic development of the country, Trade and Industry Secretary Manuel Roxas II described the state visit as an “overwhelming success,” adding that the achievements made were beyond their expectation.

The President said that in talks with US President George W. Bush in Washington, D. C., they have laid the foundation for Philippine-American relations “based on more trade, not aid; reciprocity, not mendicancy; and mutuality, not exclusively.”

“Our bonds of friendship and values have now grown into an overarching, pragmatic alliance for security, peace and development,” the President said in her opening statement at the press briefing.

The President said that through this “bolstered alliance,” the two countries have gained solid momentum for a more decisive engagement with the world.

As an example of how this new partnership is working is the agreement that the United States will now go beyond fighting the Abu Sayyaf terrorists by helping the government mop up the pockets of poverty, especially in Mindanao, where the recruits of terrorism are taken.

“The shared future of Philippine-American relations now demands initiatives that should lend greater momentum to our achievements,” the President said

The President said that her meeting here with organizations engaged in business process outsourcing and with the executives of top US companies, particularly those in the information and technology (IT) sector, as well as with companies projected to invest in the reconstruction of Iraq, mean more investments and a greater range of opportunities for the Filipino workers.

“Jobs are my main concern. We go worldwide with greater zeal because we want to expand the quest for jobs through the greater market access that will come as a result of our closer economic engagement,” the President said.

Officials said that for the reconstruction of Iraq, some 30,000 to 35,000 jobs could be made available soon to Filipino workers while some 10,000 new jobs could be generated in the call centers that would be opened in the Philippines.

In a series of calls at her suite at the Waldorf Astoria here, the chief executive officers (CEOs), mostly from the IT sector, told the President of their multimillion-dollar expansion plans in the Philippines starting this year.

Officials of Convergys Corporation led by its president for customer management group, John C. Freker, informed the President of their plan to set up a 240-seat call center facility at the Enterprise Center in Makati City and another 600-seat facility at Robinson’s Equitable Bank Tower in Pasig City.

Convergys is one of the world’s top providers of outsourced billing and customer management solutions. The company employs more than 44,000 people in its contact centers, data centers and offices around the world.

Officials told the President that they have chosen the Philippines, rather than India, for their worldwide expansion plans.

They said that within two to three years, they expect to hire from 8,000 to 10,000 Filipino workers. Employees would be manning their call centers within the next two months.

Convergys officials said their initial capital expenditures for their Philippine project is about $10.437 million.

During his call, Ron Lindorf, chairman and owner of Western Watts Center, also informed the President of the setting up of a call center site in Cebu. The project, which will have an initial capital outlay of $3.125 million, will involve 300 seats and employ about 500 workers initially.

Officials of Vision-X, Inc. (VXI) led by its CEO, Eva Wang, informed the President of a $1.06-million call center facility in the Philippines that is expected to generate some 4,800 employees within a three-year time frame.

VXI is currently operating with over 1,600 workstations in three locations in the United States and in Shanghai, China. The company supports 20 foreign languages in addition to its core English language.

Another American firm, the Prudential Group, has linked up with 77Global, a Philippine IT company, for a pilot project on business process outsourcing and call center projects in the Philippines.

On the last day of her visit to Washington, D. C., the President witnessed the signing of several agreements worth millions of dollars in outright grant or loans from financial institutions aimed at speeding up the country's economic development and in pushing for some socio-economic projects.

One of the agreements signed was for a US grant of $32.81 million to help the Philippine government in its program of reintegration to society of some 25,000 former combatants of the Moro National Liberation Front (MNLF).

The amount forms part of the $72-million total program of assistance earmarked by the United States Agency for International Development (USAID) for assistance to conflict affected areas in Mindanao.

Another achievement of the visit was the designation by President Bush of the Philippines as a major non-NATO ally to strengthen the Philippine government's drive against terrorist cells operating in southern Philippines.

Foreign Secretary Blas Ople said this designation was an indication of the strong support of President Bush for President Macapagal-Arroyo and the Philippine government.

NATO refers to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, a military alliance composed of the US and major European countries.

Ople said that countries granted major non-NATO status are limited to those with a close and strategic working relationship with the US defense forces.

In a joint press conference at the White House Monday (Tuesday in Manila), President Bush announced the inclusion of the Philippines in the MNNA category that includes Australia, Bahrain, Egypt, Israel, Japan, Jordan, Argentina, New Zealand and the Republic of Korea.

"The designation is symbolic of the high level of trust and friendship between the two countries and its leaders. It also boosts the relentless efforts of our military to fight terrorist in southern Philippines since it means the Philippines is now eligible for priority delivery of excess defense articles," Ople said.

Under Section 516 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended, the US government has the authority to transfer surplus military equipment to foreign security forces.

Ople and his counterpart, US Secretary of State Colin Powell, also signed two agreements for their respective governments, one on cooperation in science and technology that would enable scientists of both countries to embark on joint education and research, and two a Letter of Intent on Narcotics Control and Law Enforcement with a $1.01 million grant.

Other accords signed on the last day of the President's visit to Washington, included the following:

- memorandum of understanding (MOU) that allocates $20 million to procure US rice for the purpose of helping the Philippines improve its food security;
- an MOU on the establishment of an Agriculture Research and Endowment Fund directed towards agriculture development through science and technology;
- an MOU for the development of financing support for appropriate irrigation technologies to enhance agricultural productivity. This MOU directs the EximBank to finance irrigation projects in Mindanao;
- an MOU on the facilitation of remittances that will reduce the cost of transaction on overseas remittances to the Philippines;
- an MOU on technical assistance grant for a financing facility for rural electric cooperatives;
- an MOU on a project to extend the Manila-Cavite Expressway through a financing from the International Finance Corporation; and
- an MOU on the construction of a geothermal plant in cooperation with the Philippine National Oil Company (PNOC) and development of a 1,5000 hectare-airport facility at the Fernando Air Base in Lipa City.

GMA reiterates decision not to run in 2004

NEW YORK CITY (via PLDT) — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo reiterated Wednesday (Thursday morning in Manila) that her decision not to seek re-election in 2004 stays.

In a press conference at the Waldorf Astoria, the President said she feels “so comfortable” not being a candidate for president.

“I’ve been able to make so many unpopular but correct decisions so I think I should stick to that decision,” the President said.

The President announced last December 30 that she is not seeking reelection, saying she would rather work for the holding of honest, orderly and peaceful elections.

During the press conference at the Waldorf Astoria, the President said she wants to talk about the gains of her state visit to the United States instead of discussing politics.

“My focus is what I need to do in the next 14 months,” the President said.

GMA commends PNP for pre-empting terror plot

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today commended the Philippine National Police for pre-empting a terrorist plot in Metro Manila.

In a teleconference in New York, where she headed after a successful state visit in Washington, with reporters and other Malacañang officials in Manila, the President said the success of the PNP operations highlights the need for preparedness not only of the law-enforcement agencies but of the local government in threatened communities as well.

Chief Presidential Legal Adviser Avelino Cruz informed the President during the teleconference of the arrest of seven people in Isla Puting Bato in Tondo by joint operatives of the PNP and the Intelligence Service of the Armed Forces of the Philippines (ISAFP).

Cruz also said the seven suspects, who are under the custody of the Western Police District, are undergoing interrogation in connection with previous bombing incidents.

Cruz added that investigators will be making an announcement on the results of their probe in the next few days.

The WPD described the seven as alleged members of the Moro Islamic Liberation Front who were among the 75 people rounded up during an operation in Tondo.

GMA urges people to continue good health, hygiene habits to keep SARS virus away

NEW YORK (Via PLDT) – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo called on the people Wednesday (Thursday in Manila) to continue to practice good health and hygiene habits to keep the SARS (severe acute respiratory syndrome) virus away.

The President said during a press conference at the Waldorf Astoria Hotel which was also beamed to Manila that she was “very, very happy and delighted” over the World Health Organization declaration that the Philippines is SARS free.

She also congratulated health and airport authorities and workers for their vigilance against the spread of the SARS virus and expressed hope that “other countries in the region will also be able to contain their epidemic so that we can have a world free of SARS and a world free to move forward in our fight against poverty.”

The WHO, in announcing the removal of the Philippines from its list of areas with recent local transmission of the killer virus, noted “the efficient surveillance and reporting system in the Philippines, which reflects strong political commitment and a high level of awareness among health staff.”

The United Nations health organization said Philippine authorities accomplished the SARS-containment feat and demonstrated their government’s resolve to beat the killer disease. The results of this hard work are now being seen, WHO said in a statement.

During her press conference, the President said “we saw the close relationship between SARS and having a hygienic environment, that a hygienic and clean environment is an end in itself. Let us continue that habit.”

GMA going to Mindanao after successful state visit to pursue peace, development concerns

Malacañang today said President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's concern for peace and development in the Southern Philippines will bring her to Mindanao on Monday, after an overnight rest in Manila from a successful visit to the United States, to consolidate efforts against terrorists, look into relief and rehabilitation efforts, and check on development projects in the region.

In a press briefing this afternoon, Presidential Chief of Staff Rigoberto Tiglao said the plan is for the President to be back in Manila Sunday and take a day's rest from the hectic schedule in Washington, D. C., New York and California.

On Monday morning, Tiglao said, the President will make a report to the nation on the outcome of her eight-day state visit to the US and then sign into law the Anti-Trafficking in persons Act of 2003.

After the signing of the bill, a priority measure of the administration, the President will fly to Cagayan de Oro City; Tubod in Lanao del Norte where the Palarong Pambansa is scheduled to be staged; Maigo, also in Lanao del Norte, which was attacked by rebels; and Davao City.

Tiglao said that after a quick visit to Tubod, the President will preside over a command conference of the Armed Forces of the Philippines and the Philippine National Police in Cagayan de Oro to assess the anti-terrorist campaign and to check on the crime situation there.

After the command conference in Cagayan de Oro, the President would proceed to Davao City to meet with Mayor Rodrigo Duterte and other local leaders to check on the Mindanao National Initiative, or Mindanao Natin program, and consolidate further the political efforts against terror.

GMA state visit gets good playup in mainstream American media

WASHINGTON, D. C.—In her weeklong trip to the United States, three days of which were the state visit to this American capital, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo not only charmed her way to her host, US President George W. Bush, and the American people but also to the mainstream American media.

The state visit, highlighted by her talks with President Bush and the state dinner at the White House, were played up in the major American newspapers and in such influential TV networks as the CNN International, NBC and ABC, as well as in the major wire organizations like the AP, Reuters and AFP.

During her Washington visit, the President was interviewed twice by CNN International, the first by Daljit Dhaliwal, and the second, where she recapped the highlights of her talks with President Bush, by veteran broadcast journalist Wolf Blizer.

The influential Washington Post published two full-length articles on the state visit, with a Page 1 teaser, entitled “U.S.-Philippines Anti-Terror Accord,” saying that the US had promised the Philippines aid in fighting Muslim rebels under an expanded anti-terrorism effort.

Unfortunately, true to its interpretative journalism tradition, most of the American media outlets used as their slant the supposed agreement between the two leaders that would allow the US to send combat troops to fight the Abu Sayyaf terrorists in Mindanao.

In its main story, the Post said that the two leaders have pledged to expand collaboration in their campaign against terrorism with the White House promising more than $95 million in military aid and new deployment of US forces to help defeat Muslim rebel groups in the Philippines.

But later in the joint press briefing, President Bush clarified that the US plan to send troops to the Philippines in the fight against terrorism would be subject to the constitutional requirements of the Philippines.

Also in a press brief briefing at the Philippine embassy later, the President pointed out that what she and President Bush agreed on was that the US government would help in eliminating the terrorist threat in the Philippines in the manner that the Philippine government would want it to do.

On several occasions, the President had emphasized that US forces would not be allowed to join in combat operations in Mindanao but only to train and equip Filipino forces who should be the ones to engage in the actual fighting against the Abu Sayyaf.

The New York Times carried on page A-15 a full-length article, entitled “Bush Affirms U.S. is Ready to Send Troops to the Philippines,” accompanied by a photo of the two Presidents during a joint press conference in the White House.

The Los Angeles Times, also with the same slant, carried in its World Section an article, entitled “Bush Pledges More U.S. Troops to Help Philippines.”

The Post devoted one whole page in its Style Section to the state dinner at the White House hosted by President and Mrs. Bush for the visiting Philippine president.

The lifestyle article, entitled “Dinner with Two Tough Cookies,” had a five-picture montage showing President Bush welcoming the President and First Gentleman Jose Miguel Arroyo to the State Dining Room of the White House where the dinner was held.

The article also carried the guest list that included the “Who’s Who” in American and Philippine officialdom.

The caption of the photo says that President Bush called President Macapagal-Arroyo as his “strong ally in the war on terror” and pledged to deploy more US troops to help fight the Muslim rebels in Mindanao.

The Times devoted the whole of its page A-10 to the meeting between the two presidents at the White House and the state dinner later in the evening.

Three more photos of the event, an enlarged 5-column photo of smiling but aging World War II veterans welcoming the President when she arrived at the White House, was published on page A-10.

Another photo of the President and First Gentleman, being escorted by President Bush and American First Lady Laura Bush for the state dinner, accompanied the sidebar to the main story, entitled “Bush Will Send More Troops to Fight Philippine Rebels.”

The sidebar, devoted mainly to the state dinner, quoted President Bush as describing the Philippine president as “fierce fighter of terrorism in the Philippines.”

The main Times story was devoted to the highlights of the meeting between the two leaders that included the continuing commitment of the US to the Philippines in its war against local terrorists and in uplifting the lives of the Filipino Muslims affected by the conflict.

The sidebar, written by Times staff writer Sharon Behn, had a more human touch when it said that aides had rushed to place a small foot stool behind the lectern “for the diminutive Philippine president to stand on in the dining room.”

The sidebar also said that the state dinner, which was only the third since Mr. Bush took over, “had a quite tone, with a guest list free of the glitterati that adorned such evenings at the White House during Bill Clinton’s two terms.”

In its world section, the USA Today carried a brief item, also with an anti-terrorism bias. The item, entitled “US, Philippines Agree to Fight Islamic Rebel Group,” says that the two leaders have agreed to send an unspecified number of US troops to support operations against the Abu Sayyaf rebels in the Southern Philippines.

ZAMBOANGA CITY— “It is better for us to endure the pains and sufferings of war in one or two years than to have eternal sacrifices in the hands of the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF).”

This best describes the sentiments of the evacuees now being attended to by government agencies in Lanao, Sirawai and in some parts of Central Mindanao as they started appreciating government efforts to bring perpetrators of several terrorist acts in the region to justice.

Citing several reports in areas affected by punitive military operations, Southern Command chief Maj. Gen. Roy Kyamko said terrorist or not, the military would leave no stone unturned in their pursuit operations against armed groups like the MILF because “they have committed criminal acts.”

“Arrest warrants have been issued to top officials of the MILF and we are determined to bring justice to people to whom they have committed these atrocities,” said Kyamko.

In a television interview over IBC 11 here, the Southcom chief expressed optimism that the Armed Forces would emerge victorious in the fight against terror, citing the cooperation the military is getting from the civilian population.

He said Civilian Volunteer Organizations and barangay tanods have been a big help in information gathering as to the whereabouts of the rebels that led to the capture of several MILF bases in South Central Mindanao.

Local officials as well as several Mindanao congressmen, according to him, have also expressed support to the ongoing pursuit operations quoting them as saying that “it was timely for the AFP to demonstrate that it still has the capability to crush the MILF.”

Kyamko also reported that Muslim businessmen and leaders in the town of Munai, Pantao Ragat and other surrounding municipalities have withdrawn their moral and logistical support to the terrorist cells of terrorist leader Yahyah Lucsadatu quoting them as saying that “they are already fed up with the terror and havoc brought about by the terrorist.”

“The MILF is now suffering the agony of losing the war against government troops,” he said. “The rebels are just paying the price of following a false ideology which is terrorism.”

On the reported presence of 12 foreign nationals believed to be linked to the Jemaah Islamiyah terrorist group in South Central Mindanao, Kyamko said there was nothing concrete yet on the veracity of the report. He said, however, that “if they are proven to be involved in terrorist bombings, we have to bring them to justice, too.”

On criticisms that the AFP operations were nothing more than a state-sponsored terrorism which has displaced thousands of families, Kyamko said majority of the Mindanaoans supported the government war on terrorism.

“The selective strike on several terrorist cells in Mindanao continues to gain ground. We expect the job to be finished as soon as possible. When this job is over, we will emerge victorious in our war against terrorist groups here in Mindanao,” he said.

Southcom sees MILF defeat

ZAMBOANGA CITY—Contrary to published reports, only one soldier was killed in action as a result of punitive military actions against terrorist rebels in selected targets in Mindanao.

However, the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) registered a death toll of 77, according to intelligence documents obtained from the Armed Forces of the Philippines.

Aside from wounding five and capturing two rebels, government forces have also accepted the surrender of 97 Bangsamoro Islamic Armed Forces (BIAF) members in Iligan City Thursday. This, according to the documents, resulted in the recovery of 85 assorted firearms.

Southern Command chief Maj. Gen. Roy Kyamko released the information today to belie reports that at least 28 government troopers have been killed in the fighting that took place in the areas of Maguindanao and Lanao del Norte.

The story quoted an unidentified rebel spokesman.

Enemy casualties, according to Kyamko were based on intelligence reports and body counts.

The AFP said that the long-standing poor credibility of self-styled MILF spokesman Eid Kabalu was reason enough not to believe anything he said about the soldier casualties.

Lt. Col. Fredesvindo Covarrubias of the 4th Civil Relations Group branded Kabalu as “a congenital liar whose credibility has gone at an all-time low, following terroristic activities he and his group did in Mindanao.”

“On the contrary, it is the MILF who suffer more casualties, resulting in their demoralization and eventual surrender to the government ,” Covarrubias said.

He said Kabalu has a long line of atrocities to his name and with the arrest warrant issued against him, “he is probably talking while hiding in his closet.”

“Absolutely, it is difficult to believe a person like Kabalu whose group has employed terrorism by killing innocent civilians,” he said. “On one hand,” he added, “the MILF will only attack military targets but look at what they are doing, they have sown terror by attacking defenseless civilian communities.”

He claimed it had been a routine for Kabalu to lie and “being an expert at that, he imagines things and resorts to this tactic to project they are still strong and resilient.”

“But the point is, no one believes Kabalu anymore because his propaganda has been, from the start, obvious ,” Covarrubias said.

The unquantifiable benefits of state visit

More than anything else, the state visit of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo to Washington, D. C. has laid the foundation of a more mature Philippine-American relationship for decades to come based on mutual respect and reciprocal trust.

Officials who formed part of the presidential entourage have described the visit as an “overwhelming success,” because the benefits derived from that visit were beyond their expectations.

A fact sheet issued by the officials showed that the package of benefits on bilateral cooperation in such areas as defense and security, poverty alleviation, economic development, and assistance on financing by multilateral financial institutions, as well as pledges of new investments, was worth some $4.09 billion.

This was indeed beyond the expectations of the Philippine government.

But the President did not want to dwell on this achievement. In fact, she got upset every time someone asked her how much her administration is getting out of the visit in terms of US dollars.

The President said she went on a state visit to Washington not to beg but to lay the strategic basis of Philippine-US relations based on more trade, not aid; reciprocity, not mendicancy; and mutuality, not exclusivity.

In a closer economic engagement between the two countries, the benefits to be derived by the Filipino people would be far greater than the price tag that comes with it, the President said.

For example, the President said, more than the $1 billion that could be derived in tax perks after the inclusion of such Philippine products as carrageenin, pineapple juice and tuna, in the US generalized system of preference (GSP), are the prospects of increased employment opportunities and income for the people of Mindanao directly involved in these products.

Because their produce have now greater access to the American market through the GSP, the seaweed farmers of Tawi-Tawi, the tuna fishermen of General Santos City and the pineapple growers of Central Mindanao can now have a better life.

And this kind of economic assistance from the US goes beyond fighting the Abu Sayyaf because this is geared towards the advancement of the lives of Muslim Filipinos in the most depressed areas in Mindanao, which have become the breeding ground for recruits of terrorism, the President said.

The significance of classifying the Philippines as a major ally of the US outside of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) is another example of how a long-term goal could not be appreciated immediately.

Being a major non-NATO ally (MNNA) of the US means the Philippines is now eligible to receive excess military equipment and supplies from the US, a big boost to our defense establishment, especially in the fight against terrorism.

The President said that this classification paves the way for a stronger partnership with the US for a more secure Philippines, a more secure region and a more secure world.

According to the President, during her state visit, as well in her other foreign trips, one of her major concerns was to attract more foreign investors into the country to generate employment opportunities for the Filipino people.

In fact, it was the purpose of her one-day sidetrip to New York where she met with chief executive officers (CEOs) of top US corporations, mostly in the information and technology (IT) sector, who have pledged to set up more call centers in the Philippines.

She also met with US companies projected to invest in the reconstruction of Iraq that offers a broad range of opportunities for the Filipino workers.

“Jobs are my main concern. We go worldwide with greater zeal because we want to expand the quest for jobs through greater market access that will come as a result of our closer economic engagement with such countries as the US,” the President said.

The President said that whenever she travels abroad, she is not only the head of a nation of 80 million Filipinos but also the equivalent of the CEO of a global Philippine enterprise consisting of some eight million overseas Filipino workers deployed in over 40 countries.

GMA says enhanced R.P.-U.S. ties to benefit Filipino nation

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said the governments of the Philippines and the United States have reinvigorated and improved their partnership on a range of mutual interests.

In a speech during the signing of the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Act of 2003 at the Ceremonial Hall in Malacañang, the President noted how her state visit last week to the US enhanced the “enduring bonds of friendship, alliance and common interest between our two sovereign nations.”

The President said she and US President George W. Bush have “articulated a new partnership based on a range of mutual interests that now include a vision for the strategic role the Philippines place in Asia and in the global stage.”

“The partnership between the Philippines and America is mirrored in the amity and cooperation between our two governments which in turn reflect the historic and social bonds between the Filipino and American peoples,” she said.

The President reported that “America has been generous with our political needs and America has also been warm and wise in honoring the uniqueness and humanity of our nation.”

She added: “Before critics devalue this achievement, before political contenders cast partisan doubts on the advancement of our nation and before controversy confuses the high-minded purpose of this national enterprise, let us pause and join our people in congratulating themselves” for the state visit that truly honors respect for women, caring for children, and the resilience of the Filipino people.

She said the US recognized and appreciated “a friend” with such sterling qualities.

“But those qualities are primarily for our nation’s benefit and resources we can rely upon in facing the many challenges of the future,” she added.

GMA, pinpoint responsibility, mete out sanction, compensate victims, take pre-emptive measures

Pinpoint responsibility, mete out the necessary sanction, make sure there's just compensation to the victims, and take pre-emptive measures so that this doesn't happen again.

These were the orders issued today by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo as she expressed sadness over the collision between the Manila-bound MV San Nicolas and the Cebu-bound WG&A's Super Ferry 12 off Corregidor Island on Sunday which she branded as "another blackeye in maritime safety."

"It's ironic because sea transport is a fundamental aspect of the economy," said the President in her speech during the ceremonial signing of the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Act of 2003 in Malacañang.

"These perennial accidents can and must be stopped," the President stressed, calling to mind the series of sea disasters that have hit the country, including the collision between the ferry Doña Paz and the oil tanker Vector on December 29, 1987 off Mindoro which came to be known as the world's worst peacetime maritime tragedy where more than 4,000 people died.

"I'm directing the maritime authorities to get to the bottom of this incident and submit a complete report within 15 days," an irate President said, at the same time warning them about the strict enforcement of navigation rules and the fitness of pilots of commercial vessels.

In her first official public act since returning from a successful state visit to the United States on Sunday, the President went to the Coast Guard headquarters to personally look into the situation of the victims. On the spot, she ordered an immediate investigation into the sea tragedy, assuring that those responsible for the tragedy will not go unpunished.

She also raised the question why the wooden-hulled vessel's crew and owners allowed unmanifested passengers on board and asked who were the ones responsible for enforcing the law and rules on maritime travel and safety.

"We must pinpoint responsibility and mete out the necessary sanction," the President reiterated in her speech today in Malacañang.

"Let's make sure there's just compensation to the victims," she went on, "and we must take pre-emptive measures so that this won't happen again."

She said: "I deeply sympathize with the families of those who perished in yesterday's tragedy."

"May mananagot (those responsible will be punished)," the President assured the survivors of the sea disaster involving the San Nicolas and the Super Ferry 12.

The President assured that P10,000 will be given for each of the fatal victim on top of the P100,000 insurance that the families will be receiving. Those injured will also be properly taken care of.

GMA warns against exploitation, trafficking of Filipino women, children

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today signed into law Republic Act 9208 or the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Act of 2003, sending a strong signal that the days of people who exploit women and children are numbered.

"Itong batas ay nagbibigay ng babala na ang pangkabuhayan ng ating mga kababaihan at mga bata ay bubuti, hindi sa pagsasamantala sa kanila, kundi ang pagbibigay ng karapatan sa kababaihan at edukasyon sa mga bata (The law assures that the lives of Filipino women and children will get better, not because they are exploited, but because women exercise their rights and children get education)," the President said.

In a speech during the signing of RA 9208 at Malacañang's Ceremonial Hall, the President stressed that the new law imposed heavy penalties against violators.

The President said “we can now inform the world and ourselves that the Filipino people already know the abusive jobs and legal jobs, because we already know the distinction between illegal and legitimate jobs.”

“This law also strengthens our republic. A strong republic is an effective state that helps the poorest of the poor and weak people, providing them the power to abolish the structure that deprives them,” she said.

The law provided that:

- Any person found guilty of committing acts enumerated in Section 4 on “Acts of Trafficking Persons” suffer the penalty of imprisonment of 20 years and a fine of not less than P1 million but not more than P2 million;
- Any person found guilty of committing acts enumerated in Section 5 on “Acts that Promote Trafficking in Persons” shall suffer imprisonment of 15 years and a fine of not less than P500,000 but not more than P1 million;
- Any person found guilty of trafficking under Section 6 on “Qualified Trafficking in Persons” shall suffer a penalty of life imprisonment and a fine of not less than P2 million but not more than P5 million;
- Any person who violates Section 7 on “Confidentiality” of this Act shall suffer the penalty of imprisonment of six years and a fine of not less than P500,000 but not more than P1 million;
- If the offender is a corporation, association, establishment or any juridical person, the penalty shall be imposed upon the owner, president, partner, manager and/or any responsible officer who participated in the commission of the crime or who shall have knowingly permitted or failed to prevent its commission;
- The registration with the Securities and Exchange Commission and license to operate of the erring agency, corporation shall be cancelled and revoked permanently; the owner, president, partner or manager thereof shall not be allowed to operate similar establishments under a different name;
- If the offender is a foreigner, he shall immediately be deported after serving sentence and may be permanently barred from entering the country;
- Any government employee or official found guilty of the enumerated acts under Section 5 on “Acts that Promote Trafficking in Persons” shall be dismissed from the service, barred permanently to hold public office and his/her retirement and other benefits shall be forfeited;
- Conviction of an adopter for any offense under this Act shall result in the immediate rescission of the decree of adoption.

The law also provided that any person who buys or engages the services of trafficked persons for prostitution shall likewise be penalized; any trafficked person or victim shall be entitled to the Witness Protection Program of the government; and the government shall establish and implement preventive protection and rehabilitation programs for trafficked persons.

It added that the trafficked persons in the Philippines who are nationals of a foreign country should be entitled to appropriate protection, assistance and services available.

The law tasked the government to create an Inter-Agency Council to be composed of the Secretary of the Department of Justice as chairperson and the Secretary of the Department of Social Welfare and Development (DSWD) as co-chairperson.

Council members include the secretaries of the Department of Foreign Affairs, Department of Labor and Employment; administrator of the Philippine Overseas Employment Administration; commissioner of the Bureau of Immigration; director of the Philippine National Police; chairperson of the National Commission on the Role of Filipino Women; and three representatives from non-governmental organizations (NGO) composed of one representative each from among the sectors representing women, overseas Filipino workers, and children.

The council shall formulate a comprehensive and integrated program to prevent and suppress trafficking in persons, promulgate rules and regulations, and monitor and oversee the strict implementation of the Act.

Among the Cabinet secretaries present during the signing were Executive Secretary Alberto Romulo, Corazon Juliano-Soliman of the DSWD, Presidential Chief of Staff Rigoberto Tiglao, members of the Senate led by Senate President Franklin Drilon and Senator Loi Ejercito Estrada who sponsored the bill in the Senate, members of the House of Representatives, business sector, and NGO's.

Continuous MILF harassment force civilians to return, seek refuge at evacuation centers

ZAMBOANGA CITY – Continuous harassment by Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) rebels of civilians who have returned to their homes are forcing refugees to go back to evacuation centers and swell their number.

This was noted by Director Vilma Cabrera of the Department of Social Welfare and Development's National Operation Office following published reports on the status of evacuees in areas affected by the ongoing conflict between the military and the MILF.

Cabrera, however, emphasized that the 318,000 refugee figures quoted in the newspapers are not indicative of the actual statistics in the evacuation centers, saying the figures included those who were displaced by the AFP pursuit operations against Kidnap-for-Ransom gangs in PIkit, North Cotabato last February.

She said that based on DSWD records, a total of 69,530 families or 356,893 people have been served by the government agency in various evacuation centers in Regions IX, X, XI, XII and ARMM since the start of the year.

It is possible, she said, that the same persons were served several times.

"If what we're talking about, however, is the number of evacuees that was a direct result of the ongoing punitive action by the military, I'm sure very low 'yan."

In Region IX and ARMM, for example, the DSWD reported no additional evacuees since the start of the latest AFP operations that was launched last May 17.

She said statistics on the total number of evacuees since May 17 when the AFP launched its newest operations will be made available as soon as possible.

Meanwhile, the continuing harassment of civilians by the MILF in South Central Mindanao drew the ire of Maj. Gen. Generoso Senga, Commanding General of the Army's 6th Infantry Division, who said the pursuit operations against the 95 MILF members who have standing arrest warrants will continue.

"I want to make it clear that the continuing atrocities being committed by the MILF gives us no choice but to protect both the state and the people against acts of terrorism from any group," Senga said.

He stressed, however, that the government's policy of making peace with the MILF remains, but that 'it can never allow the rebels to terrorize and commit atrocities against civilians in pursuit of their political goals.

GMA Stand

It is the duty of any President to serve the national interest and to sacrifice self-interest in doing so.

But President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has not made any statement on this matter and refuses to be distracted by partisan politics in her day to day task of tackling vital national concerns.

Meeting with Mr. Danding Cojuangco

The President met Mr. Cojuangco very briefly at Villamor Air Base yesterday while she was her way to attend the 56th anniversary celebration of the Philippine Air Force.

The President had just arrived from Marawi City where she presided over a command conference on the anti-drug campaign.

They discussed strengthening the administration coalition in the House of Representatives.

Statement of Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye

Death Penalty for Drug Traffickers

The President has expressed support for the idea of executing convicted big-time drug traffickers, but she has exercised due deference to the position of the church as well as to other well-meaning sectors on this issue.

She wants the nation to be united, not divided, on all issues relating to the anti-drug campaign.

It may not be timely to spark extended debates on the death penalty while we are trying to consolidate the nation behind the war against illegal drugs.

Statement of the President

Anti-Drug War

We must wage the war against illegal drugs the same we are waging the war against terrorism. Our strategy should be non-partisan, it should involve all levels and sectors of society, it should stretch down from the national to local levels of governance, and it should involve domestic and transnational cooperation. Every Filipino must feel that the whole country and the world are with him or her in this campaign of good versus evil.

Statement of the President

MILF

We are keeping an active dossier of these terrorist plans and atrocities and we are hopeful that any prospective peace talks will close the book on these issues. The MILF has the opportunity not only to condemn terrorism by word, but to actually purge its ranks of terrorist operatives and intentions. The success of the peace process will heavily rely on meaningful moves taken by the MILF in this direction.

British Business Council backs GMA peace drive, urges U.K. investors to put up business in RP

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has found another ally in her efforts to end the decades-long secessionist movement in Mindanao.

The British Business Council, signifying its continued trust and confidence in the Arroyo government, expressed support for her peace efforts by way of promoting the inter-faith dialogue and encouraging British investors to put up their business in the Philippines.

During a courtesy call on the President at Malacañang's Music Room this morning, BBC officials headed by Geoffrey Short, chairman and president of Wealth Creation, Inc., reiterated their support for the inter-faith dialogue, one of the 16-point agenda of the administration to fight local terrorism and ending the secessionist movement in Mindanao.

The President thanked the BBC for promoting and teaching the English language to the Muslims, saying this "will promote the inter-faith dialogue to our Muslim brothers in Mindanao, especially the young ones."

During the same meeting, BBC officials informed the President that the British Chamber of Commerce of the Philippines is planning to expand their business in Mindanao, particularly in Davao.

Short revealed that one of the investments the BBC plans to put up in the conflict-torn island is in the field of information and communication, technology, saying it is the fastest growing business not only in the country but also in the whole world.

Paul Hubbard, BBC director and country head of Total Solution Software, Inc., testified that information technology is one of the booming businesses in the country.

He revealed that his company is now teaming up with Smart Communications to expand their operations.

Short said he is impressed by the government program on small and medium enterprises (SMEs), saying this has helped improve the lives of the small business entrepreneurs.

In response to the positive observation of the BBC to the business climate in the country, the President informed them that aside from ICT, the insurance industry is also one of those that have contributed to the growth of the Gross National Product.

Also present during the courtesy call were Jeremy Smith, BBC Director and Country Head of Jones Lang Lasalle; Andres Bautista, BBC Director and Country Head of Anglo-Industrial Consulting; Gill Westaway, Director of BBC and the British Council; and Eamonn Staunton, BBC Director and First Secretary of the British Embassy for Trade and Investment.

Gov't seeks signed declaration from MILF head on ceasefire, terrorism, participation in talks

The government today said the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) should come up with an official statement, signed by MILF chairman Hashim Salamat himself, on the permanent cessation of hostilities, the renunciation of links with terrorism and terrorist groups, both local and foreign, and the active participation of the MILF leader in the peace talks so that the formal negotiations could start soon.

“We would wish that they come up with a written statement signed by Salamat himself. And I repeat not necessarily by their spokesman (Eid Kabalu), because they can always turn back on their word and then we will be left hanging,” Presidential Adviser on the Peace Process Eduardo Ermita said in a media briefing in Malacañang.

Ermita pointed to the flip-flopping announcements of the MILF on the participation of Salamat in the peace talks. Last week, Ermita said, Kabalu issued a statement to the media that Salamat was ready to hold talks with the government not as a “full-blown participant” but only during the opening of the resumption of the talks and during the signing of a final agreement.

Ermita added that he was surprised that he had been asked questions again this morning to comment on reports that Kabalu said that Salamat will not again participate.

“Now, it only shows that there is wisdom in the government position of getting information from the MILF leadership, from Salamat himself, and not through the statements of their spokesman,” he said.

At present, Ermita said the government is still evaluating the genuineness and sincerity of the MILF in their declared cessation of hostilities.

“And we are awaiting a (written) declaration of a permanent ceasefire or whatever they may call it... an indefinite ceasefire. Now, the negotiations proper will be somewhere after the declaration of cessation of hostilities are concerned,” he said.

As part of confidence-building measures, Ermita said the MILF could also initiate a petition for the lifting of the warrants of arrest on the MILF members implicated in terrorist activities, particularly the bombing of the Sasa Wharf in Davao City that killed scores of innocent civilians.

“Now even those persons who are supposed to be involved in the talks and even in the ceasefire mechanism, such as the coordinating committee for the cessation of hostilities and local monitoring team, we will ask the MILF leadership to submit the names, validate them, so these are the people that we can monitor whether they are the ones upon whom the suspension of the warrant of arrest will be done,” he said.

Ermita said he is hoping the MILF would be advised by their lawyers to initiate the action before the court in Davao City for the reinvestigation of the case “so that the judicial process could start for the court to consider whether the arrest warrants could be lifted or suspended.”

GRP, NDF hope to resume formal talks before end of July — Bello

Negotiators of the government and the Communist Party of the Philippines-New People’s Army-National Democratic Front (CPP-NPA-NDF) have a mutual understanding to formally resume the peace negotiations by the end of July, Silvestre H. Bello, chairman of the GRP panel for peace talks, said today

In a press briefing in Malacañang, Bello said that a meeting took place at The Hague, the Netherlands on June 26 to 29 between his panel and the leaders of the NDF that include Jose Maria Sison, Luis Jalandoni, Fidel Agcaoili and the widow of Antonio Zumel.

Bello said that after the meeting, there was a mutual understanding to meet again or to resume formally the talks by the end of July. “It’s just a mutual understanding,” Bello said.

Bello said that even before they could meet at the end of July there are some very contentious issues that both panels have to resolve.

“As a matter of fact there was a colatilla that even before we could meet we have to resolve some contentious issues,” Bello said.

Bello, however, refused to divulge all the conditions, saying that he was not at liberty to discuss it.

But he mentioned one important condition and that is the NDF must accept the new framework of the peace process as proposed by the GRP panel.

Bello explained that under the old peace process framework, both panels were supposed to discuss three substantive issues and as soon as they both agreed on these substantive issues they will have to enter into separate agreements.

“So under the old process we have four separate agreements covering the four substantive issues while under the new peace process framework there will be one final peace agreement,” Bello said.

“We are suggesting we would only have one agreement, one final peace agreement instead of four piecemeal agreements. Yun ang pagkaiba ng old process and the new process,” Bello said.

He added that during the meeting, the NDF leaders brought up some issues and one of them is the delisting of the NPA as a terrorist organization and the other one is the difficulties of Jose Maria Sison after he was listed as a terrorist.

But Bello believed that the delisting is not an obstacle to the resumption of the talks because from the very start there has always been a mutual commitment of both parties to sit down in the peace negotiating table.

Lorenzo calls for more int'l funding for agri research, development to avert world hunger

Agriculture Secretary Luis P. Lorenzo, Jr. has called on international donor agencies, like the United States Agency for International Development (USAID) and the World Bank, to increase their funding in agricultural research and development (R&D) in order to stave off massive hunger and poverty, especially in developing countries.

In his speech at the Ministerial Conference and Expo on Agriculture Science and Technology held recently in Sacramento, California, Lorenzo said that international funding for agriculture, including R&D, began to decline in 1981.

"I find this ironic because if we want to ensure food security in the next century, continuous sustained scientific activity must be supported. After all, it is the accumulation of knowledge that accounts for the timely advances in innovation sustaining increased agricultural productivity," Lorenzo said.

Lorenzo said that ensuring a food supply in a sustainable manner to feed what he described as "a galloping world population" is long overdue and, if further delayed, "could bring humanity to its last mile."

He said that there is an urgent need to leapfrog agricultural productivity, improve nutrition and quality of life, terminate hunger and alleviate poverty around the world.

Lorenzo said the world's population, which was six billion in 1999, could shoot to nine billion in 2050. "Worse, the greater increase in population will happen in developing countries where poverty and hunger are commonplace and agricultural productivity is low," he said.

"We all know that conventional crop improvement alone will not double food production in the next five decades," Lorenzo said.

He said that experts have agreed that the solution to this dilemma can only come from increased yields from the same land area on less water, noting that arable land per capita of 0.45 hectares in 1966 dwindled to 0.25 in 1998 and will only be 0.15 by 2050.

Lorenzo said that last year's statistics indicated that only one-third of developing countries saw a reduction in hunger incidence. He said that some even showed no improvements while others even experienced a reduction.

"To arrive at permanent solutions, science and technology must not hobble its wonders behind the walls of laboratories away from the reach of farmers and fisher folk," Lorenzo said.

He also told researchers and the academe not to rest on their laurels following the publication of their papers but actualize the marketability of their recommendations and proposed reforms.

“Every day great technological advances are prevented from being used by the supply chain and translated to the benefit of commerce from seed to shelf, we delay permanent solutions for mankind,” Lorenzo added.

He also expressed concern that developing countries cannot catch up with developed countries in scientific innovations as he noted that the widespread adoption of Green Revolution technologies has not been sustainable.

He cited the Philippine example where the adoption of certified and hybrid rice and hybrid corn seeds remains low at 25 percent, even if this has already increased by 50 percent in the last two years.

Lorenzo also noted that the application of fertilizers is unusually below recommended rates and that publicly-funded irrigation systems are suitable only for paddy rice and services only about one-fourth of the total area planted to rice.

Programs of providing inputs like subsidized credit, subsidized cost or free distribution of seeds and fertilizer to farming communities are not sustainable.

Statement of the President: NDF Talks

I appreciate the efforts of Speaker Joe de Venecia to go the extra mile for peace. I have no doubt that he has the best interest of our people in mind. Nevertheless, talks are still at the exploratory stage and will not affect the comprehensive countermeasures we are drawing up against the resurgent threat of the NDF-CPP-NPA. The direction and pace of these countermeasures will not relent until we see a definite shift in the political and armed agenda of the revolutionary left to overthrow our Constitutional democracy. We will use force against force, truth against deception.

Statement of the President: General Lastimoso

General Lastimoso will take a leave as LTO Chief by July 15 and assume his new post as Assistant Secretary shortly thereafter. There is no point in heaping all the blame on him for the ills of the agency. He did his best but he was apparently overwhelmed by the morass of problems. Undersecretary Bengzon shall do a systemic review of the agency and recommend the necessary measures to improve its effectiveness and integrity. We have to move on from here.

Statement of the President: Death Penalty

I shall make a decision on the possible re-imposition of the death penalty on the basis of moral principles and due process. There are many sides to this issue that must be listened to, plus the matter of ensuring that those who would be condemned to death are indeed notorious drug lords, and not the small-time drug pushers in the street. I am prepared to exercise utmost political will to beat this menace, in accord with a sound and just moral compass.

Statement of Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye

The President met with Mr. Cojuangco very briefly in Villamor Air Base between her arrival from Marawi and her speaking engagement with the Air Force the other day.

The President took up the vital issue of public interest involved in the stability of the administration coalition in the House of Representatives, which is important to the passage of key bills in her national agenda.

The President frequently meets with political and business leaders to hammer out matters of national interest.

She did not discuss any other matters of personal, partisan or commercial nature with Mr. Cojuangco.

Speculations of the President shaping political alliances, business deals or intervening in the internal affairs of the House are misplaced.

Prime Minister Howard of Australia to visit the Philippines from July 14-15

Australian Prime Minister John Howard will undertake an official visit to Manila from July 14-15 upon the invitation of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo.

Prime Minister Howard will arrive in the evening of July 13 and, following his official visit to Manila, will proceed to Japan and South Korea.

The Prime Minister will be accompanied by Mrs. Janette Howard.

The President and Prime Minister Howard are expected to discuss ways to enhance bilateral relations between the Philippines and Australia, particularly with respect to strengthening cooperation in combating international terrorism and transnational crimes.

The Philippines and Australia signed a Memorandum of Understanding on Cooperation to Combat International Terrorism on March 4, 2003 in Canberra.

The two leaders will also exchange views on pressing regional and international concerns.

While in Manila, Prime Minister Howard will also formally open the Australian Embassy in Manila at the RCBC Tower in Makati, City. He will also address the Asia Society.

Punitive action against terrorist groups in Mindanao to continue

The government will continue selective punitive actions against terrorists in Mindanao as well as the comprehensive measures against the resurgent threats of the New People's Army.

Presidential Adviser on the Peace Process Eduardo Ermita said that the government is continuing its efforts of back-channel negotiations with the National Democratic Front/Communist Party of the Philippines/New People's Army (NDF/CPP/NPA) that will lead to formal peace talks, hopefully at the end of this month.

At the Ugnayang Pambansa program of Channel 4, Social Welfare and Development Secretary Corazon Soliman also disclosed that out of the 80,000 displaced families staying in evacuation centers in the conflict areas, 31,000 have returned to their homes.

"More than 48,000 families have been helped by the DSWD and other concerned government agencies," she said.

Soliman said that some 5,000 houses so far have been repaired and constructed for the returning evacuees. One model unit was visited by the President the other day.

Secretary Ermita also said that for the GRP-MILF peace talks to progress, the leadership of the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) should consider what the Philippine government is asking for, a declaration of permanent ceasefire.

Ermita said the government has not declared a stop to the punitive actions against terrorists. "In fact selective punitive actions continue because we have not arrested those who bombed Siocon and Maigo in May this year," he said.

Ermita also confirmed the existence of a tactical alliance between the MILF and the NPA. Reports said the NPA allowed the entry of the MILF in their area, “a common border,” and gives guerilla warfare training to MILF youth.

He also cited reports that the NPA lends firearms to members of the MILF for diversionary attacks against government soldiers.

Tinga named new Supreme Court Justice

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo announced today the appointment of former Congressman Dante Tinga of Taguig-Pateros as the 15th member of the Supreme Court.

The President said that of the five top nominees for the Supreme Court position left vacant by the retirement of Associate Justice Vicente Mendoza on April 5, only Tinga got the unanimous vote of the Judicial and Bar Council.

Tinga is currently the dean of the College of Law at the Polytechnic University of the Philippines.

The other top nominees for the position were Court of Appeals Justice Ruben Reyes, Sandiganbayan Associate Justice Gregory Ong, University of the Philippines Law Dean Raul Pangalangan and Court Administrator Presbitero Velasco.

Tinga is the seventh member of the High Court appointed by President Macapagal-Arroyo. The six others are Justices Adolfo Azcuna, Romeo Callejo, Antonio Carpio, Renato Corona, Alicia Austria-Martinez and Conchita Carpio-Morales.

Headed by Supreme Court Chief Justice Hilario Davide Jr., the Judicial and Bar Council screens aspirants and recommends nominees to the country’s highest court.

Young Filipino leaders pledge to become catalysts for moral recovery, nation-building

ANTIPOLO CITY — Around 80 young leaders of a coalition of religious groups today committed to become catalysts for national moral recovery and nation-building to help attain President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo’s vision of a strong Republic.

At the last day of their two-day leadership training at the Paenaan Camping Farm in Barangay Paenaan here, the young leaders expressed their commitment to help the President transform the nation by being a model of integrity to set a good example to others, serve the poor, live a simple lifestyle, fight social injustice, corruption and patronage politics.

“We also commit to help the government in the development and betterment of this nation and restore the dignity of every Filipino,” the young leaders said during their oath-taking.

In their action planning session witnessed by the President, the young leaders said a strong Republic is anchored on good governance run by righteous officials and leaders.

They said the problems the country is encountering, among them drug abuse and graft and corruption, can be remedied if it has enough God-fearing and righteous people.

“The heart of the problem lies in the heart,” the leaders said.

The group later gathered together, held each other’s hands, and prayed over for the President’s protection from “intrigues, bad advice, and courage to stand up for her conviction for righteousness to rule in this nation.”

The training, whose theme was “Rediscovering the Best in the Filipino Youth Leader,” was convened by the Samahang Itinatag ng mga Kabataang Lingkod na Aangat sa Bayan (SIKLAB), a coalition of major evangelical Christian groups.

Among its members are the Youth for Christ, Youth on Fire, Alliance Youth of the Philippines, Campus Crusade for Christ, Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship, El Shaddai Youth, and the Kristiyanong Kabataan Para sa Bayan Movement.

The group has conducted trainings since October last year to some 70,000 young leaders nationwide, including Sangguniang Kabataan (SK) members, on the topics of moral transformation and good governance.

The President, who arrived with Press Secretary Milton Alingod around 2:00 p.m., was welcomed by Rizal Governor Rebecca Ynarez, Mayor Angelito Gatlabayan, National Youth Commission (NYC) Executive Director Raul Dominic Badilla, NYC Commissioner Mark Castrodes, and SIKLAB convenor Emmanuel Calingo.

GMA orders probe on porno VCDs in QC police station chief’s office

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today showed how tough and uncompromising she could be when it comes to instilling conscientiousness and morality in public service.

The President ordered a thorough investigation on how pirated pornographic video compact discs (VCD) found their way into the office of Senior Superintendent Rosendo Franco, chief of the Central Police District’s Station 7 in Cubao, Quezon City.

In a surprise visit to the police station, the President blew her top when she found the lewd VCDs in the station chief’s office.

The discs were near the desktop computer of Franco, who was on leave and out of the country.

She said the low moral foundation of police officers would reflect on his men when they perform their duties.

This was not the only time the President caught government officials and police officers remiss in their duties during unscheduled visits.

Less than a month ago, the President gave Land Transportation Office (LTO) chief Roberto Lastimoso a severe tongue-lashing after she discovered irregularities at the LTO in a surprise visit to one of its offices.

The President has often warned officials to observe moral uprightness and dedicated civil service every time she stresses good governance.

Lorenzo calls for the setting up of RP-U.S. endowment fund for agriculture development

Agriculture Secretary Luis P. Lorenzo has proposed the setting up of an RP-US Endowment Fund to address the lack of the needed technology that would help improve agricultural productivity in the Philippines and thus alleviate poverty in the countryside.

In his speech at the Ministerial Conference and Expo on Agricultural Science and Technology held recently in Sacramento, California, Lorenzo said that the endowment fund can be established from grants under Section 416 of Public Law 480 of the United States.

He said that to spare it from the usual bureaucratic red tape, the fund can be managed as a separate facility by an independent body composed of representatives from the two governments.

According to Lorenzo, the US and other developed countries should provide the technologies needed for food production by developing countries, like the Philippines, since these countries are the most vulnerable to massive hunger and poverty because of the continuing rise in their population.

"I see the development of new technologies contributing to sustainable agriculture, the security of food and feed, and most importantly, the alleviation of poverty in the world," Lorenzo said.

In his speech, Lorenzo also called on international donor agencies, like the United States Agency for International Development (USAID) and the World Bank, to increase their funding in agricultural research and development (R&D) to developing countries.

Lorenzo said that international funding for agriculture, including R&D, began to decline in 1981.

"I find this ironic because if we want to ensure food security in the next century, continuous sustained scientific activity must be supported. After all, it is the accumulation of knowledge that accounts for the timely advances in innovation sustaining increased agricultural productivity," Lorenzo said.

Lorenzo said that last year’s statistics indicated that only one-third of developing countries saw a reduction in hunger incidence. He said that some even showed no improvements while others even experienced a more severe food scarcity.

Construction generates employment for the poor, strengthens domestic economy — Neri

The growth in the construction subsector as reflected in the recent first quarter economic performance has translated to more jobs for unskilled workers which comprise majority of the poor, according to Socioeconomic Planning Secretary Romulo Neri.

Neri said efforts of the Macapagal-Arroyo administration to jumpstart housing construction seems to have paid off. The recent April Labor Force Survey Results showed that employment in the construction subsector posted the biggest increase, growing 4.9 percent in the month of April 2003, or the highest since October 2001.

“Construction contributed eighty-one thousand jobs in April alone, more than five times what it added in the same period in 2002,” Neri said.

Neri said that housing construction has a high multiplier effect on the economy, about 16.6 times, meaning that every P10 billion worth of housing units will contribute a total of P166 billion of economic activity for the country.

He noted that poverty incidence seems to subside during high construction activities in a certain place. “This is because construction is labor intensive and tends to employ the less skilled of our labor force,” Neri said.

He said that the government aims not only to make housing more affordable to all Filipinos but also to generate employment for the less skilled workers.

With the marked improvement in jobs generated by the construction subsector, industry was able to employ more people than lose them for the first time since April last year, Neri said.

Neri also noted that despite the impact of the severe acute respiratory syndrome (SARS) and the recent US-Iraq war, employment in domestic tourism-related industries such as hotels, restaurants and transportation rose in April.

This was seen in the growth of employment in the transportation, communication and storage subsector by 8.7 percent in the month of April 2003 which employed roughly 2.29 million workers compared to 2.1 million workers in the same month last year.

Employment in the community, social and personal services subsector, which includes recreation, cultural and sporting activities, grew by 2.7 percent in the month of April and employed 901,000 workers compared to 877,000 in April 2002.

Lastimoso’s relief as LTO Chief routine and proper — Palace

Press Secretary Milton Alingod today took exception to reports and speculations that Land Transportation Office Chief Roberto Lastimoso was relieved from the LTO post without being officially informed before hand.

Alingod confirmed that Undersecretary Enrique D. Perez of the Presidential Search Committee was able to talk to Lastimoso over the phone late morning of Thursday, July 3, 2003, when the latter was informed that DOTC Undersecretary Agustin Bengzon has been designated by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo as Officer-In-Charge of the LTO, at the same time that Lastimoso had been appointed Assistant Secretary in the DOTC.

“Perez had been trying to contact Lastimoso since July 1, 2003 but the latter was either out of town or in meetings” Alingod said.

He also pointed out that the Office of the Executive Secretary transmitted the Bengzon and Lastimoso papers, by courier and fax, before the close of office hours on July 3, 2003. These were officially received by the LTO and DOTC early evening of the same date, he said.

Alingod emphasized that the process of replacement was routine and proper, and that there was never an intent to treat Lastimoso unceremoniously or put him in bad light.

“In fact, President Arroyo said General Lastimoso was trying to do his best but he was simply overwhelmed by the morass of problems in the LTO,” he added.

President’s radio address to the nation

Magandang umaga sa inyong lahat.

Sunod-sunod na naman ang ginagawang pag-atake ng mga NPA nitong mga nakaraang araw sa ilang bahagi ng ating kapuluan, na kung saan marami sa ating mga magigiting na sundalo at inosenteng sibilyan ang mga namatay at nasugatan. Patuloy pa rin sila sa paninira ng mga pampublikong pasilidad tulad ng pag-susunog ng mga bus dahil ang mga may-ari ng mga sasakyang ito ay ayaw mag-bayad o hindi nakakabayad sa kanila ng illegal na “revolutionary” tax.

Talagang sobra na ang pang-gugulo at paninirang ginagawa nila sa ating bayan at sa ating mga kababayan. At ang mga ito ay ginagawa nila habang tayo ay abala sa pag-resolba sa ilang mga problema sa ating bansa tulad ng problema sa Mindanao na kung saan isinasaayos natin ang kalagayan ng mga evacuees na nadamay sa ilang sagupaan sa pagitan ng mga kawal ng gobyerno at MILF.

Marahil inyong napapansin na may umiiral na katahimikan ngayon sa mindanao at ang mga evacuees ay nag-uuwian na. Kaya naman isanasa-ayos na natin ang lahat para sa isang tunay na usapang pang-kapayapaan sa pagitan ng gobyerno at MILF. Habang inaasaayos ang prosesong pang-kapayapaan, pinananatili natin ang marami sa ating mga kawal sa Mindanao para matiyak ang seguridad at katahimikan sa buong rehiyon.

Ang nakakalungkot, sinasamantala ng mga npa ang sitwasyong ito para makapaglunsad sila ng mga pag-atake laban sa pamahalaan at maging sa mga sibilyan. May posibilidad din na patuloy silang nakikipag-sabwatan sa mga MILF at iba pang mga grupo sa mga pang-gugulong ito. Napatunayan na natin noon pa ang alyansang ito sa pagitan ng NPA at MILF dahil sa mga dokumentong nakalap, at maaring patuloy pa rin ang sabwatang ito hanggang ngayon. Inatasan ko na ang ating government peace panel na isama sa kanilang pakikipag-usap sa MILF ang tungkol sa sabwatang ito sa pagitan nila at ng NPA at tigilan na ito, dahil lubhang makaka-apekto sa isinasagawang proseso para sa usapang pang-kapayapaan.

Inatasan ko na rin ang Cabinet Oversight Committee on Internal Security na determinahin ang “optimum deployment” ng ating mga sundalo at mga tauhang sibilyan para sa mas maayos at mabilis na pag-responde sa mga pag-babanta mula sa ibat-ibang grupo sa ibat-ibang panig ng kapuluan.

Haharapin natin ng buong tatag at may lubos na kahandaan ang panibagong bantang ito mula sa NDF-CPP-NPA. Inilunsad na natin ang isang Comprehensive Counteraction Plan na kung saan pag-sasabayin natin ang aksyong militar, pulitikal at legal sa pag-resolba sa problemang ito. Habang hinaharap natin ang NPA units, pag-iibayuhin natin ang mga aksyong legal laban sa mga namumuno sa National Democratic Front na nag-kukunwaring nakikipaglaban para sa demokrasya pero ang katotohanan ay nais lamang pabagsakin ang pamahalaan sa pamamagitan ng dahas.

Inatasan ko na ang mga kinaukulan na ihain na sa ating mga korte at maging sa mga international venue ang mga kaso laban sa mga pinuno ng NDF. Ito ay para mapigilan na ang mga pag-kilos ng mga pinunong ito, at para mahinto na ang pag-gamit ng kanilang pondo at mga mapanirang kagamitan.

Mula ng ikondena noong nakaraang taon ng Estados Unidos at European Union ang NDF-CPP-NPA bilang mga terorista, nahirapan na silang mangalap ng pondo kaya sila ay napilitang humanap ng mapagkukunan ng pang-gastos tulad ng pagtanim ng marijuana. Ilang marijuana plantations na rin sa ating bansa ang nahuling pinatatakbo ng NPA. Malamang na labis na ring nababahala ang grupong ito dahil sa ating mga mas pina-igting na laban kontra ilegal na droga at marijuana.

There is a strong link between terrorism and drug syndicates. The war against drugs is a war against terrorists, and vice versa.

Patuloy rin nating i-isolate sa pandaigdigang komunidad ang grupong ito para wala ng iba pang madamay sa kanilang masasamang gawain, at para wala na ring bansa na magbibigay sa kanila ng suporta. We shall isolate them from the international community by exposing them for what they are – terrorist masquerading as revolutionaries.

Inutos ko na rin ang pagre-rebisa o muling pag-aaral sa Joint Agreement on Security and Immunity Guarantees sa pagitan ng pamahalaan at NDF dahil napapabalitang ginagamit lamang na “cover” ng mga NDF consultants ang kasunduang ito para maisagawa nila ang ilang buktot na hangarin.

We are combining military action with political and legal action against this renewed threat. As we move against NPA units, we shall step up legal action against all personalities of the NDF ostensibly engaged in democratic struggle but clandestinely leading and abetting the overthrow of government by force and violence.

Inatasan ko na rin ang ating military at intelligence agencies na i-dokumento at ibunyag ang panlolokong ito ng NDF, CPP at NPA – ang kanilang terrorist activities at ang kanilang kaugnyan sa mga terrorist organizations.

We will combine all necessary measures to stop this threat and defeat it by the use of force, political action and long-term social reforms. Poverty is the spawning ground for terrorist recruits.

At kahit na pinaigting pa natin ang labanang ito kontra NDF-CPP-NPA, asahan natin na patuloy pa rin silang magsasagwa ng mga pataksil na pag-atake, lalo na sa mga pampublikong pasilidad tulad ng sa komunikasyon at transportasyon. Kaya nga inatasan ko na ang ating PNP at iba pang mga kaukulang ahensya na maging alerto at pag-ibayuhin ang pagmamanman at pag-babantay sa mga pasilidad na ito para mapigil agad ang anumang mga pag-babanta.

Gusto ko ring paalalahanan ang ating mga local na opsiyal tungkol sa mga permit to campaign na isa sa mga terrorist fund raising activities ng NPA. Alam natin na ang permit na ito may katumbas na halaga na kung hindi ninyo bibigyan ng kaukulang pansin ay maaring makakasama sa inyo. Matagal na nilang ginagawa ang buktot na gawaing ito. Panahon na para matigil ito para mag-karoon ng mga mas karapatdapat na mga local officials sa halip na yaong mga sinusuportahan ng mga NPA na mga walang karapatang mamuno sa inyong komunidad. Alliances with the NPA are alliances with terrorists.

Hinihiling ko na rin ang tulong ng mga baranggay at mga komunidad sa pagmamatyag na ito. Maraming mga bantang pag-atake ng mga NPA ang nabigo dahil sa pakikipag-tulungan ng mga taong-bayan. Muli nating patunayan na sa ating tunay na pagtutulungan nakasalalay ang katahimikan ng bayan.

Mga mahal kong kababayan, ang NDF-CPP-NPA ay isang palubog na organisasyon na kinondena na sa ibat-ibang bansa. Desperado na ang mga miyembro nito habang ang kanilang mga pinuno ay nagpapasasa sa ibang bansa. Nanatiling buhay ang organisasyon ito dahil na rin sa pakikipag-sabwatan sa ilang mga grupong may masasamang balak sa pambansang katatagan.

Ginawa na natin ang lahat ng alam natin na mapayapang pamamaraan pero nanatili silang nag-mamatigas. Patuloy pa rin nating isasagawa ito pero hindi ibig sabihin na patuloy nilang magagawa ang kanilang mga mapanirang gawain. Hahadlangan natin sila at kung kinakailangan gawin ang ibang pamamaraan para matigil sila ay gagawin natin.

Sa tulong ninyo ay maisasakatuparan natin ito.

Maraming salamat.

War vs drugs is war vs terrorism — GMA

The war against drugs is a war against terrorists and vice versa.

This, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo emphasized today as she divulged the strong link between terrorism and drug syndicates.

“We shall isolate this group from the international community by exposing them for what they are – terrorists masquerading as revolutionaries,” the President said in her weekly radio address this morning.

The President recounted how the National Democratic Front-Communist Party of the Philippines-New People’s Army (NDF-CPP-NPA) has been forced to plant marijuana ever since being declared by the United States and the European Union as terrorists.

Some of the marijuana plantations, according to her, are being run by the rebels, and the current government campaign against illegal drugs has been making life difficult for them.

The President said she has ordered the revision or further study of the Joint Agreement on Security and Immune Guarantees between the government and the NDF because of reports that NDF consultants are just using this as a cover for their illegal activities.

“We are combining military action with political and legal action against this renewed threat,” she said. “As we move against NPA units, we shall step up legal action against all personalities of the NDF ostensibly engaged in democratic struggle but clandestinely leading and abetting the overthrow of government by force and violence.”

She asked local government officials to help put a stop to the illegal permit to campaign fund-raising activities of the NPA, which the rebel group has been using to put favored candidates into office.

“Panahon na para matigil ito para magkaroon ng mga mas karapat-dapat na mga local officials sa halip na yaong sinusuportahan ng mga NPA na walang karapatang mamuno sa inyong komunidad (It’s high time that these activities are stopped so that we can put deserving officials instead of those supported by the NPA),” the President said.

“Alliances with the NPA are alliances with terrorists,” she stressed.

She then asked the help of the barangays and the communities at large to be vigilant in this regard.

“Maraming mga bantang pag-atake ng mga NPA ang nabigo dahil sa pakikipagtulungan ng mga taong-bayan. Muli nating patunayan na sa ating tunay na pagtutulongan nakasalalay ang katahimikan ng bayan. (Many planned NPA attacks were foiled because of the help of the citizenry. Let us prove once again that peace can be attained by helping one another),” the President said.

GMA thanks JDV for ‘going the extra mile’ in the search for peace with the communist rebels

CAMP RIEGO DE DIOS, Tanza, Cavite — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today expressed her appreciation for the efforts of Speaker Jose de Venecia, Jr., in “going the extra mile” to achieve peace in the country.

Speaking at the inauguration of an off-base housing project for soldiers here, the President said she has no doubt Speaker de Venecia has the best interest of the Filipino people in mind when he met with the leaders of the National Democratic Front (NDF) in the Hague, the Netherlands from June 26-29.

The President, however, said that talks with the NDF, the political front of the Communist Party of the Philippines/New People’s Army, are still at the exploratory stage and will not affect the comprehensive countermeasures the government is drawing up against the resurgent threats.

“These countermeasures will not relent until we see a definite shift in the political and armed agenda of the revolutionary left to overthrow a constitutional democracy,” the President said.

The President stressed that the government will “continue to use force against force, truth against deception.”

More than 1,000 soldiers and their families stand to benefit from the off-base housing project the President has just inaugurated.

The project, a joint venture of the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) and the Laguna Properties Holdings, Inc. (LPHI), is being developed at the 20-hectare portion of this sprawling camp.

A total of 1,300 quality and affordable housing units would be constructed and would be ready for occupancy by next year.

The President initially inaugurated four model units. She also led in the groundbreaking ceremony for the formal commencement of the construction of the rest of the housing units, infrastructure and other amenities inside the village.

Aside from the housing units, LPHI will also build a multi-purpose area with clubhouse and sports facilities, road network, and utilities for water, light and sewage, an area for public market and other commercial establishments, as well as a space for a church and school.

Housing units vary from single detached to duplex, and to town houses. Monthly amortization, through Pag-IBIG housing loans, ranges from as low as P2,344 to as high as P6,143.

GMA groundbreaks off-base housing project for soldiers in Tanza, Cavite

CAMP RIEGO DE DIOS, Tanza, Cavite — To prove that the government is sincere in its promise to improve the lot of the Filipino soldiers, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today led the groundbreaking of an off-base community housing project in this sprawling military camp.

The groundbreaking ceremony signals the formal construction of a total of 1,323 quality and affordable housing units within the 20-hectare Riego de Dios Village inside the camp.

The President also inspected the four model housing units.

In her brief remarks, the President lauded Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes and Armed Forces Chief of Staff, Gen. Narciso Abaya, for initiating the project that would benefit ordinary military personnel and their families.

“Dapat alagaan natin and mga kawal dahil sila ang nagtatanggol sa ating kapayapaan, at sa ating kasarinlan (We should take care of our soldiers because they defend our peace and independence),” President said.

The President said that she wants to ensure that all soldiers assigned in the field have a peace of mind while performing their duty to protect the interest of the country against communist rebels.

She said that through these off-base housing projects, even the private first class and first lieutenants in the Armed Forces can now avail the quality but affordable housing units at Riego de Dios Village.

The Riego de Dios housing project is the first joint venture of the AFP and real estate developer Laguna Properties Holdings, Inc. (LPHI), an Ayala Land subsidiary.

This is the first of four military camps initially picked for off-base housing development. The others are Camp Aquino in San Miguel, Tarlac; Camp Evangelista in Cagayan De Oro; and the AFP Officers Village in Taguig, Metro Manila.

General Abaya said that about 17,000 soldiers and their families would be the direct beneficiaries of these four off-base housing projects.

Aside from Reyes, other officials who attended the simple groundbreaking ceremony were Press Secretary Milton Alingod, Secretary Michael Defensor of the Housing and Urban Development Coordinating Council, Secretary Marita Jimenez of the Official Development Absorption Office, and local officials of Cavite led Rep. Gilbert Remulla.

Earlier, the President visited the Salawag Elementary School in Dasmariñas, also in Cavite, for the inauguration and turnover of a two-classroom school building donated by the Federation of Filipino-Chinese Chambers of Commerce and Industry, Inc. (FFCCCI).

Secretary Edilberto De Jesus of the Department of Education accompanied the President during the inspection of the school building at the Salawag Elementary School.

GMA orders expansion of jails, rehab centers for drug pushers, users

CLARK ECONOMIC ZONE, Angeles City – The burst of arrests and voluntary surrender of pushers and users of dangerous drugs prompted President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo last night to order the expansion of lockup and rehabilitation facilities all over the country.

The situation in the jails has become “very, very substandard” and the rehabilitation facilities are getting overcrowded, Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose Lina, Jr. informed the President during a command conference on illegal drugs here on Saturday night.

During a conference held at the Clark Development Corp. (CDC) building, the heads of the different agencies mobilized in the administration's intensified war against dangerous drugs gave the President a update on their accomplishments thus far, including the number of suspected pushers and users arrested and who voluntarily turned themselves in.

The President was likewise apprised on the problem areas in the ongoing campaign, one of which is the lack of space and facilities in jails and rehabilitation centers.

The President then directed Lina and the heads of the law-enforcement agencies to hasten the expansion of the jail facilities and the opening of rehabilitation centers nationwide to accommodate the growing number of drug pushers and users netted in the ant-drug campaign.

Because of the intensified crackdown against the drug syndicates and pushers, many of those involved in the trade are coming out and willing to undergo voluntary rehabilitation, the President learned.

The situation in the jails has become “very, very much substandard,” said Secretary Lina. “So the President has also directed us to tap into the P1-billion fund so we can expand our jail facilities and open the rehabilitation centers to as many of our citizens who would want to undergo rehabilitation,” he added.

Lina said they are now conducting an inventory of the jails and will prioritize those that are heavily congested to allocate the resources wisely.

He said the government would put up a rehabilitation center in a region where there is no such center.

“In an area where there is a rehabilitation center but there is not enough space, the government will augment that rehabilitation center and enhance it, whether it's national or local,” Lina said.

In an area where there is no rehabilitation center, Lina added, the national government would go into a joint venture operation with the private rehabilitation center.

Among those present during the command conference on illegal drugs, aside from Secretary Lina, were Executive Secretary Alberto Romulo, Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes, Philippine National Police (PNP) chief Director General Hermogenes Ebdane, Jr., Philippine Drug Enforcement Agency Director General Anselmo Avenido, PNP Anti-Drug Task Force commander Deputy Director General Edgar Aglipay, Local Government Undersecretary Agnes Devanadera, Justice Undersecretary Merceditas Gutierrez, Health Undersecretary Antonio Lopez, Customs Commissioner Antonio Bernardo, PNP Region 3 director Chief Supt. Vidal Querol, Pampanga police provincial director Sr. Supt. Rodolfo Mendoza, Angeles City Mayor Carmelo Lazatin, Nueva Ecija Governor Tomas Joson III, Clark Development Corporation president Emmanuel Angeles, Subic Bay Metropolitan Authority Chairman Felicito Payumo, and Press Secretary Milton Alingod.

Lina vows to unmask drug lords, protectors

CLARK ECONOMIC ZONE, Angeles City – Interior and Local Government Jose Lina, Jr. pledged last night to unmask soon the big-time drug lords and their protectors.

“It’s just a matter of time,” said Lina as he emerged from a command conference on illegal drugs presided over by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo at the Clark Development Corp. building here Saturday night.

He said the various agencies mobilized by the President in the anti-drug war have identified these drug lords and their protectors and are now in the process of collecting and collating evidence against them.

“In prosecuting a case, you need proof beyond reasonable doubt,” Lina added.

Lina said he is confident the systematic collection of evidence against the so-called big fish in the dangerous drugs trade and their protectors in government would soon produce the desired result.

He said there are 13 transnational syndicates and 175 local drug groups operating in the country and some of them have already been neutralized.

“The ones heading these drug groups, whether transnational or local, and their protectors, are already identified and evidence will be gathered to make sure that they are successfully prosecuted,” he said.

He said the President has instructed the Dangerous Drugs Board (DDB), the Philippine Drug Enforcement Agency (PDEA) and other law enforcement agencies to produce significant and strategic results within three months.

“The target is to produce strategic and significant results to the end that the people see and feel the impact of the campaign against illegal drugs in the various communities all over the country,” Lina said.

He said their targets in the three-month campaign include one-third of the transnational groups, one-third of the local drug groups, one-third of the drug pushers and traffickers, and one-third of the barangays affected.

He added there would be a colloquium of policemen, judges and prosecutors on the third week of July so that there would be a speedy and impartial disposition of drug-related cases.

“If the cases are not resolved in a fast manner, the campaign will also be affected as the citizens might think there is nothing happening,” he said.

He said the first seminar will be held in Manila to thresh out and remove the problem areas that block the speedy disposition of cases.

Lina also stressed that the cleansing of the ranks of law enforcement agencies has also produced results. He said several policemen have tested positive for drug use and some of them are already facing summary dismissal proceedings.

“Those who are directly involved in the violation of Republic Act 9165, or the Dangerous Drugs Act of 2002, are also facing criminal cases,” he said.

Philippine National Police Anti-Drug Task Force commander Deputy Director General Edgar Aglipay added that 93 PNP officers and men have been administratively charged in connection with illegal drugs cases and 18 are facing criminal charges. He said they are looking at one percent of the 114,000 population of the PNP as being involved in dangerous drugs.

“So tuloy-tuloy itong kampanyang ito at ang ating Pangulo ay talagang nakatutok dito (So this intensified campaign will be pursued and the President really wants to see accomplishments),” Lina said.

During the command conference, the President was given the latest update and informed of the problem areas in the ongoing campaign against illegal drugs.

Aside from Lina, among those present during the command conference were Executive Secretary Alberto Romulo, Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes, Philippine National Police (PNP) chief Director General Hermogenes Ebdane, Jr., Philippine Drug Enforcement Agency Director General Anselmo Avenido, PNP Anti-Drug Task Force commander Deputy Director General Edgar Aglipay, Local Government Undersecretary Agnes Devanadera, Justice Undersecretary Merceditas Gutierrez, Health Undersecretary Antonio Lopez, Customs Commissioner Antonio Bernardo, PNP Region 3 head Chief Supt. Vidal Querol, PNP provincial director Sr. Supt. Rodolfo Mendoza, Angeles City Mayor Carmelo Lazatin, Nueva Ecija Governor Tomas Joson III, Clark Development Corp. president Emmanuel Angeles, Subic Bay Metropolitan Authority Chairman Felicito Payumo, and Press Secretary Milton Alingod.

GMA, FG launch search for model Filipino sportsman-citizens in PBA

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo Sunday graced Game 3 of the Philippine Basketball Association (PBA) Finals between the Coca Cola Tigers and Talk and Text Phone Pals at the Araneta Coliseum.

The President arrived at about 5:40 p.m. while the Sta. Lucia Realtors and Barangay Ginebra were playing, 80-65 and around 9:45 to go in the game, for the PBA Mabuhay Cup.

The First Gentleman Jose Miguel Arroyo and First Daughter Luli Macapagal-Arroyo accompanied the President, who was met by PBA Commissioner Noli Eala and other PBA officials.

In an interview, First Gentleman "Mike" Arroyo said the First Family was there to launch the FG Foundation search for the basketball sportsman, in partnership with the PBA.

Arroyo said the search called for basketball players who would be a role model as a sportsman and as a citizen.

During the search, at least five PBA players would be accorded the title of sportsmen and model Filipinos.

Eala, on his part, welcomed the tie-up and stressed that this would help much in upgrading the quality of professional basketball, not only as a premier game in the country but as a venue for showing to the youth the better values of a good life.

Statement of the President: NPA-CPP-NDF

We will press on tactical countermeasures in tandem with the peace process. We will continue to move against NPA formations and protect the communities from NPA depredations, as we open the door to rebels who wish to return to the fold. The employment of force shall be balanced by the hand of reconciliation extended to those who renounce violence in the pursuit of political ends.

Statement of the President: Drug Rehabilitation

Rehabilitation is a vital component of the comprehensive anti-drug campaign. It is important to undertake a national strategy for drug rehabilitation based on the consolidation of expertise and resources of the national and local governments, working with private organizations and committed communities. This will start with an immediate inventory and expansion of the country's jails and drug rehabilitation centers to accommodate the growing number of drug users the government has apprehended in the anti-drug campaign. Timely intervention can stop drug use and curtail demand.

Statement of the President: Moscow Bombing

The Philippine government condemns the recent terrorist attacks in Moscow and in Pakistan. We know the pain of being victimized by terror and we stand firmly with all nations in the fight against terrorism. Our law enforcement agencies and our communities must be alert at all times to thwart terrorist incursions. Philippine embassies abroad are already advised to take precautionary measures.

Howard, GMA to discuss cooperation to combat terrorism, other bilateral issues

Australian Prime Minister John Howard said that today he will be discussing cooperation between the Philippines and Australia on how to combat terrorism and other bilateral issues affecting the two countries.

In a statement released by the Australian Embassy in Manila, Howard said that he is looking forward to meeting with President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo during his official visit to Manila July 14-15.

“A major focus of our discussion will be on practical cooperation to combat terrorism,” Howard said.

The Philippines and Australia signed a memorandum of understanding (MOU) on cooperation to combat international terrorism on March 4, 2003 in Canberra.

Howard said that while in Manila, he will also address the Asia Society and meet with Australian and Philippine business leaders.

From Manila, Howard will proceed to Seoul and Tokyo.

He said his visit to the Philippines, Japan and the Republic of Korea would also give him the opportunity to promote commercial links with each of these three countries.

Howard said the visit would also give him the chance to discuss with Australia’s key regional partners such major international and regional security issues such as North Korea, terrorism, and Iraq.

OPAPP says Salamat needed in GRP-MILF talks to ensure binding peace pact

Ensure a final and binding peace pact.

This is why government urges the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) to field chairman Hashim Salamat as head of its peace panel.

“MILF Chair Salamat’s active participation and presence in the peace negotiation is demanded by government to ensure that the final peace agreement be binding on the whole organization of the MILF,” said the Office of the Presidential Adviser on the Peace Process (OPAPP).

In a statement, it said this would follow the “example of the GRP-MNLF (Government of the Republic of the Philippines-Moro National Liberation Front) Peace Accord of 1996 which was directly handled by MNLF Chairman (Nur) Misuari.”

The OPAPP said “the government negotiating panel talking with the MILF is fully clothed with authority by (President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo) in entering into agreements.”

It added that the President “has given her policy guidance at the start of the negotiations under her administration.”

The President also “continues to personally assess and define the directions of the government panel as the peace process develops,” it stressed.

The OPAPP also clarified that the government understood the “difficulty and complication posed by the warrants of arrest against MILF leaders involved in the peace talks.”

It said the “Justice Department is attending to this concern.”

Earlier, Acting Presiding Judge Andrew Banayo of the 4th Municipal Circuit Trial Court of Maigo-Bacolod-Munai in Lanao del Norte issued a warrant of arrest on about 400 MILF officials and men headed by Salamat.

The cases included multiple frustrated murder, theft of large cattle, malicious mischief, serious illegal detention, multiple murder and brigandage.

The OPAPP stressed that the executive department could not impose on the Judiciary and the “courts have to determine the legal and reasonable action on a petition for the suspension of the application of the warrants of arrest.”

But the MILF would have to initiate this, it added.

GMA stresses 4-point policy on community rebels

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today ordered the Armed Forces of the Philippines to continue implementing her four-point policy to protect civilians from communist depredations and keep the door open to all communist rebels who wish to return to the fold of the law.

The President issued the instruction during the meeting of the Cabinet Oversight Committee on Internal Security (COCIS) right after she received from top military officials intelligence and operations update on the campaign against the Communist Party of the Philippines-New People’s Army-National Democratic Front (CPP-NPA-NDF).

Presidential Spokesman Ignacio R. Bunye said the President also instructed the Armed Forces officials to continue punitive action against NPA members who are involved in a series of attacks against civilian communities.

During the meeting, Bunye said the President reiterated her earlier four-point policy to:

- Optimize deployment of military and civilian resources;
- Initiate politico-legal-diplomatic moves to put an end to the reported tie-up of NPA and the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF);
- Document link between the so-called front organizations and the terrorist organizations; and
- Implement a comprehensive package of socio-economic program in so-called “influenced” barangays.

Bunye said the President wants the military to provide alternative socio-economic projects to those barangays that are influenced by the communist rebels.

Bunye admitted that although the possible resumption of the peace talks between the government and the CPP-NPA-NDF was not discussed during the meeting, the President reiterated her earlier position to accept members of the NPA who are willing to renounce violence.

Earlier, Secretary Silvestre Bello III, head of the government panel negotiating peace with the rebels, reported to the President that both the GRP and CPP-NDF-NPA agreed to resume negotiations before the end of this month.

Bunye said, however, that in the COCIS meeting this morning, the comments of Secretary Bello were not specifically discussed.

“But the President has a separate statement which indicates that she’s open to receiving into the fold of the law those who are willing to renounce violence,” Bunye said.

Bunye added that with regard to the alleged link of the NPA to drug syndicates, both Interior Secretary Jose D. Lina and PNP Chief Director General Hermogenes Ebdane, Jr. had confirmed that marijuana plantations have been found in NPA-controlled areas in Benguet province.

- GMA to bring distance learning program to Visayas
- USAID to put in $70M in grants for RP peace, development programs

Statement of the President: NPA

The government will move on two priority areas. First, we will conduct a political social and economic audit on the 500 or so NPA-influenced barangays identified by the intelligence community and determine a specific set of military or developmental countermeasures to extricate these poverty-stricken barangays from the grip of the dissidents. Second, we will identify and expose the growing number of front organizations of the CPP-NPA-NDF and cut their links from domestic and foreign funding sources. We will mount a full court press on the security and developmental components of this threat, even as we leave the door open to peace talks based on constitutional, democratic participation.

Statement of the President: Anti-Drug Operations

The intelligence community maintains a list of the most notorious drug lords and their coddlers. That list will be disclosed in due time as information is gathered on these personalities. I want the people to know the face of the enemy, who should not be allowed to move around freely under a cloak of legitimacy. Drug lords must be exposed for what they are, destroyers of our future. Our crusade must be relentless and all encompassing.

Statement of the President: MILF

We are open to the suspension of warrants by the court if this is necessary to move the peace talks forward. The MILF must not tarry on the procedural issues involved, especially so that it has several lawyers and legal advisers among its ranks. We continue to build confidence in the peace process and we are preparing for the opening of talks. We must avoid being bogged down by these matters.

Statement of the President: Ambush attempt on Mayor Arcillas

We condemn the series of assassination attempts on municipal executives, considering that this is already the 4th case within the span of weeks. The DILG Secretary has ordered the full investigation of this incident.

Gov't to implement more socio-economic projects in some 500 NPA-influenced barangays — Palace

Malacañang today said that through its various agencies, the government will step up the implementation of specific socio-economic projects in some 500 barangays in the country that are "influenced" by the communist New People's Army (NPA).

In an interview, Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said that this was one of the items taken up by the Cabinet Oversight Committee on Internal Security (COCIS) in its regular meeting Monday.

According to intelligence reports, out of the more than 40,000 barangays in the country, the NPA is relatively strong in some 500 barangays because of poverty.

“Ang ibig sabihin nito ay medyo malakas ang NPA sa mga barangay na ito (What this means is that the NPA seems to have a strong influence in these barangays),” Bunye said.

In a statement, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said that the government will conduct a political, social and economic audit on these 500 barangays and determine a specific set of military or developmental countermeasures to extricate them from the grip of the dissidents.

Bunye said that one the measures now being conducted by the government is distance learning where residents in a remote barangay could get their education even with the absence of regular classrooms or teachers.

Distance learning is being conducted by teacher-soldiers assigned to remote localities.

These soldier-teachers, now mostly assigned to relocation centers in Mindanao, are doing quite well and the government plans to expand this activity to other areas where dissident groups are active, Bunye said.

Gov’t ready to name drug lords, coddlers, says GMA

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said that the government is now ready to name the most notorious drug lords and their coddlers as part of the government’s stepped-up campaign against illegal drugs.

Speaking before the 27th general assembly and annual meeting of the Bishops-Businessmen’s Conference for Human Development at the NBC Tent in Fort Bonifacio Global City in Taguig, the President said that the intelligence community has a list of the most notorious drug lords and coddlers, and in due time, their names and necessary information would be exposed to the public.

“Drug lords must be exposed for what they are: destroyers of our future,” the President said.

The President said that the government crusade against personalities behind the proliferation of illegal substances in the country must be “relentless and encompassing.”

She explained that the rampant operation of illegal drug syndicates in the country is a major challenge to the country’s peace and order that needs a strong political will.

The main part of the President’s speech was devoted to the electoral reforms being undertaken by the Commission on Elections aimed at assuring clean and honest national and local elections in 2004.

She added that while the government is trying to achieve fundamental reforms in the electoral process and in seeking peace in Mindanao, there is also an immediate need for all sectors in society to work together to fight illegal drugs.

The President also lauded the bishops and businessmen for their sincere efforts and guidance in helping the government resolve the problems that the country is facing.

GMA cites Valenzuela City’s drive against unscrupulous grains traders

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today commended local officials of Valenzuela City for their aggressive drive against unscrupulous businessmen selling repacked National Food Authority (NFA) rice priced at commercial levels.

The President, together with Valenzuela City Mayor Jose Emmanuel Carlos, inspected a Valenzuela warehouse stocked with NFA rice due for repacking and overpriced marketing.

Also found inside the warehouse were machineries and equipment for milling and repacking.

She congratulated Carlos and barangay officials for having discovered the trading anomaly and having acted on the case immediately.

The President said the anomaly involved some 230,000 to 240,000 bags of NFA rice worth several millions of pesos.

The poor consumers would have been shortchanged by ill-motivated businessmen if not for the discovery, she said.

Meanwhile, Carlos said he had issued last July 1 an order for the immediate closure of the MGM Metro Grains Marketing warehouse owned and operated by Eleonor Rodriguez.

The warehouse is located at Pearl Island Industrial Compound, Phase II, in Punturin, Lawang Bato, Valenzuela City.

Mayor Carlos cited the failure of the business owners to get the needed business licenses and permits to operate the warehouse, among others.

GMA credits bishops-businessmen confab for poll computerization

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today called on the Church and civil society to assist the government in “monitoring the milestones and advancing the advocacies of a poll modernization program that business and church leaders have been pushing for some time now.

In a speech before the 27th General Assembly of the Bishops-Businessmen Conference in Makati City, the President told her audience: “I want to ask for your support in making the systems work.”

“After all, you worked long and hard for (the modernization of the electoral system), and I was only your instrument, as a faithful daughter of the Church, to make sure the facilities are made available,” she said.

“We want to see the elections of May 2004 as a time when we cross a bold new threshold in democracy by cleaning up the voting process,” she added.

The President recalled how leaders of the conference advocated for “High-tech na boto, ito ang susi ng pagbabago (High-tech votes, key to reforms).”

She said this inspired her to take a “giant leap of making available the financing needed to fully computerize the quick and accurate counting and tabulation of votes in the 2004 and subsequent elections” despite a multitude of threats to national security and stability.

The President added that she had assigned Science and Technology Secretary Estrella Alabastro to work closely with Commission on Elections (COMELEC) officials “to make sure that the specific system for counting votes is technically above board.”

She also ordered Alabastro to make sure that the system is “responsive to our needs and adherent to the high standards of integrity we want to preserve.”

The President reported that the COMELEC ably bid out the computerization process and the first batch of automated counting machines would arrive on August 5, 2003.

The COMELEC would be setting up a testing site for the machines and would be put through “a grueling set of tests to make sure that they are hardy and worthy,” she said.

“I look forward to that historic day in May next year when these automated counting machines will be first touched by Filipino hands. This will be one of our great legacies to suffrage,” she added.

GMA to bring distance learning program to Visayas

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo will launch the government’s Distance Learning Program when she visits depressed villages in Iloilo and Eastern Samar next week.

The President, during the Cabinet meeting today, said she had earlier launched the program, dubbed as the Strong Republic Grade School, in Iligan City last June 16 and in Agusan del Norte last June 17.

She lauded Priority and Official Development Assistance (ODA) Secretary Marita Magpili-Jimenez for spearheading the training of the “para-guro” or distance learning teachers that would start Wednesday (July 9).

Reporting on the status of the program, Secretary Jimenez said non-government groups have supported the program, donating some of the available 1,500 long distance learning equipment for grade schools.

Jimenez said requests for the distance learning program from other areas of the country such as cities and other urban areas, especially in the poorest sections of the area, have been received.

The President gave her go-signal to provide the program to the poor sectors of urban centers provided the Department of Education could fund them.

Some 500 Iligan City residents who could not avail themselves of formal education, will soon benefit from the program.

The project will extend the benefits of education to remote barangays bereft of classrooms and teachers, through television facilities.

The government has targeted some 3,000 barangays in Northern Mindanao, including 1,000 from the Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao.

All the targeted areas have been known to be sites where people do not even know how to read and write.

“Ignorance has been one of the weaknesses being taken advantage of by the rebels,” the President said, stressing that illiteracy breeds rebellion.

USAID to put in $70M in grants for RP peace, development programs

In line with President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo’s commitment to accelerate peace and prosperity particularly in Mindanao, the United States Agency for International Development (USAID) will provide $70 million in grants for development assistance activities in the country.

Wendy Chamberlain, USAID Assistant Administrator for Asia and the Near East, said today the agency would review its program in the country.

This included its support for expanding development programs for peace in Mindanao; improved governance of economic processes; delivery of family planning and health services; and stronger environmental management.

In a speech following her courtesy call on President Macapagal-Arroyo, Chamberlain said she hoped to get a better understanding of the challenging issues on peace and development in the Philippines.

Among the agency's priorities are fiscal reforms, particularly measures to continue to enhance revenue collection; continued progress with the privatization of the energy sector; implementation of an effective anti-money laundering regime to combat terrorist financing; and additional measures to encourage economic growth, including investments that create jobs.

"USAID will be pleased to provide assistance similar to what we have provided former MNLF combatants, to help the parties in this conflict to consolidate their peace process and chart a new future for the children of Mindanao," Chamberlain said.

She added that the Philippines had been doing a great job in undertaking the USAID programs in the past.

She rated the country highly especially in good governance, environment management and economic prosperity.

Ambassador Francis Ricciardone, who accompanied Chamberlain during the call, reiterated the United States role in underwriting peace in Mindanao and in pushing diplomatic support for the success of the peace process.

Statement of the President: Drug Syndicates

These groups will be the principal targets of law enforcement operations as we move forward. These will be reinforced by international cooperation so that we can work with other police agencies to close the dragnet. This is a transnational effort as much as it is a community effort domestically. We must exploit the full range of actions needed to neutralize these syndicates and either run them to the ground or bring them to certain justice.

Statement of the President: US Assistance

We welcome the developmental assistance of the United States relative to the peace process with the MILF. Our strategic partnership with the U.S. comes full circle from an alliance against terrorism to an alliance for peace. We are one in combating terrorism and poverty and in pursuing peace and development. This is part of the new perspective of political and economic security in the Asia-Pacific that has emerged in the post-Iraq war period.

Statement of the President: Rizal Day Bombing Trial

Let this trial stand as a grim reminder that terrorists will never escape the long hand of justice. The confession of Yunos Muklis outlines a threat that lives and moves with us from day to day and against which we must exercise unrelenting vigilance. The threat moves within the bowels of our urban centers and across transnational borders. It is ever present, and it may strike at anytime. We must be alert against it individually and collectively.

Statement of the President: UN Listing

The government has been working hard to attain the goals of human development based on the guidelines set by the United Nations. It has been an uphill road but we are not making any excuses. We are determined to accord every Filipino a life of dignity, productivity and security. Our foremost thrusts for human development today are peace in Mindanao under the aegis of the Constitution, and dealing with the drug problem comprehensively and with finality. These are being pursued against the backdrop of larger reforms in governance, the electoral system and in fundamental underpinnings of economic growth with equity. Every Filipino has a role to play in the total human development of our people. Our sense of national community must be strengthened to meet the challenges to peace, security and development.

GMA says Muklis confession highlights national will to attain peace, security

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said the trial of Yunos Muklis, who admitted primary involvement in the 2000 Rizal Day bombings, is a tribute to "our sense of national community to meet the challenge of security" and a reminder that terrorists will not go scot-free.

At the opening of the three-day Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR) Expo 2003 at the Philippine International Convention Center in Pasay City, the President said the confession of Muklis outlined a threat that “terrorism lives and moves with us from day to day and against which we must exercise unrelenting vigilance across transnational borders.”

“It is ever present or it may strike anytime. We must be alert against it individually and collectively,” she said.

But even as people should remain alert against terrorism, the President said, the government “also remains open to peace,” as she exhorted the help and support of the private corporations, foundations and official development partners in attaining national security and developments.

“Because as you lend financial support to the search for peace, the search becomes easier,” she said.

She also welcomed the $30-million development assistance of the United States relative to the peace process in Mindanao this year and another $20 million or more for next year once the final peace agreement is signed between the government and the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF).

“Our strategic partnership with the US comes full circle from an alliance against terrorism and alliance for peace. They are one in combating terrorism and poverty and in pursuing peace and development,” she said.

She added the strategic partnership is part of a new perspective of political and economic security in the Asia-Pacific that has emerged from the post-Iraq War period.

GMA seeks corporate world’s help in distance learning program

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today asked the country’s top corporate executives to support the Strong Republic Grade School system in some 500 insurgency-influenced barangays in the country.

“I ask the officials of the corporate development communities to help us mainstream distance learning in the 500 insurgency influenced barangays where teachers fear to tread,” the President said at the opening of the Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR) Expo 2003 at the Philippine International Convention Center in Pasay City

At least 100 organizations from the public and private sectors are taking part in the July 9 to 11 event, organized by the League of Corporate Foundations (LCF), focusing on educational assistance, environmental care, delivery of basic health and human services, livelihood generation, and entrepreneurial development to support poverty alleviation and national development.

The President said the Knowledge Channel Foundation has been helping the Strong Republic Grade School, wherein students are taught by television.

In areas where television cannot reach them, the students are taught through “technovans,” which house a television set and instructional materials in reading, writing and arithmetic, she said.

“I hope the corporate foundations can provide some of these facilities to access the TV channel or facilities to provide for the technovans,” she added.

The President also asked corporate donors to help reduce the school building gap, referring to the schools with a student-classroom ratio of 100:1.

She said the country needs at least 2,500 additional classrooms to close this gap.

“The Federation of Filipino-Chinese Chambers of Commerce is already helping us here. And I hope the other corporate foundations can also contribute to closing this gap,” she said.

The President also thanked the corporate sector for supporting the government’s poverty alleviation and human development program for marginalized communities in the country.

“Last year, I told you that the biggest concrete problem in our country is unemployment. And you responded by focusing over 60 percent of your programs on livelihood generation,” she said.

The President likewise lauded the LCF for its program line-up support for the government initiative to provide potable water for 100 waterless municipalities in the country under her administration’s Kapit Bisig Laban sa Kahirapan (KALAHATI) program.

This is the third year in a row that the President graced the occasion since 1999 when the first week of July was declared Corporate Social Responsibility Week under Presidential Proclamation 229.

The President also toured the various exhibit booths showcasing CSR best practices of the major sponsors such as the Ayala Group of Companies, Mirant, Petron, Shell, Philippine Daily Inquirer, Lopez Group of Companies, Philippine Long Distance Telephone Company and Splash Foundation.

GMA cites businessmen’s role in pushing good governance

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today cited the country’s top corporations for advocating and promoting good governance and public service.

“You in the corporate foundations are also the same corporations who have been fighting for good governance. And so I thank you for this staunch advocacy,” the President said at the opening of the three-day Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR) Expo 2003 at the Philippine International Convention Center in Pasay City.

She specified the Governance Advisory Council, whose members come from corporations, for working together with the Presidential Committee on Effective Governance to coordinate the efforts of government, business and civil society.

In response to the recommendation of the business community, the President said she also required all appointed directors in the corporate boards of government-owned and controlled corporations (GOCCs) and government financial institutions (GFIs) to take an orientation course on corporate governance.

Because of the business community’s support to the advocacy of modernizing elections, the President said she also made available the funds needed to fully computerize and accurately count and tabulate the people’s votes in 2004.

“These are contributions to good governance as well as contributions to the long-term maturity of our people,” she said.

The President, recalling a couple of surveys wherein the business community is willing to contribute in fighting corruption, said she hoped the top corporations and foundations could provide additional funds to support the Presidential Anti-Graft Commission (PAGC) “in the very expensive and tedious task of lifestyle checks.”

She said everything that contributed to a disciplined, law-abiding and upright society should be integrated into the universe of good governance, including the war against drug syndicates.

“These syndicates will be principal targets of law enforcement operations as we move forward,” she said.

GMA expresses ‘deepest thanks’ to Malaysia for its efforts in forging peace in Mindanao

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today expressed the “deepest gratitude” of the Philippine government to Malaysian Prime Minister Mahathir and the Malaysian government for their role as principal facilitator and mediator in the peace process with the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF).

In a press briefing in Malacañang, Foreign Affairs Secretary Blas Ople said that this expression of gratitude was conveyed during a luncheon meeting with Malaysian Deputy Prime Minister Dato Seri Abdullah Bin Ahmad Badawi and Foreign Minister Datuk Seri Syed Hamid bin Syed Jaafar Albar.

The two Malaysian officials had a four-hour stopover in Manila on their way to Japan and the Ukraine.

“Of course, we talked about the peace process with the MILF,” Ople said.

Ople said that Malaysia will be taking the lead in forming a peace monitoring team that will supervise the implementation of a ceasefire between the government and MILF once the peace talks are resumed.

He said that Malaysia is still completing the required “consultative process” within the Malaysian government before a formal notice is sent to the Philippine government.

Ople said that to be members of the monitoring team, he has suggested Brunei Darussalam, Bangladesh, Bahrain and Libya.

During the luncheon meeting, the President told the Malaysian officials that she felt that there is merit in the idea of suspending the effect of the arrest warrants issued against the top leaders of the MILF if it is needed to protect the national interest and the security of the country.

“But at the same time, of course, the court is beyond the reach of the executive branch under the Constitutional separation of powers, and all the government can do at this stage is to encourage and prompt the MILF leaders and their legal advisers to initiate these proceedings in court,” Ople told Malacañang reporters.

Ople disclosed that Deputy Prime Minister Badawi is expected to be the new Prime Minister of Malaysia by October this year, at the conclusion of the summit meeting of the Organization of Islamic Conference in Kuala Lumpur under the chairmanship of outgoing Prime Minister Mahathir.

Gov’t efforts geared towards uplifting lives of people, says Malacañang

As far as uplifting the lives of Filipinos are concerned, the government is working hard to address the situation.

This was the assurance given by Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye in reaction to criticisms that the administration of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has failed to uplift the lives of the Filipino based on the recent report of the United Nations Human Development Index.

“We know it’s a difficult battle. We are not making any excuses,” said Bunye during a press briefing in Malacañang today.

“But the President is doing her best to address the situation. The development efforts of the President are geared towards solving our principal problems.”

Bunye enumerated the principal problems as Mindanao, terrorism and drugs.

“We just have to work together to give our people the benefit of peace, order and security,” he said.

On the question of whether President Macapagal-Arroyo sought the help of the United States in the campaign against illegal drugs, Bunye said he was not sure if it was touched during the President's meeting with Ambassador Francis Ricciardone.

What he is sure about, he said, is that the country "has a standing arrangement with our neighbors and some of the major countries as far as sharing of intelligence on this matter is concerned."

"This is because the drug problem is a transnational concern that needs to be addressed by nations working very closely," he said.

During the same briefing, Bunye said the country has been very resilient at a time when the world market was not doing very well.

"We had some improvements in the domestic area and we somehow managed to grow. Actually we grew at a rate better than some of our neighbors," he said.

On the Fitch survey which gave low marks for the country's economy, Bunye said the rating did not consider the strides that the country has made in so far as containing the budget deficit is concerned.

"We're making significant strides. Our agricultural sector has improved a lot. We have managed to keep our inflation rate down. As a matter of fact, the inflation rate is at an all-time low," he said.

Statement of the President: Ceasefire Observers

The deployment of Malaysian truce observers will be the start of an effective, durable ceasefire process. This will also deter terrorist acts and enable rehabilitation and development programs to take a speedier, unhampered course in conflict-affected areas. I ask our military and police forces, local governments and all stakeholders in the peace process to lend their full support for the Malaysian ceasefire observer team. I would like to thank Malaysia for its sincere and valued assistance to the Mindanao peace process. The Presidential Adviser on the Peace Process, in coordination with the Armed Forces, shall determine the most effective deployment of the members of the ceasefire observer team in a manner that will build confidence in future peace talks and propel these forward to a successful conclusion. This comes closely in the heels of the commitment of the United States to put in a hefty share in the Mindanao peace and development process. We welcome these contributions as a boost to our quest for a just, comprehensive and lasting peace in Mindanao.

Statement of the President: ASG

Terrorists will be hunted down wherever they are and be brought to justice. We shall keep them on the run until they are all accounted for. We shall not give them any quarter or opportunity to rest or plan out their evil deeds. Our communities must be vigilant. Our people must be the eyes and ears to help us track down the leaders of the Abu Sayyaf.

Statement of the President: Anti-Drug Campaign

I commend the PDEA for its relentless campaign that led to the neutralization of another drug syndicate in the country. We are expecting more results in the coming weeks. We will not relent in defeating this plague on our society.

Statement of the President: Improving the Quality of Life

As I said, our foremost thrusts for human development today are peace in Mindanao under the Constitution and dealing with the drug problem comprehensively and with finality.

We are moving forward, slowly but surely, in both fronts. Malaysia has agreed to deploy a ceasefire observer team to help us deescalate violence to pave the way for speedier rehabilitation and development in conflict-affected areas. We are starting to account for the big time drug syndicates that are plaguing our communities. We shall overcome our most formidable challenges.

Every Filipino has a role to play in the total human development of our people. Our sense of national community must be strengthened to meet the challenges to peace, security and development.

GMA orders talks for Payatas land acquisition

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today ordered concerned officials to negotiate with owners of big parcels of land in Payatas, Quezon City for the acquisition and distribution to Payatas residents, many of them victims of a landslide that hit the area three years ago.

The President attended a morning Mass at the open basketball court of Phase 2, Lupang Pangako in Payatas celebrated by Fr. Robert Reyes, Fr. Aldrin Suan and parish priest Fr. Joel Bernardo in commemoration of the anniversary of the July 10, 2000 Payatas tragedy.

Accompanying the President were Social Welfare Secretary Corazon Soliman, National Anti-Poverty Commission (NAPC) Chairperson Ging Deles, Housing and Urban Development Coordinating Council Chairman Michael Defensor, Environment Secretary Elisea Gozun, Press Secretary Milton Alingod, and former Quezon City Congressman Dante Liban.

“Kami ho ay nagpunta rito para makiisa sa inyong mga kalungkutan. At kaya katulad nung nasabi ni Fr. Joel, itong lupa ay dapat gawing adhikain kaya ito ho ang ating ginagawa ngayon (We went here to condole with you, and as Fr. Joel said, land distribution here is a must and that is what we are working on),” the President told some 1,000 residents after the Mass.

Defensor said the Payatas area was earlier classified as an unclassified forest land. The government fought for its reclassification but lost in its bid to distribute the land when the court ruled that the area has a valid title as a private land.

He said the President has tasked them to start bargaining with the several owners who are quite willing to negotiate with the government.

“Kasi yung mga may-ari po naman puwede naman silang bayaran ng dahan-dahan ng gobyerno. Kami na po ang makikipag-negosasyon para ho maisaayos yung pagbili ng lupa (We will negotiate with the landowners for the trouble-free acquisition and distribution of the lands),” he said.

A report reaching the President showed the closure of the Payatas dump in 2004 under Republic Act 9003, or the Ecological Solid Waste Act.

One of its provisions stated that the city government is given another three years to convert the area from an open dump site into a controlled dump site.

Plans of the national and local governments for the Payatas dump include the utilization and conversion of the methane gas coming out from the trash to energy to light some portions in Lupang Pangako, hopefully before the end of October.

Others included the reduction by 35 meters of the height of the open dump site, establishment of a Materials Recovery Facility (MRF) for recyclables to reduce the volume of the 7,000 cubic meters of trash coming in daily from the city, identification of another landfill area in Montalban, and the treatment of leachates so as not to contaminate the Marikina River.

After the May 1 siege, three Payatas children sent their wishes to the President through the “bangkang papel.” Their wish list was granted as it was reported to the President that there are now 582 elementary and high school scholars under the PGMA Scholarship Program who were given P10,000 each under the President’s Social Fund.

Other livelihood program such as waste recycling, broom and bed making, and credit cooperatives were established in the Payatas area under the President’s Kapit Bisig Laban sa Kahirapan (KALAHI) program.

GMA receives 3 Huey choppers from U.S.

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today formally received from United States Ambassador Francis Ricciardoni three UH-1H Huey helicopters worth $2.760 million granted by the United States government to the Philippines under its Excess Defense Articles Program (EDA).

The turnover ceremony was held at the 250th Presidential Airlift Wing hangar at the Villamor Air Base in Pasay City after the three helicopters were flown in from Subic Bay yesterday.

The President, together with Defense Undersecretary Feliciano Gacis, Jr., turned over the choppers to the Armed Forces of the Philippines led by Chief of Staff General Narciso Abaya. The AFP chief was joined by Philippine Air Force (PAF) Chief Lt. Gen. Nestor Santillan and Col. Prospero Ocampo, wing commander of the 205th Tactical Helicopter Wing, the PAF unit that will utilize these Huey helicopters.

The newly delivered aircraft were the second batch of refurbished helicopters from a total of eight that the US government had granted to the Philippines three years ago. The first batch of five was delivered in January last year. These are now being utilized in various air operations in Mindanao.

The three helicopters would bring to 38 the total number of helicopters in the Philippine Air Force.

Last July 2, during the 56th anniversary of the PAF, the President had directed the PAF to acquire 20 additional helicopters to augment its existing inventory and strengthen its mission of safeguarding and shielding the nation.

She tasked the PAF modernization board to expedite the bidding for the 20 helicopters within one month.

The President also said that during her recent state visit to Washington, United States President W. George Bush included in their joint communique the provision of 30 additional helicopters for the Philippine Air Force.

GMA swears in Tinga, 4 CA Justices, 5 envoys

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo inducted into office today newly appointed Supreme Court Associate Justice Dante Tinga and four other Associate Justices of the Court of Appeals.

Also sworn in during the mass induction held at the Ceremonial Hall of Malacañang were five newly confirmed Ambassadors led by Antonio Cabangon Chua, the newly-elected officers and board members of the National Press Club and six other private organizations.

The event was highlighted by the turnover to the Department of Health (DOH) of a Certificate of Drug Donation by the Pharmaceutical and Healthcare Association of the Philippines (PHAP), the largest business association of pharmaceutical companies in the country.

PHAP's Drug Donation Program, through its PHAP Cares Foundation, has committed P100 million worth of medicines annually through the DOH for distribution, free of charge, to indigent patients in selected government hospitals.

Sworn in with Tinga were Court of Appeals Associate Justices Arsenio Magpale, Jose Mendoza, Arturo Brion and Jose Reyes, Jr.

Cabangon-Chua, the country's new Ambassador to Laos, was inducted along with newly-confirmed Philippine Ambassadors Laura Q. del Rosario, India with jurisdiction over Nepal and Bhutan; Antonio Rodriguez, Thailand and permanent representative to the United Nations Economic and Social Commission for Asia and Pacific; Ramoncito S. Marino, Lebanon with concurrent jurisdiction over Syria; and Amable Aguiluz V, Special envoy to the Gulf Cooperation Council.

Antonio Antonio of the Manila Bulletin led the inductees among the NPC members as newly elected president.

Also sworn in by the Chief Executive were officers of the CMC Foundation International, Inc; Order of the Knights of Rizal; Pan Pacific Club of the Philippines, Speech Communication Organization of the Philippines, Alay Lakad Foundation, Inc. and Philippine Colleges and Universities China Studies Association Inc.

Members of the Philippine delegation to the 2003 Special Olympics World Summer Games led by Luli Arroyo as honorary chairman of the Special Olympics Philippines were also present during the rites.

Palace condemns latest Koronabal blast but says it won't affect peace efforts in Mindanao

Malacañang today said that President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today “strongly condemned” the latest bombing incident in Koronadal City, South Cotabato but at the same time stressed that the incident would not affect the ongoing peace efforts in Mindanao.

In his regular press briefing in Malacañang this afternoon, Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said that the bombing incident at the public market in Koronadal City this afternoon has been brought to the attention of the President.

“The President strongly condemned this terroristic act. But we will try to go after the perpetrators of this incident. We will make sure that they are brought to justice,” Bunye said.

Bunye added, however, that despite the latest terrorist act, the government is keeping the doors open for “those who genuinely desire peace in Mindanao.”

He was referring to the separatist Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF), which is set to resume talks with the government under the auspices of the Malaysian government.

When asked whether the Koronadal bombing would affect the resumption of the talks with the MILF, Bunye said that the government has “already gone this far already” and the two sides have made significant headway.

“We should not throw some obstacles to the pursuit of genuine peace for those who earnestly want to have peace in Mindanao,” Bunye said.

Palace lauds military for blocking Abu Sayyaf threat

Malacañang today credited the military for downgrading the effectiveness of the terrorist Abu Sayyaf Group (ASG), reducing the strength of the notorious kidnap-for-ransom band to fewer numbers from a previous 800.

But Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said operations against the ASG would continue to be relentless, as ordered by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo.

Bunye factored in the difficulty of going after guerillas. He said the success by which the military has deterred the ASG from undertaking atrocities was “an improvement.”

He urged the citizenry to do their part in putting the ASG threat to an end.

“This is a concern of the military. But it should be the joint effort of all the citizenry,” he said.

He cited the importance of sharing intelligence information “to close in on these Abu Sayyaf bandits.”

Meanwhile, Bunye disclosed that a top man from the United States Department of Defense would soon visit the country to confer with government officials on the conduct of the next RP-US Balikatan training.

Chief Presidential Legal Counsel Avelino Cruz would head the government panel, he said.

Cruz was earlier ordered to go to the US for a Balikatan meeting. But after conferring with US ambassador Francis Ricciardone, it was suggested that the US would send its representative here, Bunye said.

Statement of the President: Koronabal Bombing

Terrorism could strike anywhere at anytime. It is for us to constantly keep up our guard and be responsible for one another's safety. All the perpetrators will be brought to justice. Nothing in the peace process will deter us from punishing terrorists and bringing them to justice. And this event will not deter us from preparations for the peace negotiations unless the MILF is proven to be involved. The important thing is to care for the wounded, assist the victims' families and strengthen the vigilance of the community—while we take the perpetrators into account. I share the grief of the leaders and the people of Koronadal over this incident. Muslims and Christians are victims of terrorism and both must have the solidarity to ensure the security of the whole community.

Statement of the President: Drug Campaign

The bungling of drug cases on purpose can happen at any level of the criminal justice system and we will move against law enforcers, prosecutors, judges who set drug offenders free in exchange for bribes, or jailers who free them for a fee. The PDEA must keep a watch list of crooked personalities and expose and proceed against them as the evidence warrants. Maintaining the integrity of the criminal justice system is just as important as teamwork and synergy among all its components. We need the total participation of the community and civil society in this effort to clean up the system.

Statement of the President: Sweatshops

We will not tolerate sweatshops and we will act very strongly against firms employing or abetting the use of illegal drugs to keep their workers awake and alert, to the prejudice of their health. We will treat such employers as drug pushers under the law. The PDEA must work with the DOLE to monitor these unsavory practices and stop them.

Statement of the President: Peace Talks

Every step and gesture towards peace is welcome. We will wage the peace as fervently as we fight terrorism and we are confident of success in both fronts with the help of well-meaning allies and the support of all Filipinos.

Statement of the President: Economic Survey

There is a general pessimism about growth throughout the region but our domestic surveys show a rise in optimism. We are doing our best to build the foundations of confidence in terms of security, social and economic reforms and law and order. It is an uphill road but we are making progress. Our government and our people are hard at work to make this country a better place to live in and do business in. We will move forward with patience, perseverance and cooperation.

GMA visits victims of Koronadal blast

KORONADAL, South Cotabato — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today gave P20,000 cash assistance each to the families of the three fatal victims of the latest bombing incident here as she also ordered the Department of Social Welfare and Development (DSWD) to hand out P10,000 each to the 25 injured victims now confined at the local hospitals.

The President arrived at the General Santos City airport around 10:00 o'clock this morning and directly motored to the public market here, the scene of a powerful blast at 2:30 p.m. Thursday.

She inspected the dry goods section that was directly hit by the blast that killed three and injured 25 others.

She then visited the wake of two of the victims in two funeral parlors here and the residence of Bai Masla, the 11-year-old Maguindanaoan girl killed in the blast, in Purok Kings in Gen. Paulino Santos.

She personally gave the P20,000 financial assistance to each of the three victims' families and ordered the DSWD to provide P10,000 each to the 25 injured victims.

The President then went to the Koronadal Sports Complex gymnasium and delivered a message during the 27th anniversary celebration of Koronadal.

She then went to the house of Governor Daisy Avance-Fuentes before motoring back this afternoon to General Santos City.

DOTC bares success in bus rationalization program

Don't be surprised if you find fewer buses plying city streets and traffic moving more smoothly.

That's because the Department of Transportation and Communication (DOTC), through its bus rationalization program, has finally weeded out dilapidated and illegally operating buses, resulting in improved traffic flow along the major thoroughfares of Metro Manila.

DOTC Undersecretary Arturo Valdez, in a press briefing held in Malacañang today, declared that the program, initiated on instructions of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo two years ago, is a complete success.

It is a product of a series of consultations and workshops conducted by the DOTC with all the stakeholders in the industry in March 2001.

From 10,000 buses operating on EDSA two years ago, Valdez revealed that there are now only 3,150 legitimate buses operating with franchise on their authorized routes.

This was attained by the DOTC in cooperation with the Land Transportation Franchising and Regulatory Board by enforcing the policies set forth in the Public Service Act.

"Due process was extended, including giving the operators adequate time to comply with the requirements," Valdez said. "Three extensions of deadlines were compassionately granted to non-complying operators."

Since the final deadline has expired, Valdez said the DOTC had mobilized enforcers to eradicate from the ranks of bus operators the "kabit operation," disallowed dropping and substitution to prevent circumvention of procedure and other forms of irregularities in the franchise issuance system.

As a result of the program, the DOTC claimed there has been an increase in the income of legitimate bus operators by 200 percent, an increase in MRT riders, improvement in traffic, and reduction of smoke belching buses.

There has also been, Valdez said, an effective management and control of public transport in line with the President's Strong Republic program.

Valdez said the success of the program has also emboldened the DOTC to replicate the scheme to cover jeepney operations in Metro Manila and in all major urban centers of the country.

GMA declares Aug. 22 special non-working day

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has declared August 22, 2003 as a special non-working day instead of August 21, 2003, which marks the 20th anniversary of the assassination of Senator Benigno "Ninoy" Aquino, Jr.

The President said August 22, a Friday, could be declared as a special (non-working) day instead of August 21, a Thursday, to enable the people to enjoy the benefits of a longer weekend.

Proclamation No. 420, however, stated that all activities to commemorate the death of Senator Aquino should be observed on August 21 to inculcate the values of self-sacrifice and patriotism that his life and death exemplified.

The proclamation also stated that on August 22, 2003:

— All heads of departments, offices, agencies, instrumentalities or government-owned or controlled corporations may, if required by the exigencies of public service, direct their employees to observe regular working hours and provide regular services to the public;

— Employees of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, Bureau of Customs and other government agencies/instrumentalities that impose deadlines on the transacting public for payment of taxes, fees or fines and for compliance with reportorial and other requirements shall be required by the head of the department, office, agency or instrumentality to observe regular working hours and provide regular services to the public; and — Employees of government departments, offices, agencies or instrumentalities providing police, security, fire protection, custodial, rescue, emergency, medical and other similar services shall be required by their respective heads to observe regular working hours and provide regular services to the public.

Gov't won't rest until those behind Koronadal blast are arrested and brought to justice — GMA

KORONADAL CITY, South Cotabato — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today assured the people of this city and all of Mindanao that the government will not rest until the perpetrators in Thursday's bombing are arrested and brought to justice.

In her remarks during the opening of the Tinalak Festival held at the Koronadal Sports Complex here, the President said the bombing in this city's market that killed three and wounded several others only showed that terrorism could strike anywhere at anytime.

The President also extended her condolences to the relatives of the victims and the people of this city. "I share the grief of the leaders and the people of Koronadal over this incident," she said.

Earlier, the President visited the wake of the two victims in two funeral parlors here and the residence of Bai Masla, the 11-year-old Maguindanaoan killed in the blast, in Purok Kings in Gen. Paulino Santos Street.

According to the President, nothing in the ongoing peace process with separatist Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) would prevent the government from punishing the terrorists and in bringing them to justice.

“And this event will not deter us from preparations for the peace negotiations unless the MILF is proven to be involved,” the President said.

The most important thing, the President said, is to care for the wounded, assist the victims’ families and strengthen the vigilance of the community while the government takes the perpetrators into account.

The President said Muslims and Christians are victims of terrorism “and both must have the solidarity to ensure the security of the whole community.”

Saying that the people should not be cowed by terrorism, the President then asked for more cooperation among the people of Mindanao in the war against terrorism.

De Villa calls on Koronadal officials, people to work closely with military

KORONADAL CITY, South Cotabato — Presidential Assistant on strategic Concerns Renato de Villa today urged everyone “to work harder and closer with each other” in dealing with terrorists.

In a briefing with President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo here, de Villa underscored the fact “that there are still terrorist groups operating in Mindanao” out to sow havoc in targeted population centers.

Because of the succession of bombings here in recent months, the city has become “a targeted area in so far as terrorism is concerned,” he said.

The President has ordered authorities to increase vigilance and the level of protection so that terrorist groups “would be effectively addressed and hopefully destroyed at the soonest possible time,” he added.

De Villa said stronger action against terrorism would involve better “intelligence to identification, capture and arrest and prosecution” of terrorists.

“And if they decide to engage our law enforcement forces, to include the military, then we must be able to demonstrate a clear superiority and destroy them in the field,” he said.

The Presidential Assistant said government would not abandon the effort of arriving at a general condition of peace in Mindanao through a peace process.

“But at the same time, we should not also lower our guards. We should not also let up on our manhunt for these terrorist groups,” he said.

De Villa was reacting to the latest bombing attack that killed three and wounded 25 others at the public market here Thursday.

Regional police officials earlier attributed the blast to persons suspected of extortion.

The officials said the perpetrators of Thursday’s bomb blast could be related to those involved in three earlier explosions in this city in the last several months.

Persons arrested for the first three bombings were linked to the separatist Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF), which was said to be raising funds for their group, the officials added.

U.S. paper cites RP's micro-finance program

The highly respected New York Times has cited the Philippine government's efforts in improving the lives of the people in Mindanao, particularly its micro-financing program that has already benefited thousands of women-borrowers.

In one of its editorials in its July 8, 2003 issue, the NYT focused on the story of Mrs. Melanie Pico who borrowed US$60.00 from the Mindanao Enterprise Development Foundation, a local micro-financing organization, to put up a small business of sewing recycled cement wrapping into market shopping bags.

The editorial said that because of the loan and Mrs. Pico's hard work, she brings in an average income of P3,000 a week.

The editorial further mentioned that remittances by overseas Filipino workers (OFWs) are fast becoming the source of funding for micro-finance projects.

For last year, it was estimated that the amount of money sent home by migrant workers—some US$ 80 billion—overshadowed for the first time the amount of total aid and credit (both private and public) extended to poor countries.

Because of this trend, the editorial said, international financial institutions, like the Asian Development Bank and the Inter-American Development Bank, see a natural fit between remittances and micro-financing.

The challenge for them now is to find ways to deliver on this promise, both by enabling micro-financing groups to help speed the transfer of funds to remote villages at a lower cost and by providing a pool of working capital for micro-financing, the editorial said.

Micro-financing, being the cornerstone in the government's fight against poverty, has greatly enhanced the economic rights of about 600,000 women in the country.

The growth in the micro-finance program reflected the people's acceptance of the President's commitment to implement activities that would spur national social growth and economic development.

As of January 31, 2003, the People's Credit Finance Corporation, through its micro-finance institutions, had served 79 provinces, 113 out of 114 cities and 1,083 out of 1,496 towns, or 72 percent.

The President has earlier directed the National Anti-Poverty Commission (NAPC) to give priority to remote areas in their innovative micro-finance scheme called "credit plus five."

The “credit plus five” refers to credit plus training, product development, market access, new technologies and social insurance.

The President has also instructed the NAPC to set up a mechanism to serve remote and conflict areas in Mindanao, and the basic sectors such as the elderly, disaster victims, and the disabled.

She has also ordered the continued rationalization of credit programs in geographic coverage and client targeting to help sustain micro-financing institutions and clients.

The President said the NAPC must continue to be the champion for micro-enterprise development and open access to markets for the poor as the Department of Trade and Industry will focus on the small and medium enterprise program of the government.

President’s radio address to the nation

Magandang umaga sa inyong lahat.

Simula sa Martes, ika-15 ng Hulyo, ay sisimulan ko at ng mga miyembro ng aking Gabinete ang pagbisita sa ilang bayang mahihirap sa Kabisayaan. Ito ay para personal na mabigyan kaagad ng kaukulang aksyon ang kanilang mga problema, maging ito man ay tungkol sa edukasyon, agrikultura, kalakalan, industriya, transportasyon at komunikasyon, enerhiya at patubig, turismo at kapayapaan at kaayusan.

It is the duty of the President to personally see the extent and results of government’s security and development initiatives, especially in poverty-stricken areas. A President cannot be satisfied with merely reading reports from the field. A President must make personal, on-the-spot assessments of the most vital problems facing our people.

Ito ang dahilan kung bakit pumupunta ako sa probinisya. Kamakailan lamang ay namalagi ako ng walong araw sa Mindanao para personal na pamunuan ang pamamalakad ng ibat-ibang peace and development programs natin doon.

It has been regretful that there has been another terrorist attack in Koronadal City. I was there yesterday to condole with the relatives of the victims and to ensure the people of the continuing support and determination to bring the bombers to justice.

Kasabay ng darating kong paglilibot sa Kabisayaan ay paglulunsad at pagpapalakas ng mga ibat-ibang programang pangkaunlaran ng ating pamahalaan tulad ng KALAHI, education by television, livelihood program, agrarian reform communities, copra marketing, elektripikasyon at patubig, micro-financing. Magkakaloob din tayo ng coco levy checks, patents at certificates of ancestral domain titles sa ibat-ibang benepisyaryo. Kung inyong natatandaan ay nasimulan na natin ang pagkakaloob ng halaga mula sa coco levy fund sa iilang benepisyaryo at ang mga magniniyog sa Visayas at Katimugang Luzon ay dapat lamang na maibilang dito. Ang pondo mula sa coco fund ay gagamitin din sa pagkakaloob ng seguro ng mga magniniyog.

The coco levy fund must benefit the coconut farmers. We will continue to take all feasible measures to ensure that this principle is fully implemented.

Isa rin sa aking prayoridad sa pagdalaw ng mga lugar na ito ay ang makita ang kalagayang pang-kapayapaan at pang-kaayusan ng ating mga mamamayan dito. May mga natanggap akong report mula sa aking Gabinete at ilang opisyal na maraming barangay sa mga lugar na ito ang naimpluwensyahan ng mga NPA. Gusto kong malaman kung ano talaga ang problema ng ating mga kababayan doon, kung bakit nahihikayat sila ng mga NPA ng mga grupong ito na nagkukunwaring nakikipaglaban para sa demokrasya pero ang tunay na hangad ay pabagsakin ang gobyerno sa pamamagitan ng dahas.

Alam na niyo marahil na sunod-sunod na naman ang ginagawang pag-atake ng mga NPA nitong mga nakaraang linggo sa ilang bahagi ng ating kapuluan, na kung saan marami sa ating mga magiging na sundalo at inosenteng sibilyan ang mga namatay at nasugatan. Patuloy pa rin sila sa paninira ng mga pampublikong pasilidad tulad ng mga bus dahil ang mga may-ari ng mga sasakyang ito ay ayaw mag-bayad o hindi nakakabayad sa kanila ng illegal na “revolutionary tax.”

Kaya bilang sagot sa mga pang-gugulong ito ng mga NPA ay ilunsad natin ang comprehensive counter measures na kung saan pagsasabayin natin ang aksyong militar, pulitikal at legal sa pagsugpo sa grupong ito.

We are combining all necessary measures to stop this threat and defeat it by the use of force, political action and long-term social reforms.

Kaya sa aking pag-ikot na ito sa Kabisayaan ay hihilingin ko ang suporta ng ating mga kababayan dito, lalo na ang mga local na opisyal tulad ng mga barangay captains para mabuwag na ang rebeldeng grupong ito. Aalalahanin natin na nalalapit na naman ang eleksyon na kung saan nanghihingi ng election permits ang mga rebeldeng ito at kung ikaw ay tatangi ay may mangyayaring masama sa iyo. Ngayon pa lang ay tiyakin na natin na hindi nila magagawa muli ang masamang gawaing ito ng sa gayon ay patuloy na kikilos ang proseso ng demokrasya at buong laya tayong makakaboto.

My administration has an integrated strategy for security and development in each province, wherever they may be – from infrastructure, to education, to economic growth, to poverty reduction, to law enforcement. We are mobilizing local governments, civil society and the business community to achieve our goals. We need the whole support and participation of the people.

Sa ating pagtutulungan lamang natin makakamit ang tunay na kapayapaan at kasaganaan.

Maraming salamat.

Stepped up anti-drug campaign paying off, PDEA tells GMA, parents of drug abuse victims

The Philippine Drug Enforcement Agency (PDEA) today reported that the intensified anti-drug campaign ordered by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo is paying off with the arrest of more suspected drug lords and traffickers and the seizure of prohibited drugs worth billions of pesos.

In a briefing in Malacañang for the President and parents of drug abuse victims, Assistant Secretary Rodolfo Caisip, PDEA deputy director general for operations, said that for the period from July 30, 2002 to June 18, 2003, law enforcement agencies conducted a total of 11,242 drug operations.

Caisip said that as a result of these operations, the government seized P4.6 billion worth of dangerous drugs, precursors, essential chemicals and clandestine laboratory equipment.

He said that during the period, government prosecutors also filed 10,550 cases in courts against 9,028 drug users, 6,740 pushers, nine cultivators and 28 drug financiers and importers.

Caisip said that after the President issued Executive Order No. 218 on June 18, 2003, law enforcement agencies led by the PDEA stepped up operations, resulting in the arrest of an additional 697 drug users and 975 pushers, mostly in Metro Manila and nearby provinces.

Under EO 218, the President created task forces to support the PDEA in pursuing “a forceful, intensive and unrelenting campaign against drug trafficking and the use of illegal drugs whether syndicated or street level.”

The President specifically ordered the PDEA and other law enforcement agencies to produce “strategic and significant” results during the first three months of the implementation of EO 218 “so that the people can perceive and feel that indeed the drug situation in the country has improved.”

Caisip said that from June 19, 2003 when the EO was first implemented, law enforcement agencies have seized a total of 4,582.26 grams of shabu, 878 marijuana plants, 1,492 marijuana seedlings, 4.79 kilos of dried marijuana leaves, 3,038 tablets of ecstasy, and 732.54 grams of cocaine.

After the intensified drug campaign was ordered by the President, Caisip said, four out of the 175 drug syndicates in the country have been neutralized, namely the Tubig Group operating in the National Capital Region, the Lingayen Group operating in Region 9, the Mendoza Group operating in Region 3, and the Uclos Group operating in Region 2.

He reported that during the one-year period ending on June 18, 2003, law enforcement agencies have neutralized 35 local drug syndicates and one transnational group, which was involved in trafficking of marijuana from the Philippines to Japan.

After the issuance of EO 218, two Chinese nationals and one each from Great Britain, Australia and Japan have been arrested for violation of Republic Act No. 915, also known as the Comprehensive Dangerous Drugs Act of 2002.

RP to be drug-free in 2010, DDB assures GMA, parents and relatives of drug abuse victims

As ordered by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, the government is determined to win its unwavering fight against drug abuse and trafficking and attain a drug-free Philippines in 2010, the Dangerous Drugs Board (DDB) said today.

In a report to the President and parents and relatives of drug abuse victims during a meeting this morning in Malacañang, DDB Executive Director Efren Fernandez said that there is now a “comprehensive, integrated, unified and balanced national drug abuse prevention and control strategy.”

“This scheme of action provides a definite long-range direction, continuity and synergy of efforts, as well as blueprint for a well-suited fighting machinery to ensure victory in the anti-drug war,” Fernandez said.

Fernandez said that with no less than the President in the frontline, he is optimistic that the government will “prevail and emerge victorious in our fight against the drug menace.”

During the briefing, Fernandez expounded on the demand reduction strategy of the DDB. The DDB was revitalized after the passage of Republic Act 9165, also known as Comprehensive Dangerous Drugs Act of 2002.

He said that the basic concept now being adopted by the government is to reduce to zero or at least minimize the profits from illicit drug activities through supply and demand reduction, a concept that has proven effective worldwide.

Earlier, the President ordered the DDB, the Philippine Drug Enforcement Agency (PDEA) and other law enforcement agencies to give top priority to treatment and rehabilitation program for drug users.

For this purpose, the President has earmarked a standby fund of P1 billion for the program, using the acronym PERA, which stands for prevention, enforcement, rehabilitation, and after-care.

During the series of command conferences on the anti-drug campaign held in Malacañang, Marawi City, and at Clark in Angeles City, the President gave standing instructions to put up rehabilitation centers at least one in every region, in cooperation with the local government units (LGUs) and various stakeholders in the localities concerned.

The President has also ordered the Department of Health to put up extensions in the provincial hospitals to serve as rehabilitation centers and equip them with drug testing capabilities.

On top of this, the President has also directed the Armed Forces of the Philippines to look into the possibility of using some AFP camps as possible sites for rehabilitation centers, such as Camp Upi in Isabela, Camp Aquino in Tarlac, Fort Magsaysay in Nueva Ecija, Camp Capinpin in Tanay, Rizal and Camp Nakar in Quezon.

Gov't to launch counter-measures vs NPA

In response to heightened terroristic acts of the New People's Army (NPA) lately, the government will launch comprehensive counter-measures combining military, political and legal action to stop the threat.

In her weekly radio message today, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo said she is determined to crush this threat with the use of force, political action and long-term social reforms.

"My administration has an integrated strategy for security and development in each province, wherever they may be – from infrastructure, to education, to law enforcement," she said.

"We are mobilizing local governments, civil society and the business community to achieve our goals. We need the whole support and participation of the people," the President said.

To this end, the President is embarking on another provincial sortie to several depressed areas in the Visayas next week to personally see the extent and results of the government's security and development initiatives especially in poverty-stricken areas.

Last month, she stayed in Mindanao for eight days to oversee the administration's peace and development programs.

"A President must make personal, on the spot assessments of the most vital problems affecting our people," she said.

In her Visayan sojourn, the President is scheduled to launch and strengthen various development programs like the Kapit-Bisig Laban sa Kahirapan (KALAHI), education by television, livelihood program, agrarian reform communities, copra marketing, electrification, irrigation, and micro-financing.

Aside from these, she also wants to see the peace and order situation in the area following reports that many barangays in the region are now being influenced by the NPA.

"Gusto kong malaman kung ano talaga ang problema ng ating mga kababayan doon. Kung bakit nahihikayat sila ng mga NPA, ng mga grupong ito na nagkukunwaring nakikipaglaban para sa demokrasya pero ang tunay na hangad ay pabagsakin ang gobyerno sa pamamagitan ng dahas (I want to find out what really is the problem of our people there, why they are being influenced by the NPA, by this group masquerading as fighters for democracy when in truth they have no other agenda but to topple the government by force)," the President said.

The President recounted that in the past few weeks, the NPA has stepped up its terroristic activities, killing and wounding innocent civilians and soldiers.

"Patuloy pa rin sila sa paninira ng mga pampublikong pasilidad tulad ng mga bus dahil ang may-ari ng mga sasakyang ito ay ayaw magbayad o hindi nakakabayad sa kanila ng illegal na revolutionary tax (They continue destroying public facilities like buses because the owners of these vehicles don't want or refuses to pay the illegal revolutionary taxes)," she said.

Statement of Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye

COCO LEVY FUNDS

The case has been pending in the courts for the last 17 years.

The defendants had not been denied due process. They had all the opportunity and the time to present their case during that period.

The Supreme Court, in an en banc decision 18 months ago, ruled that the coco levy funds are prima facie public funds.

PGMA has expressed the view that the funds are public. Incidentally, this view is shared by former Presidents Ramos and Aquino.

It is for the court to resolve other issues pending before it, e.g. ownership of San Miguel shares.

GMA bats for crime prevention foundation

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today batted for the creation of a foundation for crime prevention that would ensure safer streets and peaceful neighborhoods in the country.

The President said the foundation would handle the government's critical priorities in the next six months focusing on kidnap-for-ransom, illegal drugs, terrorism, street crimes and scalawags in uniform.

She said an executive director will be the overall head of the foundation which will act in oversight or advisory capacity to all the enforcement agencies of the government.

The President made the announcement during the PNP Command Conference on kidnap-for ransom, illegal drugs, terrorism and street crimes held at the Malacañang's State Dining Room.

She reiterated the need to focus on kidnap-for-ransom cases particularly on target hardening which is one of the critical moves of the police authorities.

"Let us focus on stage war on target hardening. We must focus on prime target rather than on strong target. Yan ang dapat na i-focus," the President said.

The Chief Executive ordered the Philippine National Police to create a task group to be called Operations Target Hardening Force. An action officer will be assigned to said task force.

She expressed the need for technical support from the United States and the United Kingdom on anti-money laundering particularly on tracing ransom payments and bringing recipients of ransom money to justice for unexplained wealth.

Philippine National Police Director General Hermogenes Ebdane, Jr. informed the President they have resorted to investigating cyber crimes thru cyber space and this will take effect sometime next month.

Ebdane said pro-active citizen action through organized groups such as the school-based Club 2920 and the opening of a 24-hour access to police service through PNP Text 2920 and text patrol 2910 and Patrol 117 will be established as the frontline measures to bring street crimes down to the minimum.

"Let us start advertising text 2920, text 2910 and patrol number 117 to the public," the President ordered Ebdane.

Donald Dee, head of the Employers Confederation of the Philippines, who was also present, informed the President that the business sector will sign a memorandum of agreement with workers organization all over the country to formulate and conduct seminars on kidnapping, illegal drugs and street crimes.

He said there is a need to strengthen police visibility in some problem areas to deter kidnapping and the spread of illegal drugs.

Stressing the need to go hand in hand or have tie-up with the business sector, the President said the government intends to fund the anti-drug campaign and seek logistic support from the private sector.

“We’re funding the drug campaign, the private sector who is most affected by kidnapping could give logistical support. Lalo na yung mga areas na ang kidnapping is a problem. Let us come up with a tie-up within the PCCI and the police force,” the President said.

See through prosecution, conviction of drug traders, GMA orders PDEA

SILANG, Cavite – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today ordered the Philippine Drug Enforcement Agency (PDEA) to intensify its illegal drug campaign not only through raiding of drug factories, but also by seeing through the prosecution and conviction of personalities involved in the shabu manufacturing trade.

The President issued the instruction during her surprise visit at the shabu factory raided by the combined elements of the Silang Municipal Police Station and PDEA agents at Brgy. Kabangaan here.

In her statement, the President explained that she wants to ensure that the case against arrested suspects in the drug manufacturing trade would not be bungled.

She said she does not want this particular case to be affected by the alleged bungling scandal in the level of the criminal justice system.

“We will move against law enforcers, prosecutors and judges who set drug offenders free in exchange for bribes,” the President said.

The Chief Executive ordered the PDEA to move against crooked law enforcers, prosecutors, and judges so that the criminal case filed against the culprits will be strengthened.

“The PDEA has been instructed to keep a watch list of crooked personalities and expose and proceed against them as the evidence warrants,” the President said.

During her quick visit here, the President congratulated Interior Secretary Jose Lina, PNP Chief Director General Hermogenes Ebdane, Jr., PDEA deputy director for operation Chief Supt. Rodolfo Caisip, PNP Region 4 Regional Director Chief Supt. Jaime Caringal, Cavite Police Director Sr. Supt. Roberto Rosales, the elements of Silang Municipal Police Station and Barangay Kabangaan chairman Marcelo Cortez for their successful operation leading to the arrest of the suspects and confiscation of the shabu chemicals and components used for the manufacturing of shabu.

The President told the media that the successful operation against the drug laboratory is a great example of an effective barangay information network.

She presented to the media the Chinese Nationals and their Filipino companions in the shabu factory. They were identified as Wen Li Cheng, 27; Wilson Li, 26; Daniel Co, 28; Michel Pandag, 20; and Leandro Go y Lim, 50.

The President's Day: July 13, 2003

13 JULY 2003

- Citizen participation key to anti-drug, crime campaigns
- GMA readies for forays into NPA target areas

Citizen participation key to anti-drug, crime campaigns

Citizen participation is an important factor in the campaign against illegal drugs and street crime.

This President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo emphasized as she called for intensified police work and vigilant community participation to contain the illicit drug trade and street crimes in the country.

During the PNP Command Conference in Malacañang on Saturday, the President said the prime target in the anti-drug campaign is the drug pusher in the University Belt.

The President noted that good intelligence work, police presence and community participation could tighten up the campaign against illegal drugs and street crimes.

She instructed Philippine National Police Director General Hermogenes Ebdane, Jr. to concentrate on enforcement functions rather than on educating the public on illegal drugs.

She reiterated that education and information dissemination on illegal drugs is one of the tasks of the local government units.

The President also stressed the need to institutionalize the Blue Guards (private security guards) in much the same way as the Barangay Tanods and to mobilize them against street crimes and drugs.

She said the creation of a neighborhood watch group is necessary for street crime prevention. However, she said they have to be under the supervision of a specific police officer.

"This neighborhood watch group should not only refer to Barangay Tanods but also the whole neighborhood association," she said.

GMA readies for forays into NPA target areas

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo takes a stab in the next couple of weeks into depressed areas in the Visayas and Luzon which are the likely targets of the New People's Army (NPA) terrorists seeking to expand their influence in the hinterlands.

"I want to know what the problems of the people are, why they are turning to the NPA, a group which claims to fight for democracy but really seeks to topple the government through violence," the President stressed during her weekly radio message aired this weekend.

Starting Tuesday (July 15), the President will make personal visits to the hinterland villages of Iloilo, Leyte and Eastern Samar to see for herself the extent and results of the government's security and development initiatives in poverty-stricken areas.

The following week, she will traverse the Southern Tagalog and Bicol to make similar assessments of the situation in these regions and, if necessary, take immediate action on certain issues concerning the people.

“A President cannot be satisfied with merely reading reports from the field,” the Chief Executive said. “A President must make personal, on-the-spot assessments of the most vital problems facing our people.”

In all these forays into the countryside, the President will mobilize the local government units, including the barangays, civil society and the business community to support the peace and development goals of the administration.

She will also launch and strengthen during these sorties the various anti-poverty offensives of the government under the Kapit-Bisig Laban sa Kahirapan, or Kalahi, program.

The President noted that the NPA has stepped up attacks in recent weeks, killing and maiming innocent civilians.

She also said the communists were continuing to target public facilities and businesses, attacking those whose owners refuse to pay “revolutionary tax.”

The President said she would launch “comprehensive countermeasures” in different sectors to fight an upsurge in communist rebel attacks in the countryside.

“The response to the violence of the NPA is our launch of comprehensive countermeasures where we will simultaneously use military, political and legal action to fight this group,” she said. “We are combining all necessary measures to stop this threat and defeat it by the use of force, political action and long term social reforms,” she added.

She also remarked that as the May, 2004 elections approach, the communists were preparing to go back to their old practice of demanding “election permits” from candidates who want to campaign in areas where they are active.

“If you refuse, something bad will happen to you,” the President said, calling on the public to show the communist rebels and terrorists that they could not thwart the democratic process.

Statement of Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye

This is a milestone for justice and due process that must not be tainted by undertones of petty partisan politics.

We must set aside self-interest and welcome the fact that the wheels of justice turn blindly and inexorably to make our democracy strong and our Republic endure.

This should not portend destructive factionalism.

It is an opportunity to unite behind the inherent excellence of our political institutions and our capacity to build a strong Philippine Republic.

Statement of the President Prime Minister Howard Visit

We have a strong partnership with Australia in defense and development. We benefit from training assistance for our Armed Forces and in terms of official development assistance predominantly targeted on Mindanao. We hold agreements to fight terrorism and transnational crime. All these benefits and agreements are important in our common fight against terrorism and poverty. We have also shared a common approach to the liberation of Iraq and the solution to the problem in the Korean peninsula. All these commonalities make our ties with Australia vital and urgent, in terms of the interests of our region and the world.

Statement of the President: Iraq Issue

The safety and security of more than a million Filipinos in the Middle East have been well served by our decision to support the liberation of Iraq. This has also cut the links between the former Iraqi regime and terrorist networks in our country. I have no regrets over my decision. It was the right things to do and I leave history to judge me on that.

Statement of the President: Ceasefire Talks

Third party monitoring is important for the success of a prospective ceasefire once the talks start. It will help build confidence and stabilize the situation on the ground, which is one of our primary objectives aside from the return of the evacuees to their homes and ensuring the success of the peace negotiation itself. We welcome Malaysia's role in facilitating the ceasefire process just as we welcome the role of the US in facilitating rehabilitation and development in conflict-affected areas. We are confident this tripartite approach will help seal the peace in Mindanao.

Statement of the President: Provincial Visit

This is part of good governance. My visit to the depressed areas in the Visayas and Southern Luzon will be an on-the-spot assessment of ongoing security and development initiatives. I am not satisfied with merely reading reviews, assessments or reports on the delivery of projects. I want to see how these are being carried out, I want to know the most pressing issues and problems in the minds of our people and whether or not we are effectively responding to these.

Statement of the President: Visa Rules on RP Sailors

We hope this thing could be ironed out the soonest time. Our seamen make up more than 20 percent of those employed by global commercial shipping. Their freedom to travel is important not only to themselves or their employers, but to our economy as well.

Statement of the President: Drug War

Drug courts are an important component of the overall campaign. We must beef up all components of the criminal justice system, from the police to the prosecution to the rehabilitation centers. This must be a comprehensive effort that targets the big fish, reduces supply and demand and strengthens the social fabric.

GMA credits community vigilance for successful raid on suspected shabu factory in Las Piñas

President Gloria Macapagal credited community vigilance through the Barangay Information Network last night for the successful raid and exposure of a suspected shabu laboratory at 277 Impex Compound, Pamplona 3, Las Piñas City.

The next step is to ensure that the case against the people behind the operation of the drugs factory is not bungled, the President said after she inspected the laboratory masquerading as an industrial warehouse. Found inside the warehouse, which was being rented by a certain Benito Sy, were boxes containing chemicals believed used in the manufacture of shabu, glass funnels and other laboratory equipment.

Stressing that the criminal justice system must prevail, the President said this case should not end with the raid itself.

Charges should be filed within 72 hours and the case should be pursued to its end with the prosecution and conviction of the people who own and run the factory, she added.

The President said that after the filing of the proper charges, she expects the factory to be re-inspected by the court and the materials and precursors – substances used in the manufacture of drugs – found therein subsequently destroyed.

Wearing a medical mask as protection from the chemicals stocked in the warehouse, the President conducted an on-the-spot check of the suspected shabu factory Sunday night shortly after the police swooped on the area.

“First of all, I would like to congratulate the team responsible for the discovery of another big shabu factory,” the President said. The raiders were composed of members of the Las Piñas Police Station 4 led by Sr. Superintendent Armando I. Pineda.

The President also praised the Barangay Information Network for gathering evidence and information that led to the successful raid.

She also instructed the Philippine Drug Enforcement Agency, led by Undersecretary Edgardo Avenido, to keep a watch list of crooked personalities and expose and proceed against them as the evidence warrants.

“We need the total participation of the community and civil society in this effort to clean up the system,” the President said.

Among those who accompanied the President during her inspection of the suspected shabu factory were Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose Lina, Jr., who is also chairman of the Dangerous Drugs Board; Philippine National Police (PNP) chief Director General Hermogenes Ebdane, Jr., PNP Anti-Drugs Task Force chief Deputy Director General Edgar Aglipay, CALABARZON police Director Jaime Caringal, and Cavite PNP chief Sr. Superintendent Roberto Rosales.

Australian Prime Minister gets red carpet welcome

Prime Minister John Howard of Australia received a red carpet welcome in Malacañang today at the start of his two-day official visit to the Philippines.

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo and First Gentleman Atty. Jose Miguel Arroyo welcomed the Prime Minister and First Lady Janette Howard at the Malacañang Gardens where full military honors, including a 19-gun salute, were accorded the visiting Australian leader.

The President and First Gentleman then walked with the Prime Minister and First Lady to Malacañang Palace, where the visiting leader signed the Guest Book before proceeding to the Music Room for a brief meeting with the Chief Executive.

After the meeting, the President accompanied the Prime Minister to the State Dining Room for their expanded bilateral talks.

During their bilateral meeting, the President and the Prime Minister agreed to further strengthen the bilateral ties between the Philippines and Australia, specifically their partnership in investment development and defense strategy.

Prime Minister Howard assured the President that Australia is willing to open up the Australian market to Philippine products, especially agricultural products from Mindanao.

The two leaders also agreed to help each other in the fight against terrorism and transnational crimes.

The President and Prime Minister Howard later held a joint press conference at the main lobby driveway of the Malacañang Palace where they announced to the media the fruitful discussions they had during their expanded bilateral meeting.

During the press conference, the President announced in her opening statement that the two-pronged approach of Australian assistance to the Philippines amplifies the integrated thrust of fighting poverty and fighting terrorism that has fused the relationship of the two countries.

GMA lauds Australia for assistance to RP in fight against poverty, terrorism

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today lauded the Australian government for its valuable assistance to the two major goals of her administration, in eradicating poverty and in wiping out local terrorism.

In her opening statement at a joint press conference held in Malacañang immediately following her bilateral talks with visiting Australian Prime Minister John Howard, the President said the two-pronged approach adopted by the Australian government in assisting the Philippines amplifies the integrated thrust of fighting both poverty and terrorism that has infused the two countries' relationship.

The President said that fighting poverty includes the strengthening of the two countries' economic relations.

"I am grateful to Prime Minister Howard for his very positive response to our proposals to further open up the Australian market for our products, especially the agricultural products coming from Mindanao," the President said.

On the collaboration in the fight against terrorism, the President thanked the Australian leader for its additional grant of Australian $5 million (about P175 million) worth of anti-terrorism and police assistance.

"We have a strong partnership with Australia in development and defense," the President said.

Since 1995, Australia has provided training for some 100 personnel from the Armed Forces of the Philippines, the President said.

According to the President, a lot of assistance to the Philippines, currently some 65 million Australian dollars and mostly in grants rather than loans, goes to Mindanao.

Before the joint press conference, the President and Prime Minister Howard witnessed the signing of a memorandum of understanding (MOU) between Australia and the Philippines on cooperation in combating transnational crimes.

Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose Lina, Jr., who is also the chairman of the National Police Commission, signed the MOU for the Philippines while the Australian Police Commissioner Michael Joseph Keely signed for Australia.

The President also said that in line with the administration's program of diversifying its sources of energy, the National Power Corporation has agreed to purchase coal from Australia with an assured quota of 975,000 metric tons for 2003 and 2004.

"This will revive a trade that has been dying down over the years between Australia and the Philippines," the President said.

The President said that all the cooperation in official development assistance, in economic and security matters, make the two countries' relationship vital and urgent "in terms of the interest of our region and the world."

GMA opens Strong Republic Transit System

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today launched the Strong Republic Transit System (SRTS), as she embarked on a program to color-name Metro Manila's rail lines to make people more aware of the railways integration.

The President performed a ceremonial walk from the Mass Rail Transit (MRT) 3 station along Taft Ave., Pasay City through interconnection facilities to the Taft Ave. station of the Light Rail Transit (LRT) 1.

From the LRT 1, she took a trip aboard one of the LRT 1 modern air-conditioned rail carriages from Taft Ave., to Monumento, Caloocan City.

During the trip, she received a briefing on the SRTS from Transportation and Communication Secretary Leandro Mendoza and Secretary for Priority Programs and Official Development Assistance (ODA) Projects Marita Jimenez.

She lauded officials for initiating the SRTS that would usher in a reliable, integrated mass transit system that would be on a par with international standards.

The SRTS, officials said, included the rehabilitation of old lines like the LRT 1 and that operated by the Philippine National Railways (PNR); the completion of the MRT 3 North Ave., Quezon City to Monumento run; and the construction of at least seven interconnection facilities, to include walkways with escalators and elevators, to physically integrate existing lines.

The links are those in Pasay City and Caloocan City (MRT 3 and LRT 1); Cubao, Quezon City (LRT 3 and LRT 2 or the Megatren); C.M. Recto, Manila (LRT 1 and LRT 2); Blumentritt, Manila (LRT 1 and PNR); Sta. Mesa, Manila (LRT 2 and PNR) and Magallanes Ave., Makati City (MRT 3 and PNR).

The rails have been renamed into colored lines: LRT 1 – Yellow Line; MRT 3 – Blue Line; LRT 2 – Purple Line; PNR Northrail – Green Line; and PNR Southrail – Green Line.

Earlier, the President ordered transport and other concerned officials to implement SRTS projects at the least cost but with appropriate quality.

She said these projects should be fast tracked within the next 12 months.

Meanwhile, Light Rail Transit Authority (LRTA) Administrator Teodoro Cruz Jr. reported that since the agency took over the maintenance of LRT 1 last May 16, it had generated savings of some P20 million.

Cruz said that from a monthly expense of P28 million for maintenance in the last three years, the LRTA has spent only P8.3 million from May 15 to June 15, 2003.

He said daily ridership has risen to 8.1 million in June from 7.6 million in May, this year.

He also reported decreases in power interruption, as the agency continued its alertness over saboteurs who police said were responsible for power glitches.

Cruz added that the line is running 61 rail vehicles, an increase from the 56 operating carriages before the LRTA takeover.

RP, Australia sign M.O.U. on cooperation in combating transnational crime

The Philippines and Australia today signed a Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) that would strengthen cooperation between the two countries in combating various transnational crimes and serious threats to the national security and interests of both states.

The MOU was signed this morning at Malacañang's State Dining Room by Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose D. Lina, Jr., who is also chairman of the National Police Commission, and Michael Joseph Keelty, Commissioner of the Australian Federal Police

Under the MOU, the two countries recognized the rapid globalization that paved the way for the increase in incidence and magnitude of transnational crimes, and the need to have concerted, synchronized, and focused efforts between their respective law enforcement agencies to address these problems.

The two countries, under the MOU, will cooperate in the prevention and investigation of transnational crimes that include terrorism, drug trafficking, money laundering, other financial and economic crimes, trafficking in persons, and human smuggling.

Other crimes covered by the MOU are fraud, counterfeiting of currency and negotiable instruments, piracy in the high seas, illegal trafficking in weapons, ammunition and explosives, illegal acquisition of cultural and historical treasures, violation of intellectual property rights, cyber crimes as well as other transitional crimes to be mutually determined by the authorities of the two countries.

The MOU also provides that there will be relevant cooperation between the two countries in law enforcement technology, equipment and personnel training, and other capacity-building measures.

The MOU, however, will not change the two countries' previous arrangements on formal mutual legal assistance under the treaty on Mutual Assistance in Criminal Matters of 1993 or the extradition treaty signed in 1990 by the Philippines and Australia.

Both countries agreed that the MOU will not prevent the two states from developing other mutually-acceptable forms of cooperation and will not affect cooperation involving other law enforcement agencies.

In implementing the MOU, the Philippine Center on Transnational Crime will serve as communication and liaison center for the Philippine government and the Australian Federal Police for the Australian government.

As contact points, they will coordinate, collaborate and facilitate the exchange of information between the two states and their respective national law enforcement institutions.

Disputes concerning the implementation or interpretation of this MOU will be resolved through diplomatic consultations between the two countries.

The MOU will remain in effect until either of the two states notifies the other country in writing, through diplomatic channels, of its intention to terminate the same and the notice of termination will become effective six months after the date thereof.

GMA turns over P300-M for resettlement project

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today turned over a P300-million check to the National Housing Authority (NHA) to spin off the resettlement of more than 70,000 families of informal settlers affected by the North and South Railways development projects.

The P300 million represents the first tranche of the P500-million loan committed by the Pag-IBIG Fund to the NHA.

The President visited Barangay Poblacion 2 in Malinta, Valenzuela City and turned over the check amid the cheers of members of the 2,500-strong Kapisanan ng mga Samahan sa Riles Valenzuela (KASARIVAL) and the 1,500-member Home Along Da Riles Valenzuela (HARV).

The President said she found out that the authorities have been negotiating with the owners of the relocation site since 1994.

Defensor added the President lowered the P500 monthly amortization to a mere P300 per month.

For his part, Pamintuan said they would come up with the master list of the qualified beneficiaries by next week for relocation to the 7.4-hectare resettlement area in Barangay Bignay, Valenzuela City.

During the affair, the representatives of 11 people's organizations thanked the President and pledged their support to the railways project by voluntarily relocating themselves to Barangay Bignay.

She likewise order a general alarm for the immediate recapture of the fugitives.

GMA urges stronger anti-drug drive nationwide

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said cases have been filed today against several suspects arrested during the recent drug raid in Silang, Cavite and Las Piñas.

"We must beef up all the components of the criminal justice system, from the police to the prosecution to the rehabilitation centers. This must be a comprehensive effort that targets the big fish, reduces supply and demand and strengthens the social fabric," the President said.

Based on leads gathered by police authorities, the suspects belonged to at least three of the 13 active and identified transnational drug syndicates operating in the country.

The President made the announcement when she and other top officials presented to the media several used equipment and bottles of liquid used in the making of metamphetamine hydrochloride, popularly known as shabu, recovered during a raid this afternoon in a subdivision in Parañaque City.

The President personally went to the rented house in New York St., Merville Park Subdivision after she was informed by authorities of the latest haul in the government's intensified crackdown on illegal drugs.

A certain Benito Sy rented the house in Merville October last year. Since then, the neighbors have been complaining of the foul odor emanating from the residence.

Sy is believed to be the same person who also rented the warehouse in Pamplona 3, Las Piñas that was raided Sunday night. The warehouse was found to be a shabu laboratory masquerading as an industrial warehouse.

As it turned out, the police today recovered several used bottles of the chemical Ethanol, one of the chemicals used in making shabu, and laboratory equipment.

Supt. Nelson Yabut of the Special Operations Task Force (SOTF) under the Anti-Illegal Drug Task Force headed by Chief Supt. Edgardo Aglipay, said that during the two raids, they did not find any ephedrine, the white substance that is the precursor of shabu. The big rotor and flask used in the laboratory were also missing.

He said this is the object of their massive follow up operations.

With the President were Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose Lina Jr., Mayor Joey Marquez, Philippine Drug Enforcement Agency (PDEA) Director General Anselmo Avenido, Anti-Drug Task Force Chief Supt. Edgardo Aglipay and other police officers.

The President, in a statement here, said the facility should directly be “under the responsibility” of Philippine National Police (PNP) Chief Director-General Hermogenes Ebdane, Jr.

She chided the camp for “gaining notoriety for its very porous detention centers.”

“It is becoming very hard to believe that these escapes of heinous criminals are the result of ordinary laxity,” she said.

She also directed DILG Secretary Jose Lina, Jr. “to make full use of the media to generate public support for the ongoing manhunt (of the escapees), with widest dissemination of rewards.”

“Kaya nga’t hindi niya titigilan hangga’t hindi talaga malaman ang puno’t dulo nitong pagkakapuga ng mga preso (Which is why the President would not stop at anything to get to the roots of the prison escape),” Bunye said in his regular media briefing.

Speaking in Ilonggo, she recalled how people depended on the Bishop during times of troubles and crises and how the Bishop responded by making himself the guiding light on the right road for many of his flock.

“Here is an Apostle of God who followed in His steps, serving the poorest of the poor. Let us emulate his example,” she said.

The Supreme Court decision in favor of the government in the case regarding the estimated $680 million of Marcos wealth held in escrow is a milestone in the people’s decades-long pursuit of justice.

The decision is likewise a welcome development for millions of landless farmers, since the law mandates that a big part of the ill-gotten funds should be used for land reform. The eventual release of the funds shall help in funding vital anti-poverty projects.

The high court ruling should also give added impetus to the landmark legislation now pending in Congress to allocate part of the funds for human rights victims under martial law.

GMA assures Iloilo folk of gov’t programs to address their needs in areas of peace and development

ALIMODIAN, Iloilo — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today told residents of this municipality that her administration is implementing several programs to address their needs, especially in the area of peace and development.

Speaking in fluent Ilonggo, the President said she visited the area to personally see to it that these programs are implemented and to find out what other things need to be done in Iloilo and in the rest of Panay Island.

The President saw to it that the P32-million Nichols Bridge in Alimodian is started, and that the development assistance provided to the proposed P10-million cable car or bi-cable tramline system to transport agricultural produce from the farms to the markets.

Statement of the President: Anti-Drug War

As we are now encountering discoveries of large stocks of shabu as a result of the cooperation of the public, I am ordering the PDEA to set aside a regular day of the week for the public burning of drugs, raw materials or precursors so that these cannot be recycled for the illicit market by unscrupulous law enforcers. I want a strict accounting of drugs confiscated and drugs destroyed, to the last gram. The accounting must be transparent and involve private groups as observers. Once charges are filed covering a drug stash, the latter must be immediately destroyed, save for the amount needed to be used as evidence in court. For every personality suspected to be involved in a drug case, I want his or her photo published and aired over the media, together with all names and aliases used, passport number, immigration record, places of residence, known cohorts, modus operandi and reward for capture. Let us put a face and identity to these people and get the public involved in hunting them down. I direct the PDEA to comply with these instructions, subject to any need to temporarily embargo information affecting ongoing operations.

Statement of the President: Marcos Wealth Decision

This is a high point for the prestige of the Supreme Court, which has proven itself to be a champion of impartial justice and social conscience. The value of this landmark decision lies not only in its positive repercussions on the socioeconomic life of our nation, but in affirming the high principles of democratic rule. It builds on the future of our nation by upholding the Filipino people's struggle for freedom and redemption.

Statement of the President: Al-Ghozi

We regret the negative repercussions of this incident and we shall get to the root of the matter. Even as the manhunt ensues, I am ordering today the creation of a fact-finding commission, whose members shall be persons of unquestionable integrity and probity, to determine the facts and circumstances surrounding the recent escape, and to come up with comprehensive recommendations. The commission shall submit to me the results of its inquiry within 30 days from its constitution, which we can expect to be done immediately. If there was collusion, this is the gravest act against our national security done so far by persons within the government. I urge Congress to include in the anti-terrorism bill, which is pending deliberations, a provision that would impose the harshest punishment possible to those found guilty of infidelity in the custody of terrorist suspects. Those found colluding with terrorists to enable the latter to escape detention must suffer severely from their aiding these enemies of humanity.

Statement of Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye

Re Senator Villar's Remarks

It's an air ball. It's way off the mark. In the first place, Senator Villar has his facts all mixed up. The Indonesian government never made any request for the custody of Al-Ghozi.

Furthermore, it would be illogical for the government to risk political fallouts just to accommodate the alleged request of a friendly government.

Re NBI

We understand that Secretary Simeon Datumanong is already seriously looking into this and he would be submitting his recommendation to the President shortly.

GMA brings development to remote Iloilo barangays

BARANGAY TABIAK, Igaras, Iloilo – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo motored to this NPA-influenced barangay for a least one hour and 20 minutes in rough roads from Iloilo City to “bring development” to this remote area.

Upon arrival in Igaras, the President first inaugurated symbolically small models of day-care centers located in Barangays Taytay and Sta. Barbara here in Igaras.

The President also announced the construction of a similar day-care center in Barangay Tabiak.

She also witnessed a demonstration of how to hold a distance learning class in a far-flung barangay under the Strong Republic School program of her administration.

“I want that in remote barangays with no classrooms or no teachers, that teacher is the television,” the President said in Ilongo, after turning over a key of a techno-van to Iloilo Governor Neil Tupaz.

The President herself turned the TV set on, signaling the launch of the Strong Republic School in this area.

The President said that today, July 16, is the first day of school in distance learning classes in Mindanao.

For a month, teachers were trained as para-teachers in the distance learning schools where special modules were developed.

Since the President launched the program the Strong Republic School in Iligan City last June 16, some 500 students here already enrolled.

The President said that in Barangay Tabiak the distance learning school will be opened after teachers are trained for one month.

GMA stresses two-pronged approach in solving insurgency problem

BARANGAY TABIAK, Igaras, Iloilo – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today stressed the government’s two-pronged approach in solving the country’s insurgency problem.

During a provincial Peace and Order Council (POC) meeting held at a classroom in Tabiak Elementary School here, the President said the government’s strategy in fighting the New People’s Army (NPA) has a left and a right hand.

“The right hand is through the arm of the law, and the left hand is the hand of peace and development,” the President said.

The POC meeting was attended by the local executives, top military and police officials and the members of the presidential party, which included Social Welfare and Development Secretary Corazon Juliano-Soliman, Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose Lina, Jr., Secretary Teresita Deles, lead convenor of the National Anti-Poverty Commission, and Press Secretary Milton Alingod.

The President said the Peace and Order Council should specifically address areas with peace and order problems, such as Barangay Tabiak that is reported to be an NPA-influenced area.

Where there is no peace and order problem, the President said the left hand is very well taken care of by the regional and provincial development council.

The President said that her visit to the towns of Alimodian and Sta. Barbara in Iloilo were “pure development” trips.

The President directed the local officials to be aware of the 24-hour Area Coordinating Center (ACC) that has been set up in the Capitol building in Iloilo City.

She said that the ACC should also monitor what the left and the right hands of the government are doing. The ACC should also monitor the insurgency and drug problems, she added.

But the President emphasized that Iloilo is a relatively peaceful province where there is no “jueteng,” illegal fishing, and has enough schools, and with a “very small insurgency problem.”

“In monitoring the insurgency, you will not only monitor the right hand; you’ve got to monitor also the left hand,” the President said.

After an executive session, the President and her party flew to Leyte for the next leg of the presidential visit to the Visayas.

GMA orders creation of fact-finding commission to probe Al-Ghozi escape

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo ordered today the creation of an independent fact-finding commission to get to the bottom of the recent escape of Indonesian terrorist Fathur Roman Al-Ghozi and two other suspected Abu Sayyaf terrorists.

The fact-finding commission, to be composed of persons of unquestionable integrity and probity, will submit to the President the results of their inquiry 30 days from its constitution.

“We regret the negative repercussions of this incident and we shall get to the root of the matter,” the President said. “If there was collusion, this is the gravest act against our national security done so far by persons within the government.”

She urged Congress to include in the anti-terrorism bill, which is pending deliberations, a provision that would impose the harshest punishment possible to those found guilty of infidelity in the custody of terrorist suspects.

She said those found colluding with terrorists to enable the latter to escape detention “must suffer severely from their aiding these enemies of humanity.”

Presidential Spokesman Ignacio R. Bunye, in a press briefing, said Executive Secretary Alberto Romulo is now going through the list of those possible members of the fact-finding commission. Secretary Romulo is chairman of the Cabinet Oversight Committee on Internal Security.

“As soon as these prospective members confirm their acceptance of their nominations, we will make the appropriate announcement,” he said.

On why the President ordered an independent probe, Bunye said the President feels the incident is not an ordinary police matter. "It's an incident imbued with vital national interest that's why she's taking an extraordinary move of creating an independent fact-finding body," he said.

Bunye took exception to the comments of Sen. Manuel Villar that the escape was staged to allow the Philippine government to accommodate the request of the Indonesian government.

"It's an air ball. It's way off the mark. In the first place, Senator Villar has his facts all mixed up," he said. "The Indonesian government never made any request for the custody of Al-Ghozi."

He added that it would be illogical for the government to risk political fallouts just to accommodate the alleged request of a friendly government.

GMA braves risks to be with poor Leyte villagers

HINDANG, Leyte – Risky and dangerous. But nothing is impossible if one wants to help poor people living in remote and rebel-infested areas like Barangay Mahilum here.

This President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo demonstrated when she surprised Mahilum residents in a visit here.

The President arrived early afternoon on board the presidential chopper from Iloilo and spearheaded officials in delivering basic social services to the villagers.

In her brief impromptu speech, she told the villagers that the government has been doing its best to improve the quality of their lives and to bring development to their barangay.

"The government is really caring for you and we want to show to all of you that we are doing our best for the progress of your future," she said in the Visayan dialect.

In the middle of her speech, the President turned over to concerned persons a check for P100,000 to fund the construction of public toilets and another check for P200,000 for the livelihood project of 50 residents.

She further handed over a check for P100,000 to finance the construction of the water reservoir and the rehabilitation of fittings in Barangay Anolon and another P100,000 for the rehabilitation of fittings and expansion of the water system in Barangay Bulacan.

She also issued another P75,000 check to finance the construction of a rain water collection facility with roofing in Barangay Himokilan Island.

After her speech, she launched the Strong Republic School (SRS) Project and turned over the generator, television, VCD player and sets of instructional materials for the distance learning program to barangay officials.

The President observed a teaching demonstration conducted by para-guro or semi-teacher Gertrudes Claveria on 20 pupils in the Munting Nayon Elementary School here.

Later, she joined the municipal and barangay officials in a luncheon at the barangay chapel.

From Mahilum, the President visited Barangay Capudlusan, about two hours' walk along the river bank of Hindang, and conferred with local officials inside the 43rd Infantry Battalion detachment of the Philippine Army.

After Capudlusan, she flew by helicopter to Tacloban City where she would stay for the night.

Among the Cabinet members who accompanied the President in her visit here were Press Secretary Milton Alingod, Secretary Teresita Quintos-Deles of the National Anti-Poverty Commission, Secretary Marita Jimenez of the Official Development Assistance Program, Secretary Corazon Juliano-Soliman of the Department of Social Welfare and Development, and Secretary Gabby Claudio, Cabinet Secretary for Regional Development.

- Statement of Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye
- GMA poises top-to-bottom revamp of PNP
- Fact-finding body on Al-Ghozi escape to look into long-term solution to PNP security lapses
- Bunye: signs are Bush to visit RP

Statement of the President: Alleged Police Corruption

I acknowledge the serious problem of corruption in the police organization and I am making no excuses for it. We must face the truth and do something about it. It is highly probable that this problem is also related to the escape of no less than 5 prominent detainees from Camp Crame over the past year. I hold the PNP Chief and the entire leadership of the PNP accountable for resolving the problem of police corruption once and for all because it is already eating into the security of our nation. Let us not lean on the argument that this is an endemic or perennial issue, or that only a few bad eggs are involved. The people are tired of these worn out explanations. I call on the entire PNP leadership to shape up or ship out, and I will not hesitate to undertake a top-to-bottom revamp if no results are forthcoming. In the meantime, an independent body will deal with the specific matter of the Al-Ghozi escape, the culpabilities involved, and long term preventive measures. We will get into the root of this case no matter who gets hurt.

Statement of the President: Anti-Dissidence Campaign

The intensified operation versus NPA will continue as we mop up dissident-affected barangays through political and socioeconomic measures. The release of 38 billion pesos for the land reform program as a result of the recent Supreme Court decision gives us wider strategic latitude to resolve the root causes of poverty and thereby defeat the insurgency. We will move on in all fronts while keeping the doors to peace open to those who renounce the option of arms in the pursuit of their political ends.

Statement of the President: Ill-Gotten Wealth

I support the allocation of part of the funds for the compensation of human rights victims. We must lend recognition to the Filipino people's struggle for freedom, justice and redemption—and the individuals who sacrificed life and limb for this cause.

Alleged corruption in the police

We are not taking this defensively or sitting down. The President has acknowledged the weaknesses of the police force and has ordered the Chief to do something about it or face the consequences. We are not denying that corruption may have been involved. We are not making any excuses and will get into the root of the matter. We have an independent commission coming up to strengthen the investigation. We are interested in punishing the guilty as well as in the long-term measures leading to permanent solutions.

Bush visit

Dr. Frank Jenista of the US Embassy called to clarify that the US Ambassador is in regular touch with Washington, both before and after the Al-Ghozi incident, and that there is not the slightest hint that the Bush would not push through.

We also find no reason for canceling the Bush visit because of this incident. It is a freak event and we are hot on the heels of Al-Ghozi and his companions. They will not be given time to rest and to plan or to do their mischief.

Our relations with the US stand at a strategic footing and should not be affected by this incident. There is more reason now to sustain our joint efforts at counter terrorism and defeating poverty.

GMA poises top-to-bottom revamp of PNP

TACLOBAN, Leyte – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today threatened to conduct a top-to-bottom revamp of the Philippine National Police (PNP) leadership for corruption which she said was probably behind the escape of high-profile detainees at the PNP headquarters in Camp Crame.

Acknowledging that corruption in the PNP “is already eating into the security of our nation,” the President called on the entire leadership PNP to shape up or ship out.

“I hold the PNP Chief and the entire leadership of the PNP accountable for resolving the problem of police corruption once and for all,” the President said during her visit to the Department of Foreign Affairs office here at the Provincial Capitol Compound.

If no results are forthcoming, the President said, “I will not hesitate to undertake a top-to-bottom revamp.”

“We will get into the root of this case no matter who gets hurt,” she assured the nation.

The President said it is highly probable that the problem of corruption is related to the escape of no less than five prominent detainees from the headquarters of the PNP over the past year.

Among those who escaped recently were international terrorist Fathur Rohman Al-Ghozi, an Indonesian bomb expert, and suspected Abu Sayyaf members Abdulmukim Ong Edris and Omar Opik Lasal alias Meram Abante.

In June last year, Faisal Marohombsar, the leader of the Pentagon kidnap-for-ransom gang, and two of his followers, also escaped from Camp Crame.

The President said the people are tired of the worn-out explanations that corruption within the police organization is an endemic or perennial issue or that only a few eggs are involved.

The President also said an independent commission will deal with the specific matter of the escape of Al-Ghozi, the culpabilities involved and long-term preventive measures.

Fact-finding body on Al-Ghozi escape to look into long-term solution to PNP security lapses

Malacañang today said that the fact-finding body created by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo to look into the circumstances behind the escape of convicted Indonesian terrorist Fathur Roman Al-Ghozi and two other Abu Sayyaf bandits will have far-reaching effects on the overall security problem at the Philippine National Police (PNP).

In his regular press briefing this afternoon, Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said that the presidential commission is tasked not only to pinpoint responsibility for the escape up to the highest level but also to make recommendations on the long-term solution to the security gap at the PNP.

Bunye said that the investigation to be undertaken by the fact-finding commission would go hand in hand with the ongoing investigation ordered by PNP chief, Director General Hermogenes Ebdane, on the incident.

“I believe the two investigations will go side by side, in a parallel fashion,” Bunye said.

Earlier in a formal statement, the President said that she will hold the PNP leadership responsible for resolving the problem of police corruption once and for all “because it is already eating into the security of the nation.”

In her statement, the President acknowledged that there is a serious problem of corruption in the police organization and that this problem could be related to the escape of no less than five detainees from Camp Crame over the past year.

She said that she will not hesitate to undertake a top-to-bottom revamp of the PNP if no results are forthcoming.

The President said that although the independent body will deal with the specific matter of the Al-Ghozi escape and the culpabilities involved, it will also look into long-term preventive measures.

“We will look into the root of this case no matter who gets hurt,” the President said.

Bunye explained that the fact that the President mentioned about the need to address the issue of police corruption means that something really has to be done.

“This deserves the support of all sectors and I feel that those who are really interested in serving the government should be one in this campaign,” Bunye said.

Bunye: signs are Bush to visit RP

Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye today indicated that United States President George W. Bush might push through with his planned state visit to the Philippines this October, after the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation (APEC) summit.

In his regular press briefing, Bunye said “there is not the slightest indication that there had been a change in the plan.”

He said the US Embassy in Manila has been in constant touch with Malacañang and with Washington.

“Dr. Frank Jenista called us to clarify that the US Ambassador is in constant touch with Washington,” both before and after the escape of Indonesian terrorist Fathur Rohman Al-Ghozi and two others from their Camp Crame cell, he said.

“The fact that they took the initiative to call us indicates that they really would like to clarify the situation,” he added.

The US Embassy, since early Wednesday afternoon, has been issuing clarifications on the issue, Bunye said.

Statement of the President: Travel Advisory

We understand the position of the United States and other countries and we ourselves are concerned over the safety of their nationals as well as that of our own. We have played a very strong role in the global fight against terrorism and the capture of Al-Ghozi was part of that commitment. We are equally committed to bring him back to justice and to work with other nations, including the United States to stop terrorism in whatever form and wherever it may be.

Statement of the President: Peace Talks with MILF

Step by step, we are overcoming the obstacles to the resumption of peace talks with the MILF under conditions of stability on the ground. This will hopefully limit the roaming ground of Al-Ghozi and his cohorts in Mindanao. We hold the MILF to its word that it will help in the interdiction of terrorists and I am looking forward to Al-Ghozi as a primary test case. The peace process has a large stake on this issue.

Statement of the President: AFP Issues

I support any legitimate grievances of the young officers in the Armed Forces and I urge them to resolve these responsibly through the chain of command. The Chief of Staff is ordered to institutionalize a grievance mechanism for these matters, of which I want to be informed. We must strengthen a culture of disciplined transparency in the Armed Forces. This is the most effective way we can insulate the uniform from politics, avoid factionalism and promote professionalism.

GMA pushes anti-insurgency, anti-poverty drive in Samar

BORONGAN, Eastern Samar – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo Thursday night said the fight against insurgency is not only a battle between government troopers and the Communist rebels but also a battle against the root causes of poverty.

“I want to say that the intensified operation versus the New People's Army (NPA) will continue as we mop up dissident-affected barangays through political and socio-economic measures,” the President said.

“The release of P38 billion for the Land Reform Program as a result of the recent Supreme Court decision gives us wider strategic latitude to resolve the root causes of poverty and thereby defeat the insurgency,” she said during a private dinner with local officials at the provincial capitol here.

While the military has intensified its operations against the dissident rebels, the President said the government is still not closing its doors to those who would want to return to the folds of the law.

“We will move the stones in all fronts while keeping the doors to peace open to those who renounce the option of arms in the pursuit of their political ends,” she said.

She added she has also ordered the military to beef up its forces in Eastern Samar after some 100 rebels attacked the Quinapondan police station last June 22.

Four days later, some 200 rebels overran the Army patrol base of the 52nd Infantry Battalion in Oras town, resulting in the death of five soldiers, 10 members of the Civilian Armed Force Geographical Unit (CAFGU), and an innocent civilian.

After the dinner, the President promoted the three outnumbered policemen on duty who gallantly put up a stand and repulsed the rebels who attacked Quinapondan.

“At dahil sa ginawa nila, sila ay binibigyan natin ng special meritorious promotion to the next higher rank (Because of their gallant stand, we are giving them special meritorious promotion to the next higher rank),” she said.

Promoted were Police Officers 1 Raul Graza, and Alexander Villafior, and P/Insp. Cayetano Gannaban, the town’s police chief who was wounded on the right arm during the attack. The President also awarded to Gannaban the PNP Wounded Personnel Medal (Medalya ng Sugatang Magiting) for the heroic deed.

GMA earmarks P72 million for depressed barangays in 5 Eastern Samar towns

BORONGAN, Eastern Samar – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo last night announced the allocation of a P72-million fund for the three-year implementation of the Kapit-Bisig Laban sa Kahirapan-Comprehensive and Integrated Delivery of Social Services (KALAHI-CIDSS) in 83 barangays of the five depressed towns in this province.

The President made the announcement Thursday evening during a private dinner with local officials at the provincial capitol here.

“Ito ay bahagi duon sa nakuha kong biyaya para sa ating bansa nung ako’y pumunta sa Amerika nuong November 2001 (The amount is part of what the country obtained when I visited the United States in November 2001),” the President said.

The P72 million is allocated as follows: P24 million a year for the KALAHI-CIDSS projects in 28 impoverished barangays in the town of Can-Avid; P8.4 million for 17 barangays in San Policarpo; P5.1 million for 13 barangays in Balangiga; P3.9 million for 13 barangays in Jipapad; and P3.6 million for 12 barangays in Maslog.

Under the KALAHI-CIDSS project, each depressed barangay is allocated P300,000 per year.

All of the beneficiary towns are classified as sixth-class municipalities, except for Can-Avid which is a fifth-class municipality.

The bulk of the fund comes from the World Bank, with counterpart funding from the national and local governments.

The President said that to be included in the KALAHI-CIDSS project, the World Bank requires a town to be among the most impoverished, with a local government willing to provide a counterpart contribution, and with an existing non-government organization (NGO) capable of implementing and monitoring social projects.

Among its scope are economic support, physical infrastructure, basic service infrastructure, and capability-building activities.

Economic support includes the construction, communal irrigation, production and post-harvest facilities; physical infrastructure includes road rehabilitation and road re-graveling; basic service infrastructure includes water systems, barangay health stations, and basic agriculture facilities; and capacity building includes training for enterprise development and farming technologies.

The President arrived 5:30 p.m. Thursday at the Eastern Samar State College in Can-Avid, some 65 kilometers north of this capital town, after a seven-hour trip from Tacloban City. The usual three-and-a-half hour trip took them seven hours due to the stormy weather prevailing at the time.

The President and her group were welcomed by the students and local officials led by Governor Cleotilde Salazar, Eastern Samar Lone District Rep. Marcelino Libanan, and Can-Avid Mayor Jil Norman Germino.

She was accompanied by Presidential Assistant Gabriel Claudio, CORD for Region 8; Social Welfare Secretary Corazon Soliman, Secretary Marita Jimenez, National Anti-Poverty Commission (NAPC) Lead Convenor Teresita Quintos-Deles, and Press Secretary Milton Alingod.

The President witnessed the signing of a memorandum of agreement for the implementation of the KALAHI-CIDSS project between the mayors of the five identified towns, the Department of Social Welfare and Development (DSWD), NAPC, and the representatives of non-government organizations (NGOs).

The KALAHI-CIDSS project, jointly implemented by the DSWD and the NAPC, is the government's major anti-poverty program for impoverished barangays in the country.

The President also launched the Strong Republic School (SRS) distance learning system at the state college by observing how classes are conducted with the use of a television set.

The local government, through Congressman Libanan, donated to the Can-Avid SRS project a television set, video equipment, modules and digital video discs (DVDs).

The SRS program seeks to improve the literacy rate in identified disadvantaged communities through the use of television, video compact discs (VCDs), and other modern means of communication.

The SRS program was commissioned by the President to be implemented in close coordination with the Department of Education (DepEd), and various government line agencies, non-government organizations (NGOs) and people's organizations (POs).

More farmers gain from GMA's AFMA commitment

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's firm resolve to allot funds and make the 1998 Agriculture and Fisheries Modernization Act (AFMA) work in the last two years has provided millions of the country's farmers and fishermen the fighting chance to improve the quality of their lives.

Agriculture Secretary Luis Lorenzo, in a media briefing, today said the President's commitment to AFMA has resulted in the release of agricultural credit, a boost in agri-fishery output and new jobs for 1.78 million people.

Lorenzo said that in terms of AFMA-related credit, the DA lent P39.63 billion to more than a million farmers, fisher folk, food retailers and small agricultural businessmen.

Loans worth P858.6 million for 81,884 farmers and fisher folk were also guaranteed under AFMA.

The loans were provided through the facilities of the Land Bank and the Quedan Corporation.

From 2001 to 2002, the Department of Agriculture (DA) has used P20.1 billion out of the P20.43-billion AFMA budget, with P12.13 billion set aside for AFMA to sustain agricultural growth this year, Lorenzo said.

To the benefit of more than 340,000 farmers, the DA has opened 50,746 hectares (has.) of farmlands to irrigation and rehabilitated 441,116 has. with existing water systems as of June 30, 2003.

Complementing this was the completion of 1,045 farm-to-market roads and 15 municipal and regional fish ports.

Side by side with the provision of support infrastructure, the DA also distributed 641 post-harvest machineries and equipment and built or repaired 1,456 units more.

MILF's pledge to help recapture Al-Ghozi could help speed up peace process — Palace

Malacañang today said the pledge of the separatist Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) to help in the recapture of convicted Indonesian terrorist Fathur Rohman al-Ghozi and two others would help speed up the peace process in Mindanao.

In a formal statement, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said the government is holding the MILF to its word that it will help in the interdiction of terrorists and that she is looking forward to Al-Ghozi as a primary test case.

“The peace process has a large stake on this issue,” the President said.

The President said that step by step, the government is overcoming the obstacles to the resumption of talks with the MILF under conditions of stability in the ground.

Later in a press briefing in Malacañang, Deputy Presidential Spokesman Ricardo Saludo said the government appreciates the statement of the MILF that it would help in apprehending Al-Ghozi and the two other terrorists.

“We will hold them to their word that they shall assist in ensuring or helping capture these individuals, and more importantly to prevent them or any terrorist around from undertaking any action that will hurt civilians and the country at large,” Saludo said.

Al-Ghozi and two Abu Sayyaf terrorists are now on the lam after they escaped early this week from their detention cell at Camp Crame in Quezon City.

GMA bares breakthrough in gov't-MILF talks; panels agree on ceasefire starting tomorrow

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today announced a breakthrough in the peace negotiations between the government panel and the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF), saying that they have agreed “on a mutual cessation of hostilities” effective Saturday, July 19.

As this developed, the President ordered the Armed Forces of the Philippines to downgrade its action “from punitive operations to active defense” against the MILF.

In a statement, she also reported that the court has suspended the warrants of arrest against members and staff of the MILF panel.

Further, the Department of the Interior and Local Government “shall lift the corresponding rewards for the arrest or capture” of the MILF peace panelists, she said.

Affected MILF panelists included MILF Chairman Hashim Salamat, MILF Vice Chairman for Military Affairs Al Haj Ibrahim Murad, Aleem Aziz Mimbantas, MILF Vice Chairman for Political Affairs Ghadzali Jaafar, MILF Spokesman Eid Kabalu Nortel, Datucan Abas Mohaqher Iqbal, Lanang Ali, Omar Pasigan, Commander Nurudin Ibrahim and Toks Ibrahim.

The MILF panelists would also be granted safe conduct passes and free passage within the Philippines, as provided under the GRP-MILF Agreement for Safety and Security Guarantees, for 90 days, according to the Office of the Presidential Adviser on the Peace Process.

The President took time to express gratitude to Malaysian Prime Minister Mohammad Mahathir “for his sincere and abiding support for our (peace) efforts.”

The President’s statement follows:

Today the peace panels of our government and the MILF have agreed on a mutual cessation of hostilities. I am directing the Armed forces to downgrade our operational status from punitive operations to active defense. This is in line with the policy of calibrated reciprocity that will continue to guide our actions in the peace process.

The warrants of arrest against the members and staff of the MILF panel have been suspended by the court. The Department of Interior and the Local Government shall lift the corresponding rewards for the arrest or capture of the concerned persons. Safe Conduct Passes will be issued so that they can travel to the venue of the negotiations.

I call on the panels to immediately enter in formal talks towards a final peace agreement. I anticipated the deployment of a Malaysian ceasefire observer team soon. We are teaming up with our partners in the OIC to ensure the effectiveness and durability of this effort.

I thank Malaysian Prime Minister Mahathir for his sincere and abiding support for our efforts. I also appreciate the role of President Bush for committing assistance to the rehabilitation of conflict-affected areas, which contributes greatly to the climate of peace to prosper.

This breakthrough is the result of relentless backchannelling efforts undertaken by government representatives over several months in the Philippines and abroad.

I ask our people to give peace a chance, even as we secure our absolute sovereignty and the enforcement of the law over all areas and at all times. As we address the roots of rebellion and secession, I am confident that we shall also effectively isolate and marginalize the dwindling terrorist cells in Mindanao and across our seas in the region.

Peace is at hand. We shall forge the political will to preserve it for all generations of Filipinos.

GMA names Ebdane to lead task force on Al-Ghozi hunt

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today directed Philippine National Police chief Director-General Hermogenes Ebdane, Jr. to lead a task force that would go after escaped terrorist Fathur Rohman Al-Ghozi “until the terrorist leader is accounted for.”

“We are not giving any false assurances to our people ... but we assure that the government will leave no stone unturned in the manhunt and in the investigation of the circumstances that led to the escape,” the President said.

Guest speaker at the Mindanao Island Conference at the Century Park Sheraton, the President also ordered authorities to scrutinize every piece of information and to follow the leads both to Al-Ghozi and his cohorts and to possible collusion from within the police organization.

She said the capture of Al-Ghozi is part of the country's commitment to the fight against global terrorism.

"We are equally committed to bring him back to justice and to work with other nations to stop terrorism in whatever form and wherever it may be," she added.

She called on the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) to hold on to its word that it would help in the interdiction of terrorists "and we are looking forward to Al-Ghozi as a primary test case."

She announced that the government and the MILF peace panels have agreed to a cessation of hostilities starting tomorrow, a breakthrough in the peace process.

The President stressed that the framework to the government's peace initiatives "should be based on constitutionality," applying to dealings with rebels, insurgents and secessionists and those in the uniformed service.

She said she supported any legitimate grievances of the young officers of the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) and "I urge them to resolve this responsively through the chain of command."

She ordered AFP Chief of Staff Gen. Narciso Abaya "to institutionalize a grievance mechanism for these matters for which I want to be informed."

She pointed out that the culture of disciplined transparency in the AFP should be strengthened to isolate the military from politics, avoid factionalism and promote professionalism.

The President called on all Filipinos to give peace a chance, "even as we secure our absolute sovereignty and the enforcement of the law for all areas and at all times."

The President expressed confidence the government would "effectively isolate and marginalize the dwindling terrorist cells in Mindanao and across our seas in the region."

"Peace is at hand. Peace is within grasp. We shall force the political will to preserve it for all generations of Filipinos," she said.

19 JULY 2003

- President's radio address to the nation
- GMA assures support for legitimate demands of AFP junior officers

- Set aside a day every week to burn confiscated drugs, GMA orders PDEA
- All stakeholders will get a share in the recovered Marcos wealth — GMA

GMA approves projects worth P8.23 billion

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, in her capacity as chairman of the National Economic and Development (NEDA) Board, has approved five projects worth P8.23 billion, including the P2.91 billion Countrywide Bridge Project, that is expected to spur economic growth in the countryside.

The Countrywide Bridge Project involves the construction and replacement of 200 priority local bridges nationwide with a total length of 5,306 lineal meters (lm), using modular steel bridging technology.

Of the 200 bridges, 120 will be double lane bridges with a total length of 3,538 lm while 80 will be single lane bridges with a total length of 1,768 lm.

The bridge project will be implemented in all regions except the National Capital Region (NCR), Region 13 and Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao (ARMM), which have similar existing projects.

The bridge project is expected to improve local economies from merely subsistence base to thriving market economies because it will improve farm to market access and provide more services and opportunities to local communities.

The NEDA board also approved the procurement of pumps, drilling rigs and related equipment project worth P1.03 billion; rehabilitation of Cagayan Integrated Agricultural Development Project – Irrigation Component, P472 million; 20-MW Palinpinon III Geothermal Power Plant Project, P1.74 billion; and the 2003 US Public Law 480 Title Loan Program, P2.08 billion.

With the procurement of additional irrigation equipment, some 18,000 hectares of developed lands that are currently not irrigated due to inadequate water supply or lack of pumping facilities would be irrigated. The project is expected to trigger economic activities in the countryside.

The Rehabilitation of Cagayan Integrated Agricultural Development Project, on the other hand, aims to increase crop production from the current average yield of 2.65 metric tons (MT) per hectare to 3.98 metric tons per hectare. With this, NEDA said, the average annual farm income of farmers may rise from P22,725 to P26,775.

The 20-MW Palinpinon III Geothermal Power Plant Project would address the projected shortfall in power generation in the Visayas by 2005 by making use of the excess available steam in the existing Palinpinon II Geothermal steamfield.

It will involve the construction, installation and commissioning of a geothermal power plant and the construction of a switching station in Nasuji, Southern Negros.

The 2003 US Public Law 480 Title Loan Program involves the importation of 180,000 metric tons of rice.

The 180,000 MT of rice is about eight days of the country's national rice requirement and approximately 18 percent of the National Food Authority's (NFA) average annual imports.

DA projects higher RP rice self-sufficiency in 2003

The Philippines would be 97 percent self-sufficient in rice next year.

This was the fearless conservative forecast of Agriculture Secretary Luis Lorenzo, Jr. who attributed the projected feat to the increasing use of hybrid rice and certified seeds by Filipino farmers, barring bad weather.

"And with God's blessing, we may be 100 percent self-sufficient by that time," Lorenzo told the media in a briefing in Malacañang Friday.

Lorenzo said that presently, the Philippines is 94 percent self-sufficient in rice, higher than the 88 percent self-sufficiency figure in 2000 when the country could produce only 12.39 million metric tons (MT).

As of June 1, the country's total rice stock stood at 2.11 million MT, which is equivalent to an 80-day supply.

Lorenzo also reported rising self-sufficiency levels in corn, due to the grain's importance to the poultry and livestock sectors.

"We are 67 percent self-sufficient (in corn) today, compared to 60 percent sufficiency three years ago," he said.

The DA expects to produce 80 percent of the country's corn requirements by 2004, leaving only 20 percent for imports, Lorenzo added.

The total corn inventory as of June 1 stood at 184,000 MT.

Lorenzo said that for sugar, the country produces 97 percent of its needs as output this year is expected to hit 2.13 million MT, the highest in 30 years.

He said sugar self-sufficiency would reach 100 percent next year. He expressed confidence that by 2005 the Philippines would be rejoining "the ranks of sugar exporters, a status we used to enjoy two decades ago."

President's radio address to the nation

Magandang umaga sa inyong lahat

Ngayong araw na ito ay nagkasundo ang mga peace panels ng ating pamahalaan at ang MILF na itigil ng bawat panig ang labanan o magkaroon ng Mutual Cessation of Hostilities. Dahil dito ay intassan ko ang ating Sandatahang Lakas na ibaba ang kanilang operational status, mula punitive operations ay gawin itong active defense. Ito ay naaayon sa ating patakaran na Calibrated Reciprocity na siyang ating magiging gabay sa usaping pangkapayapaan.

Sinuspinde na rin ng ating korte ang mga warrant of arrest para sa mga kasapi at working staff ng MILF panel. Tinanggal na rin ang mga pabuya para sa mga kinauukulan. Magpapalabas din tayo ng mga Safe Conduct Pass para sila ay makarating sa negotiation venues ng maluwa at maluwalhati.

Hinihiling ko sa magkabilang panig na magsagawa kaagad ng mga pormal na pag-uusap para maipalabas agad ang isang kasunduang pangkapayapaan. Inaasahan ko ang pagpapadala dito sa lalong madaling panahon ng Malaysian government ng mga observers o tagapagmasid sa usapang ito.

Labis kong pinasasalamatan si Malaysian Prime Minister Mahathir sa kanyang buong-pusong pagsuporta sa inisyatibong ito. Pinasasalamatan ko rin si Pangulong Bush sa suporta na patuloy niyang ipinagkakaloob sa atin, lalo na sa rehabilitasyon ng mga lugar na lubhang naapektuhan ng kaguluhan. Ang tulong na ito ang isa sa mga dahilan kung bakit patuloy na lumiliwanag ang ating pag-asa na makamtan ang tunay na kapayapaan sa Mindanao.

Ang mga napakahalagang kaganapang ito ay resulta ng masigasig na pagsisikap ng mga kinatawan ng ating pamahalaan na kanilang isinagawa dito at sa ibang bansa.

Hinihiling ko sa ating mamamayan, na sa gitna ng ating pagsisikap na maitaguyod ang pambansang kasarinlan at mapairal ang batas saan mang dako ng kapuluan, na lagi nating isapuso ang pagbibigay ng pagkakataon sa kapayapaan. Lubos ang aking tiwala at paniniwala sa ating matapat na pagharap sa mga tunay na kadakilaan ng rebelyon at sesesyon ay mahihwalay natin ang mga grupo ng terorista dito sa Mindanao at mga kalapit bansa sa rehiyon.

Ako ay naniniwala na malapit na nating makamit ang tunay na kapayapaan. At pag ito ay ating makamit, gagawin natin ang lahat ng ating makakaya para ito ay matamasa ng mga susunod pang henerasyon.

Maraming salamat.

GMA assures support for legitimate demands of AFP junior officers

MARIVELES, Bataan — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today assured the junior officers of the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) that her administration would support their legitimate demands but at the same time called on them to course these demands through the AFP chain of command.

In her speech at the 1st Commencement Exercises of the Maritime Academy of Asia and the Pacific (MAAP) at the school's campus here, the President said she has ordered AFP Chief, Gen. Narciso Abaya, to institutionalize a mechanism that would address the legitimate grievances of the young AFP officers.

“Dapat palakasin natin ang kultura ng disiplinadong transparency sa armed forces at sa navy (We should strengthen the culture of transparent discipline within the armed forces and the navy),” the President said.

“This is the best way to isolate the uniformed officers and men from politics,” the President said.

The President also exhorted all AFP officers and men to observe professionalism and do away with factionalism.

To the graduating students, the President said that they should maintain their sense of discipline even when they are already on board merchant ships, especially those who would like to join the Philippine Navy later on.

The President also lauded the officers of the school, that included Captain Gregorio Oca, who founded the MAAP, and Vice Admiral Eduardo Santos, MAAP president, for their foresight in establishing the maritime institution.

She said that the MAAP, which has just received its ISO-9001 certification, is now one of the five top maritime academies in the whole world.

According to the President, the conferment of the ISO-9001 certification on the MAAP just 30 months after it was established is a record because normally it would take decades for a school to hurdle the requirements for ISO certification.

GMA cites valuable contribution of Filipino seafarers to RP economy

MARIVELES, Bataan — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today cited the valuable contribution of Filipino seafarers to the country's economy as she assured them of the government's continued support for their welfare and well being.

In her speech before the first batch of graduates of the Maritime Academy of Asia and the Pacific (MAAP) in the school's campus here, the President said that last year, the almost 205,000 Filipino seafarers on board various ocean-going vessels contributed almost $300 million every quarter.

She said that of the total $8 billion remitted by overseas Filipino workers (OFWs) in 2002, about $1.4 billion came from the Filipino seafarers.

The President said that for the first half of this year alone, over 112,000 Filipino seamen have already been deployed to ocean-going vessels.

"This indicates that the demand for Filipino seafaring and English language skills continues to climb, establishing the new maritime tradition," the President said.

According to the President, the Filipino seafarers today constitute one-fifth of the total global shipping force and Filipino marine officers are considered among the most competent and efficient anywhere.

The President also announced that Labor and Employment Secretary Patricia Sto. Tomas has requested United States consular officials to open more special windows to accommodate applications from Filipino seafarers.

She said that officials of the Philippine Overseas Employment Administration (POEA) will meet within the week with US consular officials to discuss the matter of enhancing the security features of the seafarer's registration certificate so that this will serve as an alternative to the present transit visa requirements.

The President also announced that last July 3, the Australian Maritime Authority has lifted its ban on the hiring of Filipino seamen that they imposed because of the leakage of the marine deck officers exam.

She said that the Professional Regulatory Commission has voided the 2001 professional licensure exams for marine deck officers and most examinees have retaken the exams and appropriate charges have been filed against the errant examiners.

Set aside a day every week to burn confiscated drugs, GMA orders PDEA

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today ordered the Philippine Drug Enforcement Agency (PDEA) to set aside a regular day of the week for the public burning of drugs, raw materials and precursors so that these cannot be recycled and sold illegally by unscrupulous law enforcers.

In her brief remarks at an inter-faith prayer rally held this afternoon at the Malacañang Grounds, the President said she wants a strict accounting of all confiscated drugs and drugs destroyed "to the last gram."

The President said that for the accounting to be transparent, the burning should be witnessed by observers from the private group and from the National Ecumenical Committee (NECCOM), which sponsored the "Drug-Free Philippines" rally.

NECCOM is an inter-faith body composed, among others, of Roman Catholics, Protestants, Muslims and other religious movements like Jesus is Lord.

The President said that the prayer rally was a "timely response" to the challenges that the country is facing.

“This prayer rally reinforces our collective commitment to our faith. It enhances our spiritual values, strengthens our institution and moral rearmament through prayer and worship,” the President said.

She also instructed the PDEA to have the photos of those suspected to be involved in a drug case, along with the details of their involvement, published and aired over the media.

The President said that through the media, the public could help in catching these criminals and putting them behind bars.

“Let us put a face and identity to these people. Let us get the Filipino people, the public, involved in hunting them down,” the President said.

After her remarks, the President led the prayer by imploring the Lord Almighty to guide and help the Filipino people “in our common fight and struggle to end the proliferation of illegal drugs” in the country.

All stakeholders will get a share in the recovered Marcos wealth — GMA

CALUMPIT, Bulacan — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today assured agrarian reform farmers, the former landowners and human rights victims that they would all get their share of the P36 billion, or $682 million, in ill-gotten wealth of the Marcoses that the Supreme Court has forfeited in favor of the government.

After the mass oath-taking here of officials of barangays in agrarian reform communities, the President instructed Agrarian Reform Secretary Roberto Pagdanganan to ensure the proper distribution of the money as soon as it becomes available.

The President said that part of the money could be used to pay landowners whose lands have been apportioned to tenants under the comprehensive agrarian reform program (CARP) of the government.

She also said that since there are already available funds, the entire country can now be declared a land reform area.

The President also said that with the money, all projects in the agrarian reform communities (ARCs) can now be implemented to improve the lives of the farmer beneficiaries.

She instructed Secretary Pagdanganan to coordinate with the Department of Public Works and Highways (DPWH), the Department of Education (DepED), and the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) so that projects for ARCs, like schools and farm-to-market roads, can now be built.

The President said that a portion of the money would be also allocated to address the claims of human rights victims but added that this will have to wait for a specific law that would authorize such allocation.

She reiterated that she will continue to support the fight for justice of the human rights victims who suffered during the dark days of martial law.

The President's Day: July 20, 2003

20 JULY 2003

- Poverty drops to lowest level, personal optimism returns, says SWS survey

Poverty drops to lowest level, personal optimism returns, says SWS survey

The Social Weather Stations said today its June 2003 economic indicators show improvements across the board, with poverty dropping to its lowest level in 16 years, hunger maintaining the same low level as last March, and personal optimism regaining its traditional dominance over pessimism.

The proportion of families rating themselves as mahirap or poor was only 53% in the June survey, or a very significant drop from 59% in March 2003, 61% in November 2002, and 66% in both September 2002 and May 2002, the SWS said in its report posted in the Internet.

Self-Rated Poverty is at its lowest point since the record low of 43% in March 1987. The recent improvement coincides with the rise in the public's net satisfaction with the national administration's performance in Helping the Poor to +27 in June from +14 last March.

Self-Rated Poverty declined most of all in the Visayas, from 78% to 58% between March and June 2003, followed by Metro Manila, from 40% to 29% over the period. Mindanao had an insignificant change from 74% to 70%, and the Balance of Luzon stayed at 49%, the SWS said.

The proportion of families reporting that they experienced hunger, without having anything to eat, at least once in the last three months was a very low 6.6% in June 2003, which is close to the 6.7% of March 2003 and the record low 6.5% of October 1999.

These are the only times for hunger to be below 7% since the SWS quarterly surveys of hunger began in July 1998. Previous to March 2003, the average proportion of Filipino families experiencing hunger was over 10%.

The June 2003 hunger proportion of 6.6% consists of 5.1% who experienced it only once or a few times, which is termed Moderate Hunger, and 1.5% who went through it often or always, which is Severe Hunger.

The SWS survey also found 30% optimistic that their quality of life would improve in the next 12 months, and only 19% pessimistic that it would decline, for a Net Optimism score of +12, without rounding error.

Optimism now prevails in all social classes (ABC +26, D +11, E +8).

Thus there has been a decided recovery from the Iraq war-affected time of March 2003, when only 24% were optimists and 28 were pessimists, or a Net Optimism score of -5, one of the rare times when pessimism dominated over optimism, SWS said.

Comparing their present quality of life to 12 months ago, 19% said they had gained and 41% said they had lost, for a Net Gainers score of -22. Although unfavorable, it is not as bad as in March 2003, when 14% were Gainers and 55% were Losers, or a very poor Net Gainers score of -41.

21 JULY 2003

- Statement of the President: Mutual Cessation of Hostilities
- Statement of the President: Al-Ghozi Manhunt
- Statement of the President: Corruption
- Statement of the President: NDF Talks
- GMA vows to make crackdown on corrupt officials as intense as war against terror, drug trade
- Rights victims, CARP beneficiaries to get share from recovered Marcos wealth, GMA assures
- Gov't readies for formal peace talks with MILF
- KALAHI reaches out to poorest of poor in 216 towers
- Livelihood projects improve Payatas victims' lives

Statement of the President: Mutual Cessation of Hostilities

The mutual cessation of hostilities does not deter the enforcement of the law in all areas at all times. It must be understood that the Government must act on the basis of necessity to protect the communities from harm, proactively. It is the Government that defines the scope of action and there should be no hair-splitting. We are standing down from punitive actions but we have to provide an umbrella of active defense to give the people peace of mind.

Statement of the President: Al-Ghozi Manhunt

We have to focus on the manhunt with the same determination as we conduct the probe within the PNP to unearth possible collusion. The story will only be complete when these two tracks yield results. I am resolved to put back the terrorist in jail as much as getting to the root of his escape and putting his alleged cohorts in the police in jail with him. These twin objectives shall be pursued until accomplished. The dragnet has been spread far and wide while the newly formed fact finding commission shall soon buckle down to work.

Statement of the President: Corruption

We shall crack down on corruption in the same degree we are cracking down on terror and drugs. We will punish officials at any level in accordance with due process. Corruption does not only bring disgrace to the public service but strikes at the root of our national security and stability. We cannot tolerate the corrupt enrichment of a few at the expense of the good name and prestige of the majority of civil servants who serve honestly and devotedly.

Statement of the President: NDF Talks

We are leaving the door open to rebels who wish to return to the fold of law while we continue to protect the communities from NPA depredations. The employment of force shall be balanced by the hand of reconciliation extended to those who renounce violence in the pursuit of political ends.

GMA vows to make crackdown on corrupt officials as intense as war against terror, drug trade

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today vowed to intensify government efforts in ferreting out officials who have enriched themselves in office through corrupt and illegal means.

In an unscheduled press briefing in Malacañang, the President said her administration will crack down on corruption in public office in the same degree that it is cracking down on terrorism and drug trafficking.

“We will punish officials at any level in accordance with due process,” the President said, adding that corruption does not only bring disgrace to the public service but also strikes at the root of the country’s national security and stability.

The President said her administration will not tolerate the “corrupt enrichment” of a few at the expense of the good name and prestige of the majority of the civil servants who serve honestly and are devoted to their jobs.

She announced that just this morning, Assistant Secretary Emmanuel Bonoan of the Department of Finance (DoF) filed anti-graft cases against three officials of the Bureau of Internal Revenue (BIR) and one from the Bureau of Customs who have failed in the lifestyle check undertaken by the DoF.

Those charged with alleged violations of the Anti-Graft and Corrupt Practices Act for having enriched themselves beyond their legitimate income as government officials are Edwin Abella, BIR assistant commissioner; Percival Salazar, another BIR assistant commissioner; Lucien Sayuno, a BIR regional director; and Manuel Valencia, chief of the Customs warehousing division.

The President said that the four officials will also be relieved of their duties in their respective offices.

“This is a great moment in our fight against graft and corruption,” the President said.

She recalled that in her 2002 State of the Nation Address, she pledged to make the BIR and the BoC the showcases in the government’s unrelenting fight against graft and corruption.

The President said she is confident that winning the case against corrupt officials, coupled with the passage of revenue measures now pending in Congress, would help the government in solving its budget deficit for this year.

Rights victims, CARP beneficiaries to get share from recovered Marcos wealth, GMA assures

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today assured human rights victims of the martial law regime that they will get P8 billion from the $682 million (about P36 billion) of the Marcos’ ill-gotten wealth as soon as the Supreme Court judgment forfeiting the money in favor of the government is finalized.

In an unscheduled press briefing in Malacañang this morning, the President also said the comprehensive agrarian reform program (CARP) will get the lion’s share of P30 billion as mandated by the CARP law.

The President clarified however, that the disbursement of the money for human rights victims will have to wait for the passage of a law that would authorize its allocation, adding that in the meantime, the P8 billion will be put in escrow.

As to the P30 billion earmarked for the CARP, the President said the P8 billion budget of the Department of Agrarian Reform (DAR) is now assured, and the balance of P22 billion to be allocated in accordance with the obligations and other budget proposals of DAR.

The President said she has instructed Agrarian Reform Secretary Roberto Pagdanganan to ensure that the available funds should be used in addressing the four major thrusts in the agrarian reform communities (ARCs).

The four thrusts in the ARCs, especially those with insurgency problems, are the construction of school buildings, farm-to-market roads and irrigation systems, and the provision of health insurance to land reform beneficiaries.

“These four items should be in the template for agrarian reform communities and land reform beneficiaries,” the President said.

Gov't readies for formal peace talks with MILF

When the government and the Moro Islamic Liberation Front panels sit down for the first time to start formal talks towards a final peace agreement, the first thing that will have to be threshed out is the reconstitution and review of the functions of the coordinating committee for the ceasefire as well as the membership of the monitoring teams.

This was revealed in a press briefing today by Presidential Adviser on the Peace Process Eduardo Ermita after receiving the signed copy of the ceasefire agreement from Al Hadz Ibrahim Murad of the MILF Sunday.

“So today, what we have is the signed order of cessation of hostilities. Then we have the safe-conduct pass for all those whose warrants of arrest have been suspended. And also the order for the lifting of the reward money imposed on their head sometime immediately after the attack in Siocon,” Ermita said.

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo had earlier announced the mutual cessation of hostilities and the mutual downgrading of the military’s operational status from punitive action to active defense.

The warrants of arrest against the members and staff of the MILF panel have been lifted by the court while the Department of National Defense and Department of the Interior and Local Government have lifted the corresponding rewards for their arrest and capture.

Ermita said safe-conduct passes good for 90 days have also been issued to the MILF panel to be headed by Hashim Salamat. Also covered by the safe-conduct passes are Murad, Aleem Aziz Mimbantas, Ghadzali Jaafar, Eid Kabalu Nortel, Datucan Abas Mogagher Iqbal, Atty. Lanang Ali, Omar Pasigan, Commander Nurudin Ibrahim and Toks Ibrahim.

“We are awaiting the action of Malaysia to constitute the third-party monitoring observer team,” Ermita said. “We will try to get this to the Department of Foreign Affairs and the Malaysian Minister of Foreign Affairs,” Ermita said.

He said it is important for the government to find out if Malaysia would agree to the involvement of some members of the Organization of Islamic Conference who have signified interest in being part of the third-party monitoring team. At the moment, he said, Libya, Bangladesh, Bahrain and even the United States have signified their wish to participate.

As host, Ermita said, “Malaysia should tell us whether it is alright for the Philippines to bring so many number of people and, for that matter, if there are arrangements on mass media.”

“We will have to ask from the Malaysians whether they would welcome media teams coming from the Philippines. What are the media policies? What are the media management rules while on the ground? So these are matters, these are details that are very, very important,” Ermita said.

He also revealed that Eid Kabalu has been replaced as MILF spokesman by Datucan Abas Mogagher Iqbal who will now act as official spokesman on things happening on the ground. As far as negotiations however, are concerned, the spokesman is Atty. Mushib Buat, who is a member of the MILF panel.

KALAH! reaches out to poorest of poor in 216 towers

Over 135,750 families have so far been reached by the Kapit-bisig Laban sa Kahirapan (KALAH!) program of the government, covering 509 poorest of the poor and conflict-affected barangays in 216 municipalities across 58 provinces, according to the National Anti-Poverty Commission.

NAPC Secretary Teresita Quintos-Deles said in a press briefing today in Malacañang that most of the poverty reduction campaign of the Macapagal-Arroyo administration has been addressed through the KALAH! program.

In the last two years, Deles said, the KALAHI program has taken root and moved to very poor communities through a convergence of 30 to 40 government agencies organized at the national and regional levels, together with the leagues of local governments, provincial governments and representatives from the different non-governmental organization.

She said around P140 million from the President's Social Fund and Contingency Fund of 2002 have been allocated by the President to finance the 67 projects for micro-finance livelihood assistance, potable water systems, social facilities and barangay access roads to 100 barangays.

The KALAHI also delivered social projects such as access basic social services, formal education, micro financing and markets for livelihood to address the roots and aggravating problems of the insurgency to 120 conflict-affected barangays. These barangays are primarily in Regions 3, 4, and 5 in Luzon, 6, 7, and 8 in the Visayas and 11 and 13 in Mindanao.

Deles added that in the 32 barangays affected by the conflict in Central Mindanao, particularly in Pikit in North Cotabato and Pagalungan and Pagagawan in Maguindanao around the Buliok Complex, a total of P99,134,650 funds for the rehabilitation and development projects are being disbursed for core shelter, road repair and agriculture livelihood needs to 13,556 families.

Deles also said that aside from the successful poverty reduction program, the President's microfinancing for 300,000 women borrowers per year has an overwhelming positive gain with the direct action of government financial institutions and government-owned corporations.

She said the accomplishments for July 2001 to 2002 stood at 327,577 new borrowers or 109% of target. For July 2002 to May 2003, at least 396,198 new women borrowers were enrolled or 132% of target for the period, with a total of P896.28 million released.

"The policy and program environment to make microfinance a cornerstone of poverty alleviation was enhanced and institutionalized by government. The KALAHI has incorporated microfinance as key intervention in the livelihood and employment strategy for poor communities," Deles said.

Livelihood projects improve Payatas victims' lives

"We have constructed a modest extension of our house," says Dionisio Pabalan whose thriving gas stove repair shop was funded from the livelihood assistance provided by the Arroyo government through the Department of Social Welfare and Development (DSWD).

Dionisio Pabalan is the father of Jomer Pabalan, one of the three Payatas children who floated "bangkang papel" (paper boats) along Pasig River and were presented by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo during her 2001 State of the Nation Address (SONA).

The Pabalan family received P10,000 as a start-up capital for a livelihood project. A year after the project was started, improvement in the Pabalan's house were seen. They have also started planting their backyard with various kinds of vegetables.

Like the Pabalan family, the families of the other two children presented in the SONA were also given P10,000 livelihood assistance. Erwin Dolera's family into piggery while Jayson Banogon's family operate a car accessory business.

Apart from Jomer, Erwin, and Jayson the families of three other children — Christian Custodio, Rachel Manadong, and Ricadonna Sayson — who also floated paper boats received the same amount of assistance. Their families also operate their own livelihood projects: sari-sari store and piggery for the Custodio family; piggery for the Manadong and vending and dress shop for Sayson's family.

Aling Edith Custodio, mother of Christian, said their sari-sari store is doing very well. She explained that from their profits, they were able to start a backyard piggery which improved their income level and standard of living.

“Our earnings now suffice not only for Christian’s needs but of the entire family,” Aling Edith said.

Social Welfare and Development Secretary Corazon Juliano-Soliman said the provision of livelihood assistance to the families of the six children was among the commitments of the government to the Payatas victims. The other commitments were provision of educational assistance to the children which is on going and benefiting the six kids as well as some other 400 children and youth; provision of socio-economic or livelihood support to their parents or guardians; provision of housing assistance to direct and indirect victims; and help for the families in their quest for justice.

Secretary Soliman pointed out that the provision of socio-economic or livelihood support to the other families affected by the tragedy has also been realized. She explained that a total of P1.2 million from the President’s Social Fund was equally distributed among the three organizations representing the affected families as capital for their livelihood projects.

Samahang Tunay ng Phase II Lupang Pangako (Samahang Tunay) operates a credit cooperative, Sandigang Magkakapit Bahay ng Payatas (SANKAP) is into waste management and the July 10 Payatas Victims Organizaiton (J10PVO) undertake a waste recycling center.

DSWD social workers together with a partner NGO the Kristong Hari Foundation, continue to provide technical assistance to the three groups. The DSWD is also the process of linking the organizations with other government agencies for a product marketing and packaging.

Statement of the President: Presidential Fact Finding Commission

I am directing the PNP Chief to ensure that every person whose testimony has a bearing on this case is secured, and every bit of evidence is preserved—for presentation before the Presidential Fact Finding Commission. This investigation must be done meticulously and thoroughly because it concerns our national security. If there was collusion, all those involved up to the mastermind must be prosecuted and locked up. More than this, the people must know the truth because this is a matter that concerns their own safety and that of their communities. We must leave no stone unturned because this is a primary test case for the rule of law and the integrity of the police. A dead end in this investigation, just as a dead end in the hunt for Al-Ghozi, is not acceptable.

Statement of the President: MILF Talks

We are steadily building confidence in the peace process to ensure that the projected formal talks with the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) will not be derailed by sporadic clashes or law enforcement operations. We have no intention to disengage from the peace talks just as we have no intention to let down our guard as far as the security of our communities are concerned. We are working with all stakeholders to insulate the peace process from tactical issues, and to consolidate our strategic position for a durable settlement. We will work with the MILF towards one final peace agreement that would silence the guns and seal a common future under the Constitution.

Statement of the President: Anti-Corruption Drive

A continuing purge of the high echelons of the Government will be sustained under the law and due process. Our democracy has the means and tools to check and contain corruption and we will use these tools to the fullest extent. We will combine prosecution and procedural reforms. The crackdown will be on live suspects as well as on red tape. I ask the support and cooperation of the public to bring this campaign to a higher level of vigilance that will make potential grafters think twice before they act. The people must be the eyes and ears of the Government to deter corruption from the street level to the corridors of the bureaucracy.

Statement of the President: Jeepney Strike

I have instructed the DOTC to sustain the dialogue with the jeepney groups involved, as well as to ensure that transport facilities are fielded to temporarily to serve stranded passengers. We shall pursue a comprehensive solution that will combine appropriate relief measures for jeepney drivers and the overall modernization and expansion of the transport sector. We must avert disturbances in the mass transport system and act expeditiously both on grievances as these arise, and on the immediate needs of the riding public.

DSWD has released P121-M in assistance to displaced families in Central Mindanao

The Department of Social Welfare and Development (DSWD) has already provided a total of P121 million worth of assistance to the families affected by the armed conflict in Mindanao since February this year.

DSWD Secretary Corazon Juliano-Soliman said that of this amount, a total of P87 million was spent on relief assistance to augment the resources of the local government units (LGUs) in conflict areas.

She said that a total of P34 million was spent for core shelter assistance to families whose houses were either partially or totally damaged.

Another P80,000 was spent to repair day-care centers damaged during armed encounters between government and combatants of the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF), Soliman said.

Soliman said that about 33,454 families, or 162,033 persons, are still affected by the armed conflict in 37 municipalities of Zamboanga del Norte (Region IX); Bukidnon and Lanao del Norte (Region X); North Cotabato, Sultan Kudarat, and South Cotabato (Region XII); and Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao (ARMM), particularly Maguindanao, Sulu and Lanao del Sur.

According to Soliman, more families are going back to their places of origin as peace and order situation becomes stable in most areas in Mindanao.

Soliman said that to date, only about 12,098 families, or 59,931 persons, remain inside 17 evacuation centers while 21,356 families, or 102,102 persons, are staying with their relatives and friends outside the evacuation centers.

She said the DSWD has institutionalized the use of family access card for identified and validated victims to maximize the use of government resources.

Statement of Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye

Anti-Corruption

The President is determined to use all possible means consistent with due process to rid government of thieves posing as civil servants.

Travel Advisories

The President understands the concern of other governments for the safety of their nationals. But the negative travel advisories should, in all fairness, not encompass the whole country inasmuch as the peace and order problem is generally confined to some places in Mindanao.

Oil firms to reduce sulfur contents of their diesel products ahead of schedule — Gozun

Environment and Natural Resources Secretary Elisea Gozun today said fuel companies would reduce by 75 percent the sulfur contents on their diesel products as early as November this year, two months ahead of the deadline set under the Clean Air Act.

In a briefing in Malacañang, Gozun said oil companies were required under the Clean Air Act to reduce the sulfur content on their diesel products by 75 percent not later than January 1, 2004.

Gozun said she and Energy Secretary Vicente S. Perez, Jr. were able to convince the oil companies to accelerate the reduction of the sulfur contents by not later than November of this year.

Gozun said this would be implemented initially in Metro Manila and eventually nationwide.

She said this would mean a reduction of the sulfur content in diesel from 2,000 parts per million (ppm) to 500 ppm.

“One key problem which is really in our mandate is to protect public health and encourage investments by making sure that we have a clean and healthy environment. One way of doing that is to make sure that we clean our air of the poisonous gases that we have,” she said.

To improve air quality, Gozun said the government has required emission testing for motorized vehicles prior to registration with the Land Transportation Office (LTO).

She said the DENR is also coordinating roadside enforcement with the different groups already deputized by the LTO such as the Bantay Kalikasan, Metro Manila Development Authority (MMDA) and the different local government units (LGUs).

“And then, of course, we do continue to provide technical seminars. We need to enable especially our public utility drivers and owners to know how they can properly maintain their vehicles while providing service to the public without necessarily causing pollution,” she said.

She added the government is also promoting the use of renewable energy such as the that compressed natural gas (CNG), liquefied petroleum gas (LPG) as well as the coco diesel or bio-diesel.

“Hopefully before the end of this year, we will actually have buses running on CNG already servicing Metro Manila,” she said.

With all of these efforts, Gozun said she is hoping the government could further improve air quality by reducing the level of total suspended particulates by at least 25 percent by next year.

From January to June this year, Gozun reported that the DENR was able to distribute a total of 67,397 hectares of public land to 49,496 families. This first semester accomplishment represent 53 percent of their total target of 127,250 hectares for land distribution this year.

She said 21,686 households were also given renewable tenurial rights to some 180,179 that hectares of forests under the Community-Based Forest Management Agreement (CBFMA) that would ensure the security of tenure of upland dwellers.

“Giving them tenure over these land, we hope to encourage more agro-forestry. And by allowing the people to benefit from this forest land, we also are able to harness them as partners of government in forest protection,” she said.

Gozun said 6,343 hectares of coastal areas were also issued to 4,942 coastal dwellers under the CBFMA. She said this is a partial report that would be completed soon.

All of these land distributions, she said, were mainly to address injustice and poverty.

Presently, she said the DENR is working for the conduct of the survey of 10,000 lots covered by Presidential Proclamations and the issuances of Certificates of Entitlement to Lot Allocation to an estimated 10,000 qualified beneficiaries of housing projects in Metro Manila.

Textbook backlog in public schools eased

Some 10 million copies of textbooks have already been distributed by the Department of Education (DepEd) in 19,000 public elementary and secondary schools nationwide, easing the textbook backlog.

This was the report given by Education Undersecretary for Operations Ramon Bacani DepEd during a press briefing in Malacañang this afternoon.

In his report, Bacani said the 10 million textbooks distributed is part of the 35 million textbooks and manuals the DepEd is set to deliver this year.

Bacani said with these deliveries, the past textbook-pupil ratios ranging from 1:4 to 1:8 for the core subjects of English, Science, Math, and Filipino in priority Grades 1-4 and Years I-II, will now improve to 1:1 to 1:4 in all subjects and grade/year levels, except Grade 3, Year III and Year IV.

He explained that the latter deficiency is due to the failure of bidding last year for these Grade/Year levels. He added that there will be a re-bidding next September for the additional 7.8-million textbooks.

Bacani also reported that 1,608 barangays without access to elementary education have already been identified.

Of this number, he said, a total of 564 barangays now have access to elementary education and 519 schools have been provided with teacher items. Moreover, 43 sites will have their school buildings by the end of next August, he added.

He also said that the revised Basic Education Curriculum has been implemented since June 2002 and now focuses on the five learning areas of English, Science, Math, Filipino and Makabayan from the previous eight per Grade/Year level.

Since the classes were opened this year, he added, the teaching of science has been given an extended time allotment from 300 minutes to 400 minutes each week to promote the culture of science among students.

The use of English as the medium of instruction in Science, Math and English is also being reiterated to improve the competitive edge of the Filipino students with other countries in the world, particularly in Southeast Asia.

Bacani also said the DepEd has succeeded in improving teacher welfare by cleaning up its automatic payroll deduction systems (APDS) for teachers with loans.

GMA to barangay tanods: ‘defeat criminality in your communities’

STA. CRUZ, Laguna – “Crime cannot wait. Let’s defeat crime in the streets and in the communities.”

With this as the underlying theme, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo set into action here today some 6,000 Barangay Tanods who have been tasked to help in the fight against criminality and drugs.

In a consolidated graduation ceremony at the packed New San Luis Recreational, Educational, Cultural and Sports Village, the President swore in the new batch of Barangay Tanods who completed the first part of the government’s Barangay Tanod Professionalization Program.

The three-part program hopes to train and update some 6,000 Barangay Tanods all over the country on crime prevention and control, then mobilize them into action.

“Sana itong pagsasanay na dinaanan ninyo ay magdadagdag ng kagalingan at kompiyansa sa inyong mga gawain, kaya congratulations sa inyo (I hope this exercise that you went through would add to your skill and confidence in your work, so congratulations),” the President told the newly graduated tanods.

She likened the quiet preemptive strike being done by the tanods in their respective areas to the efforts of the Customs officials who recently intercepted a shipment of imported explosives.

“I commend the efforts of our customs officials in the campaign against terrorism. This is another quiet preemptive strike but they contribute to the safety and security of our people,” the President said.

She took the occasion to direct Interior and Local Governments Secretary Jose Lina, Jr. to make sure that all witnesses in the escape of Indonesian terrorist Fathur Roman Al-Ghozi would be given protection and all pieces of evidence preserved for presentation to the Presidential Fact-Finding Commission.

“Itong imbestigasyon ay dapat masinsinan ang trabaho at kompleto dahil may kinalaman sa seguridad ng ating bansa (This investigation should be thorough and complete because it concerns national security),” she said.

The Chief Executive said that if there’s any collusion between those involved, they should be tried and jailed.

She said the government will leave no stone unturned in getting to the bottom of the case because “it is all about the safety of our communities, the integrity of the police and law enforcement.”

The President then cited the role of the tanods in the dismantling of several shabu laboratories in the government’s ongoing campaign against illegal drugs, saying it is the result of their vigilance and concerted efforts.

Philippine Drug Enforcement Agency chief Anselmo Avenido reported that after only one month since the intensified campaign started, three shabu laboratories have been dismantled, already meeting their target for three months.

He said the agency has also neutralized six of the 175 drug syndicates and caught 25 “big fishes.”

“I don’t see any reason why we cannot achieve our targets. We expect to meet them,” Avenido said.

Statement of the President Re: Fact-finding Commission

Let us allow the fact-finding commission to sift through all the facts and allegations and come up with its own judicious findings and recommendations. Speculations will get us nowhere and will play into the hands of the enemy by fragmenting our efforts. The PNP Chief will coordinate with the fact-finding commission to come up with a unified system of handling the public disclosure of findings as these evolve in the investigation, in a manner that will not prejudice ongoing operations. Since the commission has officially begun its work, it must be at the forefront of the public information aspect of this case. All PNP units must concentrate on the job at hand and refrain from engaging the rumor mill.

Statement of the President Re: Typhoon Victims

I sympathize with the victims of the latest typhoon. The National Disaster Coordinating Council (NDCC) will extend assistance to them, and others affected, through the proper agencies and in coordination with the local government units. Our disaster mitigation measures are up and ready but I ask the people to buttress their own community measures.

Statement of the President Re: Lifestyle Check

The entire Office of the President and the Cabinet are open to a lifestyle check. We are all bound to serve with a sense of dignity and public responsibility. While I do not want to cramp the personal taste and lifestyle of those who closely work with the Presidency, there is no place for ostentation or living it up not only at this time of formidable constraints facing our people, but at all times. I encourage a professional ethic that stands on simplicity and forthright public service, untainted by pomp and show and an inordinate display of influence or power.

Statement of the President Re: Anti-Drug Campaign

We want to check the proliferation of drugs among the most vulnerable age groups, but I would like to stress that random drug testing must not unduly stigmatise minors because their future must be protected. We must undertake these tests with prudence, working closely with parents, teachers, school administrations and students organizations. The campaign must be backed up by a clear message that we are determined to clean up the schools of drugs, but we do not aim to shame any particular youngsters or drag them into the limelight.

Let fact-finding body do its work on Al-Ghozi escape, GMA urges public

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today asked the public to allow the Presidential Fact-Finding Commission investigating the escape of Indonesian terrorist Fathur Roman Al-Ghozi and two others to proceed with its work unhampered and refrain from engaging the rumor mill.

“Speculations will get us nowhere and will play into the hands of the enemy by fragmenting our efforts,” the President said in a statement.

The President said Philippine National Police chief Director General Hermogenes Ebdane will coordinate with the fact-finding commission to come up with a unified system of handling the public disclosure of findings as these evolve in the investigation “in a manner that will not prejudice ongoing operations.”

Ebdane has been named by the President to lead a task force that would hunt down the escaped terrorists.

“Since the commission has officially begun its work, it must be at the forefront of the public information aspect of this case,” the President said. “Let us allow the fact finding commission to sift through all the facts and allegations and come up with its own judicious findings and recommendations.”

The President ordered all PNP units to concentrate on the job of tracking down Al-Ghozi and his cohorts and refrain from engaging the rumor mill.

The fact-finding commission was given 30 days by the President to come up with a recommendation on the mysterious escape of Al-Ghozi and company. It is headed by former Justice Secretary Sigfried Ordoñez, with concurrent Justice Secretary Simeon Datumanong and businessman Miguel Varela as members.

RP, Indonesia lead in seeking W.T.O. safeguards vs. unfair foreign competition — Lorenzo

Agriculture Secretary Luis Lorenzo today said that the Philippines and Indonesia are in the forefront of efforts within the World Trade Organization (WTO) to institutionalize special safeguard mechanisms (SSM) to protect developing countries from unfair competition from developed or industrialized nations.

In a press briefing in Malacañang this afternoon, Lorenzo said that an enhanced SSM and the adoption of the strategic products (SP) concept would be beneficial to the country’s agriculture sector since these products would be allowed minimal tariff reductions on account of their importance to food and livelihood security and rural development.

Lorenzo said that the SP concept has been a major item in the Doha Development Agenda on the full integration of special and preferential treatment of products from the developing countries.

He explained that under the SSM, developing countries like the Philippines can impose additional special tariffs, on top of regular tariffs, when our industries are threatened by unhampered importation of cheap products coming from developed countries.

“Given the intransigence of the developed countries to still maintain their large subsidies to the detriment of the developing countries, we must be adequately armed with these defense mechanisms to protect our rural sectors,” Lorenzo said.

According to Lorenzo, the basic imbalance and inequality stems from the reluctance of developed countries to eliminate their trade-distorting subsidies that developing countries cannot afford, while forcing developing countries to further open their markets through the elimination of tariffs.

The proposal of the Philippines, Lorenzo said, is to have an automatic balancing mechanism that would slap subsidized imports with additional tariffs on top of the negotiated tariffs.

“If the developed countries remove their subsidies, then their exports to our markets would just be levied with regular tariffs,” Lorenzo said.

Lorenzo said that in the special session of the WTO Committee on Agriculture in Geneva, the Philippines coordinated with Indonesia in presenting a Statement and Declaration articulating the position of developing countries on the need for safety nets that would protect their products from excessive imports under the WTO agreement.

Aside from the Philippines and Indonesia, the Statement and Declaration was signed by Cuba, the Dominican Republic, Honduras, India, Kenya, Mauritius, Nigeria, Pakistan, Panama, Peru, Turkey, Uganda, Venezuela and Zimbabwe.

The Philippines and other developing countries have complained that their agriculture sectors, livelihood security, rural development and the full and unhampered competitiveness have been unduly prejudiced by the “unfairness” of the WTO agreement.

“We do not believe that rural livelihood and food security concerns can be negotiated in exchange for market access. These are vital public concerns and are, therefore, non-negotiable,” the Statement and Declaration said.

DAR confident of surpassing target of lands for distribution this year

A total of 53,000 hectares of land has been distributed by the Department of Agrarian Reform (DAR) for the first six months of the year, putting it on track to surpass the targeted 100,000 hectares pledged by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo in her State of the Nation Address (SONA).

Agrarian Reform Secretary Roberto Pagdanganan said that this is the first time that DAR has reached half of its distribution target in the first half of the year and with the trend in their land distribution, he is confident of going beyond the target.

Pagdanganan’s enthusiasm has been bolstered by the recent Supreme Court decision declaring Marcos money worth P38 billion as ill-gotten and therefore, as provided by law, must go to the agrarian reform program.

The President has announced that her administration is earmarking P8 billion of the P38 billion Marcos ill-gotten wealth for human rights victims and will hold the amount in escrow pending amendments in the agrarian reform law to allow for such use.

“Imagine what we can do for the farmers and even the former landowners with the resources?” Pagdanganan said. “The program must be able to give landowners just compensation so that they can also engage in farm enterprises.”

In line with the President’s instructions, the DAR, according to Pagdanganan, will also treble the number of Agrarian Reform Communities (ARCs) and fast-track the provision of support services, such as farm-to-market roads, bridges, irrigation and post-harvest facilities and even electrification through solar energy.

On top of land distribution, DAR will also boost farm productivity through various support services, including marketing and product development.

Pagdanganan revealed that with a target of 101,321 hectares for distribution this year, 14 regions have actually accomplished already more than 50 percent of their target as of the first semester.

Topping the list is Region IX which already accomplished 16 percent of its target in land distribution. Second is Region I, with 78 percent and Region XII, with 71 percent.

The Department of Environment and Natural Resources (DENR), on the other hand, has distributed 67,000 hectares of land as of the end of June. The DAR and DENR are tasked to distribute 200,000 hectares for this year.

Pagdanganan said that the accomplishment is remarkable considering that Congress has slashed the DAR budget by more than P2 billion, thereby restricting its capability to acquire and pay for more lands for farmers.

More Filipinos have shelter security under GMA's housing program

The Macapagal-Arroyo administration has achieved outstanding gains in its housing program by providing thousands of Filipinos with shelter security.

Secretary Michael Defensor, chairman of the Housing and Urban Development Coordinating Council (HUDCC), announced this during the press briefing in Malacañang, as part of the HUDCC accomplishment report for the year 2001 to 2003.

Since she assumed the presidency three years ago, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has proclaimed more government lands as housing sites, approved the highest amount as home loans to informal settlers, allocated the biggest funding for housing, and implemented lowest interest rates and efficient process in the granting of housing loans.

Defensor said the President signed 46 issuances as of June 2003, proclaiming a total of 22,600 hectares of unused government lands as potential sites for socialized housing.

These proclamations, Defensor said, secured the tenure of an estimated 202,702 families nationwide

According to Defensor, some 28,312 informal settlers have benefited from the record-setting P1.12 billion funds released by the National Home Mortgage Finance Corporation (NHMFC) in the two and a half years of Macapagal-Arroyo administration.

This excludes the issuance of letters of guarantee to pay the amount of loans applied for, totaling P597 million, upon completion of requirements. An additional 19,529 households are expected to benefit from this.

The said amount — the highest under any administration for a similar period — represents loans granted under the Community Mortgage Program (CMP) to finance the development of 209 urban poor settlements nationwide.

He noted that the housing for formal sector also got a big boost with the P30 billion committed by Pag-IBIG fund for its institutional and end-user financing programs.

Defensor added that since 2001 Pag-IBIG funded the construction or purchase of 131,894 housing units, exceeding by a margin of 3.7 percent its target of 127,165 housing units for the period.

He also said the Pag-IBIG made housing loans more accessible to low-income earner families by bringing down interest rates to their lowest levels. Interest rates now range from 6 percent to 12 percent per annum, depending on the loan amount – the lowest rates in the market to date.

The Pag-IBIG also reduced the number of required documents and the processing time for housing loan applications to seven working days for certain types of loans.

The National Housing Authority (NHA) has added to the list of housing beneficiaries some 62,861 families through its various projects under the socialized housing component of the shelter program since January 2001.

These projects include slum upgrading, sites and services, land tenurial assistance, community land acquisition support, grants-in-aid, cooperative housing, resettlement, emergency housing assistance, housing materials assistance and completed housing units.

The Home Guaranty Corporation (HGC), under its regular corporate guaranty programs, has also invested a total of P31.006 billion in its retail and development guaranty lines from January 2001 to June 2003, resulting in the construction of 57,567 shelter security units.

Labor force grew by 3.4 percent this year, Sto. Tomas reports

The country's labor force grew by 3.4 percent, reaching 33.93 million workers last year, according to the Department of Labor and Employment (DOLE).

This was revealed by Labor Secretary Patricia Sto. Tomas today as she underscored her department's mandate of curbing unemployment and fighting corruption in line with President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's 2002 SONA commitments.

She said the employment rate grew by 3.1 per cent, with more than 906,000 persons employed during the same period.

For the year 2002, the full-year unemployment rate of 11.4 percent (3.874 million) was about the same as the 2001 rate of 11.2 percent, according to Sto. Tomas.

She said the average underemployment rate edged down to 17 percent (5.109 million) from 17.2 percent in 2001.

The strike incidence in year 2002 was also the lowest in 21 years, according to her, with only 36 strikes reported nationwide.

Sto. Tomas said that DOLE's top priority strategies entail employment promotion and facilitating job search.

Sto. Tomas likewise noted that the unemployment rate also decreased to 12.2 percent in April this year compared to the same period last year.

She added that the number of unemployed persons had decreased by 649,000 while the underemployment rate also drop by 4.0 percent as compared to 19.6 percent in April 2002 to 15.6 percent this year.

Sto. Tomas said DOLE will continue to intensify campaign against the two perennial problems of unemployment and corruption.

The labor chief noted that for the first semester of 2003, DOLE forged 24 bilateral agreements with other foreign governments to promote the welfare and enhance the protection of OFWs in host countries.

On its pledge to create and improve job opportunities, DOLE's Kabuhayan 2003 Action Center assisted 57,459 job seekers, including youth, workers in the informal sector and overseas Filipino workers (OFWs).

The DOLE, she added, has listed under the Computerized National Manpower Registry of Skills (CNMRS) a total of 944,744 skills. This database provides readily available and useful information on Filipino workers' skills and competencies for easier job-matching and referral system.

It has also facilitated the deployment of OFWs which totaled 461,041 in the first six months of the year or a daily average of 2,547 and implemented streamlined procedures on the deployment of Filipino overseas.

The Labor Department also spearheaded the operation of the Philippine Seafarer's One-Stop Center (PSOC) which accelerates the verification of the qualifications of Filipino seafarers by manning agencies and international seafaring vessels anywhere and anytime.

Sto. Tomas stressed that it has established 13 POEA satellite offices to bring the government services closer to potential OFWs, as well as reduce opportunities for illegal recruitment.

She said the death benefit for both land-based and sea-based OFWs who died of natural causes was increased by 42.9 percent while of those accidents, by 66.7 percent.

For the DOLE's anti-corruption drive, she reported that a total of 434 illegal recruitment cases were filed in court out of the 788 cases handled while 12 suspected illegal recruiters were arrested and 20 establishments closed and padlocked due to illegal recruitment activities.

She reiterated that they have instituted reforms in the labor adjudication process through the issuance of DO No. 40-03 (amending the implementing rules of Book V of the Labor Code of the Philippines) which established uniform and simplified adjudication processes for resolving labor disputes.

The DOLE has also provided employment assistance to over 60,000 youths under the 2003 Summer Youth Employment Program. And has enrolled 2,159 informal sector workers under the Social Protection Scheme for Workers in the Informal Sector.

"We believe that the war against unemployment and corruption has just begun. For the DOLE, the work ahead nonetheless appears exciting and the goals achievable," Sto. Tomas said.

Mindanao leaders back peace talks with MILF

Mindanao leaders today expressed their full support to the government's peace initiatives with the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF), saying that they all want peace to prevail so that Mindanao can finally catch up with the rest of the country in economic growth.

In a meeting this afternoon in Malacañang with the Mindanao leaders, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo said the MILF has not done any offensive move since the signing of a cessation of hostilities accord between the government and the MILF.

"So I think that we have a very good chance of success at this particular moment," the President said.

The President said that if there are no terrorist attacks or atrocities, the military could go to normal deployment even as she vowed that the safety and security of our communities remain to be the highest consideration and would not be compromised.

"While we want peace, we also want to defeat terror and I want to clarify this to everybody," the President said.

The President then called on those present to extend their support to the peace panel that would be leaving soon for Kuala Lumpur for the resumption of the peace talks with the MILF.

"I ask you to have confidence in them. I believe we are on the verge of a major breakthrough to be able to deliver peace with security and development," the President said.

In an earlier statement, the President said the government will work with the MILF in forging "one final peace agreement that would silence the guns and seal a common future" with them under the Constitution.

Present during the meeting were Executive Secretary Alberto Romulo, Presidential Management Staff head Secretary Silvestre Afable, Jr., Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes, Presidential Adviser on Strategic Concerns Renato de Villa, Social Welfare and Development Secretary Corazon Juliano-Soliman, Agriculture Secretary Luis Lorenzo, Presidential Adviser on the Peace Process Eduardo Ermita, Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye, Presidential

Chief of Staff Rigoberto Tiglao, Armed Forces Chief, Gen. Narciso Abaya, Senators Loren Legarda, Ramon Magsaysay Jr., and Aquilino Pimentel, Jr. and Archbishops Orlando Quevedo and Fernando Capalla.

Also present were the governors, vice governors, board members, city mayors, and congressmen in Mindanao, including the officials of the Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao (ARMM) led by ARMM Gov. Parouk Hussin.

Statement of the President: Coup Rumors

We call on the public to remain calm amid these rumors of destabilization. I acknowledge the existence of legitimate grievances among the young officers in the Armed Forces. I have already talked to their representatives and they assured me of absolute fealty to the chain of command. We are acting on their grievances and I do not blame the young officers for pushing for internal reforms. It is the duty of every commander to look after the welfare of the men and women in uniform, and to contribute to reform in the organization. The expression of their grievances has been proper and lawful. The Chief of Staff is on top of the situation and there is no cause for alarm.

Statement of the President: Peace Process

I am glad to acknowledge the snowballing international support for the peace process, especially from Indonesia – the largest Muslim nation in the world. It is important that the prospective negotiations are secured by a strong international consensus that will lend the necessary impetus to peace and development programs on the ground. The confluence of favorable global, regional and domestic conditions is elevating the prospects for peace. We must grasp this opportunity and not let go until we succeed.

Statement of the President: Al-Ghozi

The fact-finding commission will inform the public of developments based on the facts that will be accumulated in the inquiry. The teamwork of the commission and the law enforcement agencies must be seamless so that efficiency and accuracy can be achieved. There is no sense in keeping this issue in the theater of speculation. If there was a conspiracy, the probe must unearth the mastermind and bring the evidence against everyone involved.

Statement of the President: GSIS

The GSIS must make its position clear before the people, especially if there are vital constraints that have to be hurdled with full public support and understanding. Faith in our institutions of social security is paramount because these stand at the front line of service.

Dureza cites positive growth in former conflict areas in Mindanao

The peace and development strategy of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo in Mindanao has paid off with the former conflict affected areas contributing to the growth rate of the region's economy.

Presidential Assistant for Mindanao Jesus G. Dureza, chairman of the Mindanao Economic Development Council (MEDCO), said the good news about Mindanao's economic performance for 2002 was based on the latest data released by the National Statistics Coordination Board (NSCB).

According to Dureza, in 2002, the gross regional domestic product (GRDP) of Mindanao grew by 2.87 percent, which is 0.41 percentage point higher than the growth rate in 2001.

Dureza said Mindanao's economy is largely driven by the combined agriculture, fishery and forestry sectors, which contributed 37.21 percent followed by services sector at 35.91 percent and industry sector at 26.88 percent.

He said the former conflict affected areas that contributed to the growth rate of the region are Central Mindanao, Western Mindanao and the Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao (ARMM).

Dureza noted that Central Mindanao, which is the SOCSARSKGEN (South Cotabato, Sarangani, Sultan Kudarat and General Santos City) area registered the highest growth rate of 5.6 percent, followed by Western Mindanao with 5.4 percent and then by the ARMM with 4.8 percent.

"So the conflict affected areas before had registered and even outpaced the more progressive regions in Mindanao like Northern Mindanao or Southern Mindanao. This shows and reaffirms the peace and development strategy of the President," Dureza said.

These former SZOPAD (Special Zone of Peace and Development) regions, where most of the conflicts happened, outpaced the performance of more progressive regions, such as Northern Mindanao at 1.3 percent and Southern Mindanao at 2.2 percent. The CARAGA (Surigao del Sur, Surigao del Norte, Agusan del Sur and Agusan del Norte) posted negative growth of 0.4 percent.

More than one-third of Mindanao's GRDP comes from Southern Mindanao followed by Northern Mindanao with 21.6 percent, Western Mindanao with 15.4 percent, Central Mindanao with 15 percent, CARAGA with 7.9 percent and ARMM with 5.4 percent.

Dureza added that the "Mindanao Natin Program" and positive developments like the resumption of the peace talks with the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) could further accelerate the socio-economic growth of Mindanao.

House Oversight Committee satisfied with GMA's performance in fulfilling her SONA pledges

The House of Representatives Committee on Oversight is satisfied with the performance of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo in meeting her commitments spelled out in her 2002 State of the Nation Address (SONA).

In a press briefing in Malacañang this morning, Albay 3rd District Representative Joey Sarte Salceda, chairman of the House Oversight Committee, said that based on his committee's findings, the President had 21 favorable accomplishments and 11 "underperformances."

"More importantly, the Macapagal-Arroyo administration gained more ground on the more politically sensitive indices of performance in 2002 than in 2001 with remarkable achievements in land redistribution, barangay electrification, farm jobs generation, microfinance lending, housing takeouts, easing traffic congestion and garbage collection in Metro Manila," Salceda said.

The independent lawmaker from Bicol said that the "O-Ilaw" project or energization of the rural areas stands out as the 2002 SONA best performer, at 89 percent (as of June 2003) and by end of 2003, the energization rate would likely hit 91 percent.

Salceda said that before the end of her term, the 3,600 energized barangays would already exceed the performance of the past three presidents (Aquino with 2,844 barangays; Ramos with 3,335; and Estrada with 2,075).

“This achievement can only be the result of the single-minded focus and a strong coordination of DOE, NEA and other agencies like Philippine National Oil Corporation-Energy Development Council (PNOC-EDC) and National Power Corporation,” Salceda said.

Salceda said that agriculture is second place with 1.8 million jobs generated in the farming sector over the past two years since SONA 2001, exceeding the target of 1 million and way ahead of the four-year deadline.

The Oversight Committee also found that the biggest accomplishment of the Macapagal-Arroyo administration was in land redistribution with significant achievements in all three categories: agricultural lands (Department of Agrarian Reform); public lands (Department of Environment and Natural Resources) and ancestral domain (handled by the National Commission on Indigenous Peoples).

“These were realized mainly through bureaucratic innovation, mainly devolution of signing authorities and effective lobbying for budgetary priority. This should further gain ground with the recovery of $658 million Marcos deposits,” Salceda said.

Salceda also explained that although there were shortfalls posted in the “A School in Every Barangay” program, out of the 2002 SONA commitment of 517 classrooms, 44 were completed while 200 are under construction as of July 22, 2003.

“Nevertheless, shortfalls are being aggressively addressed with the launching of P4 billion lending window by the National Development Corporation for local government units (LGUs) to build schools,” he added.

On the urban sector, some major positive strides were made in easing traffic congestion and garbage collection in Metro Manila. Average speed in Metro Manila improved from 16.5 kph (January to October 2002) to 17.37 kph in January 2003. The capability of Metro Manila Development Authority (MMDA) to handle garbage also improved, the committee said.

On the issue of peace and order, the Oversight Committee admitted that the strong visibility of the President in the handling of police matters enabled dramatic advances in the war against drugs with 10,360 operations that led to the arrest of 14,585 individuals.

Kidnapping incidents declined by 32 percent, from 99 in 2001 to 67 in 2002. Out of the 37 cases in January to June 2003, 28 cases have been solved.

The committee also said that the efforts of the President in the war against terrorism resulted in a 52 percent reduction in the strength of Abu Sayyaf group, while the strength of insurgents has also been reduced by 22 percent, from 11,930 in 2001 to 9,257 in 2002.

Salceda noted that on the issue of graft and corruption, public perception remains skeptical despite the spirited efforts of the Macapagal-Arroyo administration on this matter.

GMA on the road again dispelling rumors of coup

Malacañang today dismissed coup rumors as mere speculations, stressing that everything is normal, otherwise President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo would not have left this morning for an unscheduled visit to Bulacan and to the typhoon-ravaged province of Isabela.

In his regular press briefing this afternoon in Malacañang, Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye also said that there was nothing unusual about the meeting at the palace Wednesday evening with some 35 young officers of the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP).

Bunye said that the meeting was requested by the officers and as their Commander in Chief, the President has acceded to the request.

“The President has said that every commander has the duty to know the situation of the men and the women serving under the Commander in Chief,” Bunye said.

Bunye emphasized that during the meeting, the young officers pledged their continued loyalty to the chain of command even if they have aired their grievances.

He said that the President feels that expression of grievances by representatives of the young AFP officers are legitimate and should be looked into by the AFP hierarchy.

The President, Bunye said, is confident that the AFP, under Chief of Staff, Gen. Narciso Abaya, is on top of the situation and rumors about restiveness in the military are unfounded.

“There is no cause for alarm on any possible coup, whether today or the following day,” Bunye said.

Stay calm, don't believe coup rumors, GMA tells public

SAN MIGUEL, Bulacan — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today called on the public to remain calm amid rumors of a coup d'état even as she bared the existence of legitimate grievances among the young officers of the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP).

“We call on the public to remain calm amid rumors of destabilization. I uphold the existence of legitimate grievances among the young officers of the Armed Forces. I already talked to many of their representatives and they assured me of absolute loyalty to the chain of command,” the President said during the turnover of command of the First Scout Rangers Regiment (FSRR) at Camp Tecson here.

She said it is the inherent duty of every commander-in-chief to look after the welfare of the men and women in uniform.

“I do not blame the young officers for pushing for internal reforms. The expression of their grievances, so far, I assume, has been proper and lawful,” she said.

She said Armed Forces Chief of Staff, Gen. Narciso Abaya, is on top of the situation and there is no cause for alarm.

The turnover of command at Camp Tecson was presided by major General Alan Cabalquinto, commanding General of the Special Operations Command (SOCOM).

Brig. General Gabriel Ledesma, the outgoing FSRR commander, relinquished his post to his deputy, Col. Danilo Lim. Ledesma was assigned as the new commander of the 2nd Infantry Division of the Philippine Army.

Among the accomplishment of the FSRR under Ledesma's three-year term were the successful combat operations against the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) Misuari Breakaway group, the local communist movement, the Abu Sayyaf and other kidnap-for-ransom groups.

During his remarks, Lim said that as long as he is the regiment commander of the FSRR, the most elite unit of the Armed Forces, his unit “will not be involved in or be utilized for selfish, political and partisan ends.”

“In the event that a destabilization move materializes, no matter how remote the possibility, this unit, the FSRR, will be the first to oppose and block such move,” Lim said.

After the turnover ceremonies, the President joined a “boodle fight” with Lim, Ledesma and the men and officers of the First Scout Ranges at the mess hall.

Among those who joined the President were Region 3 CORD Secretary Renato Diaz, Press Secretary Milton Alingod, Gen. Abaya, Philippine Army Commanding General Gregorio Camiling, Mayor Santi Sevilla and Police Regional Office (PRO) 3 Superintendent Vidal Querol.

The President then shook hands and chatted with the men and company commanders of the FSRR before taking the presidential chopper at around 12:30 p.m. to Cauayan, Isabela to inspect the typhoon-ravaged province.

More barangays now have electricity, DOE says

A year after President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo unveiled the government’s agenda of building a Strong Republic by delivering basic services to everyone, whether rich or poor, some 1,525 barangays nationwide are now enjoying for the first time the benefits and comforts of electricity.

Energy Secretary Vicente S. Perez, Jr. today reported that the country’s barangay electrification level has already reached 88.7 percent with the energization of 1,525 barangays as of June 30, 2003. This leaves only 4,753 barangays out of the 41,999 barangays nationwide that are still without electricity.

The energization of 1,525 has surpassed the President’s SONA commitment of four barangays per day or a total of 1460 barangays in one year.

“Given the geographical and funding constraints, rural electrification has only made snail-paced progress in the previous years. But the President’s strong commitment to deliver basic services to everyone has made it clear that we can no longer take this for granted. Electricity is a key component in improving the lives of our people especially our less privileged rural countrymen,” Secretary Perez said.

Through the accelerated Enhanced Rural Electrification program some 512 barangays were given electricity in Luzon while another 488 barangays were lighted in the Visayas.

In the Mindanao region, about 525 barangays were energized after the President promised to bring the government’s war against poverty to rural Mindanao especially in the areas most affected by the past conflicts.

Perez added that the economic policies and structural reforms being implemented by the administration further strengthen efforts towards attaining complete electrification of all barangays in the country.

Specifically, the Electric Power Industry Reform Act (EPIRA) mandates that the DoE consolidate all efforts by government agencies, and the private sector in rural electrification.

Recently, the DOE together with other government agencies created an expanded rural electrification team to manage the implementation of rural electrification program through enhance public and private partnership.

With the creation of the new electrification administration management team, the government aims to increase barangay electrification level to 91 percent by the end of this year and hopefully attain 100 percent barangay electrification by 2006.

In addition, a major part of the government’s focus on building a Strong Republic is to implement a long-term structural reform that would bring down the cost of electricity. And the only way to reduce the cost of power is to fully implement the benefits brought about by the Power Sector Reform Law.

Perez said that preparations on the establishment of the wholesale electricity spot market (WESM) are underway and near completion. The demo market, which is expected to commence operations by September this year, is seen to result in clear and understood rules for the WESM and at the same time prepare and educate all the industry participants for the operations of the final WESM.

With WESM in place consumers will be empowered to choose their supplier of electricity with the main goal of purchasing the least cost of power.

The Energy Regulatory Commission (ERC) has also fast-tracked the approval of the electric cooperatives (ECs) application for loan condonation as mandated under Sec. 60 of the EPIRA, condoning all outstanding financial obligations of electric cooperatives to the National Electrification Administration (NEA) and other government agencies which were incurred for purposes of financing rural electrification program upon the effectivity of the law.

Perez said as of June 20, 2003 the ERC has granted provisional authority to 100 ECs to reduce rates as a result of loan condonation. In Luzon, 49 ECs have been given provisional authority, 25 in Visayas and 26 in Mindanao.

“Some five million electricity consumers nationwide are expected to enjoy lower electricity rates of debt condonation,” Perez said.

Perez also said that the resolution of 25 out of 35 IPP (Independent Power Producers) contracts has generated savings of about $832 million in net present value (NPV) to the government without undermining the viability of the firms to earn fair and reasonable returns.

GMA releases P35M for Cagayan Valley

ILAGAN, Isabela – President Gloria Macapagal Arroyo today authorized the release of P35 million for the rehabilitation of typhoon-ravaged Cagayan Valley, hardest hit by super typhoon Harurot which pummeled the country for two days.

The President made the announcement after making an aerial inspection of the region to personally see for herself the extent of the damage caused by Harurot.

“Sa ganitong mga pagkakataon nakikita ang pagdadamayan ng mga Pilipino. Tulung-tulungan tayong lahat,” she told the leaders and officials of the provinces of Cagayan, Isabela, Nueva Vizcaya and Quirino.

In a briefing for the President at the Isabela provincial capitol here, Vice Gov. Santiago Respicio estimated the damage to agriculture and infrastructure in Isabela at more than P1 billion.

In Cagayan, Gov. Edgar Lara reported that 85 percent of corn in their flowering stages in some 7,000 hectares of fields was affected. Although electricity has been restored in most areas of the province, he said telecommunication firms have yet to fully resume their services.

Most roads, he said, are already passable and no major bridge has been damaged although the level of water in the Cagayan River is only a meter away from critical.

Regional officials, including Gov. Pedro Bacani of Quirino province and Congressman Rodolfo Albano of the first district of Isabela, called on the National Disaster Coordinating Council and other relief agencies of the government to speed up the rehabilitation work.

The President assured that as she spoke, trucks and helicopters of the Department of Energy carrying equipment for the repair of the transmission lines felled by Harurot are already on the way.

She said telecommunication firms like Smart, Globe, Sun Cellular and Digitel are already working round the clock and vowed to resume operations in the region today.

The President thanked local officials for their speedy reaction to the disaster, saying it is only through the cooperation of both the local and national governments that the country can surmount various odds.

“I’m grateful for the support of the people of Cagayan,” she said. “Salamat din at handa kayong gumastos ng inyong sariling kakayahan at suporta na lamang ang ibinibigay ng pamahalaan (Thank you also that you are ready to spend on your own and the government will support you).”

Statement of the President: Fact-Finding Commission

The Presidential Fact-Finding Commission has acquired full jurisdiction over the investigation and will have control over the custody, security and questioning of potential witnesses. We shall pursue the truth to the end just as we shall hunt down Al-Ghozi without letup. I call on anyone who has information on this case to get in touch with the commission and come forth. This is a matter that is important to our national security and to the safety and well being of every Filipino and other citizens of the world.

Statement of the President: Al-Ghozi Manhunt

The threat of Al-Ghozi is real and we will hunt him down until he is accounted for. The Filipino people and our international allies are on the lookout and he will be caught in the dragnet one way or the other.

Statement of the President: Advisories

There is a perception of instability in our country because of the renewed threat of terrorism. I am neither dismissing these things nor pointing the blame on anybody. The plain truth is that these perceptions are exaggerated and they do not merit the judgment that our country is generally unsafe. The basis of travel advisories adverse to the Philippines is not valid. Our people go on with their day-to-day lives in peaceful and lawful interaction and commerce, despite the many anxieties in their minds. We are not an arena of random, irrational violence.

Statement of the President: Dialogue with AFP Officers

There has been some understandable restiveness but I have resolved this matter directly with the troops. While I urge all soldiers to speak their minds through the chain of command, I shall not hesitate to engage any levels of command in constructive dialogue. The imperatives of leadership dictate this, in view of the growing complexity of national security issues and the speed at which these impinge upon the everyday lives of soldiers, whether in combat or at home. I shall not be armchair Commander in Chief. I want to know the live issues that are going around in the barracks.

Statement of the President: GSIS

I commend the GSIS for its expressed transparency on this matter. For all the vital issues affecting our people, every Government institution must be prepared to lay the truth before the public. GFIs must set the example as part of good corporate governance. I will expect seasonable reports on this matter.

GMA lauds PNP, PDEA for raid on big shabu laboratory in Cavite

TANZA, Cavite — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today lauded the Philippine National Police (PNP) and the Philippine Drug Enforcement Agency (PDEA) for the successful raid of “the mother of all shabu laboratories” in a coastal barangay of this town.

When informed about the raid, the President immediately boarded a helicopter and personally inspected the biggest laboratory and warehouse of methamphetamine hydrochloride or “shabu” inside the Beverly Subdivision in Barangay Capipisa here.

Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose Lina, Jr., who was also present during the raid, informed the President that a pressurized mixer/chamber found inside the shabu laboratory was the biggest they have discovered and has the capacity to produce 30 kilos of shabu per day.

Lina then asked for the President’s approval to convert the laboratory into a rehabilitation center that will house drug dependents under the Justice Department’s rehabilitation program.

Lina added that a speedboat docked in the compound was used to deliver illegal drugs and possibly in exporting the finished product of “shabu” to other countries.

He said the authorities will seek a court order for the forfeiture of the compound in favor of the government.

The joint operatives of PDEA and PNP conducted the raid on the shabu laboratory based on a search warrant issued by Judge Aurelio Icasiano of the Regional Trial Court of Trece Martires City, Cavite.

The shabu facility is housed in a two-story beachfront mansion in a 10,000-square meter compound in Capipisa. This is the same coastal barangay which became notorious in the 1970s as entry point of smuggled “blue seal cigarettes” during the time of Lino Bocalan who later became Cavite governor.

The facility, which can produce an estimated P10 million worth of shabu daily, is reportedly run by Lee Lan Yan alias Jackson Dy, a Chinese national, and another Chinese by the name of Huang Li Na.

The PDEA described Jackson Dy as the “Number 3” drug lord in its order of battle.

The volume of illegal drugs seized in the raid was not immediately available because chemical laboratory personnel of the PNP and the Criminal Investigation and Detection Group (CIDG) are still doing the inventory.

Also present during the raid were PDEA Executive Director Anselmo Avenido, Immigration Commissioner Andrea Domingo and Chief Supt. Edgardo Aglipay, head of the PNP’s Anti-Illegal Drugs Special Operations Task Force.

GMA honors 16 SMEs, banking organizations

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today cited the achievements of the top 16 small and medium enterprises (SMEs) in the country and the banking organizations that guaranteed the loans to these small businesses that are now considered the backbone of the Philippine economy.

At the Ceremonial Hall in Malacañang, the President awarded the Distinguished Partner trophies to the Bank of Commerce, Banco de Oro, Export and Industry Bank, Philippine Bank of Commerce, BMS Rural Bank of Pasig City, Philippine Rural Banking Corporation of Cauayan, Isabela, and the Planters Development Bank.

Planters Bank was the Most Distinguished Partner and was also given the Consistent Excellence Award for 2003 for providing the biggest loan of P396 million for SMEs.

Assisting the President were Trade and Industry Secretary Manuel A. Roxas II and Zorayda Amelia Alonzo, the chairman of the Small Business (SB) Corporation and coordinator of the National SME Development Agenda.

Under the National SME Agenda, the Department of Trade and Industry (DTI), through government financial institutions, has allocated P10 billion loans for the first semester of this year to help SMEs obtain additional capital to improve their productivity and competitiveness.

Roxas said the SMEs comprise more than 90 percent of all businesses in the country contributing more than a third of economic output and providing employment to almost two-thirds of all working Filipinos.

The President also awarded a certificate to DTI Provincial Director Ruben Diciano, whose work and perseverance paved the way for a lively SME sector up north.

The top 16 SMEs awarded by the President were chosen from among 271 candidates nominated by the DTI provincial directors nationwide and were ranked according to their growth in sales, employment and assets.

The top 16 SMEs were the Estacios' Antiques and Hidden Arts, Tropics Agro-Industries, Kimmayongs Primitive Craft, JBRL Enterprises, ATM Ber-Aqua Water Services, Silver Handicrafts, Tito Mike's Food Company, Mother Earth Products, SL Technology Foundation, Along Potteries, Sto. Niño Furniture and Sash Factory, Jonald's Home and Office Furnishing Enterprises, Arlyn's Handicraft, Base Wood Products, The Trader's Design Furniture Shop, and top performer Northlandia Enterprises.

Northlandia owner Paulino Tan, in his speech, said the commitment and perseverance of the Filipino entrepreneurs would not be possible without the intervention of the government's program for the SMEs.

"The private sector is very grateful for the help given to us. You give us encouragement to go on. We commit in enriching our vibrant SMEs to propel our country to become globally competitive," Tan said.

DOJ reports legal victories in high-profile cases

The Department of Justice (DOJ) has scored several legal victories that included the dismissal of one erring judge, conviction of high profile drug smugglers and drug traffickers, and the filing of graft cases against corrupt revenue and Customs officials.

In a report, the DOJ said that in its crackdown of erring judges, one was dismissed, identified as Judge Arnulfo Cabredo, after he was charged with grave misconduct before the DOJ by the Bureau of Customs. He was charged with violation of Republic Act 3601 in relation to the Supreme Court circular prohibiting judges from issuing temporary restraining orders (TROs).

The DOJ has also initiated complaints against Bureau of Corrections Director Ricardo Macala and Prosecutor Oscar Corpuz that resulted in their dismissal from the service.

The DOJ also notched six convictions out of its 27 high-profile drug cases. The quantities of specimen seized ranged from 812.8 gms. to 503 kilograms of shabu; 41 to 91 kgms. of marijuana and 692.16 gms of cocaine hydrochloride.

Among those convicted were Johnny Tan, Jimmy Tan, Henry Chua, Sandra Lim and others who were all meted life imprisonment or reclusion perpetua.

The DOJ has also acted on 47 complaints for violation of Tariff and Customs Code and filed cases against alleged sugar smugglers Jesus Galleto and Jaime Beron.

On anti-terrorism, the DOJ indicted Tahir Alonto of the Pentagon kidnap-for-ransom group for kidnapping Dr. Vicente Cavalida, Jr., Engr. Eduardo Cavalida, and Cheryl Pagales. Alonto was meted the death penalty by lethal injection.

The Justice Department also indicted international terrorist Fathur Roman Al-Ghozi in connection with the 2000 LRT bombing while it has pursued the cases against the leaders and members of the Abu Sayyaf Group like Nadzmi Sabdulla a.k.a. Commander Global, Khadaffy Janjalani, Galib Andang, a.k.a. Commander Robot, who were involved in a series of kidnapping incidents in Pearl Farm in Davao, Basilan, Sulu and Palawan.

The DOJ has also vigorously prosecuted the plunder cases against former President Joseph Estrada and his son, Jinggoy. It has already presented 76 witnesses and is ready to rest its case.

Finally, the DOJ has successfully extradited to the United States Manila Congressman Mark Jimenez who is now facing criminal charges in the Florida District Court and currently working on the possible extradition to the Philippines of Dante Tan from Australia and Atong Ang from the United States.

RP back in game as tourist destination — Gordon

Back in the game as a tourist destination.

That's how Tourism Secretary Richard Gordon described the Philippines as far as visitor arrivals last year is concerned, saying government efforts to project the country as a safe and attractive destination is finally paying off notwithstanding the threat of SARS and terrorism.

In a media briefing yesterday, Gordon said that after a four-year decline in tourist arrivals from 1998 to 2001, visitor arrivals rose 1.93 million in 2002, an increase of 7.6 per cent compared to 2001.

He said that the growth in Philippine tourism was achieved despite the adverse effects of the 9/11 attack in New York, the bombing in Bali, Indonesia and internal terrorism and peace and order crises.

Tourism receipts, according to him, likewise increased by 83 per cent from $1.722 billion in 2001 to over $1.874 billion in 2002.

"With each tourist generating at least $1,000 in foreign exchange earnings, the potential of tourism as a huge dollar earner can be further tapped through focused and aggressive promotions in pre-selected short-and long haul key markets," he said.

The tourism chief said international tourist arrivals have been increasing by 13.2 per cent to 175, 728 in January, by 9.6 per cent to 338,354 in February and 2.6 percent to 495,390 in March compared to the figures in the same months last year.

There was a slight decrease of four per cent in April because of the adverse global conditions from SARS, terrorism and the weak global economy. March, April and May were the months hardest hit by the SARS outbreak.

To sustain the momentum from 2002, the DOT, with the endorsement of the World Tourism Organization (WTO), launched the "Visit the Philippines Year 2003" last Feb. 1.

"The Visit the Philippines Year aims to project the Philippines as a safe and attractive destination and to create a rallying call for Filipinos to inculcate a culture of tourism that will make the Philippines a World Class Wealth of Wonder (WOW) that will attract many tourists from over the world," he said.

The DOT chief added that running parallel to the international efforts of the DOT is a domestic tourism promotions effort.

“Visit Philippines Year is geared towards foreign and domestic tourists,” he said. “It is also our objective to make the Filipinos aware of their own destinations and attractions and to either bring them to these through efficient means of transportation like the Strong Republic Nautical Highway, or to bring these to them by way of showcasing these in Intramuros.”

1.4 million indigent families benefit from health care insurance

Some 1.4 million indigent families this year have benefited from the health care insurance system of the Macapagal-Arroyo administration under the Department of Health-Philippine Health Insurance Corporation (PHIC) program.

Health Secretary Manuel Dayrit said the number of indigents enrolled in the PHIC program has increased by one-third, with almost seven million members at present, compared to 4.7 million last year.

This translates to an increase in the number of indigent families enrolled from 935,000 to 1.4 million during the middle of the year. It is expected to go up to about 8 million before the year ends.

The PHIC granted to its indigent members a 67-percent increase in benefit ceilings for room and board for primary hospitals. The PHIC also accorded an increase in benefit ceilings of 36 percent for secondary hospitals and 16 percent for tertiary hospitals.

In a press briefing in Malacañang this afternoon, Dayrit noted that the “GMA 50 Program of the DOH” addresses the need for affordable, quality medicines through four initiatives, namely: parallel importation of high-quality branded essential medicines and low prices; procurement of locally-manufactured high-quality generic medicines at low prices; promoting financial and geographic accessibility of high quality essential medicines to small communities through the Botika ng Barangay initiative; and making efficacious household remedies available to more people at the rolling stores of the National Food Authority (NFA).

He said that when the President approved the importation of low-priced but high-quality medicines to other countries like India, many poor Filipinos already benefited from this.

In fact, Dayrit said, the low-cost, high-quality generic medicines are already accessible to the public through 76 hospital pharmacies of the DOH and 112 pharmacies of the local government units.

To date, there are now 42 popular and essential drug preparations being imported by the Philippine International Trading Corporation and distributed through government hospitals, and district and regional hospitals nationwide.

The low-cost medicines are also available to some 284 Botika ng Barangay outlets. Another 200 outlets are expected to open before the end of the year.

Dayrit noted that aside from the broadening health insurance coverage for indigents and low-cost medicines for the poor, the DOH got its exemplary performance when they successfully contained the spread of endemic diseases such as dengue and measles, and the new global disease threat posed by the Severe Acute Respiratory Syndrome (SARS).

The successful campaign of the government against SARS was caused by the vigilance and astuteness of the country’s health personnel and the perseverance of epidemiologists in tracing possible suspects and contacts of the dreaded disease.

To date, Dayrit said over 655,000 incoming airline passengers from various countries have been screened, yielding 92 suspected cases. Over 900 contacts of SARS suspected cases were traced and subjected to clinical examination.

He added that the DOH established two SARS isolation centers at the Fabella Hospital in Manila and Research Institute for Tropical Medicine (RITM) in Muntinlupa City as well as in 15 regional hospitals during the height of the SARS threat.

GMA's micro-finance program exceeded target, says House Oversight Committee

The Macapagal-Arroyo administration has exceeded its target of women beneficiaries in its micro-finance program, thereby improving the lives of people in the countryside, according to the Committee on Oversight of the House of Representatives.

In a report, Albay Congressman Joey Salceda, committee chairman, said that the total number of women beneficiaries of the micro-finance program as of May this year is already 398,198, or already 133 percent of the target of 300,000 per year.

In her first State of the Nation Address (SONA) in 2001, the President vowed to make micro-finance a cornerstone in her administration's war against poverty.

She has committed to increase the number of women who could borrow without collaterals from government financial agencies to 300,000 a year.

Salceda said that even before the half-year period, the number of women-borrowers has already exceeded the yearly target by almost 100,000.

He said that despite the absence of collateral, repayment rate in the program has remained at a high 95 percent due to peer pressure being implemented among the borrowers.

Salceda said that aside from boosting the income of poor households, micro-finance has also empowered women as breadwinners of their families or in partnership with their husbands.

Micro-finance, which is patterned after the highly-successful lending scheme of the Grameen Bank in Bangladesh, has proven to be an effective tool in the fight against poverty.

It is aimed to provide small loans without collateral the "unbankable" sector of society, like housewives, who would want to open small businesses like sari-sari stores or food stalls, or engaged in other income-generating ventures.

At present, the People's Credit and Finance Corporation (PCFC) is the biggest micro-lending arm of the government, having released some P829.42 million for the period from July 2002 to May 2003.

The other micro-lending agencies are the National Livelihood Support Fund (NLSF), Technology and Livelihood Resource Center (TLRC), Small Business Guarantee and Financing Corporation (SBGFD), Development Bank of the Philippines (DBP), and the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas (BSP).

President's radio address to the nation

Magandang umaga sa inyong lahat.

Mga panibagong kaso na naman ng korupsiyon ang isinampa ng ating pamahalaan sa ilang kawani ng ating gobyerno, kabilang na dito ang ilang mga opisyal ng BIR at Bureau of Customs.

Ako ay nagagalak at patuloy na nagkakaroon ng magandang resulta itong ating pinaigting na kampanya laban sa korupsiyon sa iba't-ibang ahensiya ng ating pamahalaan. Isang kampanyang hindi lamang nakatuon sa pagpaparusa sa mga nagkasala kundi sa pagbawi ng mga ninakaw sa ating pamahalaan at sa taong bayan.

Bilyun-bilyong piso ang nawawala sa kaban ng taong bayan taon-taon dahil sa korupsiyon, kaya hindi lamang dapat maparusahan ang mga nagnanakaw na ito kundi kailangan maibalik nila ang kanilang ninakaw.

Ang nakakasiya sa pinaigting na kampanyang ito ay ang katotohanang ang lahat ng antas sa ating pamahalaan ay aktibo dito – ang lehislato, sa paglalabas ng mga karagdagang batas para lalong mapasigla ang kampanyang ito; ang hudikatura, para mabigyang katarungan ang mga kasong kaugnay dito; at ehekutibo, na nagsasakatuparan ng mga batas na may kaugnayan dito.

Halimbawa sa parte ng Kongreso, nitong nakaraang Enero lamang ay ipinasa nito at nilagdaan ko naman kaagad ang R. A. 9184 o ang Government Procurement Reform Act na kung saan lahat ng mga bidding ay gagawin ng on-line o e-procurement. Nakabawas ng malaki ito sa mga anomalya sa pamimili ng ating gobyerno. It has helped improve efficiency, standardized bidding procedures and encouraged competition. Nariyan din ang ipinasa nilang Anti-Money Laundering Act na panangga laban sa tinatawag na “dirty money”, at isang paraan para mabawasan ang korupsiyon sa ating banking system.

Ang ating hudikatura naman kamakailan lamang ay may mga desisyon na lubhang ikinasiya ng taong-bayan. Kabilang na dito ang desisyon na ang coco levy, na bilyon-bilyong piso na ngayon ang halaga, ay tunay na pag-aari ng mga magniniyog at ang daan-daang milyong dollar na deposito sa Switzerland ill-gotten at dapat lamang maibalik sa Pilipinas. Ito ay mga ay desisyong ikinatuwa ng milyun-milyong Pilipino, higit sa lahat ang mga land reform beneficiaries.

Samantala, hinihiling ko sa Kongreso na magpasa ng batas na maglalaan ng 8 bilyong piso bilang kabayaran ng mga human rights victims noong martial law.

Kami namang nasa ehekutibo ay lubos at patuloy ang pagkilos laban sa korupsiyon dahil ang lahat ng mga taong-gobyerno ay dapat maglingkod ng may dignidad at responsibilidad. Kaya nga bilang Pangulo at punong-ehekutibo, ang unang Administrative Order na aking ipinalabas ay tungkol sa pagpapalaganap ng malinis na pamamahala o good governance, at dito ipinagbawal ko sa lahat ng mga ahensiya ng gobyerno na makipag-negosasyon sa aking mga kamag-anak at kamag-anak ng aking asawa, tungkol sa kontrata, supply o appointments sa mga posisyon.

Inatasan ko rin ang lahat ng ahensiya ng pamahalaan na magbuo ng kanilang Internal Audit System para tiyakin ang maayos at malinis na pagpapatakbo ng kani-kanilang tanggapan.

Itinatag ko ang Presidential Anti-Graft Commission na siyang nag-iimbestiga at dumidinig sa mga kasong administratibo ng lahat ng presidential appointees. Kasama ang Civil Service Commission, Office of the President, NBI at PNP, isinasagawa nila ang lifestyle check sa mga opisyal ng pamahalaan, kasama na ang mga huling kinasuhan mula sa BIR at BoC.

Binuo rin natin ang Bureau of Customs Task Force on Good Governance and Anti-Corruption para maipatupad ng mabuti ang Customs Code of Conduct and Rules of Ethics.

Pilit na rin nating inaalís ang red tape sa gobyerno sa pamamagitan ng pagbabawas ng mga dapat pumirma sa mga papeles. Halimbawa sa housing permits, dati umaabot sa 90 days ang processing, ngayon ay 30 to 45 days na lamang. At ang mga pumipirma ay nabawasan mula 188 hanggang 40 na lamang.

Pinaiiral na rin natin ang “Substitute Filing System” sa pag-file ng Income Tax Returns para doon sa purely income earners, na ikinasiya ng may tatlong milyong taxpayers dahil hindi na sila kailangan pumila pa para mai-file ang kanilang ITR.

Naglunsad din tayo ng kampanya laban sa mga taong may mga pekeng professional licenses.

Naglagay din tayo ng Resident Ombudsman sa bawat ahensiya ng gobyerno para maaksyunan kaagad ang mga tiwaling opisyal at kawani ng pamahalaan.

Lingid marahil sa kaalaman ng karamihan, ilang libong kawani at opisyal mula sa ibat-ibang ahensiya ng ating pamahalaan ang nahaharap ngayon sa iba’t-ibang kaso sa mga tanggapang may hurisdiksyon sa kanilang mga indibidwal na usapin. Kabilang na dito iyong mga sensational cases kamakailan, tulad ng mga DPWH officials na sangkot sa vehicle repair scam, iyong mga opisyal ng PEA na sangkot sa ma-anomalyang pagpapagawa ng President Diosdado Macapagal Avenue, yung mga sangkot sa pag-divert sa private account ng taxpayers money sa Land Bank, yung limang judges na involved sa corruption cases, at marami pang iba, kabilang na ang may 20,000 na indibidwal na taxpayers.

Ito ay ilan lamang sa ating mga nagawa at patuloy na ginagawa para maayos at malinis ang takbo ng ating pamahalaan. Pero ang lahat ng mga ito ay lubos na magtatagumpay lamang kung ang ating mismong mamamayan ay lubos din suporta, kung kayo mismo ang magmamatyag at magsusuplong ng mga katiwaliang nangyayari sa inyong paligid. Marami na rin sa atin ang gumagawa ng mga pagbantay at pagsusuplong na ito. Ang iba nga ay bumubuo pa o sumasali sa mga organisasyon para mas matatag nilang maisagawa ito. Pero ang karamihan pa rin ay takot dahil ayaw nilang madawit sa kaso o kaya ay takot sila sa maaring maging ganti ng kanilang isusuplong.

Ito ngayon ang binibigyan ko ng matamang atensyon kung papaano natin mapoprotektahan ang mga may malasakit na ito sa ating pambansang kapakanan. Sa ibang bansa tulad ng Amerika ay may mga batas ukol dito – na kung saan ang ganitong mga mamamayan na kung tawagin nila ay whistleblowers ay binibigyan ng proteksyon ng pamahalaan. Alam ko na sa ating Kongreso ay may panukalang batas na ukol dito at naghihintay lamang ng delibirasyon.

Sa parte naman ng ehekutibo ay inatasan ko na ang PAGC na pag-aralang mabuti ang bagay na ito at magbigay sa akin ng rekomendasyon sa lalong madaling panahon. Kailangang mabigyan natin ng sapat na proteksyon at pangangalaga ang mga nagmamalasakit sa ating bansa.

As I have said before, we shall crack down on corruption in the same degree that we are cracking down on terror and drugs. We will punish officials at any level in accordance with due process. Corruption does not only bring disgrace to the public service but strikes at the root of national security and stability. We cannot allow the few bad eggs to tarnish the good name and prestige of the majority of civil servants who serve honestly and devotedly. I encourage a professional ethic that stand on simplicity and forthright public service, untainted by pomp and show and on inordinate display of influence of power.

Gusto kong tiyakin na ang ating mamamayan ay nabibigyan ng serbisyong matapat at malinis na nararapat lamang sa kanila.

Maraming salamat.

Positive growth of former conflict areas in Mindanao cited

The peace and development strategy of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo in Mindanao has paid off as shown by the positive growth of the former conflict affected areas, particularly in Central Mindanao.

In a report, Presidential Assistant for Mindanao Jesus G. Dureza, who is also chairman of the Mindanao Economic Development Council (MEDCO), said the good news about Mindanao's economic performance for 2002 was based on the latest data released by the National Statistics Coordination Board (NSCB).

According to Dureza, in 2002, the gross regional domestic product (GRDP) of Mindanao grew by 2.87 percent, which is 0.41 percentage point higher than the growth rate in 2001.

Dureza said Mindanao's economy is largely driven by the combined agriculture, fishery and forestry sectors, which contributed 37.21 percent, followed by services sector at 35.91 percent, and industry sector at 26.88 percent.

He said the former conflict affected areas that contributed to the growth rate of the region are Central Mindanao, Western Mindanao and the Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao (ARMM).

Dureza noted that Central Mindanao, which is the SOCSARSKGEN (South Cotabato, Sarangani, Sultan Kudarat and General Santos City) area registered the highest growth rate of 5.6 percent, followed by Western Mindanao with 5.4 percent and by the ARMM with 4.8 percent.

"So the conflict affected areas before had registered and even outpaced the more progressive regions in Mindanao like Northern Mindanao or Southern Mindanao. This shows and reaffirms the validity of the peace and development strategy of the President," Dureza said.

These former SZOPAD (Special Zone of Peace and Development) regions, where most of the conflicts happened, outpaced the performance of more progressive regions, such as Northern Mindanao at 1.3 percent and Southern Mindanao at 2.2 percent. The CARAGA (Surigao del Sur, Surigao del Norte, Agusan del Sur and Agusan del Norte) even posted a negative growth of 0.4 percent.

More than one-third of Mindanao's GRDP comes from Southern Mindanao followed by Northern Mindanao with 21.6 percent, Western Mindanao with 15.4 percent, Central Mindanao with 15 percent, CARAGA with 7.9 percent and ARMM with 5.4 percent.

Dureza added that the "Mindanao Natin Program" and positive developments like the resumption of the peace talks with the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) could further accelerate the socio-economic growth of Mindanao.

GMA confident of making RP drug-free as gov't tightens noose on suspected drug lord

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo expressed confidence that the country would be drug-free within a year as the authorities further tightened the noose around a Chinese national believed to be the third largest manufacturer in the Philippines by raiding his townhouse in Pasay City and uncovering another P3.5 billion worth of illegal drugs, precursors and equipment.

The President said that this was the biggest drug haul in the history of law enforcement in the country as she congratulated the Philippine National Police (PNP), particularly the task force headed by Deputy Director General Edgardo Aglipay, and the Philippine Drug Enforcement Agency (PDEA) for "a very good job."

"I commend all the members, all the task forces under the PDEA ... they have done a very good job," said the President during an inspection this morning of the Pasay city townhouse of Li Ya Lan alias Jackson Dy, listed as No. 3 in the order of battle of the PDEA.

It was the second successful strike in two days against Dy, whose seaside mansion in Barangay Capipisa, Tanza, Cavite was raided yesterday and found to be what the PDEA and the Philippine National Police called "the mother of all drug factories in the country."

The President said that at the rate the law enforcement authorities are going and with the support of the community and based on the current successful anti-drug campaigns, “maybe we can hope and dream that within a year, Metro Manila will be drug-free.”

On Friday, the President also personally inspected the biggest shabu laboratory and warehouse in Barangay Capipisa where a 10-foot pressurized chamber that can produce 30 kilograms of shabu daily valued at P60 million, was found.

This morning, another raid was conducted on Dy’s townhouse on Lancaster St. in Pasay City where P3.5 billion worth of shabu and chemicals, including ephedrine and iodine, as well as shabu-making equipment and paraphernalia, were discovered and seized by authorities.

Dy, who was arrested Friday at Bayview Park Hotel in Manila, reportedly admitted to the PNP anti-drug task force that he maintained the shabu laboratory in Tanza, Cavite.

Aglipay said it is possible that the “state of the art” drug factory in Tanza, Cavite, probably the biggest uncovered by the police since 1997, was exporting shabu to other Southeast Asian countries.

Five other Chinese nationals, identified as Li Tian Wah, Yao Shiao Mei, Li Huo Long, Sy Suan Hong, and Wang Li Na, were also arrested.

Aglipay, chief of the Presidential Task Force Against Illegal Drugs, said Dy and his companions would be slapped with drug charges and violations of immigration laws.

Authorities said that Dy ranks third in the country’s illegal drugs business and could have been operating for the last 15 years.

GMA vows continued crackdown vs corrupt public officials

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo said today her administration will crack down on corruption in the same degree that it is now cracking down on terror and drugs.

In a radio message this morning, the President said the government will punish officials at any level in accordance with due process.

“Corruption does not only bring disgrace to the public service but strikes at the root of national security and stability,” she said.

“We cannot allow the few bad eggs to tarnish the good name and prestige of the majority of civil servants who serve honestly and devotedly.”

She encouraged a professional ethic that stand on simplicity and forthright public service, “untainted by pomp and show and on inordinate display of influence and power.”

The President expressed elation over the results on her intensified campaign against corruption which she said focuses not only in punishing the guilty but also in recovering whatever loot that belongs to the government and the people.

Concerted efforts by the legislative, judiciary and the executive branches of government, she said have exposed those who are doing the people a great disservice.

“Pero ang lahat nang ito ay lubos na magtatagumpay lamang kung ang ating mismong mamamayan ay lubos din ang suporta – kung kayo mismo ang magmamatyag at magsusuplong ng mga katiwaliang nangyayari sa inyong paligid (But all these will be completely successful only if the entire citizenry would be vigilant and expose those who are committing corruption around them),” she said.

GMA orders arrest, court martial of rogue junior officers, soldiers

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo ordered tonight the Armed Forces of the Philippines and the Philippine National Police to hunt down and arrest a small band of rogue junior officers and soldiers who have deserted their posts and illegally brought weapons with them.

The order came following the uncovering of a plot by this same group to undermine the chain of command and engage in an unconstitutional adventurist exercise, according to AFP Chief of Staff Gen. Narciso Abaya.

“In the spirit of dialogue and understanding, I have bent backwards and listened to the legitimate grievances of some of our young officers, they being officers and gentlemen, imbued with honor and loyalty to the Flag and Constitution,” the President said.

“But in spite of this, these rogue officers have broken the AFP’s chain of command. They have broken the law. They will be court martialed.”

The 10 unaccounted officers have been identified as follows:

1. LTSG Antonio F. Trillanes IV PN
2. LTSG James A. Layug PN
3. CAPT Gerardo O. Gambala PA
4. CPT Laurence Louis Somera PA
5. CPT Milo Maestrecampo PA
6. CPT Albert Baloloy
7. 1LT Laurence San Juan
8. 1LT Florentino Somera PA
9. 1LT Jose Enrico Demetrio Dingle PA
10. 1LT Warren Lee G. Dagupon PA

Following is the President’s statement:

On my orders, the Armed Forces of the Philippines and the Philippine National Police are hunting down to arrest a small band of rogue junior officers and soldiers who have deserted their posts and illegally brought weapons with them.

They are fugitives from military justice. This is an exercise doomed from the start. It has no moral cause. It violates the welfare of the people, aggravates their prevailing hardships, and affects their jobs and livelihood.

In the spirit of dialogue and understanding, I have bent backwards and listened to the legitimate grievances of some of our young officers, they being as officers and gentleman, imbued with honor and loyalty to the Flag and the Constitution.

But in spite of this, these rogue officers have broken the AFP’s strict chain of command. They have broken the law. They will be court-martialed.

The Republic of the Philippines will exact the maximum penalty for the purveyors of mutiny or rebellion. This warning extends to unscrupulous politicians who exploit the messianic complex of these rogue officers for their naked ambitions.

I call on our people to be vigilant and denounce these misguided elements.

I assure all that we are in full control of the situation.

Following is AFP Chief of Staff Narciso Abaya's statement:

The Armed Forces of the Philippines has uncovered a plot by some rogue junior officers and soldiers to undermine the chain of command, break ranks and engage in an unconstitutional adventurist exercise. We have confirmed that these officers and soldiers have deserted their posts bringing with them weapons and have associated themselves with some groups with personal and or political interest.

I have already issued orders for them to be arrested, charged and court-martialed for mutiny and conspiracy to commit rebellion. We are closely monitoring the situation and we will keep the public informed.

In the meantime, I enjoin our people to remain calm with the assurance that the AFP is taking aggressive yet appropriate counter measures against these small group of rogue officers and men. The Armed Forces and the chain of command express our loyalty to the constitution and our democratic institutions, and our solid support to our Commander-In-Chief.

GMA gives ultimatum to soldiers occupying Makati

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo gave the military junior officers and soldiers occupying a part of Makati until 5 this afternoon to stand down, surrender their weapons and return to barracks or face the force of military action.

Going on the air nationwide at about 9:40 a.m. today and addressing the officers and soldiers as "your Commander in Chief," the President warned that beyond the 5 p.m. deadline, "the Chief of Staff (Gen. Narciso Abaya) is authorized to use reasonable force to dislodge your group quickly and efficiently, and arrest you."

"I urge you, in the interest of those who still believe in your cause, to make the right decision," the Commander in Chief added.

"I remind you that there is absolutely no justification for the action you have taken," the President said.

Following is the full text of the President's statement:

I would like to address this message directly to the soldiers in Makati

This is your Commander in Chief

I would like you remind you that there is absolutely no justification for the actions you have taken.

You have crossed the line of professionalism and are now engaged in unlawful political action backed by the use of force.

Your actions are already hovering at the fringes of outright terrorism. You will find no support for your actions among our people and the world.

I asked you to remember your oath to the flag. You have already stained the uniform. Do not drench it with dishonor I ask others in the Armed Forces to keep to the constitutional side of the line.

I am duty bound, under the same oath you took, to uphold the Constitution at all times. For this reason, I am giving you up to five o'clock this afternoon to stand down, surrender down your weapons and return to barracks.

Past this deadline, the Chief of Staff is authorized to use reasonable force to dislodge your group quickly and efficiently, and arrest you. I urge you, in the interest of those who still believe in your cause, to make the right decision now.

Even if you think you can gain political power in this way, which you cannot, you will realize that there is no substitute for democracy and constitutional means to solve the problems of our people. Do not believe that force will change our nation overnight

I do not take this assault on our Constitution personally. I have no personal rancor against anyone of you. I am sad that your career has gone astray and to waste, in this manner. I hope there is still time to repair it. I pray that God will extend to you his supreme guidance.

Lines of communication open to soldiers gone astray, says Malacañang

Malacañang said today that the lines of communication remain open for a dialogue with military officers and soldiers who have gone astray.

In a press briefing in Malacañang and in interviews with various radio and television stations, Presidential Spokesman Ignacio R. Bunye said President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo and the entire government is on top of the situation, finding a speedy and peaceful solution to the crisis.

Bunye at the same time appealed to the public to remain calm and to avoid the Makati area, particularly the area now being occupied by a band of soldiers.

He also said the entire Armed Forces of the Philippines remains in full support of the Macapagal-Arroyo government and the people.

“Our lines of communication remain open, and we remain hopeful that a speedy and peaceful solution to the problem would be reached through dialogue,” Bunye said.

“We’re willing to wait the whole morning” in order to have a dialogue with them, the Presidential Spokesman said.

Bunye also appealed to the officers and men occupying Makati not to worsen the situation and to confine their action to where they are now.

The Presidential Spokesman also appealed to the various political leaders and factions now to fuel the present crisis.

“Let’s not try to aggravate the situation. Let’s try to confine the extent of the effects of this situation to the present level,” he added.

“Itong insidenteng ito ay isolated at walang suporta mula sa ibang miyembro ng Armed Forces (The present situation is isolated and does not have the support of other members of the AFP),” Bunye also said.

Addressing the soldiers who have gone astray, Bunye said “let us consider the safety of our countrymen and the foreign guests” visiting the country who were caught in the Makati siege.

Statement of Vice President Teofisto Guingona, Jr.

We need sobriety. The call of the hour is to be calm and deliberate. Any misstep can further inflame what already is a very tense and explosive situation. While we need to listen to the legitimate grievances of soldiers who have dared to stand up for what they believe in, the greater and immediate challenge is to defuse this explosive state and resolve the crisis peacefully without bloodshed. Let us pause and use and use this crisis as an opportunity to heal the division in our land. Let this heightened passion be the impetus for all of us to one nation again, despite our diversity and our differences.

Finally, let us be one in praying to our God Almighty that His power reign over all of us and His peace be our refuge. Let us pray for a meaningful resolution to this crisis.

Malacañang warns of negative impact of Makati mutiny on national economy

Malacañang warned today of the severe impact on the economy of the siege by the rebel military officers and soldiers in the Makati business district.

In a press briefing in Malacañang, Trade and Industry Secretary Manuel A. Roxas II said the Makati mutiny “will certainly have a negative impact on our economy and, even now, the business sector is reeling in a state of shock.”

“Our economy cannot tolerate military adventurism. Peace and order are among the major considerations of investors in their decision to locate and remain in the Philippines,” Roxas said.

“This action of the military rebels will not do good for the development of our economy, lalu na sa paghahanap ng trabaho at hanapbuhay,” Roxas said.

He expressed hope that the Makati siege will be resolved soon to wipe away its negative impact on the capital market, especially the stock market.

“We must remember the 1989 coup that brought down our economy to nearly zero growth – it took us several years before our economy began to recover,” Roxas said.

He said he is in constant communication with the leaders of various business organizations and assured them of a speedy solution and return to stability.

Roxas also assured that the DTI is also monitoring the prices of basic commodities.

Tourism Secretary Richard J. Gordon echoed the sentiment of Roxas, further assuring the people that other parts of the country are moving business as usual.

While the military mutiny has the nation’s attention riveted on Makati, Gordon said “the rest of the country is moving business usual. Nonetheless, this (rebellion) certainly would take its toll on the economy and the big loser here is Juan de la Cruz.”

Gordon thus appealed to the mutineers to open the lines of communication lines and resort to peaceful negotiations.

He added that past coups d’etat had a negative impact not only on the country’s economy but also pulled down the tourism industry as well.

Ebdane calls on all PNP officers, men to support GMA, gov’t, Constitution

Director General Hermogenes Ebdane, chief of the Philippine National Police, called today on all police officers and men all over the country to “continue to assure the public that the PNP and AFP (Armed Forces of the Philippines) are squarely behind the leadership” of President Macapagal-Arroyo and fully support the Constitution.

In a statement and guidance addressed to all regional police directors, Ebdane also called on the PNP officers and men to “remain calm and vigilant and strictly follow the chain of command.”

Meanwhile, the members of Philippine Military Academy Class 1994 today expressed their full support to President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, the government and the Constitution.

In a statement, Capt. Noel Tolentino, PMA Class 1994 president, said: “We believe in the chain of command and abhor military adventurism.”

Any change for good should be done through peaceful means, Tolentino stressed.

“We believe in the existing military system and, with that, we will continue to perform our entrusted duties for the Filipino people,” he added.

Martial Law anathema to GMA, says Golez

Not for a single moment did President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo consider the declaration of martial law during the two and a half years that she has been in power.

“The President has gone through a lot of crises in her administration,” said National Security Adviser J. Roilo Golez during a press briefing in Malacañang today. “But not for a single moment did she consider martial law.”

Martial law is almost anathema to her instinct, Golez added.

“We had May 1, 2001, and not once was martial law discussed at the time,” said Golez. “And of course we had the Abu Sayyaf situation, and then the bombings in Zamboanga and Davao. But not for a single moment did the President consider martial law,” he went on.

Golez noted martial law can be declared only in the case of two events – rebellion and invasion. “And then it (declaration) has to be submitted to Congress within 48 hours for concurrence.”

If Congress concurs, martial law would only be for 60 days, so it’s a tough proposition, the National Security Adviser said.

This is a legacy of former President Corazon C. Aquino which changed the constitution of former President Ferdinand Marcos, Golez said.

GMA declares State of Rebellion

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today issued Proclamation No. 427 declaring the whole nation under a state of rebellion and ordered the Armed Forces of the Philippines and the Philippine National Police to suppress and quell such rebellion.

President Arroyo said that certain elements of the Armed Forces of the Philippines, armed with high-powered firearms and explosives, had acted upon the instigation and command and direction of known and unknown leaders and seized a building in Makati City.

Arroyo said these elements have put bombs in the area, publicly declared withdrawal of support for, and took arms against the duly constituted Government, and continue to rise publicly and show open hostility.

She said the purpose of these elements is to remove allegiance to the government, certain bodies of the Armed Forces of the Philippines and Philippine National Police, depriving the President of the Philippines, wholly or partially, of her powers and prerogatives which constituted the crime of rebellion.

The President added that these misguided elements of the AFP are being supported, abetted and aided by known and unknown leaders, conspirators and plotters in the government service and outside the government.

“Now therefore I... by virtue of the powers vested in me by law, hereby confirm the existence of an actual and on-going rebellion, compelling me to declare a state of rebellion,” the President said.

The President also issued General Order No. 4 directing the AFP and the PNP to suppress the rebellion now going on in Makati City.

Under Section 18, Article VII of the present Constitution, she said that whenever it becomes necessary, the President as the Commander in Chief of the Armed Forces of the Philippines may call out such Armed Forces to suppress the rebellion.

“I hereby direct the Chief of Staff of the Armed Forces of the Philippines and the Chief of the Philippine National Police and the officers and men of the Armed Forces of the Philippines and the Philippine National Police to immediately carry out the necessary and appropriate actions and measures to suppress and quell the rebellion with due regard to constitutional rights,” the President said.

U.S., Australia air support for GMA, condemn coup

The United States and Australia today threw their support behind the government of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo and condemned the coup plot by some military officers and soldiers.

“Let there be no doubt that the United States supports the government of President Arroyo,” US President George W. Bush said in a statement read by US Ambassador to Manila Francis Ricciardone.

“We have no reason to believe that there is no real threat to the Arroyo government,” Bush’s statement added.

Meanwhile, Australian Foreign Minister Alexander Downer denounced the alleged coup plot by a handful of junior officers and soldiers, saying “it couldn’t have come at a worse time,” noting that President Macapagal-Arroyo’s government was engaged in a campaign to curb terrorism.

“We’ve been deeply concerned about the attempted coup in the Philippines. We believe that if such a coup were to be successful, this would have a very serious impact on the Philippines’ relations with Australia and with other countries around the world,” Downer said in Singapore, where he is engaged in bilateral meetings.

Leaders of various political parties declare support for gov’t condemn armed protest

The leaders of the various political parties in the country today declared their support for President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo and the constitutional government, at the same time condemning the armed protest staged by junior officers of the Armed Forces of the Philippines.

House Speaker Jose de Venecia, Jr. said that among the largest political parties who expressed support for the President were the Liberal Party, Nacionalista Party, Laban ng Demokratikong Pilipino, PDP-Laban, and the Nationalist People’s Coalition (NPC).

“All of us overwhelmingly declare our support, if not unanimously declare our support, for President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, for constitutional government,” de Venecia said during a press conference in Malacañang.

Aside from the political parties, De Venecia noted that even the Governors League of the Philippines representing 79 governors; the City Mayors League with 115 mayors; Municipal Mayors League composed of 1,500 town mayors; and Barangay Officials League composed of 420,000 barangay officials have declared their all-out support to the President.

During the briefing, De Venecia urged the junior officers and soldiers conducting an armed protest and siege at the Oakwood Hotel in Makati to sit down with government authorities to thresh out grievances.

De Venecia noted that if the President and the government would be willing to sit down and negotiate a peace agreement with the Moro Islamic Liberation Front and with the New People's Army, why not with their group.

"I think we can sit down and talk under a flag of truce with you – young, idealistic but apparently misguided — officers of the AFP. You don't have to be ashamed because I, too, have made mistakes in life. All of us have made our mistakes in life. So let's sit down and we will listen to your grievances," De Venecia said.

The House Speaker said lawmakers from the House of Representatives are willing to meet the protesting officers and soldiers anywhere if they want to settle the issue.

People will not support military adventurism to address grievances, says Senate president

Senate President Franklin Drilon said today the military adventure by some junior military officers and soldiers does not have the support of the people.

"Our recent political history will show that the people will never support such adventurism resorted to in order to address grievances, no matter how legitimate," Drilon told reporters during a press conference in Malacañang.

The Senate president said the people would continue to support democratic institutions and resist any form of adventurism by a very small element of the Armed Forces of the Philippines.

Drilon also said the incident in Makati is not enough reason for the President to cancel her State of the Nation Address tomorrow before both houses of Congress.

Drilon said he and House Speaker Jose de Venecia, Jr. were in agreement that the State of the Nation Address should proceed because that is what is called for under the Constitution.

Deadline for surrender extended

Malacañang announced this afternoon a two-hour extension of the deadline for the junior officers and soldiers staging an armed siege in Makati to stand down, surrender their weapons and return to barracks or face the force of military action.

Barely 15 minutes before 5 p.m., Presidential Spokesman Ignacio R. Bunye announced that the deadline was extended as a breakthrough in the standoff was reached, with the mutineers expressing willingness to negotiate.

Bunye said former Armed Forces of the Philippines Chief of Staff Roy Cimatu has also been tasked to negotiate with the protesting soldiers.

Mother of mutineer thanks GMA for extending deadline, hopes to see son alive on birthday

"Thank you, Mrs. President, for extending the deadline for my son."

After expressing these words of gratitude, Mrs. Estrellita Trillanes, mother of Navy Lt. Sr. Grade (equivalent of captain in the Army) Antonio Trillanes, Jr. one of the leaders of the rebel soldiers holed out at the Oakwood Hotel in Makati City, assured President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo that she would convince her son to surrender peacefully.

Mrs. Trillanes, who was accompanied by former President Fidel V. Ramos to Malacañang to meet the President and the press, said she hopes the Makati siege would be over soon, expressing a mother's wish to see her son celebrate his birthday on August 6.

Mrs. Trillanes is the widow of Navy Captain (equivalent of Colonel) Antonio Trillanes, a member of Philippine Military Academy Class 1959 who served as signal officer in the Navy during the time of former President Ramos.

Also with Mrs. Trillanes were Commodore Carlos Agustin, chairman of the Philippine Military Academy Alumni Association, and some of the PMA classmates of her husband. The Palace meeting came just minutes after Malacañang announced a two-hour extension of the 5 p.m. deadline for Lieutenant Trillanes and his group to give themselves up peacefully, lay down their arms and return to barracks.

Mrs. Trillanes assured the President that she's willing to help convince her son to surrender. She said that before she left the vicinity of the Oakwood Hotel, she was able to talk to her son on the cellular phone and told him to leave the place right away.

She said she wanted to see her son alive on his birthday.

FVR tags rebel soldiers' grievances as valid but pursued through wrong kind of action

Former President Fidel V. Ramos said today he believed that the grievances aired by the young officers and soldiers staging a siege in a Makati hotel are legitimate ones but nonetheless tagged them as "rebel soldiers."

In a press briefing at Malacañang this afternoon, Ramos said he has considered the rebel soldiers' grievances as valid grievances but added that they should have coursed these through the military chain of command and process.

Ramos said he regarded the Makati uprising as a surprise action, and not a premeditated one, by young military officers.

He noted that previous coups were premeditated moves, complete with scenarios of full military backing and political support.

"I believe that this is something na biglaan (spur of the moment). I do not think that this was premeditated in the sense that previous coup attempts have been premeditated. I'm saying na biglaan ito because, maybe, the officers and soldiers concerned became emotional over the problems facing them," Ramos said.

The former President urged the government to give utmost attention to the grievances aired by the rebel soldiers in order to attain a sincere reconciliation between the military and the present leadership.

He also expressed hope that the uprising will soon come to an end that would be favorable to the government.

He appealed to the rebel soldiers to think twice and consider their future and the plight of their families because their call for reforms could be undertaken under a united program for a more effective and stable future for the country.

Ramos lauded President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo for moving in the right direction by giving the two-hour extension to the rebels to surrender peacefully.

Statement of the President

The crisis in Makati is over.

Two hundred ninety six soldiers, including 70 officers are standing down and returning to barracks.

They will be investigated and their cases will be disposed of in accordance with the Articles of War. They have not asked and they shall not be given special treatment.

I have directed the Chief of Staff to immediately restore normalcy in the military organization. I commend the officers and men who have handled the crisis with the loyalty and professionalism.

Civilians shown to be involved in any conspiracy will be prosecuted.

I thank the leaders of Congress, the church and the civil society for their support.

I am also thankful for the support extended by the diplomatic community. I assure the world that this event does not in any way injure our national security and political instability. The issues involved are domestic, operational or administrative; they do not involve ideological or fundamental policy areas. Our decision to enter dialogue reaped positive results.

Once more, this has been a triumph for democracy.

May God bless the Philippines.

SONA

The crisis is finished; the President is preparing for the SONA. Democracy has triumphed and justice is taking its course.

The SONA goes on, rain or shine. The President looks forward to the opportunity to share her thoughts with the people and join the nation in celebrating our collective accomplishments.

Makati Siege Investigation

On one hand, all the accusations raised by the Magdalo group will be looked into and studied via a mechanism to be announced by the President. She is very determined to get at the root of the matter.

On the other hand, all civilians shown to be involved in this destabilization attempt will be prosecuted. It is the height of disloyalty to the democratic system to exploit the grievances of soldiers by turning them into mutineers. Let the axe fall where it may. There will be no holy cows in this investigation.

GMA asks Congress to pass Anti-Terrorism Law

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today announced that she will constitute an independent commission to look into the roots of the short-lived and ill-conceived military mutiny in Makati City over the weekend and the provocations that inspired it.

In her third State of the Nation Address (SONA) delivered before a joint session of Congress this afternoon, the President said such actions are deplorable and will be met with the full force of the law, including their political components.

"Yet they signal an underlying problem that we must address," the President said.

The President said that at the request of Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes, she is also constituting an independent commission to investigate the Davao bombings.

She said this will also be matched by a PNP Reform Commission.

The President said that she was sure the PNP itself would welcome a comprehensive report that would cure the organization “not only of the failures of the scale of the Al-Ghozi escape but also the daily devils that are the kotong cops.”

The President thanked the PNP for its solid support to the government during the Makati siege Sunday.

She said it is a pity that after the government has scored successes in its anti-drug and anti-terrorism campaigns and is in the process of forging a permanent peace in Mindanao, some ill-advised military officers tried to destabilize the situation.

The President said the nation cannot stay divided as “there is so much we need to do together.”

“I address myself not only to the joint houses here assembled but to the nation at large: I need you; we need each other,” the President said.

In a statement she read in national television late Sunday night after the Makati City siege was resolved peacefully, the President said the 296 soldiers, including 70 officers, who participated in the mutiny will be investigated and their cases will be disposed of in accordance with the Articles of War.

“They have not asked and shall not be given special treatment,” the President said.

But at the same time, the President stressed that civilians shown to be involved in the conspiracy would be prosecuted.

GMA: Gov’t delivered in great part on commitments

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo said that for the past year, her government delivered in great part on its commitments.

In her third State of the Nation Address (SONA) before the joint session of Congress at the Batasang Pambansa this afternoon, the President said that a day after overcoming an ill-conceived mutiny by some misguided military officers without bloodshed or damage to property, the country by now, should be at peace.

“At peace in the South, at peace in the countryside, safe in our homes and secure in our communities,” she said. “But we remain at war. At war against terrorism, at war against corruption, at war against disease. At war against drugs, the greatest menace facing our country today.”

She said Filipinos cannot stay divided with so much to be done together.

“I address myself not only to the joint houses here assembled but to the nation at large. I need you, we need each other,” she said.

“Many of our reforms have yet to bear fruit, but there should be no doubt that our country in the fullness of time will reap what was carefully picked, planted and nurtured. And it will be a harvest of plenty,” she said.

The harvest has in fact started, she said.

In the area of peace, the Chief Executive said her administration has hit hard at terrorism and made advances towards a negotiated peace with the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) and the National Democratic Front (NDF).

Barely five months since launching an intensified campaign against illegal drugs, the President said several shabu laboratories have already been closed, with the amount of confiscated illegal drugs already reaching P8 billion. A big fish, Jackson Dy, No. 3 in the Order of Battle, led 14,000 other drug pushers who have been caught.

In the area of education, the President said her government has already built schoolhouses in 600 barangays where previously there has been none. She has also launched massive distance learning program or education TV in areas that cannot be reached by conventional schools or teachers.

In housing, the Macapagal-Arroyo administration has built more than 300, 000 units, more than 100,000 of which are for the poor while the rest are for employees with meager incomes.

The President said the country has a steady supply rice worth only P16 per kilo; sardines has remained at P8.50 since she became President, contributing greatly to the lowest inflation rate in the country’s economy in 20 years.

She said she has distributed more than 500, 00 hectares of land under the agrarian reform.

The Chief Executive said the economy grew by 4.4 per cent GNP last year and 5.6 per cent in the first quarter of this year. Foreign investments, she reported, rose 26 per cent compared to the same period last year.

“They will grow faster when we reduce business costs by providing basic infrastructure: roads, transport and a more efficient and rationalized power sector,” she said.

She proudly reported that basic transport fare has not increased since her first SONA. She had set up the nautical highway to reduce transport costs from Mindanao to Luzon.

From having the second most expensive power in Asia-Pacific, the Philippines now rank seventh, according to the President. Interest rates, she added, continue to go down.

She said that with full financial support from the government, the registration, counting and transmission of votes in the May 2004 election would be completely computerized.

In geopolitics, President Macapagal-Arroyo said: “Our country has come much closer to re-attaining its strategic importance in geopolitics as an active and respected voice in international affairs. The Filipino is now recognized as a truly global worker, both at home and abroad. Increasingly, the Philippines is being recognized as an ideal site for industrial operations requiring an English-educated work force.”

She said poverty is now being slowly licked.

“Self-rated poverty is at its lowest percentage of the population in the last 16 years. Optimism about the future is higher than early this year. Self-rated poverty has gone down to 6.6 per cent compared to 12.7 per cent just before I became President,” she stressed.

No let up in anti-drug war; no death penalty moratorium for drug lords — GMA

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said there will be no letup in her administration’s intensified campaign against illegal drugs, vowing to bring the anti-drug war to every household in the country, if necessary.

In her third State of the Nation Address (SONA) delivered this afternoon before a joint session of Congress, the President said the drug problem has endangered the lives and the future of some one million Filipinos.

The President also said there will be no moratorium on the death penalty for big fish in the illegal drugs trade.

But the President assured the nation that on other matters, she remains pro-life. “I will veto any bill that would smuggle abortion into it,” she said.

The President said she will bring the fight against illegal drugs to every province, every town and every barangay, every community in the country.

“This is one fight I am taking everywhere, if we have to knock on every door,” the President said.

She said the government will cripple the operations of the notorious drug lords and their “padrinos” who are in the corridors of power.

“Pipigain natin ang supply sa kalye sa paraang kahit ang masasalapi ay mahihirapang sustentohan ang kanilang bisyo (We will cut off the street supply of drugs so that even the rich could not afford to maintain their vices),” the President said.

The President said the government would launch a stepped-up campaign to educate the people, especially the students, on the dangers of drug abuse and would rehabilitate drug users and see to it that they would not become drug dependents again.

The President reported that during the past five weeks after she ordered an intensified anti-drug campaign, some P8 billion worth of illegal drugs have been seized by police authorities, a number of big shabu factories raided, and some of the big-time drug lords and traders now put behind bars.

“Ito ay ating laban at tayo ay magtatagumpay (This is our fight, and we will win),” the President said.

GMA asks Congress to pass two vital laws to benefit small farmers, human rights victims

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today formally asked Congress to enact two vital legislations that would speed up countryside development and compensate thousands of victims of human rights abuses during the Marcos regime.

In her third State of the Nation Address (SONA) that she delivered this afternoon before a joint session of Congress, the President said there is now a need to pass a law that would allow small farmers, especially the beneficiaries of the land reform law, to use their farmlands as collaterals for agricultural loans.

The President said that with easy credit, the land reform beneficiaries could increase the productivity of their newly acquired lands and therefore improve their lives.

She also asked Congress to pass a legislation that would allocate P8 billion from the recovered Marcos ill-gotten wealth as compensation for human rights victims during the martial law years.

The President congratulated the Supreme Court and the Sandiganbayan for restoring to the government huge sums of money that rightfully belong to the Filipino people.

“I congratulate the Supreme Court for finally granting what has taken much too long to materialize: authoring the allocation and use of private loot for laudable public purposes,” the President said.

She said the bulk of the recovered ill-gotten money amounting to P38 billion would be used to fully implement the government’s Comprehensive Agrarian Reform Program (CARP).

On the coconut levy, which the Sandiganbayan has decreed as public funds, the President said this would be primarily used to improve the lives of the coconut farmers.

“Sisiguruhin ko na ang makikinabang sa coco levy ay ang magniniyog. Hindi ko papayagang madehado ang mga magsasaka (I would ensure that the coconut farmers would benefit from the coconut levy, I won’t allow the farmers to be on the losing end),” the President said.

GMA asks Congress to pass indexation of “sin” taxes to finance Universal PhilHealth coverage

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today asked Congress to pass the bill on the indexation of “sin” taxes to finance the universal coverage of PhilHealth, or health insurance.

In her third State of the Nation Address (SONA) delivered this afternoon before a joint session of Congress, the President said all Filipinos, including the poor, should be covered by health insurance.

She also said that there is also a need to ensure that cheap medicines should be made available to everybody, especially the poor.

Today, cheap medicines are only available in government-run hospitals.

According to the President, when she was not yet President, only about one and a half million Filipinos were covered by PhilHealth. Now, she said, almost seven million are covered by the government health insurance program.

She said she is more convinced on the need to strengthen the government's health services after she visited the Calisaan couple who lost their quadruplets for lack of proper medical care.

"Tila nawasak ang aking puso nang narinig kong namatay ang Calisaan quadruplets (I feel that my heart was torn after I heard about the death of the Calisaan quadruplets)," the President said.

GMA pays tribute to Filipino workers in SONA

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today paid tribute to Filipino workers, both here and abroad, for having an unbeatable comparative advantage because of their English-language education, advanced skills and "a uniquely-caring nature."

"The Filipino is now recognized as a truly global worker, both at home and abroad," the President said in her third State of the Nation Address (SONA) delivered this afternoon before a joint session of Congress at the Batasang Pambansa.

The President said that there are now more than eight million Filipinos who live and work abroad, in jobs where they have excelled and have competitive advantage over other foreign workers.

According to the President, the Filipino will work anywhere because he is not afraid, as she particularly mentioned the victory of Filipino boxer Manny Pacquiao over his Mexican opponent in their fight in Los Angeles City Sunday.

"Given the chance to compete, he will take it and he will win," the President said.

The President said that it is only fitting that the overseas Filipinos be given the chance to vote in the elections.

She said that the Philippines is now on the global map as the new emerging source for high-quality workers for European and American firms outsourcing some of their most critical functions to the country.

Creation of 3 commissions to help restore investor confidence, says Concepcion

One of the country's top businessman today said President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's creation of three independent commissions to investigate the Davao bombing, reorganization of the Philippine National Police (PNP), and to address the Makati mutiny would return the confidence of investors in the country.

"If these bodies work very fast and make the recommendations and she implements them, then foreign investors will come back again," Jose Concepcion, a barangay chairman in Forbes Park, Makati City, said after the President delivered her State of the Nation Address (SONA) at the Batasan session hall in Quezon City.

He said the creation of the three commissions means the President is determined to address graft and corruption "that is prevailing in the PNP and in certain sectors of the military."

"I think she did a good presentation. She appealed to the people that she cannot do it alone, we're all in this together, and that is a good effort," he said.

He said what the President presented in her SONA were all valid.

“All the accomplishments she presented were all valid accomplishments. We’re very hopeful the system will improve,” he said.

He said there is no problem in the local economy despite the mutiny staged by more than 200 soldiers the other day.

“Tungkol sa local economy, wala tayong problema. Basta trabaho lang, yun lang ang gusto namin,” he said.

RP power rates lower than other countries — GMA

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo announced in her third State of the Nation Address (SONA) today that the country has a lower power rate now compared to other countries in the Asia-Pacific and the consumers still could expect a reduction in their electric bills in the next few years.

The President said that in Metro Manila, a consumer using 100 kilowatts now pays only P423.20 compared to the P526.48 last May, a drop of over P100 or 20 percent.

She said this reduction in power rates benefits the almost 2-million households in Metro Manila who gained from the lifeline rate program of the Energy Regulatory Commission (ERC).

She said another 119 electric cooperative franchise areas will also soon reduce their rates under the loan condonation program of the Electric Power Industry Reform Act that Congress has passed.

“That is why, believe me when I say that, from having the second most expensive power in Asia-Pacific, we now rank seventh,” she said.

The President, however, said the country would still need 6,000 megawatts of additional power over the next 10 years.

“That is why we need to pass the TRANSCO Bill to maintain a favorable ranking as we take on this added capacity,” she said.

She also reported that the government has already provided electricity to more than 1,500 barangays throughout the country.

Energy Secretary Vicente S. Perez, Jr. said this is one of the biggest accomplishments under the term of President Macapagal-Arroyo to help combat poverty in the countryside.

He said the present administration has provided electricity to more barangays compared to the Aquino, Ramos and Estrada administrations combined.

GMA speech applauded 79 times

The third State of the Nation Address of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo during the opening of the third regular session of the 12th Congress was applauded at least 79 times by the lawmakers and a jampack crowd of government officials, business leaders, members of the diplomatic corps and ordinary citizens at the gallery.

Last year, her State of the Nation Address was interrupted by applause for only 75 times.

The most applauded portions of the President SONA, which she delivered in 45 minutes, was when she declared that there will be no moratorium on the death penalty for all drug lords; when she asked the Congress to allocate P8 billion for victims of human rights violations during martial law; when she revealed the series of surprise visit she made to government offices to find out who were working or sleeping on the job; and when she announced the full computerization of the 2004 elections.

When House Speaker Jose de Venecia, Jr. formally called out her name to take the speaker's stand to deliver her SONA, the crowd stood up and, for three minutes, remained standing and applauding.

The President got her first long applause when she warned all the big fish in the illegal drugs trades that they faced the death penalty and, in the next breath, declared she was pro-life and would veto any bill that will seek to legalize abortion.

The most applauded part of the President's speech was when she mentioned her series of surprise visit to the government offices.

The audience reacted positively and were obviously touched when the President said she would do everything for the future of the youth, particularly the generation of her granddaughter Mikaela.

"Just as I will do everything to make sure that the future will be kind to Mikaela and her generation, so must we all strive to turn our fears into a resolve to do right not just by ourselves, but by our children and grandchildren," she said.

Statement of the President: SONA

While the themes of the SONA linger in the horizon, we must quickly get back to our most basic priorities—creating jobs and waging peace—fighting poverty, corruption, terrorism and drugs. I will not be distracted by the partisan agenda that will be pursued by others. I know very well that the electoral issues of 2004 will soon heat up, but I will neither be dragged into these issues nor be distracted in my course. The hopes of our people must be buoyed and sustained by an unfading vision. The SONA is but a renewal of my vow of service, performance, results and moving forward to a brighter future.

Statement of the President: Reconciliation with Justice

Our priority in the aftermath of the Makati crisis is to build unity and reconciliation with justice. We shall take all means to repair the division caused by the incident by rectifying the grievances that caused it and bringing its plotters to justice. Our Constitutional democracy can only be strong if we move on both fronts of dialogue and just retribution. This is true for our Armed Forces as it is true for the entire society. All plotters will be brought to justice.

Statement of the President: Arrest of Estrada Aide

The resort to destabilization can only be the handiwork of the most desperate groups that have completely lost their moral compass. We must not only bring them to justice; we must awaken them to the modern world in which the use of force to attain political ends is no longer an accepted model of change, especially in open democratic societies such as ours. Sadly, there are those who still live in the dark ages of dictatorship and deception. They must be enlightened if misled. They must be crushed if they persist.

Statement of the President: Peso Fall

The mutiny was quelled in a day and the Armed Forces fully consolidated the day after. Our political stability and national security are unimpaired. The normal course of governance and business has been quickly restored. There has been a setback in confidence but the fundamentals are sound and stable. This is a blip in the screen that does not forebode instability. The Armed Forces is fully united and staying the course of reform and modernization.

U.S. satisfied with GMA's handling of Makati siege

The United States today said that it was satisfied with the way President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo handled the mutiny staged by a group of young officers and soldiers in Makati City over the weekend.

In his daily briefing in Washington, D. C., Richard Boucher, spokesman of the Department of State, said the US was pleased that the Makati siege ended peacefully and without any loss of life.

Boucher said Washington has noted the announcement of President Macapagal-Arroyo to conduct investigations on the circumstances that led to the mutiny and the allegations of corruption aired by the dissident troops.

“She has promised to look into them. I think we’ll leave that to her. And we’ve supported the way she handled the crisis,” Boucher said.

Boucher also reiterated an earlier assurance of US Ambassador to Manila Francis Ricciardone that the US is fully behind the government of President Macapagal-Arroyo.

“No one should be under any doubt that we support the legitimate civilian government of President Arroyo,” Boucher said.

In a press conference during the height of the Makati standoff last Sunday, Ambassador Ricciardone also assured the President and the Armed Forces of the Philippines that the US was behind their efforts in resolving the crisis “in appropriate and lawful ways.”

Ricciardone said that while President George W. Bush has been informed of the mutiny, the US government did not see the situation as a threat to the government of the Philippines and to Philippine democracy.

The US envoy also brushed aside speculations that the visit here of President Bush in October would be postponed because of recent developments in the Philippines.

“I can assure you that the planning for President Bush’s visit here in October has been continuing all week,” Ricciardone said.

State of rebellion still in effect — Bunye

Presidential Spokesman Ignacio R. Bunye said today that the state of rebellion declared by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo to quell last Sunday’s mutiny by junior military officers will stay in effect until such time as loose ends in connection with the incident have been tied up.

In a press briefing today, Bunye said he has yet to receive instructions from the President on the lifting of the declaration.

Reacting to queries on the duration of the declaration, Bunye said it is becoming clear that there are some civilian elements whose participation took place before, during and probably a little after the July 27 uprising.

“There are many circumstances that point to wide support from outside groups, like the presence of supplies which are not normally available to the regular officers and men of the Armed Forces, the possible use of private funding to be able to check into the Oakwood apartelle even before the actual incident, the types of materials which indicate that these were prepared and fabricated or put together way in advance and in cooperation with some outside groups,” he said.

Saying it does not wish to point fingers at any particular group, Bunye said the government is looking at all angles including physical evidence that would tend to show that the mutineers could not have launched this without any outside help.

He said these pieces of evidences are now being collected.

GMA names 2 former justices, professor to commission to probe Makati mutiny

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today created an independent commission led by a former Supreme Court justice to look into the roots of the Makati mutiny and the provocations that inspire it.

The President said during a meeting with soldiers at the Camp Aguinaldo grandstand that retired Associate Justice Florentino Feliciano has agreed to chair the commission.

She added that retired Associate Justice Minerva Gonzaga Reyes and Professor Carolina Hernandez also agreed to be members of the probe body.

The President said the destabilization try in Makati City on Sunday “can only be the handiwork of the most desperate groups that have completely lost their moral compass.”

“We must not only bring them to justice. We must awaken them to the modern world in which the use of force to attain political ends is no longer an accepted model of change, especially in open democratic societies such as ours,” she said.

In the aftermath of the Makati crisis, the President said the government’s priority is to build unity and reconciliation with justice.

“We shall take all means to repair the division caused by the incident by rectifying the grievances that caused it, and by bringing its plotters to justice,” she said.

Justice Feliciano, 75, was appointed as Associate Justice of the Supreme Court on August 1986.

He obtained his bachelor of laws from the University of the Philippines, magna cum laude, in 1952. He also obtained the degree of Bachelor of Arts, summa cum laude, also from the state university.

He earned his Master of Laws degree in 1953 and his Doctor of Juridical Science (JSD) in 1955 from Yale University.

He was a former managing partner of the Sycip, Salazar, Feliciano and Hernandez Law Office and member of various academic and professional organizations here and abroad. He sat in various international commercial arbitration boards and has contributed pieces to local and international publications.

Justice Gonzaga-Reyes was an Associate Justice at the Court of Appeals (CA) for 13 years and chairman of the Third Division of the Appellate Court before she joined the Supreme Court on January 1999.

Right after graduating magna cum laude and class valedictorian at the UP College of Law, she started her government career at the Department of Justice (DOJ) in 1954. She assumed various positions and became Assistant Chief State Counsel from 1968 to 1983.

She also represented the country in several peace and trade-related and foreign loan negotiations abroad, notable of which were the RP-MNLF Talks on the Tripoli Agreement of 1977, the RP-US Trade and Investment Treaty and the RP-Japan Treaty on Amity, Commerce and Navigation.

She also served as consultant at the Advisory and Administrative Support Office, RP Panel, of the RP-US Military Bases Agreement Joint Committee and president of the Philippine Women Judges Association.

Professor Hernandez is currently a professor of political science at UP and the holder of its Carlos P. Romulo Professorial Chair in International Relations.

She is founder and president of the Institute for Strategic and Development Studies, an independent, non-profit think-tank on foreign policy, domestic politics, and security concerns and development issues.

In 1989-1990, she served as a member of the Commission that investigated the failed coup of 1989, a body appointed by former President Corazon Aquino that produced the Final Report that is seen as a critically important document in the country's march to re-democratization.

Dr. Hernandez is widely published in international, regional and Philippine academic journals in the fields of regional security and foreign relations, military in politics, democracy and development, and Philippine domestic politics and foreign policy.

She holds a B.S. in Foreign Service, cum laude, from UP, and an M.A. in International Relations from the University of Karachi where she finished first in her class.

She also holds a Ph.D. degree in Political Science from the State University of New York at Buffalo where she wrote a pioneering study on Philippine civil-military relations.

Statement of the President: The Feliciano Commission

I would really want to know how and why idealistic and intelligent young officers are inveigled to join these plots by self-serving politicians. Either there is something wrong about how we educate our soldiers or there is something wrong with the way we manage our military or some unscrupulous politicians have superb persuasive skills – or all of the above. I want to see a clear picture of how a conspiracy like this ripens into armed action. I expect the commission to give me that picture.

Meanwhile, we will take all evidence delivered to the Commission. I urge anyone who has information relative to the allegations of the mutineers to come forward. We will get to the root of these matters and proceed against those found culpable, and undertake the necessary reforms if warranted. There will be no whitewash or cover-up.

Statement of the President: Parallel Congressional Inquiry

I welcome it. It is best to bring this matter into a clear and sober light so that we will see who is telling the truth and who is simply engaged in propaganda and brinkmanship. I urge the Senate to commence an inquiry immediately. This will contribute to national stability and security.

Statement of Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye

The President accepted with deep regret this morning the resignation of Brig. Gen. Victor N. Corpus as ISAFP Chief.

The President made clear, however, that she is not accepting General Corpus offer to retire from the service.

The President described General Corpus as a noble officer.

A copy of Gen. Corpus letter dated July 29 is attached:

“The current political crisis is far from finished. There is still a deep restiveness in the Officer's Corps of the AFP. The putchists are asking for my resignation. Although I can honestly say that their accusation that I had a hand in the Davao bombings is without basis, I think that it is best for all that I get out of the picture.

“In chess, when a queen is beleaguered it is sometimes necessary to sacrifice a knight to save the game. I felt that the restiveness will not calm down with my continued presence. I therefore tender my irrevocable resignation from my position as Chief of the Intelligence Service of the Armed Forces of the Philippines and retire from the Armed Forces of the Philippines effective upon the approval of my resignation.

Thank you for the trust and support you have given me in the past. It was my pleasure to serve under your leadership.”

LEDAC okays 15 measures for inclusion in common legislative agenda

The Legislative–Executive Development Advisory Council (LEDAC) formally approved for adoption today 15 priority measures and other specific bills representing a doable but high-impact common legislative agenda.

Nine priority legislative measures which were highlighted in President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo’s State of the Nation Address (SONA) last Monday and six others in the common legislative agenda as approved last May 7 make up the list representing the government’s resolve to address priority concerns.

The 15 measures approved for adoption as priority measures by the LEDAC meeting today presided over by the President are:

1. Farmland as loan collateral
2. Compensation to human rights victims
3. Anti-Terrorism Act
4. Transco franchise
5. Reforms in campaign finance
6. Rationalization of automobile tax
7. Rationalization of documentary stamp tax
8. Indexation of sin taxes
9. National Revenue administration
10. Judiciary compensation rationalization
11. Dual Citizenship Act
12. Quarantine program for SARS
13. Optical Media Act
14. Securitization Act
15. Department of Housing and Urban Development

Of these, only the rationalization of the automobile tax has been approved by both chambers of Congress.

The farmland as loan collateral, Transco franchise, rationalization of documentary stamp tax, Optical Media Act, Securitization Act and Department of Housing and Urban Development were already approved by the House but are still on second reading in the Senate undergoing interpellation.

Twenty-eight other significant measures are to be considered by both houses of Congress for inclusion in the remaining 104 session days.

Shunning politics allows her to make unpopular decisions, says GMA

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has said that her declaration not to run in next year’s election has allowed her to make unpopular decisions, including making peace with the separatist Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF).

In a recent interview with Time magazine, excerpts of which were carried by CNN-Time Asia, the President said that making peace with the MILF “is not totally popular.”

She said that her government has been doggedly pursuing the peace process in Mindanao. “And I am feeling very gratified that this is now within grasp,” the Presidents said.

Earlier, Malacañang announced that the government and the MILF would soon resume peace negotiations in Kuala Lumpur under the auspices of the Malaysian government.

The President said that she does not want to be distracted by politics and would rather talk about reforms.

“These are the things that occupy my time; they occupy my energies,” the President said.

She also said the peace talks would not prevent the government from hitting any terrorist camp in Mindanao, either of the MILF or of the Jakarta-based Jemaah Islamiah (JI).

“There is nothing in the terms of reference of the proposed peace talks that says that we will not go against terrorism, that we will not enforce the law,” the President said.

According to the President, the MILF has already renounced terrorism and has even pledged to help the government recapture escaped terrorist Fathur Rohman Al-Ghozi.

Effect of mutiny on economy being assessed

Budget and Management Secretary Emilia Boncodin said today the effect of last weekend’s failed mutiny on the economy is now being assessed although she is expecting no major or substantial changes in the macro numbers.

Boncodin made the announcement during her presentation of the proposed 2004 national budget of P864.8 billion to the Legislative-Executive Development Advisory Council (LEDAC) today at the State Dining Room of Malacañang.

Boncodin said the economy posted a steady growth since 1997, with inflation rate on the downtrend. The country’s growth rate, she said, are quite respectable.

“The government’s target is to balance the budget and restore health in the fiscal sector. It also plans to reduce the country’s debt burden in the medium term,” she said.

A major feature of the 2004 budget is the increase in the allocations for new school buildings and teachers.

To address the perennial problem of classroom and teacher shortage, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo ordered an audit of school board funds.

The problem, she said, is not the lack of teachers but their distribution since the prevailing ratio is 34 students to a teacher based on a school-to-school statistics.

The proposed 2004 national budget will be submitted to Congress first week of August. Boncodin has marked Aug. 6 as the date of submission.

The House of Representatives, through Speaker Jose de Venecia, Jr., has committed to pass on to the Senate the proposed budget by the end of September at the earliest with committee hearings to be conducted even during the break.

Meanwhile, the President has announced during the meeting that US President George W. Bush has expressed his desire to witness the signing of a formal peace agreement between the Philippine government and the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF).

The President said, however, that this would all depend on the Malaysian government, which is the host of the formal peace talks.

The Malaysian government, she said, has approved the supportive role being played by the US in the talks.

'Time' magazine cites gains of GMA administration its cover story this week

The government of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has notched considerable gains in improving the economy, in fighting graft and corruption and in forging a lasting peace in Mindanao, according to Time, a respected American newsweekly, in the Aug. 4, 2003 issue of its Asia edition.

In its cover story, entitled "A Time for Prayer," Time said that over the past year, the President, who it described as a "hard-nosed technocrat," had "finally risen and some strong results have followed."

Time's cover showed the President in a formal pose although it carried a different teaser, entitled "Crisis Management: Philippine President Gloria Arroyo Stares Down a Mutiny As She Mulls a Second Term."

The cover story was pegged on Sunday's Makati siege by a group of disgruntled young military officers, saying the mutiny posed the "toughest test" of the Macapagal-Arroyo presidency.

But Time admitted that the Philippine economy has improved during the past few months.

"On the economy: unemployment and interest rates are declining. So is the budget deficit, which had reached a worrisome level last year," Time said.

It said that during the first six months of this year, the deficit was 33 percent lower than during the same period last year, adding that this was mainly due to the "anti-corruption drive at the notoriously lax Bureau of Internal Revenue."

The magazine cited the efforts of BIR Commissioner Guillermo Parayno for weeding out wrongdoers and for introducing more efficient computer systems in the bureau that decreased opportunities for graft.

The result, according to Time, was a 14.7 percent increase in revenue collections in June this year compared to that of last year.

All these have resulted in a 4.4 percent economic growth in the Philippines, Time said, although it added that economists have said that the Philippines needs more than 7 percent growth rate to reduce poverty and absorb the impact of high population growth.

Time said the short-lived mutiny over the weekend "is an example of how the government's agenda can be ruthlessly redirected by current events."

That is the reason why the President considers a peace accord with the separatist Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) as a "defining moment" of her presidency, the newsweekly said.

"It is not only political: the economy can't boom without it," Time quoted the President as saying in an interview.

With the economy improving and with the prospects of peace in Mindanao looking brighter, the President's approval rating in one survey last June jumped to 46 percent, from a paltry 34 percent three months earlier, the newsweekly said.

Time said that although the President has said that she is not running in next year's elections, "she is certainly not idling."

The President told Time that she could be more effective without worrying about the campaign. "I don't want to be distracted by politics," she said.

GMA presents Sikatuna award to 3 envoys

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today awarded the Order of Sikatuna to three outgoing ambassadors to the Philippines in simple ceremonies held at Malacañang.

The Order of Sikatuna with the rank Datu was presented to Ambassadors Irit Ben Abba of Israel, Theo Arnold of the Netherlands, and Gholamreza Yousefi of the Islamic Republic of Iran.

The Presidential citations were given to the three foreign dignitaries for their worthy and able representation during their tours of duty in promoting friendly and warm relations in the field of economic, political and cultural cooperation.

Ambassador Irit Ben Abba said she learned a lot and was impressed by the Filipinos during her three-year tour of duty here. She also told the President of the Israeli government's continued support to the Philippines, particularly in promoting economic cooperation between the two countries.

Ambassador Arnold, who has been here for almost five years, said he was pleased with the continuation of the peace process. He said there is a great willingness on the part of the Dutch government to do something helpful about it.

He also informed the President that one of the top corporations in the Netherlands is interested in putting up a $600 million a year export industry here. He said the corporation could hire around 5,000 workers.

Ambassador Gholamreza Yousefi said there is a great potential for economic cooperation between the Philippines and his country that could become an alternative source of crude oil.

The ambassador, who is almost on his fourth year of duty here, said he would not miss the Philippine bananas as the country is the biggest importer of bananas in Iran.

GMA names 3 more to Makati mutiny probe body

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today named the three other members of the commission to investigate the roots of the Makati rebellion as she swore in retired Supreme Court Justices Florentino Feliciano and Minerva Gonzaga-Reyes as chairman and member of the fact-finding body.

The new members of the commission are Fr. Joaquin G. Bernas, S. J., retired Commodore Rex C. Robles and Captain Rex Banjo Q. Bumanlag of the Philippine Army.

Fr. Bernas was one-time provincial of the Society of Jesus in the Philippines and dean of the Ateneo de Manila University Law School. A noted theologian and constitutional expert, he is one of the framers of the 1987 Constitution.

Retired Commodore Rex Robles is one of the founders of the Reform the AFP Movement (RAM) which spearheaded the EDSA People Power Revolution, in which he also took part.

The sixth member of the commission is Professor Carolina G. Hernandez.

During their oath-taking, the President Arroyo thanked Justices Feliciano and Gonzaga-Reyes for not hesitating in accepting their new task in the government service.

Justice Feliciano said after their oath-taking at the Malacañang Study Room that the investigation procedure of the commission is basically laid down under Administrative Code of 1987.

Feliciano said the commission will be impartial, independent, just and fair in its evaluation of the case.

Justice Gonzaga-Reyes, who had just arrived yesterday morning from her a vacation in Europe, said she is elated to be part of the commission.

The two retired justices reiterated that they will not impose a deadline for the completion of their investigation, adding that it is too early to set down rules and decide whether a public hearing is necessary.

“We want to do it as quickly as possible but we won’t impose a deadline yet. Administrative Order No. 78 does not specify any deadline,” the justices said.

Under AO 78 issued today by the President, the Commission is granted the power of an investigating body under Sec. 37 of the Administrative Code of 1987, including the power to summon witnesses, administer oaths, take testimony or evidence relevant to the investigation.

The Commission is tasked evaluate all the facts and circumstances surrounding the rebellion, its roots, and the provocations that inspired it, and submit its findings and recommendations to the President.

It is also authorized to deputize the Armed Forces of the Philippines, the National Bureau of Investigation, the Philippine National Police and other law enforcement agency to assist in the performance of its functions.

GMA, not Honasan, peacefully resolved Makati seige, says Palace official

Presidential Deputy Chief of Staff Renato Velasco today said that it was President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo who did her best to peacefully resolve the short-lived mutiny by young military officers at Oakwood Hotel in Makati City last Sunday.

In a press briefing in Malacañang this afternoon, Velasco took exceptions to the claim of opposition Sen. Gregorio Honasan during a privilege speech last Tuesday that he was the one who played an important role in the peaceful resolution of the incident.

“But that credit belongs first to President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo who welcomed, and, in fact, initiated, various moves for a peaceful resolution of the volatile situation before the deadline,” Velasco said.

Velasco said that one of the President’s initiatives at the height of mutiny was sending his close-in security, Capt. Cris Magdangal, who was a classmate of the mutineers at the Philippine Military Academy, to talk to them.

As a result of the initial negotiations, Velasco said Magdangal was able to convince about 40 rebel soldiers to immediately surrender and leave Oakwood while the President contacted some relatives of the mutineers.

Velasco also denied that he called Senator Honasan or initiated a meeting with him as the lawmaker claimed in his speech.

“I did not call Senator Gregorio Honasan nor initiate our meeting. He was the one who called me, notably after the surrender of over 50 rebel soldiers,” Velasco said.

Velasco, however, admitted that he, along with Presidential Chief of Staff Rigoberto Tiglao, Presidential Management Staff Head Silvestre Afable, Jr. and Chairman Michael Defensor of the Housing and Urban Development Coordinating Council, went to Mandarin Hotel in Makati City to meet with Honasan.

During their meeting with Honasan, Velasco said the senator professed no involvement in the mutiny and offered to talk to the mutineers. Later, he and Secretary Defensor accompanied Honasan to talk to the rebel soldiers inside Oakwood.

Also present during the meeting with the mutineers were Senators Rodolfo Biazon and Vicente Sotto.

“We made it clear to the rebel soldiers as well as to the three senators then that we were not negotiators. We simply went with Senator Honasan to know and write down the demands of the rebels and relay them later to the President,” Velasco recounted.

Statement of the President: General Corpus

General Corpus is an officer and a gentleman. If all others in uniform had his noble values, this country would be safest in the world.

Statement of the President: Coup Plot

It is true that the plot is far from over, but it is being contained and will soon be completely under control. We are engaged in preemptive measures – administratively, operationally and politically. Junior officers are being engaged in close contact dialogue to obviate the spread of adverse psychological intrusions. Intelligence has its ears on the ground and monitoring suspicious movements. We have the assurances of political leaders, from Congress to the local governments, of unswerving loyalty to the Constitution. We will rapidly consolidate as the mutiny commission begins its work and the military and civilian judicial processes get on track. The Makati crisis was solved in a day, this whole thing won't last long. Our democratic institutions are strong and invincible.

Statement of the President: State of Rebellion

The state of rebellion will continue to be in force but this does not mean that we are in a state of siege. Our people and our international affairs are on the normal course of business, protected by an umbrella of sustained vigilance by the state. I am maintaining the State of Rebellion as a warning and caution that their enemies of the Constitution who are still unaccounted for. There are plotters, operators, financiers and backers, both in and out of government, who are still in the cold. We will expose them and bring them to justice. This is not a stage for Martial Law or its repressive implications. This is a plain pursuit of criminal justice. The mutineers will undergo Court Martial and be meted out proper punishment, without prejudice to other charges that will be filed against them before the courts. I pity them. Some of them are angry, misled young men. We will treat them compassionately, but they will have to face the full consequences of their acts.

Anti-terrorism act among priority bills of LEDAC

An Anti-Terrorism Act that now includes penalties for infidelity in the custody of prisoners is among the 20 priority measures formally approved for adoption by the Legislative-Executive Development Advisory Council (LEDAC) during its 94th meeting Wednesday at the Malacañang State Dining Room.

The addition of penalties was among those sought by Council members in the aftermath of the mysterious escape of Indonesian terrorist Fathur Rohman Al-Ghozi and two others while in custody at Camp Crame some two weeks ago.

The Anti-Terrorism Act became more imperative in the light of five United Nations conventions against terrorism such as those for the suppression of terrorist bombings; for the suppression of the financing of terrorism; on the marking of plastic explosives for the purpose of detection; protocol for the suppression of unlawful acts against the safety of fixed platforms located in the continental shelf; and protocol for the suppression of unlawful acts against the safety of maritime navigation.

The Anti-Terrorism Act is now on second reading undergoing interpellation in both houses of Congress.

Nine priority legislative measures which were highlighted in President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's State of the Nation Address (SONA) last Monday and 11 other specific bills that are both doable and high-impact make up the common legislative agenda representing the government's resolve to address priority concerns.

These are:

1. Farmland as loan collateral
2. Compensation to human rights victims
3. Anti-Terrorism Act
4. Transco franchise
5. Reforms in campaign finance
6. Rationalization of automobile tax
7. Rationalization of documentary stamp tax
8. Indexation of sin taxes
9. National Revenue administration
10. Judiciary compensation rationalization
11. Dual Citizenship Act
12. Quarantine program for SARS
13. Optical Media Act
14. Securitization Act
15. Department of Housing and Urban Development
16. Tax incentives on Capital Equipment
17. Debt Cap of 2003
18. Operationalization of GRT on banks and financial institutions
19. Alternative dispute resolution
20. Land Administration Reform Act of 2003

Of these, only the rationalization of the automobile tax has been approved by both chambers of Congress.

The farmland as loan collateral, Transco franchise, rationalization of documentary stamp tax, Optical Media Act, Securitization Act, Department of Housing and Urban Development, tax incentive on capital equipment and alternative dispute resolution were already approved by the House but are still on second reading in the Senate undergoing interpellation.

Twenty-three other significant measures are to be considered by both houses of Congress for inclusion in the remaining 104 session days.

Gov't emerged stronger after failed mutiny, says Golez

National Security Adviser J. Roilo Golez today said that the government of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has emerged stronger after the July 27 Makati siege but at the same time acknowledged that the threat of another military mutiny is still possible.

In his opening statement the start of a congressional investigation of the incident, Golez said the government remains confident that it will come out stronger from its experience as the formal probe of the grievances aired by the rebellious military officers has started.

Golez admitted that the process of delving deeper into the serious allegations of corruption in the military “would be delicate and even painful.”

Although he said that the Makati siege showed the difficulty of the mutineers to launch a full-scale military revolt or a coup, there is still the possibility that similar mutinies will again be launched by rebellious elements that are still unaccounted for.

“This possibility is increased should the Magdalo rebels get away with their crimes without being duly punished,” Golez said.

The government, Golez said, acknowledged that we are still in a period of crisis. “This case is very much alive and the threat continues,” he said.

Golez said the government is still investigating how the conspiracy was hatched and who are the mutineers’ financial and political supporters.

He credited the firm and decisive moves taken by the President and the solid support given to her by the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) and the Philippine National Police (PNP) for ending the mutiny without bloodshed and within a day.

“Decisive calculated and calibrated decision-making of the President throughout the crisis from intelligence build-up phase up to the actual concept of the crisis, the President showed firmness, arriving at the decision with calculated and calibrated measures,” Golez said.

According to Golez, as early as 9 a.m. on Sunday at the height of the crisis, the President already decided that there was a need for a deadline and at around 1 p.m., the President declared a state of rebellion and ordered the AFP and the PNP to quell the uprising.

“The deadline was considered imperative in order to resolve the crisis within the same day to avoid more serious destructions in national and economic affairs,” Golez said.

Golez said the AFP and the PNP did not waiver, showing their preparedness, to thwart any anticipated eventualities.

He also cited the role of political leaders, including those from the opposition, the civil society, the Church, the business community, the media, and the support of foreign governments as crucial in the speedy resolution of the conflict.

“None of the opposition personalities took the side of the rebels. Opposition leaders called for the peaceful resolution of the incident,” Golez said.

Golez said the mutineers failed to get the support of the masses and the key sectors as well as from high-ranking officers of the AFP.

“Many of our soldiers may identify with the young officers’ gripes and long standing internal problems in the military. However this had not been enough to persuade the rest of the AFP to side with them. In fact, the rest of the AFP condemned the action of the mutineers,” Golez said.

GMA inspects Pampanga river desilting project

MEXICO, Pampanga — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today inspected the San Fernando-Mexico River Desilting Project here aimed at mitigating the perennial flooding problem in eight towns and a city in Pampanga.

Upon arrival at the San Lorenzo Bridge in Barangay San Lorenzo here, the President was immediately briefed by Department of Public Works and Highways (DPWH) Region 3 Director Josefino Rigor.

Rigor said the desilting of the Sapang Bungang Ginto creek here is part of the P90-million Pasac Delta Local Flood Control Project that would stop the flooding problem in the towns of Mexico, Sto. Tomas, Minalin, Macabebe, Masantol, Guagua, Sasmuan, Lubao and the City of San Fernando.

He said the dredging in river channels in the eight towns and city would help drain its waters down to the Manila Bay particularly during heavy rains.

After the briefing, the President inspected the ongoing dredging beside the San Lorenzo bridge.

She was warmly welcomed by the pupils, teachers and barangay officials here led by Barangay Captain Eugenio Bautista Jr. She was accompanied by Tourism Secretary Richard Gordon, Governor Lito Lapid, and Mayor Ernesto Punzalan.

Mayor Punzalan said they are thanking the President for the help as 20 of his town's 43 barangays are usually hit by flash floods during the months of August and September that last from four days to one week.

Barangay Captain Bautista said the two-kilometer river dredging here commenced 10 days ago and will be finished within two weeks.

Had power grab succeeded, 15-man junta would have been set up to rule country — Golez

The rebellious soldiers, who styled themselves as the "new Filipino heroes," were planning to set up a 15-man junta to rule the country had they been successful in seizing power, according to National Security Adviser J. Roilo Golez.

In his opening statement this afternoon at the start of the congressional hearing of the Makati siege, Golez said under their action plan, entitled "The Last Revolution Toward A New Philippine Order," the rebellious young Filipino soldiers would create a 15-man National Recovery Council to govern the country if they succeed in their power grab.

Although the document did not say how the members of the junta would be selected, it says that they will be Filipino men and women of wisdom, integrity, with selfless love of country, and would come from the different sectors of society, Golez said.

Golez said that as early as the second week of July, the intelligence community had already learned about the existence of a anti-government plot of a group of young officers of the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP).

He said the government was already preparing for any eventuality that could result from reports of some questionable recruitment happening within the AFP.

Quoting from the action plan of the rebellious soldiers, Golez said that Phase 1 of their struggle involved the assumption of power "through all means necessary and must be absolute... the means would not be confined within the ambit of constitutional framework."

"In other words, this is extra-constitutional. The use of force and violence is very clear from this excerpt," Golez said

Golez said that intelligence work, relentless intelligence build-up had been largely responsible for gaining advance knowledge of the plot and recognizing the existence of the crisis situation.

“The first thing that the government did was to acknowledge that the crisis already existed and this is necessary in order to ensure that all actions and decisions by concerned government agencies are properly understood, coordinated and synchronized,” Golez said.

Give Makati rebellion probers chance to do work first — Malacañang

Malacañang said today the excellent credentials of the members of the fact-finding body tasked by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo to investigate the roots of the Makati rebellion would be enough assurance that there would be no whitewash or cover-up on the case.

Presidential Spokesman Ignacio R. Bunye said during his regular press briefing that it would be to the best interest of everybody that a commission composed of members who are not working in the government should take care of this inquiry.

“Let us give them the chance to do their work first and let us judge their work after it is accomplished,” Bunye said.

The President has named retired Supreme Court Justice Florentino Feliciano as chairman of the fact-finding panel, with former Justice Minerva Gonzaga-Reyes, University of the Philippines professor Carolina Hernandez, Fr. Joaquin G. Bernas, retired Commodore Rex C. Robles and Captain Rex Banjo Q. Bumanlag as members.

The President has issued Administrative Order No. 78, instructing the commission to evaluate all the facts and circumstances surrounding the rebellion, its roots and the provocations that inspired it, and to submit its finding and recommendations to her.

Bunye said the commission assured that it will come out with results as soon as possible.

Bunye also explained that there is nothing wrong about the House of Representatives and Senate initiating separate investigations on the one-day Makati mutiny initiated by the misled and misguided junior officers of the Armed Forces of the Philippines.

“The House and Senate could work independently and pursue separate investigations,” Bunye said.

Bunye also explained that the President did not give definite timeframe on how long the state of rebellion will be in force.

“It is very difficult to put a timeframe because you cannot put a deadline to catch elements who are still out there,” Bunye added.

The President said earlier “it is true the plot is far from over, but it is being contained and will soon be completely under control.”

Statement of the President: Indictment of Coup Participants

The issue here is plain criminal justice, not political persecution or harassment. All government actions are based on evidence, not speculation or rumor. There will be no indictments made on mere suspicion. This will not be a political circus. It will be a trial on the merits befitting the high standards of our democratic system.

Statement of the President: Congressional Investigations

There has been an overt attempt to overthrow the government by force of arms. I ask the members of the legislature not to legitimize a criminal act that unfolded before our very eyes, or to try to impede government efforts to get to the root of the plot. Once and for all, let us show to our people and the world that we condemn all means to gain political power outside the ballot. This is our solemn duty.

Statement of the President: Military Adventurism

This must be the last time military adventurism is allowed to rear its head in our country. The formidable challenges we are facing do not allow room for these attacks, however weak they may be, upon the heart of our political system. Poverty, terrorism, drugs, ignorance, disease – these are the enemies we must vanquish without having to contend with traitors within the democratic polity itself.

Statement of the President: State of Rebellion

The state of rebellion will continue until we wrap up the residual threats. This must not be a cause for undue alarm, but we do not want our people to develop a false sense of complacency. We will keep the state of rebellion as a mantle of protection for our people as they go on with their day-to-day activities. Normalization has set in and must not be disturbed, but the need for vigilance is there and our eyes and ears should be open round the clock.

GMA seeks Congress support in ending coup tries

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today called on lawmakers “not to legitimize a criminal act that unfolded before our very eyes,” referring to a failed coup staged by rogue soldiers in Makati last week.

The President also asked members of the Senate and House of Representatives not to “try to impede government efforts to get to the root of the plot.”

In a statement during the groundbreaking rite for the CAMANAVA (Caloocan-Malabon-Navotas-Valenzuela) area flood control and drainage system improvement project, the President reminded lawmakers of the “overt attempt to overthrow the government by force of arms.”

“Once and for all, let us show our people and the world that we condemn all means to gain political power outside the ballot. This is our solemn duty,” she said.

She stressed that the indictment of coup participants involved “plain criminal justice, not political persecution or harassment.”

The President said all government actions were based on evidence and “not speculation or rumor,” noting that “there will be no indictments made on mere suspicion.”

The indictment process “will not be a political circus (and) it will be a trial on the merits befitting the high standards of our democratic system.”

She also called on everyone to put a stop to military adventurism. “This must be the last time military adventurism is allowed to rear its head in our country.”

She said the “formidable challenges we are facing do not allow for these attacks, however weak they may be, upon the heart of our political system.”

She enumerated the social menaces that should be given outright and proper focus.

The “enemies we must vanquish without having to contend with traitors within the democratic polity itself” included poverty, terrorism, drugs, ignorance and disease, she added.

She likewise lauded national and local government officials and the Japanese government, through Ambassador Kojiro Takano, for fast-tracking the implementation of the CAMANAVA project, that would provide a lasting solution to severe flooding and would consequently improve the living conditions of some one million residents in the area.

GMA pushes national unity, remains positive on final GRP-MILF peace pact

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo expressed last night willingness to take the “risks necessary for peace so that our nation can once again be united,” particularly in Mindanao.

She showed elation over the start of the peace talks between the government and the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) as it signals that “peace is within our grasp.”

The President confirmed that the talks would start in a week and “we hope to finish these in a few months.”

In her speech and in an open forum during the Manila Overseas Press Club President’s Night, the Chief Executive said the Philippines would be “honored to have (Malaysian) Prime Minister Mahathir Mohamad witness the signing of the (GRP-MILF peace) accord.”

She thanked Malaysia for having stood up as a partner of the Philippines in the peace process, particularly in offering to continue hosting the GRP-MILF peace negotiations in Kuala Lumpur.

The President emphasized that “any matter about how the ceremonies for the signing of the final peace agreement would have to be discussed in tripartite consultations in the spirit of friendship and goodwill.”

“We will also be honored to have (US) President (George W.) Bush witness it – at least on live video,” she said.

She thanked the US for supporting peace and socio-economic development efforts in Mindanao, particularly in the rehabilitation of conflict-affected areas.

But the President stressed that while peace is within grasp, “it will not be achieved at any cost.”

“Terrorism must be wiped out, arms must be laid down, swords must be made into plowshares,” she said.

GMA vows to expose plotters, financiers and bring them to justice

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo said last night the continued enforcement of the state of rebellion is not a stage for martial law or its impressive implications but merely a plain pursuit of criminal justice.

Speaking at the President’s Night of the Manila Overseas Press Club, the President said the state of rebellion will continue to be in force but “this does not mean that we are in a state of siege.”

“I am maintaining the state of rebellion as a warning and caution to the enemies of the constitution who are still unaccounted for,” she said.

“There are plotters, operators, financiers and backers both in and out of government who are still in the cold. We will expose them and bring them to justice.”

She assured the citizenry that our international affairs are on the normal course of business, “protected by an umbrella of sustained vigilance by the state.”

She then enumerated several issues that need to be separately addressed.

While she said that she felt compassion for the misguided soldiers and their grievances, she stressed that she will not stand for any mutiny of any kind by soldiers for any reason.

“Democracy in the Philippines will not be held hostage by lawlessness in any form,” she emphasized.

Legitimate grievances of the soldiers who staged that Sunday coup if proven true, according to the President, are unconscionable.

“They are being investigated. A report will be made and actions taken,” she said.

In this connection, she said she had ordered the release of an initial P100 million for the ground needs of the Armed Forces of the Philippines like boots and field equipment. These will be purchased, according to her, following the civilian rules of bidding.

She expressed the hope that no unscrupulous politicians are involved in the failed mutiny, saying such actions are selfish and the antithesis of patriotism.

“In the near term, markets will be jittery because of these political incidents. But I believe and many other credible institutions believe that the long-term effects of my economic reforms will be more lasting than the near-term effects of the rebellion,” she said.

Corpus to monitor measures in solving insurgency problem, says GMA

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said that Brig. Gen. Victor Corpus, former chief of the Intelligence Service of the Armed Forces of the Philippines (ISAFP), would be harnessed to monitor the approaches undertaken by the government in solving the root causes of the communist insurgency in the country.

At the open forum during the President's Night of the Manila Overseas Press Club (MOPC) held Thursday evening at the Hotel Intercontinental in Makati City, the President said she would like Corpus to monitor the government's holistic approach in solving the insurgency problem.

She explained that in this approach, the military action or law enforcement is considered as the right hand while the measures in addressing the root causes of the insurgency like poverty, injustice and their exclusion from the mainstream of society are part of the left-hand approach.

The President said that although the "war room" in Malacañang is tracking both the right and the left approaches, what is happening is that the group is tracking the right side more often.

"And I want to have somebody who can track the left side much more," the President said, adding that since Corpus was the one who put together the entire framework, he might as well be asked to monitor it.

In the same forum, the President said that Director General Hermogenes Ebdane, chief of the Philippine National Police (PNP), is still the most qualified person to find escaped terrorist Fathur Rohman Al-Ghozi.

"I think he is still the best man who can find Fathur Al-Ghozi, that's why he is still there," the President said.

The President said that Ebdane "is a very very good intelligence investigative person and has a very wide network of intelligence assets."

"And that's they who are going to bring him Fathur Al-Ghozi," the President said.

GMA leads ground-breaking rites for CAMANAVA flood-control

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today led the ground-breaking ceremony of a vital infrastructure project that would resolve the perennial flooding in three cities and a town in northern Metro Manila and improve the economic conditions of the millions of residents there.

"Sa wakas, sinisimulan na itong ating flood control ng CAMANAVA, kaya congratulations sa lahat ng nagtrabaho para dito (The construction of the CAMANAVA flood control project has finally started. Congratulations to all those who worked for this)," the President said. CAMANAVA refers to Caloocan, Malabon, Navotas, Valenzuela, low-lying cities and town adjacent to Manila Bay that are flooded during the rainy season and during high tide.

The President was welcomed at Barangay Dampalit in Malabon for the ground rites by Japanese Ambassador Kojiro Takano, Chief Representative Mitsuru Taruki of the Japan Bank for International Cooperation (JBIC), Metro Manila Development Authority Chairman Bayani Fernando who is also Cabinet Officer for Regional Development for the National Capital Region, and local officials from Caloocan, Malabon, Navotas and Valenzuela.

The President led the breaking of the sake barrel, the lowering of the time capsule and the shoveling of soil into the cornerstone, signaling the start of construction of the P5-billion flood control project funded under a loan agreement between the government and JBIC.

In her brief remarks, the President lauded the local officials who worked hard for the implementation of flood-control project that would finally address the perennial floods caused by the overflowing of the Malabon-Tullahan river.

The flood-control project, covering 18.48 square kilometers of flood-prone areas in CAMANAVA, will be implemented by the Department of Public Works and Highways (DPWH) and MMDA.

Under the project, the DPWH and MMDA will construct dikes, pumping stations, flood control gates, navigation lock, improvement of existing drainage channels and drainage system to prevent the overflowing of Malabon-Tullahan river.

The objective of the flood control project is to improve the living conditions and promote economic activities within the CAMANAVA area.

Project Managers Louie Mamitag, Jr. and Carla Bartolo of the DPWH-CAMANAVA flood control project management office said families in the affected areas will be relocated to three resettlement sites in Bulacan where they will be provided complete basic services and livelihood assistance.

The project is expected to be completed by June 2007.

Also present in the ground-breaking ceremony were Secretary Marita Jimenez, Cabinet Officer for Regional Development and Official Development Absorption (CORD-ODA); Rep. Federico Sandoval of Malabon and Navotas; and Mayors Amado S. Vicencio of Malabon City, Tobias Tiangco of Navotas and Reynaldo Malonzo of Caloocan City.

GMA to expand fact-finding group on Al-Ghozi escape to tackle PNP reforms

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo would likely give to the commission looking into the Al-Ghozi escape the responsibility of going through reforms in the Philippine National Police (PNP).

Presidential Spokesman Ignacio R. Bunye today said the President was also keen on expanding the membership of the commission by adding two other members from the police itself.

In his regular media briefing, Bunye said the President would be announcing the names of the police members soon.

The fact-finding commission looking into the escape of the Indonesian terrorist and two Abu Sayyaf members is composed of former Justice Secretary Sedfrey Ordoñez, Justice Secretary Simeon Datumanong and Miguel Varela, chairman of the Philippine Chamber of Commerce and Industry.

Bunye also disclosed that the President was still “scouting for some possible members” to compose the commission that would look into the Davao bombing incidents.

It would be recalled that last week, the President pushed the creation of three independent commissions to investigate the Davao bombings, the reorganization of the PNP and the Makati mutiny.

She said this was imperative to bring back investor confidence in the country.

GMA receives Pacquiao in Malacañang

It was a knockout of an encounter.

But instead of a roped arena, it was the Music Room of Malacañang that served as the venue for the champions who ironically did not hide their admiration for each other.

After all, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo and the country’s lone reigning world boxing champion Manny Pacquiao were not there to mix it up. They are already winners in their own right.

Fact is, they came to the meeting fresh from victories in their respective outings last Sunday that they ended up congratulating each other: Pacquiao from a devastating third round technical knockout win over erstwhile undefeated Mexican challenger Emmanuel Lucero and the President from a misguided mutiny of young military officers which she crushed in less than 22 hours.

“Congratulations, Manny,” the President told the International Boxing Federation junior featherweight champion as soon as she entered the room. “You represent the Filipinos abroad who can compete anywhere and win.”

Pacquiao for his part, thanked the President for mentioning him and his feat in her State of the Nation Address (SONA) last Monday wherein she said “the Filipino will work anywhere because he is not afraid, like Manny Pacquiao. Given the chance to compete, he will take it and win.”

“Maraming salamat po, mahal na Pangulo, dahil sa pagkakabanggit niyo sa akin sa SONA (Thank you very much, my dear President, for mentioning me in your SONA),” Pacquiao told the Chief Executive. “Inihandog ko po ang laban na iyon sa inyo at sa lahat ng Pilipino (I dedicated that fight to you and to all Filipinos).”

Pacquiao, who came to the Palace with his wife Jinky, Manila Mayor Lito Atienza and his handlers, narrated that he did not know that a mutiny was going on in the country until after the fight held at the Grand Olympic Auditorium in downtown Los Angeles.

“Nabalitaan ko na lang po pagkatapos ng laban. Natutuwa po ako at nagawan naman po kaagad ninyo ng paraan. (I just knew about it after the fight. I’m glad that you were able to solve it),” the boxing champ told the President.

In the midst of the rebellion staged by some 300 young officers and men, Filipinos took a two-hour break Sunday and enjoyed the action as the Filipino champ demolished his opponent menacingly called “The Butcher” with a devastating left cross at 48 seconds of the third round.

Even before the title fight, President Macapagal-Arroyo indicated her desire to have the young champion in Malacañang upon his return.

Pacquiao in return thanked the President for her support and said in post-fight interviews that he wanted to pay a courtesy call on the President upon his return to the country.

At the end of the courtesy call, Pacquiao exhorted all Filipinos to unite and rally behind the President in her efforts to build a Strong Republic.

“Sana magkaisa na tayo. Ginagawa ng mahal na Pangulo ang lahat para sa ikabubuti ng bansa natin. Magtulungan tayo. Walang mangyayari kung lahat tayo mag-aaway away. Bansa natin ito mahal natin(Let us be united. The President is doing all she can for the good of the country. Let us help each other, Nothing will happen if we fight each other. This is our country. Let us not forsake it),” he said.

GMA asks media not to make heroes out of failed mutineers, rebels

Instead of romanticizing and making heroes out of the young military officers who staged a failed mutiny in Makati last Sunday, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo advised media last night to look at things from the holistic approach.

Reacting to a question during the President’s Night of the Manila Overseas Press Club forum last night, the Chief Executive exhorted media representatives to support her in bringing the perpetrators of the rebellion to justice, “no matter how good looking they are,” to stop the culture of military adventurism in the country.

“If you support me and make sure that we bring these criminals to justice no matter how good looking they are, then this will be the last coup,” she said in answer to a question on when the Philippines will be coup-free.

The holistic approach, which she said she's using in solving the country's insurgency problem, dispenses firm justice on the right side and addressing the root causes, the legitimate grievances on the left side.

"Glamorizing them just encourages them to do it some more," she reminded media men during the open forum that followed her speech.

She said she was aware of the soldiers' grievances from Day One and that she's been working on that.

"It's just that they have been instigated apparently by unscrupulous elements. And that's part of the right side too. If you are going to make this a matter of personalities, well, why not also find out, and which, this is what we are trying to do, find them," she said.

The President said this is the reason why she still has to lift the state of rebellion, which she declared in the aftermath of the failed coup attempt.

"It could be the circumstances that will determine the time to lift it," she stressed. "It is when we have already been able to put behind bars... the backers, the plotters, the financiers of the failed coup."

1. The Magdalo group would be moved back to barracks, i.e., they would be moved back from Makati to Fort Bonifacio barracks for processing.
2. From Fort Bonifacio, they would be returned to their respective service units under the custody of the major service commanders, i.e., Commanding General of the Philippine Army, Commanding General of the Philippine Air Force and Flag Officer in Command of the Philippine Navy.
3. All are covered by the Articles of War.
4. Core group will face all consequences.
5. The demands of Magdalo will be endorsed to the President and followed up.

President's radio address to the nation

Magandang araw sa inyong lahat.

Noong nakaraang linggo, ginambala tayo ng isang pag-aalsa ng ilang mga sundalo.

Mabuti na lamang at napigil natin kaagad sa mapayapang paraan ang pag-aalsang ito at hindi na naka-apekto sa mga positibong kaganapan sa ating ekonomiya at seguridad.

The state of rebellion will continue until we wrap up the residual threats. This must not be a cause for undue alarm, but we do not want our people to develop a false sense of complacency. We will keep the state of rebellion as a mantle of protection for our people as they go on with their day-to-day activities. Normalization has set in and must not be disturbed, but the need for vigilance continues.

Totoo na ang problemang ito ay hindi pa tapos, pero kontrolado natin ito at resolbahin sa lalong madaling panahon. Ginagawa natin ang lahat – administratively, operationally and politically – para hindi matuloy ang anumang hindi magandang balakin kaugnay ng problemang ito.

Intelligence has its ears on the ground and monitoring developments closely. We have the assurances of political leaders, from Congress to the local governments, of the unswerving will to protect and preserve the Constitution. We will rapidly consolidate our gains as the independent fact-finding commission begins its work and the military and civilian judicial processes get on track.

Ang krisis sa Makati ay naresolba sa loob lamang ng isang araw. Ito ay dahil nanatiling matatag ang ating mga demokratikong institution.

Ang moral ng mamamayan ay mataas. Malakas ang kanilang tiwala sa demokrasya. Pinagmamalaki nila ang pagiging Pilipino.

Sa kabila ng pangyayaring ito, ang ating political stability at seguridad ay nananatiling matatag. Naibalik natin kaagad ang normal na takbo ng pamahalaan at negosyo. Our economic fundamentals, undented, remain sound and stable for the long pull. Tuloy ngayong linggong ito ang miting ng ASEAN finance chiefs dito sa atin. Ang sabi naman ng pinagpipitagang Asian Development Bank, the impact of the failed coup will be minimal.

The Armed Forces is fully united and staying the course of reform and modernization. I admire our soldiers all over the land for their loyalty, professionalism and patriotism. I empathize with their difficulties especially in the field and I have been doing all I can to make life better for their families. Our people are grateful for your sacrifices.

Nananatiling matatag ang aking tiwala sa ating sandatahang lakas, at lubos ang aking paniniwala na kaya nilang resolbahin ang anumang hindi pagkakaunawaan sa kanilang samahan.

Ang mga nag-alsa ay sasailalim sa court martial at tatanggap ng karampantang kaparusahan. Ako ay nahahabag sa kanila – sila ay mga batang sundalo na nalinlang ng maling paniniwala, ngunit kailangan nilang harapin ang bunga ng kanilang ginawa.

We'll punish the plotters, but we shall also look deeply into their grievances and charges, and punish those in the higher echelons who are shown to be responsible and accountable. There will be no whitewash or cover-up. I also welcome the respective inquiries of the Senate and the House of Representatives on this incident.

Hindi natin matatapos ang problema kung hindi natin maresolba ang tunay na mga dahilan nito. Kailangang kumprehensibo ang ating approach dito.

Ang sinuman ay may karapatang maglahad ng kanilang paniniwala at saloobin, bastat ang pamamaraan ay naa-ayon sa ating Saligang Batas.

Tapos na ang coup kaya, muli nating harapin ang ating mga prayoridad — ang ating laban kontra kahirapan, korupsiyon, terorismo at ilegal na droga – at sa pagsasakatuparan ng ating mga inisyatibo sa larangan ng paglikha ng mga trabaho, pagkain, tahanan, edukasyon, at seguridad.

Hindi aksidente lamang ang ating mga napagtagumpayan sa iba't-ibang larangan. Ito ay dahil sa sipag at tiyaga ng mamamayan at ng ating pamahalaan. At hindi tayo titigil – kahit sa harap ng mga pagbabanta sa ating pambansang katatagan.

Ang korupsiyon na nilikha ng ilegal na droga ay malalim, apektado maging ang ating justice system at law enforcement. At ang tunay na nagdurusa ay ang ating taong bayan, kaya nga hindi tayo titigil hanggat hindi nabubura ang perhuwesiyong ito sa ating paligid. At sa takbo ng ating pangyayari, mapagtatagumpayan natin ito.

Katunayan sa loob lamang ng limang linggo ay nakakumpiska tayo ng may mahigit walong bilyong pisong halaga ng ilegal na droga. Noong lamang Lunes ay may nakumpiska tayong 358 kilos ng ilegal na gamot sa isang shabu laboratory sa Parañaque. Bago ito ay may nadiskubre tayong dalawang shabu laboratories sa mga bayan ng Silang at Tanza sa Cavite. Tatlong suspected drug lords ang mga nahuli dito.

Ang pag-aalsa noong linggo ay nakagambala sa atin, pero panandalian lamang. At tulad ng mga nakaraang mga pagsubok sa ating pambansang katatagan nakaukit sa ating kasaysayan, muli tayong mangingibabaw at patuloy na haharapin ang ano mang hamon na darating pa sa atin.

We must put a final stop to military adventurism, or our nation will be forever mired in the quicksand of instability and stagnation. We must close ranks behind the Constitution and the law. I need you in the valiant fight for justice and democracy.

Maraming salamat.

GMA names Makati rebels' PMA classmate as 7th member of fact-finding commission

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today named a classmate of the Makati renegades as the seventh member of the fact-finding commission tasked to look into the roots of the Sunday rebellion and the provocations that inspired it.

In a ceremony this morning at the Study Room, the President swore in Capt. Roland Narciso, a member of the Philippine Military Academy "Marilag" Class of 1995, as the seventh member of the commission chaired by retired Supreme Court Justice Florentino Feliciano.

Among the members of the Marilag Class who participated in the Sunday rebellion were Navy Lt. Senior Grade (equivalent of captain in the other armed services) Antonio Trillanes IV who was reputed to be the leader of the Makati renegades; Navy Lt. Senior Grade James Layug; and Army Captains Gerardo Gambala, Laurence Louis Somera, Milo Maestrecampo and Albert Baloloy.

Captain Narciso, 30, quit the Philippine Air Force three years ago to join Philippine Airlines as a commercial pilot. He is married to Maria Carilla who witnessed the oath taking. Carrots, as the wife is fondly called, is four months pregnant with their second child. Their first child, a girl, is now 4 years old.

President Arroyo thanked Captain Narciso for readily accepting his designation as a member of the fact-finding commission.

After the oath-taking rites, which was also witnessed by First Gentleman Atty. Jose Migue Arroyo and Press Secretary Milton Alingod, the President invited Narciso and his wife to join her for the First Saturday Mass at the Malacañang Chapel and then breakfast.

Narciso was in San Francisco, California after a flight from Manila when he learned of the Makati rebellion from his wife who telephoned him to inform him of developments at home.

Narciso flies the Manila-San Francisco-Los Angeles routes of PAL.

The President earlier named the other six members of the fact-finding panel which includes retired Justices Feliciano and Minerva Gonzaga-Reyes, University of the Philippines professor Carolina Hernandez, Fr. Joaquin G. Bernas, S. J., retired Commodore Rex C. Robles and Captain Rex Banjo Q. Bumanlag as members.

GMA says nation now back to normal but asks people to continue to safeguard democracy

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today asked the people to close ranks behind the Constitution and the country's laws to prevent a repetition of the July 27 siege in Makati City even as she assured that the nation is now back to normal.

"I need you in the valiant fight for justice and democracy," the President said in her weekly radio message this morning.

The President said that we must put a "final stop" to military adventurism, "or our nation will forever be mired in the quicksand of instability and stagnation."

She said that the plotters of the failed mutiny will have to face court-martial and be meted the necessary punishment that they deserve.

According to the President, she pitied the young officers who were driven by wrong perceptions but they have to face the consequences of their wrongdoings.

The President said that her administration will punish not only the plotters but those in the higher echelons of the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) who are found to be accountable for the grievances aired by the young mutineers.

“There will be no whitewash or cover-up,” the President said, adding that she welcomed the inquiries being undertaken by both houses of Congress on the incident.

She said that the problem would not be solved unless their roots are uprooted and this would need a comprehensive approach.

Now that the coup is over, the President said, it is time to confront the priorities that her administration has set to accomplish, like the fight against poverty, against corruption, against terrorism and illegal drugs, and the realization of her objectives of providing jobs, food, shelter, education and security, to the Filipino people.

The President also said that despite short-lived military adventurism, the political and economic situation, has remained stable.

“Our economic fundamentals, undented, remain sound and stable for the long pull,” the President said, adding that the scheduled meeting next week in Manila of the finance ministers of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) will push through.

The President quoted the Asian Development Bank (ADB) as saying that “the impact of the failed coup will be minimal.”

Fact-finding body member favors end to congressional probe on Makati siege

A member of the presidential fact-finding commission tasked to look into the circumstances behind the July 27 mutiny, including the grievances aired by the young military officers, today said that she is in favor of the suggestion by some sectors that the congressional inquiries on the incident be stopped.

In a radio interview, Professor Carolina Hernandez of the University of the Philippines said that the Congress should instead support the investigation to be conducted by the commission headed by former Supreme Court Justice Florentino Feliciano.

Hernandez, who was also a member of the Davide Commission that looked into the series of failed coups during the administration of President Corazon Aquino, said it is also unfair for some people to say that the Feliciano commission might be influenced by the investigations in the House of Representatives and the Senate.

Those who are saying this, Hernandez said, should first look at the integrity and the qualifications of the members of the fact-finding commission before making any statements.

“May integridad naman kami. Hindi kami maiimpluwensiyahan ng iba (We have integrity. We cannot be influenced by others),” Hernandez said.

Hernandez, who was interviewed while on a trip to Australia, said that in all her professional life, she has always been guided by principles, adding that she would not hesitate to do what is right no matter who gets hurt.

She also said that from her experience in the Davide Commission, they have found that there are legitimate grievances in the military service, including graft and corruption.

These cannot be denied but the manner in which these grievances should be addressed must be within constitutional and legal means, Hernandez said.

Also this morning, the President swore in Captain Roland Narciso, now a Philippine Airlines pilot, as the seventh member of the Feliciano Commission.

Narciso, a member of the Philippine Military Academy “Marilag Class” of 1995, is a classmate of renegade Navy Lt. Senior Grade Antonio Trillanes IV, reportedly the leader of the Makati mutineers.

The other members of the Feliciano Commission are retired Justice Minerva Gonzaga-Reyes, Fr. Joaquin Bernas, retired Commodore Rex C. Robles and Captain Rex Banjo Bumanlag.

Bunye says suspension of Senate inquiry on Oakwood rebellion good for all

Malacañang today said the request of six senators to suspend the Senate inquiry on the Oakwood mutiny would definitely help an independent fact-finding commission get into the root of the incident.

Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said the suspension of the inquiry would also give authorities enough time to do their job of going after those behind the mutiny.

In a radio interview, Bunye said the Palace concurred with last Friday's call of Senators Francis Pangilinan, Noli de Castro, Manuel Villar, Jr., Joker Arroyo, Ralph Rector and Robert Barbers.

The six sought a suspension of the inquiry "until the plotters are tracked down and arrested and corresponding charges are filed against them."

The senators said an inquiry "may impede government efforts to address the rebellion" and asked the Senate leadership to "give our law enforcement authorities a free hand in conducting their own investigation."

Bunye said it was clear in the senators' resolution that the inquiry could be conducted "at a later time."

"Makabubuti 'yan, makakatulong para sa lahat (It would be good and would be of great help for everyone)," he said.

Earlier, fact-finding commission member Dr. Carolina Hernandez said the group would not let itself be influenced by any legislative inquiry on the Oakwood mutiny.

Hernandez also asked members of Congress to refrain from making any "political statements" as "it is not going to be constructive."

She lauded the six senators for seeking the suspension of the Senate inquiry because they support the work of the fact-finding commission.

She also upheld the integrity of the commission and the people composing it.

Impartial justice, due process and good governance are taking their course. There is no reason for anybody to cry out persecution or witch hunting.

Those who have nothing to hide should not play hide and seek with the authorities.

The investigation is now in an advanced stage and will soon account for all those involved. The evidence is mounting and is substantial and solid.

The normalization process will speed up as the wheels of criminals justice turn.

There will be no holy cows in this investigation. The axe will fall heaviest upon those who use the pedestal of legitimate political power to destroy the very democratic system that installed them in office.

Statement of the President: State of Rebellion

I expect that we can lift the State of Rebellion earlier than expected as we mop up the fringes of the conspiracy.

Statement of the President: Coup Leaders

The prime suspects are being kept in safe quarters with full access to lawyers and legislative inquiries in their place of detention.

Statement of the President: MILF

A de facto ceasefire is in place on the ground and the peace panels on both sides are now setting up the mechanism to seal it. This is being done and we expect formal talks to be launched as scheduled.

I challenge Senator Honasan to denounce in unequivocal and in the strongest terms the use of arms, deployment of explosives, use of threats and intimidation, including the forced evacuation of hotel guests, as a means of presenting grievances.

GMA says she may lift State of Rebellion sooner than expected

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said she may lift the State of Rebellion earlier than expected as the ongoing investigation on the Makati mutiny last week progresses on its advance stage.

“I expect that we can lift the State of Rebellion earlier than expected... as soon as we mop up the fringes of the conspiracy,” she said during the 42nd General Assembly and 2nd Best Practices awarding rites of the League of Cities of the Philippines (LCP) at the Hyatt Regency Hotel in Pasay City.

The President’s announcement drew applause from the more than 100 city mayors present at the Harana function room of the hotel. The League of Cities is composed of 115 mayors from cities all over the country and promotes effectiveness and innovation in local governance.

She said the investigation of the Sunday (July 27) rebellion is now on an advanced stage and all those involved would soon be accounted for.

“The evidence is mounting, and is substantial and solid,” she said.

The League of Cities, through Calapan City (Oriental Mindoro) Mayor Arnan Panaligan and San Fernando City (La Union) Mayor Mary Jane Ortega, presented to the President a plaque of appreciation for the quick resolution of the rebellion staged by several junior officers of the Armed Forces of the Philippines last week.

“I’d like to take this opportunity to recognize your support and appreciation, and to let you and your constituents know that impartial justice, due process and good governance, as you have shown, are taking their course,” she said.

She said the normalization process would speed up as the wheels of the criminal justice turn.

“We will not relent in the pursuit of vital reforms in the Armed Forces even as we now turn our sights on the essential task of nation building,” she said.

The President said the essential tasks of nation building would be easier “because we have local governments and cities that do these best practices.”

The President also awarded a plaque to the top 10 cities with the Best Practices.

Assisting her were Tagaytay City Mayor Francis Tolentino, LCP president; Cebu City Mayor Tomas Osmeña, and Iligan City Mayor Franklin Quijano.

GMA dares Makati mutiny prime suspects to stop hiding, face the law

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today challenged persons suspected for involvement in the failed Oakwood mutiny to come out in the open and face the proper forum.

“Those who have nothing to hide should not play hide and seek with the authorities,” the President said.

She stressed there was no reason for any one to cry out persecution or witch hunting.

The investigation on the failed mutiny — staged by junior officers of the Armed Forces in Makati City last week — is in its advanced stage and any judicial action will be based on substantial and solid evidences.

“The evidence is mounting, and is substantial and solid,” the President said in a speech before the 42nd General Assembly of the League of Cities of the Philippines at the Hyatt Regency Hotel, Pasay City.

She said those who have no involvement in the failed mutiny staged by the junior officers of the Armed Forces should come out in the open and face the authorities.

She announced that the mutiny’s prime suspects are being safely detained with full access to lawyers and legislative inquiries.

“The normalization process will speed up as the wheels of the criminal justice turn,” she said.

She added that her administration would pursue vital reforms in the Armed Forces “even as we now turn our sights on the essential tasks of nation building.”

The President has created an independent seven-man fact-finding committee to conduct an impartial investigation on the Makati incident.

She has named retired Supreme Court Justice Florentino Feliciano as chairman of the fact-finding panel with former Justice Minerva Gonzaga-Reyes, University of the Philippines (UP) professor Carolina Hernandez, Fr. Joaquin Bernas, retired Commodore Rex Robles, Captain Rex Banjo Bumanlag and retired Capt. Roland Narciso as members.

Chiefs of police call on people to unite behind GMA, Charter

The Association of Chiefs of Police of the Philippines, Inc. (ACPPI) has called on the Filipino people to unite behind the Constitution and the administration of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo.

The call, made by ACPPI Chairman Guillermo Domondon, came on the heels of the failed mutiny staged by junior officers of the Armed Forces of the Philippines, mostly from PMA Class 1995.

“The end, even when hatched in heaven, cannot justify any method brokered in hell,” Damondon said in a press statement, referring to the grievances aired by the rebellious officers.

Domondon said that he was “relieved” to learn that no PNP officer had joined the mutiny.

He said that the military organization, especially during this “distressing” time of our history, should go all out for stability, continuity and regularity under its chain of command.

The ACPPI head also said that grievances that are not being adequately met do not mean the end of the world and should not be used as an excuse to break the chain of command.

The members of the association are all the nation's chiefs of police from the regional and station level. It has 18 fully organized chapters from Region 1 to the Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao (ARMM).

The ACPPI was founded in 1999 by now Transportation and Communications Secretary Leandro Mendoza and now PNP chief, Director General Hermogenes Ebdane, Jr.

Aside from Domondon, the members of the Board of Trustees of the ACPPI are Ricardo de Leon, Arturo Lomibao, Prospero Noble, Pol Bataoil, Van Luspo, Nicanor Bartolome, Ma Or Aplasca, Noe Wong, Arturo Invento, Virgilio Fabros, Lusito Palmera, Oscar Valenzuela, Nong Leuterio, Dionaid Baraguer, and Erick Javier.

GMA hails Calbayog City, other LGU officials for pushing best practices

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today awarded to Calbayog City the League of Cities of the Philippines (LCP) Top Best Practices Award for effectively delineating its coastal and marine resource area for commercial and marginal fishermen.

The President handed the plaque of recognition to Mayor Mel Senen Sarmiento for the city's Coastal Zoning: Delineating Coastal Waters for Commercial and Marginal Fishermen during the last day of the 42nd General Assembly of the LCP at the Hyatt Regency Hotel in Pasay City.

"Let me say that the essential tasks of nation building are made easier because we have local governments and cities that do these best practices," she said.

Calbayog City's program effectively divided its coastal fishing area into several clustered zones the fishing activities of the commercial and marginal fishermen in each cluster area are guarded and monitored.

The city also pledged to shoulder half the cost of the handheld radios for the different clusters, with the other half financed by barangay funds.

Second place was Urdaneta City's Tulungan sa Purok, Tangub City's Christmas Village (3rd place), Marikina City's Citizens First Privilege Card (4th), and Tuguegarao City's Agricultural and Fisheries Modernization Program.

Rounding up the sixth to tenth Best Practices awardees were the OSCA Geriacare Physical Therapy and Rehabilitation Center (Butuan City), Barangay Integrated Services Delivery Program (Sorsogon City), Bangus Festival (Dagupan City), Coastal and Water Zone Planning (Island Garden City of Samal), and the 5-Minute Response Services of Balanga City.

The Top Ten Best Practices each received a plaque of recognition and a police motorcycle immediately available outside the hotel.

The mayors of the top five Best Practices were also entitled to a free trip to Kuala Lumpur for an exchange study on Malaysia's System of Higher Education on August 27-30 this year.

Five members of the Ateneo School of Government and the LCP Best Practices field validating teams judged the entries based on efficiency, transparency, effectiveness of the program, safety and security, transferability and sustainability, ability to significantly reduce poverty, and innovativeness.

A total of 85 best city programs from 38 cities nationwide participated in this year's Best Practices tilt.

The 115 city mayors intended to continue the already institutionalized program award to recognize exemplary and innovative local government initiatives that complement the national government's initiatives to uplift the general welfare of their constituencies.

Canada's SNC-Lavalin to invest $1-B in LRT project

Canadian-based SNC-Lavalin will invest more than $1 billion in the Philippines to help the government finance the expansion of the Light Railway Transit (LRT) system in Metro Manila.

This was revealed today by Filipino-born Canadian Secretary of State Dr. Rey Pagtakhan during a press briefing in Malacañang following his courtesy call on President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo.

Pagtakhan said that the project, which was approved in principle by the President a year ago, would give a strong signal to the world that the Philippines is a safe country to invest.

"We are pursuing this project because it will send a clear message to the world that when a highly regarded Canadian company is able to have its business in the Philippines, then I am sure other investors in the world would also like to see that for themselves," Pagtakhan said.

He said that Canada has a highly sophisticated knowledge-based economy and is on the world's top four in aerospace industry, automobile export industry and in transport industry.

"So, we would like to offer this expertise to the Philippines, in partnership with the Filipino businessmen and the Philippine government as the situation dictates," Pagtakhan said.

SNC-Lavalin has been in discussion with the government for several years about the LRT Line 1 Expansion Project.

Canadian Ambassador to Manila Robert Colet, who accompanied Pagtakhan during the courtesy call, said that discussions on the project are going on well, and that they are hoping that a final decision would be reached soon.

"SNC-Lavalin will be able to invest over $1 billion for the LRT Line 1 expansion project. This is not a new project. This is a project that we've been in discussion with the Philippine government for some time now," Colet said.

He said that his government is hoping that discussions will be conclusive soon so that the last elements that are to be resolved are resolved and the project can be implemented.

The LRT Line 1 Capacity Expansion Project Phase 2 has already started and is targeted for completion in December 2005.

This project seeks to increase LRT Line 1 ridership by acquiring 12 new air-conditioned 4-car trains, and installing air conditioning units in the old 63-car fleet. This will effectively increase line capacity from 27,000 passengers per hour per direction to 40,000.

The project costs P11 billion and is 85 percent financed by the Japan Bank of International Cooperation.

The government is also planning to expand the LRT Line 1 southward to the cities of Parañaque and Las Piñas, and to Bacoor in Cavite, raising ridership to 40,000 persons per day. The southward expansion of the LRT Line 1 will cost around US$842 million.

The government pledged to build new mass transit lines and finish at least three by June 2004 to benefit millions of passengers.

Born in the Philippines, Pagtakhan finished his medicine from the University of the Philippines and holds the degree of Master in Science in Peri-Natal Physiology from the University of Manitoba.

Pagtakhan was granted Canadian citizenship in 1974 and was first elected to the House of Commons in 1988. He was reelected for a fourth term in 2002.

He was appointed Minister of Veterans Affairs on Jan. 15, 2002 and as Secretary of State for Science, Research and Development on May 26, 2002.

Pagtakhan previously served as Secretary of State for Asia-Pacific and as Parliamentary Secretary to the Prime Minister.

Statement of the President: Oakwood Inquiry

I would have preferred to have the independent fact-finding commission undertake the sole inquiry for purposes of public focus, but I respect the decision of the Senate to proceed with its own. Two parallel inquiries could coexist in this case, one focusing on prospective legislation and the other on policy matters. It will also allow Senator Honasan two fora in which to air his side, the forum of his peers and the forum of the bench. I am for giving the people the full, unadulterated and unabridged story about this notorious misadventure and I welcome all responsible efforts towards this end. The truth will prevail. Democracy will prevail.

Statement of the President: Honasan Charges

Senator Honasan should welcome the charges against him as an opportunity to prove his claimed innocence. There should be no more reason for making this case a media spectacle. The battle is now between evidence and conjecture, between fact and fiction. Due process shall be faithfully observed. Our only aim is to help in bringing forth the truth in clear light. I call on all Filipinos to stand in respect of the courts of law and allow the course of justice to move forward. Let us uphold the Constitution. Let us uphold democracy.

Statement of the President: State of Rebellion

The investigation on the failed mutiny on July 27 is now in an advanced stage and will soon account for all those involved. As the conspiracy is completely exposed and the judicial processes take their course, the state of rebellion would no longer be necessary and will soon be lifted. We will base our decision on a comprehensive view of the national security horizon, not upon complaints of the business community or petitions raised before the courts.

Statement of Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye

Death of Salamat

It is unfortunate for the peace process since Salamat is supposed to lead the MILF panel in the GRP-MILF peace negotiations. Nevertheless, this does not affect the basic policy of the Government to pursue a just, comprehensive and durable solution to the conflict in Mindanao. We are prepared for the opening of the talks as scheduled.

Olivarez Libel Case

This is a libel case filed on the basis of specific allegations. All the editor has to do is to present her side in court. Malacañang is not involved in harassment. This is simply the rule of law in action.

GMA administers oath to last 3 members of mutiny probe body, respects Senate decision on inquiry

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today administered the oath to the last three members of the independent fact-finding commission on the Makati rebellion, saying the six-member body can now start its separate and thorough investigation into the root cause of the July 27 coup attempt and the provocations that inspired it.

The President said “I would have preferred to have the independent fact-finding commission undertake the sole inquiry for purposes of public focus, but I respect the decision of the Senate to proceed with its own.”

Sworn in by the President in ceremonies held at the Study Room of Malacañang this morning were Jesuit Fr. Joaquin Bernas, university professor Carolina Hernandez and retired Commodore Rex Robles.

Earlier, she swore in retired Supreme Court Associate Justice Florentino Feliciano as the commission’s chairman and retired Justice Minerva Gonzaga-Reyes and retired Air Force Capt. Roland Narciso as members of the commission.

Narciso, a classmate of the rebellion leaders at the Philippine Military Academy class of 1995, replaced Capt. Rex Banjo Q. Bumanlag, who is still undergoing schooling and is thus still under the military payroll.

In a statement issued after the oath-taking, the President said parallel inquiries could exist in the Makati rebellion case focusing on prospective legislation and on policy matters.

The President also said the investigation will allow Sen. Gregorio Honasan two fora to air his side, “the forum of his peers and the forum of the bench.”

“I am for giving the people the full, unadulterated and unabridged story about this misadventure and I welcome all responsible efforts towards this end. The truth will prevail. Democracy will prevail,” the President said.

Fr. Bernas was one-time provincial of the Society of Jesus in the Philippines and is the dean of the Ateneo de Manila University Law School. He is a noted theologian and constitutional expert, and one of the framers of the 1987 constitution. He teaches constitutional and international law at Ateneo.

Hernandez is a professor of political science at the University of the Philippines and is the holder of its Carlos P. Romulo Professorial Chair in International Relations.

She is founder and president of the Institute for Strategic and Development Studies, an independent, non-profit think-tank on foreign policy, domestic politics, and security concerns and development issues.

In 1989-1990, she served as a member of the Commission that investigated the failed coup of 1989, a body appointed by former President Corazon Aquino that produced the Final Report that is seen as a critically important document in the country’s march to re-democratization.

Dr. Hernandez is widely published in international, regional and Philippine academic journals in the fields of regional security and foreign relations, military politics, democracy and development, and Philippine domestic politics and foreign policy.

She holds a B.S. in Foreign Service, cum laude from UP, and M.A. in International Relations from the University of Karachi where she finished in her first class.

Dr. Hernandez also holds a Ph.D. in Political Science from the State University of New York at Buffalo where she wrote a pioneering study on Philippine civil-military relations.

Commodore Rex Robles is one of the founders of the Reform the AFP Movement that spearheaded the EDSA People Power Revolution, in which he also took part. He is a member of the Philippine Military Academy Class of 1965 and earned his M.S. in Mechanical Engineering from the US Naval Postgraduate School in 1974. He also graduated at the top of his class at the Command and General Staff College in 1984 and was a United Nations Fellow (Geneva, Stockholm and New York, 1980-1981) on International Security and Disarmament.

He is a security consultant, serving as Senior Adviser to MAA Consultants (Manila) and Consultant to the Quantum Capital and Consultants (Hong Kong). He is also president of RCR Consultancy, Security Risk Management and of RCR Security and Investigative Services. He was Senior Vice President for Security and Safety of PASAR from June 1999 to December 2001 and Security Consultant and Project Manager for PHILNICO from January 1999 to May 2002.

Robles was Senior Military Adviser to the Minister of National Defense in 1985-1986; Chairman of Special Study Group of the Ministry of National Defense from 1982-1985; and Chief of the Domestic Section, Production Branch, J2, of the Armed Forces of the Philippines from 1969 to 1972.

Also, Commodore Robles was Deputy Commander of the Western Command of the AFP from 1994 to 1997 and later became Commander of the Naval Reserve Command of the Philippine Navy from 1997 to 1999.

GMA says Honasan may prove Oakwood mutiny innocence in legislative, judicial fora

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today hinted that the democratic processes are at work, particularly in the investigation on the involvement of Senator Gregorio “Gringo” Honasan in the failed Oakwood mutiny in Makati City last week.

In a statement read during oath taking rites of three other members of the six-man fact-finding commission on the mutiny, the President said “three parallel inquiries could co-exist in this case, one focused on prospective legislation and the other on policy matters.”

She referred to the separate inquiries being conducted by the House of Representatives and the Senate and the investigation of the independent commission.

She said this would “allow Senator Honasan two fora in which to air his side, the forum of his peers and the forum of the bench.”

The President said Honasan should “welcome the charges against him as an opportunity to prove his claimed innocence.”

She lauded “all responsible efforts” to get to the roots of the Oakwood mutiny.

“I am for giving the people the full, unadulterated and unabridged story about this notorious misadventure,” she said.

She enjoined everyone to stop making the case “a media spectacle,” as the “battle is now between evidence and conjecture, between fact and fiction.”

She assured that due process would be “faithfully observed.”

U.S. firm to give priority to Filipino workers in Iraq projects, GMA assured

An American firm that won a US Agency for International Development (USAID) contract for developments in post-war Iraq today assured President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo that it would give priority to Filipino workers in their projects.

The assurance was given by Asif M. Shaikh, president and chief executive officer (CEO) of IRG, during a courtesy call in Malacañang.

IRG is a US company that won a USAID contract to provide personnel support for Iraqi reconstruction and humanitarian efforts.

Shaikh informed the President that in his meeting with the Public-Private Sector Task Force on the Reconstruction of Iraq chaired by Roberto Romulo, he reiterated the participation of Philippine companies and experts in the implementation of IRG's contracts.

The Public-Private Sector Task force was created by the President to coordinate Philippine participation in the reconstruction and rehabilitation of post-war Iraq.

Under its contract with the US government, the IRG is tasked to provide support to the USAID in the overall planning, monitoring, coordination, management and reporting on reconstruction and rehabilitation activities across a variety of sectors including education, health, agriculture, civil society strengthening, and infrastructure.

The contract base period covers 90 days with two additional one-year option periods.

The IRG has been involved in various World Bank and USAID funded projects in the Philippines that include work on environmental income accounting, national forestry action plan, rural electrification and urban pollution control.

Romulo said that sub-contracts are beginning to come in, adding that IRG's contract falls squarely within our capability to help execute since the Philippines has a number of world-class experts on various fields.

After her brief meeting with Shaikh, the President warmly welcomed at the Ceremonial Hall some 240 Lakbay-Aral participants from Sasmuan, Pampanga led by Mayor Catalina Bagasina.

The President shook hands with her cabalens and even posed for a souvenir photograph with them.

The participants were composed of barangay captains, kagawads and personnel from the fourteen barangays of Sasmuan who were on a one-day Lakbay-Aral trip to Manila.

The group initially visited the Fort Santigao and the Senate and was slated to go to the Rizal Park from Malacañang.

Slower July inflation stabilizes prices

Consumers in the National Capital Region (NCR) should be glad that prices in the area have remained either stable or are generally going down.

This is the good news from the National Statistics Office (NSO), which today said that inflation in the region dipped by 0.5 percent in July from 1.3 percent in June.

Year-on-year inflation in the NCR also slowed down by 0.5 percentage point to 4.0 percent in July from 4.5 percent in June.

Inflation is any sustained or continuous increase in the prices of goods.

NSO Administrator Carmelita Ericta attributed the lower month-on-month inflation rate in July to the 1.6-percent reduction in the prices of food, beverages and tobacco items, from a 1.6-percent increase in June.

Ericta said all other commodity groups registered either slower rates or zero growth.

Prices of clothing eased 0.4 percent from 1.0 percent; service items, 0.3 percent from 2.5 percent; miscellaneous items, 0.1 percent from 0.7 percent; and fuel, light and water, zero growth from 1.2 percent, she said.

But housing and repairs costs slightly grew to 0.2 percent from 0.1 percent, she added.

Ericta noted that vegetables were abundantly supplied to markets in the NCR, enough to meet consumer demand in July. Fruits also teemed and commanded lower prices.

The same supply situation was noted in areas outside the NCR despite heavy rains and floods spawned by Typhoon Harurot that hit the country later in the month. The national index fell to -1.7 percent in July from 5.5 percent in June.

There was also abundant supply of fish nationwide. The volume of rice traded in the NCR was sufficient, although it was noted that the price of rice slightly rose in at least eight regions.

While slight increases were noted in the prices of selected school supplies, medicines, medical and health goods, this was slower than their corresponding June rates.

Ericta said higher rental rates in many regions pushed up the country's housing and repairs index by 0.7 percent.

Add-ons in the prices of selected construction materials such as cement, lumber, sand and nails also contributed to the uptrend, she said.

Stop unnecessary talks on coup, Gordon urges people

Tourism Secretary Richard Gordon appealed to the public yesterday to stop engaging in unnecessary talk or rumors about coups, saying this could only hurt the country in the long run.

Gordon made the appeal in a press briefing that followed a Cabinet meeting in Malacañang wherein he discussed the impact of the failed mutiny on the country's tourism industry.

Instead of engaging in unfounded talk, Gordon encouraged the people to go on with the following facts in mind: "We are a safe country, we had a bloodless mutiny which was resolved Philippine style. The problems are being addressed but there will be justice for the mutiny's officers and that is a fact they will have to face."

"Even if they seem to have legitimate grievances which have already been addressed by the President, we want to send a message to the whole world that justice will be meted out firmly and fairly," he said.

The Tourism Secretary expressed elation over the favorable feedback he got from tourists who were in the country during the aborted mutiny in Makati. He said they were impressed with the way President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo handled the crisis and the whole thing didn't make a difference with them.

He reported that the World Tourism Organization has extended the Visit Philippines 2003 to June 2004 largely because of the SARS (severe acute respiratory syndrome) scare that hit the country some months back and brought tourism down.

Gordon stressed that the country cannot afford to have more "bad news" as it may really hurt this time.

“The more bad news we generate, the more the Philippines will have to spend valuable resources on advertising and we cannot afford that,” he said. “We cannot match Singapore which is spending about $180 million in terms of promotional effort to recover or Hong Kong which is spending an equal amount.”

He added that the country cannot get tourism back into radical jumps especially in an atmosphere “where things are popping up all over the place.”

“Hopefully, it should not hurt us.”

Gordon revealed that the Tourism Department is now in the process of preparing commercials with Hollywood stars Lou Diamond Phillips and Tia Carrere in connection with its WOW Philippines campaign.

Phillips and Carrere have Filipino lineages.

Phillips, he said, arrived this morning while Carrere is in Palawan “enjoying herself.”

The commercials, Gordon said will be aired soon over CNN and BBC.

Salamat’s death won’t affect resumption of MILF-gov’t peace gab in Kuala Lumpur — Palace

Malacañang today said the death of Chairman Hashim Salamat of the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) would not affect the scheduled resumption of the peace talks between the government and the MILF being brokered by the Malaysian government.

In a briefing in Malacañang this afternoon, Presidential Adviser on the Peace Process Eduardo Ermita said that since 2001 Al Haj Murad, who has succeeded Salamat as MILF chairman, has always headed the MILF panel to the talks.

“So the negotiations will resume with Al Haj Murad as chairman because, in the first place, he was designated chairman from the beginning in year 2001 and continues to be the chairman of the panel up to the present,” Ermita said.

Earlier in a formal statement, Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said Salamat’s death would not affect the basic policy of the government to pursue a just, comprehensive and durable solution to the conflict in Mindanao.

“We are prepared for the opening of the talks in Kuala Lumpur as scheduled,” Bunye said.

Ermita explained that before his death, Salamat signified his intention to be present at the opening of the formal talks in Kuala Lumpur.

Murad, formerly MILF vice chairman for military affairs, was chosen by the MILF central committee to take over as MILF chairman after Salamat’s death last July 13.

When asked when the formal talks between the two sides would resume, Ermita said that this would depend on the advice coming from the Malaysian government.

He said that the formal talks would be preceded by a preparatory meeting to be arranged by Malaysia and attended by a small group from each panel.

After the preparatory meeting, Ermita said the formal reopening of the stalled peace negotiations, would hopefully be held “on or about August 10.”

“But all these are dependent on the disposition of the Malaysian authorities. I repeat that we are only guests of the Malaysian government which is hosting these talks,” Ermita said.

Ermita said he is also hopeful that in the next few days, Malaysia would be able to organize a third-party observer team that would be deployed to the Philippines to oversee the implementation of the agreement on cessation of hostilities that the MILF and the government have signed.

AFP officers, men getting pay increase long before Makati mutiny, Cabinet told

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has approved the increase in salaries of the officers and enlisted men of the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) long before the Makati mutiny happened last July 27.

In his report presented to the President during the Cabinet meeting today, Admiral Matt Mayuga, AFP deputy chief of staff for personnel, said the government has been implementing the three-phase increase of the soldier’s salaries under Republic Act 9166 which was signed into law by the President last June 7, 2002, or more than a year before the Makati incident.

R. A. 9166 rectified the disparity in the salary of soldiers by increasing the rate of their base pay to make it at par with their counterparts in the Philippine National Police (PNP) and other benefits.

The law provides a salary grade of 30 to the AFP Chief-of-Staff while a private is given a salary grade of 10, comparable to that of an Officer I in the second level in the Civil Service.

The new pay scale for soldiers was carried out on a staggered basis but not to exceed two years.

Mayuga said its implementation began in October 2002 by increasing the soldiers’ salaries by 20 percent. Another 30 percent was provided in January this year. He said the other half, or 50 percent, is scheduled for release January next year.

In her speech during the Manila Overseas Press Club (MOPC) President’s Night last July 31 in Makati City, the President said the soldiers were lucky to have their increase implemented in just two years.

“In fact, the policemen tell me the soldiers are lucky because the policemen’s pay to make it equal to the teachers was legislated way back in 1992. It took me in 2002 to implement it fully,” she said.

R. A. 9166 also provides a merit system for deserving soldiers in the form of various incentives.

Statement of the President: Jakarta Bombing

The Philippines condemns in the strongest possible terms the bomb attack today in Jakarta. The Philippines deplores this attack against innocent civilians. Whatever cause is espoused by the terrorists who planned and committed this dastardly act is not helped by their resort to senseless violence.

We condole with the government of Indonesia and with the families and friends of the victims. We pray for the safe recovery of those injured.

This attack does not and cannot alter the resolve of the international community to fight terror.

We stand by the brave people of Indonesia at this moment of sorrow and indignation.

I have written to H. E. President Megawati Soekarnoputri and conveyed to her our deepest sympathies and our condemnation of this bomb attack.

Statement of the President: NAIA official's slaying

Speculations will just muddle the investigation. The PNP has already been ordered to get cracking and let us allow authorities to do their job to unravel the motive and suspects behind this heinous crime.

Statement of the President: Pink eye disease

I am instructing the Department of Health to put the necessary government agencies on standby preparedness and to immediately inform the public of the causes and transmission modes of the reported "pink eye" disease. This may not be as deadly as the SARS but we must rely on the same response mechanisms we used against SARS to contain the spread of the disease if it ever reaches the Philippines. We call on the public to be calm and listen attentively to the bulletins or announcements of the health department.

Statement of the President: SARS speculation

Global health authorities have declared that the newly reported SARS incident in Singapore is isolated, and it does not portend an epidemic wave. However, it will not hurt to take proper measures of safeguarding our health and being prepared for any eventuality.

GMA commends, presents trophies to outstanding rural electric cooperatives

For providing better life to Filipinos and triggering economic development in the countryside, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today commended 72 rural electric cooperatives for their substantial compliance with the government's rural electrification program.

The President expressed satisfaction and acknowledged the 72 electric cooperatives who complied with her demands for better services, bold reforms and a permanent commitment to integrity and transparency spelled out in Executive Order No. 119 in return for the condonation of their electrification loans amounting to some P18 billion.

She also presented trophies to the most outstanding of these electric cooperatives and their officials in ceremonies held this morning at Malacañang's Ceremonial Hall

The President rewarded the 72 electric cooperatives with greater autonomy and empowerment which means there will be less government regulations, conducting and full support for access to private sector funds and assistance.

She also congratulated 23 other electric cooperatives that have partially complied with the list of her required reforms. She said a second assessment will be conducted to determine whether or not additional assistance is necessary in order to improve their efficiency and reliability.

However, the President expressed dismay for the continued dismal performance of some 21 electric cooperatives. It will be the height of injustice for them to continue subjecting their member's to difficulty or distress, she said.

"Now is the time to allow other players imbued with responsiveness and capability to step in and implement the needed reforms – bold and unprecedented – no matter how unpleasant some of them maybe," she stressed.

The President also told the awardees that she had directed the National Electrification Administration (NEA) Board of Administrators to take the most viable of the options or alternatives in accordance with the regulatory framework and within the bounds of laws, rules and regulations.

"They must pursue viable solutions such as, but not limited to, merger or consolidation, joint ventures, investment management contracts or management takeovers," the President said.

She also instructed the NEA to organize and promote "watchdog committees" composed of influential sectors in the local communities and to institutionalize its program.

During the awarding rites, the President also witnessed the signing of the merger agreement among the Cebu I, II, III Electric Cooperatives which is the first such options that would strengthen the capital base of the surviving cooperative and broaden the membership base and encourage greater participation in the affairs of the cooperative.

For the past 15 years, the NEA Board of Administrators has annually recognized excellent performance of electric cooperatives.

The Most Outstanding Electric Cooperatives in the Philippines awardees are Iloilo I, Peninsula, Tarlac II, Zamboanga Sur I, Cotabato, La Union and Agusan Norte Electric Cooperatives.

The Turn-Around Electric Cooperatives are Aklan, Camarines Norte, Camarines Sur IV, Central Pangasinan, Masbate, Bohol II and Misamis Occidental II.

The Most Outstanding General Managers awardees are Wilfred Billena (Iloilo I), Carlos Itable (Bohol I & II), Edecio Satina (Cebu I & II), Ramon Posadas (La Union), Horacio Santos (Agusan Norte), Edgardo Savellano, (Daneco) and Loreto Marcelino (Peninsula).

Given the Outstanding Board of Directors awards were those of Iloilo I, La Union, Peninsula, Bohol I, Cebu I, II, and III Electric Cooperatives.

Palace: Vice President's fears of a worse scenario not shared by many Filipinos

Malacañang today said that the fears expressed by Vice President Teofisto Guingona, Jr. on the country's stability are not shared by many Filipinos, although he is entitled to his private opinion.

"This is an expression of a private opinion of the Vice President, which at least to us, appears not to be shared by many," Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said in his press briefing this afternoon.

Bunye was reacting to the statement attributed to the Vice President that the situation in the country is "fluid" and could lead to a scenario that would be worse than the July 27 Oakwood incident.

Earlier, Bunye said that the fact that President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo is going to fulfill her commitments abroad later this month is an indication that the situation in the country is stable.

He said that the President "is confident on the state of the nation, in the direction of the economy and the prospects for peace."

Starting on September 25, the President is scheduled to visit New York to address the 58th General Assembly of the United Nations, meet with Pope Paul II in Rome, and then speak before the 32nd General Conference of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) in Paris.

GMA pledges more logistics support for AFP's fight vs. insurgency and terrorism

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said more logistics would be poured into the frontlines to further strengthen the armed forces' campaign against insurgency and terrorism.

The President made the remarks during a luncheon with 137 field commanders of the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) at the Social Hall in Camp Aguinaldo, Quezon City.

Accompanying the President were AFP Chief Gen. Narciso Abaya, AFP Operations (J3) Chief Maj. Gen. Hermogenes Esperon, and Defense Undersecretary Feliciano Gacis.

The President, who is concurrently the Secretary of National Defense, said more logistics would be put into the frontlines "for better fighting capability" of the soldiers.

During the luncheon, the President also thanked the field commanders – ranked between 2nd Lieutenant to Captain – for their continued loyalty to the government.

"Thank you for your loyalty to the Republic and may you continue to be the good protectors of the Filipino people," Mrs. Arroyo said.

After lunch, the President proceeded to the AFP LogCom Mortuary and paid a visit to the wake of retired Philippine Constabulary Col. Narciso Ojeda, who served during the term of President Diosdado Macapagal.

GMA assures Tondo slum dwellers of relocation to housing site

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today assured the relocation of more than 2,000 slum dwellers in the government's permanent housing site at the Smokey Mountain Development and Reclamation Area in Tondo, Manila.

During the President's visit at the Smokey Mountain, Secretary Michael Defensor, chairman of the Housing and Urban Development Coordinating Council (HUDCC), said 840 families would move into the seven five-story buildings in the permanent housing site as early as December 16 this year.

He said an additional 1,560 squatter families would fully occupy the housing site by March next year.

Much to the delight of the residents, the President tasked Defensor to lower the P350 monthly amortization for each of the 4 x 10 meters housing units in the area.

The President also ordered the removal of the some 100,000 cubic meters of thrash mound beside the housing site.

The residents have been waiting since eight years ago to move into the government's housing facility.

Other amenities awaiting the lucky residents were the establishment of park, roads, sewer treatment plant, a computer school and livelihood projects.

Jaime de Guzman, one of the 119 families affected by a fire in Tondo in September 2001 who were among the first to relocate into one of the buildings, said their only problem now is the excessive P40 per cubic meter of water being charge by the Smokey Mountain Community Association, Inc. (SMCAI).

The President later visited the BASECO Compound also in Tondo where she witnessed the turnover of 10,000 bags of cement by the Cement Manufacturers' Association of the Philippines (CMAP) for the more than 2,000 families in the area affected by a fire in March 30, 2002 and March 6, this year.

Among those who witnessed the turnover were Defensor, Manila Mayor Joselito Atienza, and Philippine Ports Authority (PPA) General Manager Al Cusi.

Gordon denies resignation yarn, asks 'mischievous' pols to wait for 2004

Tourism Secretary Richard Gordon categorically denied today that he has resigned from the Cabinet, saying he has no reason to and is happy serving President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo because of her work ethics and integrity.

In a press briefing in Malacañang, Gordon branded those responsible for the malicious talks as mischievous politicians "who can't wait until 2004 to destabilize the country and take over."

"I warn them that this is going nowhere," Gordon said. "They have no support from the people."

He expressed disappointment that these people he described as "purveyors of pernicious poison" would resort to such acts, saying that what they are doing is a great disservice to the nation and to all Filipinos.

"There is no intention on my part to resign," he stressed. "There is no reason on my part. I am happy serving this President. She has the work ethic, she has the integrity."

Despite his disappointment, Gordon said his faith in the Filipino remains.

"If only we could concentrate on our jobs, on what we are supposed to do, if we cooperate with each other, rally around the flag, we will be making good examples of ourselves and letting the whole world realize that the Philippines can be and will always be the Comeback Kid in this part of the world," he said.

The Tourism Secretary said that despite all the controversies, the Cabinet remains strong and cooperating with each other.

"I'm very pleased with what we are doing. I'm proud of our country. All these things are just part of the rough and tumble of democracy. This is the democracy that we chose, we must make sure it succeeds," Gordon stressed.

Statement of the President: On President Bush visit

The time may be short but the expected gains are undiminished. The Filipino people anticipate the Bush visit with anticipation and gladness. This event will be both highly symbolic and substantive. It will symbolize the conjoined strategic objectives of the Philippines and the United States for global peace, security and development; and continuing US engagement in Southeast Asia. It will further seal our pact against terrorism and poverty as the US gears for a broader post-conflict and rehabilitative role in Mindanao. It will substantiate the RP-US economic partnership as the US remains to be our No. 1 trading partner and source of investment. The bonds of friendship and mutuality will be deepened and tightened.

Statement of the President: On Bishop Villegas' Homily

The roots of the crisis are ambition, hatred and greed. We shall overcome these by unity, peace and democracy. I have submerged my leadership in the profound yearnings of our people – for food on the table, a roof over their heads and peace in their homes. The few that are impatient for power must wait for the Constitutional opportunities to vie for it. We shall not give them an inch of the people's sovereignty that they intend to usurp by force. I shall continue to spend my day in the uplift of the poor and underprivileged, and in caring for the dispossessed. I have no time for pleasing despots.

Statement of the President: On NAIA exec slaying

I have already instructed the PNP to do their job. Let us allow authorities to do their part in unraveling the motives and suspects behind this heinous crime.

Statement of the President: On peacekeeping and humanitarian mission

The reported threats aired by Osama Bin Laden will not break our will and determination to help in the reconstruction of that country. The members of our peacekeeping and humanitarian mission in Iraq are taking the necessary precautions for their safety and security. I have directed the DFA to see to it that they are not placed under unnecessary risk. In line with our standing commitments and subject to security considerations, we will continue sending humanitarian teams there under the purview of the UN. We must keep our obligations as a member of the international community committed to global peace and stability.

GMA calls on ambitious politicians to wait for 2004 if they want power

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today called on ambitious politicians to wait for the proper Constitutional opportunities if they want power as she stressed that she will never acquiesce the people's sovereignty to those who would like to get it by force.

In a formal statement, the President said that the few who are impatient for power should wait for the Constitutional opportunities to vie for it, referring to the presidential elections in 2004.

"We shall not give them an inch of the people's sovereignty that they intend to usurp by force," the President said.

In referring to the recent homily of Manila Auxiliary Bishop Socrates "Soc" Villegas, the President said that the roots of today's crisis are ambition, hatred and greed.

But she assured the bishop and the Roman Catholic Church that the Filipino people will overcome this crisis by unity, peace and democracy.

"I have submerged my leadership in the profound yearnings of our people—for food on the table, a roof over their heads, and peace in their homes," the President said.

In his homily at a mass Thursday, Villegas said that the country is going through a leadership crisis as he accused the leaders, who he likened to shepherds, of abandoning their flock and "fattening" themselves.

The President said that she will continue to use all her energies in uplifting the poor and the underprivileged, and in caring for the dispossessed. "I have no time for pleasing despots," she said.

For two consecutive days now, the President has distributed certificates of lot occupancy to informal settlers in Manila and Tondo.

On Thursday, the President visited the depressed areas in Parola and Baseco Compound in Tondo, where she assured some 2,000 squatter families that they would soon be relocated to a permanent housing site developed by the government housing agencies under the Housing and Urban Development Coordinating Council (HUDCC),

This morning, in ceremonies held at the Cuneta Astrodome in Pasay City, the President also awarded certificates of lot occupancy (CLOs) to some 500 squatter families in different depressed areas in Pasay City.

GMA gets police report on successes in anti-drug campaign

The Macapagal-Arroyo administration has exceeded the targets set for its intensive nationwide campaign to protect the Filipino people, particularly the youth, from the drug menace.

In a report to President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, the Anti-Illegal Drugs Special Operations Task (AID-SOT) Force said that, in a three-month period starting June 16, 2003, AID-SOT Force had cleared 1,709 drug-affected barangays, arrested 10,269 drug pushers and users, and neutralized 94 drug groups, including three transnational syndicates responsible for the manufacture and trafficking of dangerous drugs.

The anti-drugs task force dismantled four clandestine shabu laboratories of the transnational syndicates, three of which were located in Cavite – one each in Silang, Tanza and Carmona. The other shabu laboratory was found in Fairview, Quezon City.

In addition to disabling the large-scale shabu labs, AID-SOT operatives also raided six warehouses used for storing shabu finished products and chemicals needed in the manufacture of illegal drugs. They seized several kilos of shabu, large quantities of ephedrine and other chemicals, and state-of-the-art shabu lab equipment.

The AID-SOT dragnet netted three leaders of the neutralized transnational drug syndicates. They were identified in the report as Jackson Dy, Benito Sy and Zhang Shang Ming, who are now facing criminal charges.

The AID-SOT, with select membership from different units of the Philippine National Police (PNP), set out with these targets in the first quarter of its operation: clearing 500 drug affected barangays, arresting 6,000 pushers and users, and neutralizing 60 local and 4 transnational drug groups.

In its report, the AID-SOT attributed its successful barangay clearing operations to the “full support” extended the Anti-Illegal Drugs Task Force by concerned government agencies and the community.

“We can attain the target of clearing one third of all the drug-affected barangays nationwide,” the AID-SOT report said.

The police regional offices scored an overall 72.76 percent barangays drug clearing efficiency. The National Capital Region, with 1,659 drug-affected barangays, had the most number of barangays cleared of drugs at 593, followed by Region VI, 182; Region III, 151; and Region XI, 133.

The police in Region 5 scored the highest efficiency rating, clearing 117 of the 181 drug-affected barangays in their area of operation.

Bush visit short but expected gains undiminished — GMA

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said that although the visit here of US President George W. Bush next month is short, it will have a substantial impact on Philippine-American relations and in the two countries partnership in such areas as global peace, security and development.

In a formal statement, the President said that the visit of President Bush may be short “but the expected gains are undiminished.”

She said that the Filipino people are waiting for the Bush visit with anticipation and gladness. “This event will be both highly symbolic and substantive,” the President said.

Earlier, Foreign Affairs Secretary Blas F. Ople said that President Bush would be spending more time in Manila than in other Asian capitals.

He said Bush will be here on October 18 for an eight-hour visit, while he will be spending only three hours each in Indonesia, Australia and Thailand.

“The visit will be significant not necessarily because it is long or short but how much the relationship and the bonds of friendship are strengthened,” Ople said.

The President said that the visit will symbolize the conjoined strategic objectives of the Philippines and the United States for global peace, security and development as well as the continuing US engagement in Southeast Asia.

She said the visit “will further seal our pact against terrorism and poverty as the US gears for a broader post-conflict and rehabilitative role in Mindanao.”

The visit, the President said, will also substantiate the RP-US economic partnership as the US remains to be the country’s No. 1 trading partner and source of investment.

“The bonds of friendship and mutuality will be deepened and tightened,” the President said.

In a radio interview, Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said the advance party of President Bush is already in town, coordinating with the Department of Foreign Affairs (DFA) in the preparation of his schedule and other details.

Statement of Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye

Re Alleged Resignation of Secretary Mar Roxas

I just talked by phone to Secretary Mar Roxas, who is now attending the WTO conference in Cancun, Mexico.

Secretary Roxas expressed surprise about the rumor circulating that he has resigned.

“I was not aware of such gossip until somebody from your office called me just now. As you can see, we are discharging our duty here and we will continue to do so,” Roxas told me.

“We have put forward the position of our country and we have aligned ourselves with a group of 21 countries, which include India, China, Brazil and Egypt,” Secretary Roxas told me.

The Philippines has been battling for elimination of agricultural subsidies by the developed countries and the lowering of other barriers to trade such as quotas, health and sanitary regulations and other technicalities.

Don't be swayed by power grabbers, GMA tells urban poor

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today asked Metro Manila's urban poor not to allow themselves to be used by ambitious politicians and other groups who want to grab power through extra Constitutional means.

In her remarks during the distribution of certificates of lot occupancy to more than 500 informal settlers in Pasay City held this morning at the Cuneta Astrodome, the President told them that henceforth, they are no longer squatters in their own country.

She also called on them to continue to have faith in the government, which, according to her, has been working very hard to provide them with their basic needs, including housing.

“Huwag na huwag kayong pumayag na magamit ng mga sobrang ambisyoso sa kanilang hangarin na umagaw ng kapangyarihan (Don't allow yourselves to be used by the ambitious who would want to grab power,” the President said.

The President said that her primary concern is to uplift the poor, the underprivileged, and the dispossessed.

“Ito ang aking inaasikaso at hindi ang pamumulitika (This is what I am focusing on and not politics),” she said.

According to the President, during the two and a half years of her administration, more than 600,000 squatter families have already been given housing security and that some 300,000 have already been awarded with certificates of lot occupancy.

“This is a record high in the history of our country,” she said.

The President then lauded local officials and cited in particular Pasay City Mayor Wenceslao “Peewee” Trinidad and Rep. Consuelo Dy as well as airport officials like General Manager Edgar Manda and the recently ambushed MIAA executive Lilia Diaz for their support and for doing the paper work on the project.

Asking those present to pray for justice for Diaz, the President said she had already instructed the Philippine National Police (PNP) to speed up the investigation of the case.

The more than 500 recipients of the certificates of lot occupancy have been occupying lands owned by the Manila International Airport Authority (MIAA) in Balabag Area, Don Carlos Village, Baryo Pilipino Putol and Maricaban, all in Pasay City.

The areas where the home lots of the beneficiaries are located are covered by Presidential Proclamation No. 144, as amended by Presidential Proclamation No. 391, which transferred the administration of the proclaimed sites from the MIAA to the National Housing Authority (NHA).

The President said that in the past few days she had been visiting depressed areas in Metro Manila to interact with the informal settlers and to assure them that the government is working hard to provide them with housing security.

On Thursday, the President assured residents of Parola and Baseco Compound in Tondo, Manila that they would be relocated to some 2,500 units in a housing project at the Smokey Mountain, also in Tondo.

COMELEC modernization program ready for 2004 polls, GMA assured

In line with President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's unrelenting commitment to electoral reform, the Commission on Elections (COMELEC) today announced that except for the delivery of hardware, its comprehensive modernization program is nearly 100 percent complete.

COMELEC Chairman Benjamin Abalos said in a press briefing in Malacañang that the COMELEC is currently implementing Phase 1 of the program, also known as the Voters' Validation Project for the eventual cleansing and updating of all voters' lists in the country in time for the national and local elections set May 10 next year.

Towards this end, he said, the COMELEC is implementing the system of continuing education and validation of voters' registration records.

"Except for the delivery of the machines by end of November, the modernization program is almost 100 percent complete," Abalos said.

The automated counting machines, numbering about 1,900, were purchased from South Korea at a cost of P1.3 billion. Abalos made a demonstration of the machines during the briefing.

President Macapagal-Arroyo has reiterated the great importance of holding honest, orderly and peaceful elections next year. It has been the primary goal of her administration from the start.

Her very first State of the Nation Address (SONA) in 2001 pledged the computerization of the 2004 elections and the realization of the absentee voting law.

In her historic Rizal Day speech last year, the President singled out the coming polls as one of three key objectives in the last 18 months of her administration.

The COMELEC bid out poll computerization projects early this year after the President issued Executive Orders 172 and 175 to release P3 billion in funding. She certified and signed into law the Absentee Voting and Dual Citizenship measures and the mechanics for their implementation are now being put in place.

The President also signed R. A. 9006 which allowed election advertising subject to limitations, and R. A. 9165 synchronizing barangay and Sangguniang Kabataan polls.

Also in her electoral reform agenda is the Campaign Finance Bill, one of 15 priority legislations certified by President Macapagal-Arroyo.

Deputy Presidential Spokesman and Cabinet Secretary Ricardo Saludo said in the briefing that the government's unrelenting commitment to electoral reform shall lay the foundation for national stability, political maturity and good governance in the months and years ahead.

GMA seeks the Lord's help in addressing nation's problems in prayer-rally at the Luneta

A day after America recalled the day it stood united in the face of tragedy they now call 9-11, Filipinos, weary of excessive politicking and challenges to democracy, gathered this afternoon at the Quirino Grandstand to pray for peace, unity and democracy.

An estimated half a million people from the 17 cities and municipalities that comprise Metro Manila attended the prayer rally graced by no less than President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, Vice President Teofisto Guingona, Jr. Speaker Jose de Venecia, Jr. and other government officials, including all Metro Manila mayors, who took turns in rendering their own prayers for the sake of the country.

During her turn, the President asked for Divine intervention in addressing the roots of the crisis that rocked the country lately such as the threats of terrorism, insurgency, political destabilization, military mutiny and allegations of corruption in high places.

"Nakakabahala na Panginoon ang mga kaganapan nitong mga nakaraang buwan na nagbabanta ng kaguluhan sa aming pamumuhay, pagkawasak ng aming demokratikong lipunan at pagbagsak ng aming ekonomiya (Lord, the events of the last few months have become worrisome, threatening our lives, our democratic institutions and our economy)," the President intoned in her prayer.

"Panginoon, alam ninyo (Lord, you know) the roots of the crisis are ambition, hatred and greed. Panginoon, sa tulong niyo (Lord, with your help), we shall overcome these by unity, peace and democracy."

The President said she has submerged her leadership "in the profound yearnings of our people – for food on the table, a roof over their heads, and peace in their homes."

She said that with God's grace, she has no time for pleasing despots and that she will continue to use all her energies in uplifting the poor and the underprivileged as well as in caring for the dispossessed.

The President prayed for the enlightenment of ambitious politicians for them to wait for proper Constitutional opportunities if they want power, adding that she will never acquiesce the people's sovereignty to those who would want to get it by force.

"Sa pamamagitan ng aming mataimtim na panalangin, sana ay palakasin mo ang aming loob upang maharap namin ang maraming hamon sa aming pambansang katatagan (Through our sincere prayers, we hope that You will strengthen our resolve to face the many challenges in our national stability)," she added.

"Tulongan mo kaming maipakita na kami ay may kakayahang lampasan ang mga pagsubok na aming hinaharap at magtulong tulong para sa pambansang kapakanan (Help us, Lord, so that we will be able to surmount all our difficulties and be united in pushing for the national welfare)," the President said.

Guingona and Speaker de Venecia also delivered their respective prayers in the ceremonies that lasted nearly two hours amidst continuous threat of rain.

Singer Kuh Ledesma's rendition of "Ako ay Pilipino" set the tone of the prayer rally hosted by Manila Mayor Lito Atienza.

Early in the rites, Atienza read a manifesto of officials of Metro Manila's cities and municipalities belonging to different political persuasions calling for the setting aside of partisan political agenda and "to unite for the good of our country and our people."

Aside from Atienza, the other mayors who signed the manifesto, were Vergel Aguilar of Las Piñas, Rosendo Capco of Pateros; Tobias Tiangco of Navotas, Jose Emmanuel Carlos of Valenzuela City, Jaime Fresnide of Muntinlupa City, Wenceslao Trinidad of Pasay City, Sigfrido Tinga of Taguig, Ma. Lourdes Fernando of Marikina City, Feliciano Belmonte of Quezon City, Reynaldo Malonzo of Caloocan City, Amado Vicencio of Malabon City, Soledad Eusebio of Pasig City, Jejomar Binay of Makati City and Joey Marquez of Parañaque City.

Palace won't interfere with Senate probe on the Pidal case

Malacañang today said that it did not, and will not, interfere in the ongoing Senate inquiry on the allegations aired by opposition Sen. Panfilo Lacson against First Gentleman Atty. Jose Miguel Arroyo.

In a statement, Secretary Gabriel Claudio of the Presidential Legislative Liaison Office (PLLO) took exceptions to the claim of Sen. Sergio Osmeña that the Palace is pressuring the Senate to stop its investigation of what is now known as the Jose Pidal case.

“Senator Sergio Osmeña must be fair and forthright. If he claims officials from Malacañang called him to seek the termination of the Senate hearings on the Pidal case, he should name them,” Claudio said.

Claudio said that being the President's legislative adviser and official liaison with Congress, he should be the logical person to get in touch with the senators on matters related to legislations and other official activities.

“But the fact is, I never called him,” Claudio stressed.

In his claim, Osmeña said that he and other senators have received phone calls from Palace officials asking them to terminate their investigation and leave the Pidal issue to the courts.

According to Claudio, the last time he spoke with Senator Osmeña was in the afternoon after Ignacio “Iggy” Arroyo testified in the Senate blue ribbon committee hearing.

He said it was Osmeña who called him over the phone to remind him to facilitate the constitution of the House bicameral panel for the farmland-as-collateral bill.

“That was all we talked about and the conversation was very brief,” Claudio said. “So, who are the Palace officials he is referring to?”

Claudio said that the position of Malacañang on the Pidal case remains: that it does not and will not interfere.

In a separate interview over the radio, Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo respects the Senate as an independent body and would not interfere in its proceedings.

Bunye said that Malacañang is leaving to the three Senate investigating committees to decide among themselves on the proper thing to do with its fact-finding probe.

Bunye, however, added that before the Senate investigation is completed, it would only be appropriate that Senator Lacson should substantiate his charges with “real hard and strong” evidence and not just Xerox copies of his so-called documentary evidence.

President's radio address to the nation

Magandang araw sa inyong lahat.

Nakakalungkot isipin, pero dahil sa sobra at napakaagang pamumulitika ng ilan nating mga kababayan, maraming positibong mga kaganapan ay hindi nabibigyang pansin ng ating mga mamamayan.

Kahapon, nagdaos ang napakaraming kababayan natin ng isang malaking panalangin para sa kapayapaan, pagkakaisa at demokrasya.

Kahapon din ay namahagi tayo ng mga sertipikadong nagbibigay ng katiyakan ng lupang tinitirikan sa may limang daang pamilyang naninirahan sa lupang pag-aari ng NAIA sa lungsod ng Pasay pagkatapos ng ilang dekadang paghihintay nila, gaya ng ginawa ko nung nakaraang linggo sa Parola sa Tondo.

Sa loob ng nakaraang dalawang taon, halos tatlong daang libong pamilyang maralitang taga-lungsod ang nabigyan na ng katiyakan sa lupang tinitirikan – pinakamarami sa kasaysayan ng Pilipinas.

Nung Huwebes naman binisita ko ang Smokey Mountain kung saan mahigit 2,500 condominium units ang tapos na at hinihintay na lamang matapos ang septic tank bago maokupahan ng mga pamilyang maralitang taga-lungsod.

Dinaluhan ko rin nang araw na yon sa Baseco, sa Tondo, ang turn-over ng semento galing sa asosasyon ng cement manufacturers.

Sila'y nagbigay ng 10,000 sako ng semento para sa konstruksyon ng drainage systems at septic tanks sa mga maralitang lugar.

Nung nakaraang Huwebes, napag-alaman ko na dahil sa suportang ibinigay ng gobyerno sa mga electric cooperatives ay nadagdagan ang mahigit isang libo't kalahating barangay na mayroong kuryente nitong nakaraang taon.

Tungkol sa pagtaas sa presyo ng gasolina, ang pangyayaring higit apatnapung gasolinahan ang nagbibigay ng diskwento sa krudo sa mga pampaseherong jeepney ay isa sa mga pangunahing dahilan kung bakit isinasantabi ng mga bus at jeepney ang kanilang balak na humiling ng pagtaas na pasahe.

Patunay rin ang pagtatagumpay ang kampanya laban sa iligal na droga.

Sa nakaraang tatlong buwan, nahuli natin ang may 6,000 drug pushers at drug possessors, nabuwag natin ang 60 lokal na sindikato ng droga at apat sa transnational syndicates.

Tungkol naman sa economic performance ng pamahalaan, tumaas nung nakaraang buwan ang koleksyon ng buwis, naisaayos ang budget deficit at nagkaroon ng makabuluhang pagtaas ang produksyon ng ating bansa.

Fixed rating has assured our government that it would retain stable outlook on our country.

Ang sobrang maagang pamumulitika ang nagpapahirap sa mga mamamayan.

Ang labis na pamumulitika ay nagtataboy sa mga namumuhunan at humihikayat ng kasamaan at kriminalidad at nakakaantala sa serbisyo publiko.

Ang mga ordinaryong Pilipino ang nais mabigyan ng pagkalinga kaya wala akong balak na makihalo sa mga siraang ginagawa ng ilan sa ating mga pulitikong binubulag ng makasariling ambisyon.

Ang mga sigalot na ito'y nangyayari kung kailan kailangang magkaisa ang mga namumuno sa bansa upang makamit natin ang tunay na kapayapaan at kaunlaran.

Pagtuunan na lamang natin ang pansin ang mga bagay-bagay na pakikinabangan ng mga sambayanan.

Matigil na sana ang mga banta sa katiwasayan ng ating pamumuhay upang maibuhos na natin ang ating oras at atensyon sa mga problemang hinaharap ng sambayanan tulad ng kahirapan, krimen at terorismo.

Palace appeals for peaceful rally during Bush visit

Malacañang today appealed to various groups to conduct peaceful demonstration and avoid violence when US President George W. Bush makes a brief visit here on October 18.

On his way to attend the Asia Pacific Economic Cooperation meeting in Bangkok, Bush will make an eight-hour visit to meet President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo and other officials.

While Bush will stay in Manila for eight hours, he will spend only three hours each in Indonesia, Australia and Thailand.

Despite the short time, Bush's visit will have substantial impact on the friendly relations between Manila and Washington, particularly in such areas as global peace, security and development.

Presidential Spokesman Ignacio R. Bunye said the Philippine National Police (PNP) would impose strict security measures to prevent possible trouble as a result of violent anti-US rallies.

"First of all, protest action must be peaceful. We respect their rights to demonstrate but it would be more appropriate if they can conduct it in a peaceful and orderly manner," Bunye said.

Bunye said there is nothing wrong about waving red banners or flags. "They are not restricted to do it. What is not allowed is the use of violence and create chaos, which I hope will not happen."

He reiterated the appeal that while the government respects their rights of expression, "let us do it that would not cause trouble, injury or destruction to property."

Think about people's welfare, GMA appeals anew to politicians

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today renewed her appeal to politicians, particularly those in the opposition, to think about the welfare of the Filipino people and the country by not engaging in too much politicking.

In her radio message this morning, the President said that too much politicking drives away prospective investors, spawns more crimes, and hinders the delivery of basic services to the people.

"Ang sobrang maagang pamumulitika ang nagpapahirap sa mga mamamayan (Too much and too early politicking adds to the misery of our people)," the President said.

The President said that the ordinary Filipino deserves her full and undivided attention as she bewailed the destructive manner in which some politicians have resorted to because of their selfish desire to grab power.

Earlier, the President advised her political detractors to wait for next year's elections, as provided for in the Constitution, if they want to vie for power and not resort to force.

She said that all these unwholesome developments are happening at a time when all the leaders of the country must unite in order to achieve true peace and progress.

“Pagtuunan na lamang natin ng pansin ang mga bagay-bagay na pakikinabangan ng mga sambayanan(We should instead put our attention on things that would benefit our people),” the President said.

“All these threats of destabilization should be stopped so that we can all work together in pursuing our objectives in the fight against poverty, crime and terrorism,” the President said.

GMA urges military to win the hearts of the community

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today visited three Luzon provinces to personally find out the problems and extend support to the various programs in the military and in the local government.

Motoring to Camp Servillano Aquino in Tarlac City after hearing mass at the Immaculate Conception Church in Rosales, Pangasinan, the President told the soldiers that the success in the fight against insurgency depends not only in military might but more importantly through winning the hearts and minds of the community.

“This is a good opportunity to come and visit a very important Command in the center of our fight against insurgency,” the President told the officers and men of the Northern Luzon Command (NOLCOM), led by Lt. Gen. Romeo Dominguez, during lunch at the Camp Aquino clubhouse.

The President will also visit Fort Magsaysay in Nueva Ecija on Monday to observe the training program for soldiers on the military’s various approaches on putting an end to insurgency.

Gen. Dominguez said they were deeply honored with the President’s unscheduled visit to the camp.

“This is not an opportunity to hear our little concerns. We see it as an expression of confidence in us and that she knows that we support her as our Commander-in-chief,” Dominguez said.

The President said the officers and field workers of the Department of Social Welfare and Development (DSWD), Department of Trade and Industry (DTI), Department of Agriculture (DA), and the Department of Agrarian Reform (DAR) would be involved in organizing livelihood programs in the hinterlands and countryside to help the soldiers win the hearts and minds of the community.

On the other hand, the President said the recent grant of four OV-10 aircraft by Thailand would strengthen the fighting capability of the Armed Forces.

She told them that she increased the flow of logistics to the field where it is most needed by the soldiers.

This include the increase in the amount on single purchases that could be authorized by the AFP Chief-of-Staff from P1.8 million to P5 million and those by the major service commanders from P1.3 million to P3 million.

The President said she already instructed the release of P100 million for the acquisition of combat boots, first aid kits, and other field necessities.

As monetary incentives were only given to the recipients of the Medal of Valor, she ordered that recipients of other military medals should be granted school and housing benefits.

Gen. Dominguez presented the President the first two books of the trilogy, “Trinity of War,” that has been adopted by the AFP’s various commands since last year.

Gen. Dominguez said the two books featured a study on the military’s experience on how to win the battle against insurgency. He said a special committee is now coming up with the third book of the trilogy.

From Camp Aquino, the President proceeded to the nearby Capas town public market and inspected the prices of basic commodities. She found out that the prices of rice, vegetables, dry goods, meat, fish and poultry remain stable.

She also visited the Jose B. Lingad Memorial Regional Hospital and inspected the ongoing renovation and improvement of the old and dilapidated regional hospital. She directed the hospital officials to expedite the repairs and further improve their medical and other health services for the indigent patients.

GMA upholds press freedom at Gridiron Night

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo said Saturday night that although media is not kind to her administration, she upholds freedom of the press, "which is important to us as a democratic country."

Speaking at the Gridiron Night of the National Press Club at the Manila Hotel, the President noted that the Philippine press enjoys so much freedom that it can write anything under the sun. However, good news is seldom published, while bad news gets prominent treatment because it is what sells the paper, she said.

"The media always makes it appear that our country is in deep trouble," she said, adding that "the truth is that we are progressing economically and compared with other Asian countries, except may be China and Malaysia, we're doing comparatively well".

The family that Gridirons together, stays together could as well be the message of the President to the newsmen's gathering. She brought the entire First Family, including First Gentleman Jose Miguel Arroyo, to the annual Gridiron show.

Showing that all is well within the First Family in the wake of a spate of controversies, the President requested Atty. Arroyo, children Mikey, Dato and Luli and two daughters-in-law to stand up from their seats and the audience, mostly media men, gave them a resounding applause.

This marked the first time that the President and the First Gentleman were seen publicly together after Sen. Ping Lacson made that controversial Jose Pidal expose and the ensuing political intramurals made everybody else uneasy.

The anemic show presented by newsmen paled in comparison with the wit and humor surprisingly pulled out by the President that sent the sparse crowd at the Fiesta Pavilion on the edge of their seats.

Saying that she would uphold the right of the journalists for as long as "you report the good news," the President said that "kung bad kayo sa akin ipapa-lifestyle check ko kayo... alam ko kung sino ang naughty at alam ko kung sino ang nice sa akin."

In another joke, she recalled when the journalists felt too harsh with her in dealing with GMA reporter Tina Panganiban Perez, her media adviser suggested that she give a bunch of roses to the TV newshen.

"Actually, pangatlo na iyong delivery. The first order went astray because first, when Milt Alingod gave his assistant the message to send flowers, it was delivered to (Energy Secretary) Vince Perez. He blushed when I met him in a meeting. The next was delivered again to a wrong Perez. They sent the flowers to (former Justice Secretary) Nani Perez. Ako tuloy ang nag-blush," she said. The audience roared.

Statement of the President: Significance of President Bush visit

The visit of President Bush is about relationship between the Philippines and the United States in the Asia-Pacific. It is about a partnership against terrorism and poverty. It is about peace and development in Mindanao and in ASEAN. It is about the shared pride of Filipinos and Americans in democracy and freedom. It is about making the new millennium safer, more prosperous and more peaceful for the people in our country, the region and the world.

Statement of the President: Security preparations

Maximum security measures are set for President Bush's visit. This is being handled jointly by Philippine and US authorities. We are taking proactive steps and beefing up intelligence gathering and surveillance. We will leave no stone unturned to ensure that his stay in our country will be safe, fruitful and rewarding.

Statement of the President: Nightspot robbery

It is already bad for the police image that a high profile nightspot is robbed, and it is worse that this place is being tagged as a hangout of police officials. The PNP must not only get to the bottom of this crime, but discipline its ranks with regard to nightlife. Police officers frequenting nightspots smack of protection and corruption. Police officers must serve as models not only for others in the organization but also for the community they serve.

Gov't to ensure maximum security for Bush visit — GMA

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said that maximum security measures are being worked out jointly by American and Philippine authorities to ensure the safety of US President George W. Bush when he visits Manila next month.

In her remarks this morning at the flag-raising ceremony of the Philippine National Police (PNP) at its headquarters in Camp Crame in Quezon City, the President said that the government is taking up proactive steps and beefing up its intelligence gathering and surveillance before and during the visit.

"We will leave no stone unturned to ensure that his stay in our country will be safe, fruitful and rewarding," the President said.

In a radio interview, Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said that when President Bush comes on October 18, his visit is to reciprocate the goodwill of a friend and should not be tainted with political color.

Bunye said the visit is part of international diplomatic practice by heads of states to friendly nations, like the Philippines, “at hindi siguro dapat bigyan ito ng political na kahulugan (and this should not be given any political color)”.

Bunye also denied reports that Washington has demanded for the recapture of Indonesian terrorist Fathur Rohman Al-Ghozi, who escaped from the Camp Crame jail last July 14, as a condition for the visit to push through.

“As far as we know, there is no condition attached to the visit of President Bush,” Bunye said.

Bunye said that PNP, the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AP) and the other intelligence agencies are coordinating in the preparation of security measures during the eight-hour visit of Bush, who will be on his way to Bangkok for the Asia Pacific Economic Cooperation (APEC) meeting.

He also confirmed an offer by the United States for economic assistance to Mindanao but only after the government and the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) could reach a peace agreement.

“The US will provide all out support to the various projects in Mindanao, particularly in the MILF areas, as soon as a peace pact is signed,” Bunye said.

Gov’t has long been addressing soldiers’ concerns — Palace

Malacañang today said that the administration has long been addressing soldiers’ concerns over pay, housing and corruption in the Armed Forces of the Philippines.

In a statement, Cabinet Secretary Ricardo Saludo, who oversees Cabinet meetings and the implementation of presidential directives, said that the President and the Cabinet have taken up the concerns of the military since day one of her administration.

Saludo issued the statement in response to a news item quoting the post-mutiny report of Ambassador Roy Cimatu. The former AFP chief of staff, who negotiated the return to barracks of the Oakwood mutineers, reportedly warned of another coup attempt “if soldiers’ grievances are ignored.”

He cited the President’s certification of legislation raising AFP pay to the level of teacher and police compensation.

In 2001, Saludo said, then Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes successfully pushed for the passage of R. A. 9166, which is being implemented in phases. One-fifth of the increase was paid in 2001, another 30% last year, and the remaining 50% increment starting this January.

Saludo also cited land proclamations made since 2001 covering areas sufficient for 75,000 housing units, adding that this week the President will meet with officials of the Housing and Urban Development Coordinating Council (HUDCC) and the AFP to fast-track construction of several thousand homes for military personnel by January.

He cited other longstanding benefits extended to AFP personnel like free health care for soldiers and their families as well as scholarships and livelihood loans.

In addition, the President has instructed the Department of National Defense (DND) and the AFP to make combat duty a key consideration in deciding who gets priority in soldiers’ benefits, Saludo said.

Saludo said that to lay the groundwork for fighting corruption and ensuring the delivery of equipment and supplies to the field, the President has issued a strong command guidance and directly taken up the national defense portfolio for at least six weeks.

She has also appointed a new defense undersecretary for procurement, her former appointments secretary Constancia de Guzman, who holds a master's degree from the National Defense College of the Philippines and another undersecretary-level task force will look into corruption itself, Saludo said.

AFP Chief of Staff Gen. Narciso Abaya and other top commanders have been explaining these reforms and programs to officers and enlisted personnel all over the country, to demonstrate the President's resolve in addressing their concerns and to strengthen their loyalty to the government and the Constitution, Saludo said.

GMA orders PNP to step up fight against criminality

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today ordered the Philippine National Police (PNP) to step up the fight against criminality and all threats to peace and security to realize her vision of a strong Republic.

"The police is very important in the building of a strong Republic," the President said in her speech at the flag-raising ceremony of the PNP held this morning at its headquarters in Camp Crame, Quezon City.

The President said that one can say that a strong Republic has been realized and maintained only if the people feel that they are safe in their homes and in the streets.

"We have so many crimes to deal with, crimes in the streets, crimes in the highways, and high-profile crimes that are bannered daily in the newspapers," the President said.

The President also thanked the officers and men of the PNP for their total support for her administration, which they have expressed in a manifesto read by PNP chief, Director General Hermogenes Ebdane.

She also congratulated the PNP for the success of its anti-drug campaign which has already netted leaders of international drug syndicates, thousands of pushers, and P8 billion worth of drugs seized after spending only about P30 million.

The President ordered the PNP to duplicate its success against drugs in other crimes like hijacking and bank holdups.

"We must now train our sights on linkages between the underworld and those holding political power. The people must be aware of this threat and our people must not glorify rogue leaders masquerading as paragons of reform or good performance," the President said.

The PNP is now doing its best to pin down the mastermind of recent crimes to see if there are any political and underworld linkages at work and gather evidence to avoid any witch hunting, the President said.

The President also directed the PNP chief to see to it that police officers do not frequent nightclubs and other entertainment sites as this smacks of protection and corruption, referring to the robbery in a Quezon City KTV that reportedly involved some police officers.

"The PNP must not only get to the bottom of this crime but discipline its ranks with regard to night life," she said.

GMA won't be sidetracked by political sideshows — Palace

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo wants to heal the deep division in the country, by pursuing peace and order and economic reform programs, rather than think about the 2004 presidential elections.

“The President wants to concentrate on pressing issues and not be sidetracked by political sideshows,” Presidential Spokesman Ignacio R. Bunye said in a radio interview after several opposition senators called for the President’s categorical declaration about her plans in the 2004 elections.

Bunye said that healing the deep divisions in Philippine society, strengthening the country’s economy and working for clean and honest elections in 2004 are the President’s top priorities at this time. The declaration, whether she will seek another term, or not, should be left to her discretion, he added.

“The President believes that she should concentrate on uplifting the lives of the poor by strengthening the economy and ensuring a favorable peace and order situation that will transform this country into a strong Republic,” Bunye said.

What is important now is that ambitious politicians and other groups who want to grab power from her through extra-constitutional means should not use the people, Bunye said, adding that politicians who are impatient for power must wait for the constitutional opportunities to vie for it.

The President earlier appealed to politicians, particularly those in the opposition to think first about the welfare of the Filipino people and the country by not engaging in too much politicking.

A moratorium on politicking will greatly boost the government’s program for more jobs, more houses and education for the greatest number of people. This is aside from the President’s ultimate goal of transforming the country into a strong republic – an economy that will continue to grow at a pace acceptable to the high standards of the international community and a lasting solution to the country’s perennial peace and order problem.

Remain strong and united in safeguarding democracy, GMA tells nation

MALOLOS CITY, Bulacan – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today called on the Filipino people to remain strong and united in the face of threats to the country’s democratic way of life brought about by politicking, particularly from groups who want to take over power by force.

“The present time dictates that we show true nationalism, that we stand for peace, unity and democracy,” the President said in her remarks in ceremonies capping the “Linggo ng Bulacan,” which coincided with the 105th anniversary of the Malolos Congress held this morning at the historic Barasoain Church here.

The delegates of the Malolos Congress, who framed the first Philippine Constitution and established the first democracy in Asia, did this “and we owe it to them to carry on what they started,” the President said.

The President said that while her administration is focused on the grave problems confronting the nation, particularly in fighting poverty, crime and terrorism, it also has to deal with misguided and unprincipled politicians out to destabilize the government.

“On this hallowed and holy ground, let us stand invigorated and inspired to build a strong Republic that links our glorious struggle of the past with the hopes for the future,” the President said.

The President lauded the province of Bulacan for its contributions and continuing commitment to the Philippine Republic.

“Bulacan is rich in history, in enterprise, in patriotism. The Congress of Malolos played an important role in the realization of our dream for independence,” the President said.

She said her administration is doing its best to protect the Republic founded by Emilio Aguinaldo, Andres Bonifacio and other great men who crafted the Constitution that was promulgated at the Malolos Congress on Sept. 15, 1898, barely three months after the declaration of Philippine Independence in Kawit, Cavite on June 12, 1898.

In her speech, the President also announced that she has ordered the Philippine National Police (PNP) to build up evidence and avoid a witch-hunt in the reported involvement of politicians in the series of bank heists and robberies in the past month.

Concerned over premature disclosure of names, which could again degenerate into another circus, the President told the PNP to get to the bottom of the cases and conduct a thorough probe.

“Nais kong tukuyin ninyo at isipin ang utak ng mga krimeng nagaganap upang makita kung mayroon ngang koneksiyon and mga politiko at mga pulis (I want you to pinpoint the mastermind so we’ll know if there’s a connivance between the politicians and the police),” the President said.

“Kailangan magbuo tayo ng ebidensiya para rito at kailangan iwasan natin ang witch-hunting (Let us build up evidence and avoid witch hunting),” she said.

Later in his press briefing in Malacañang, Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said that the Department of Interior and Local Government (DILG) is now concentrating on building airtight cases against the suspected politicians.

The series of bank heists, according to intelligence reports, is being done not only to destabilize the government but also to build up the campaign war chests of several politicians.

From Barasoain, the President visited Fort Magsaysay in Laur, Nueva Ecija as part of her continuing interaction with the different sectors of society, including those in the military.

“It is part of her duties as concurrent Secretary of National Defense,” said Bunye. “As a hands-on President, she just wants to personally link up with the soldiers in the field.”

Bunye reiterated that the soldiers’ grievances that led to the Oakwood mutiny have been addressed by the administration even before the July 27 rebellion.

U.S. senior executives laud GMA for economic reforms

The members of the US Senior Executives Mission to the Philippines, who called on President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo in Malacañang this afternoon, congratulated her and her government for instituting economic reforms.

“We want to work with you to see your agenda accomplished. We want to work with you to see the Philippines continue to be an important location for our investments and a place where we can be competitive in Asia on a global basis,” Robert Driscoll, senior vice president for the Asia Pacific Region of the mission, said.

The President replied that she wants too see their investments come in as a result of how well she is prioritizing the policy reforms of her administration.

The US senior executives discussed with the President and some members of her Cabinet such subjects as intellectual property rights, telecommunications, the energy sector, English proficiency, cargo open skies, trade and investments, and tourism.

On tourism, the President informed the members of the mission that her administration is concentrating on infrastructure in eight identified tourism areas in the country.

“We are putting our infrastructure with the help of McKinsey and the Department of Tourism in Metro Manila, Cebu-Bohol, Northern Palawan, Boracay, the rice terraces in Banawe, Laoag, Clark-Subic and Davao,” the President said.

The President said that an airport is being put up in Coron, Northern Palawan with the Malampaya money, an international airport is also being built in Boracay, another airport in Panglao, Cebu, and facilities in Clark where international planes can land are being upgraded.

The President also said her government has identified roads that need to be unclogged so that it would be easier for tourists to go there.

“But basically it is really making sure that there is an airport that you can fly to and then just go to the beach in less than an hour, or 20 minutes. So there’s where we put a lot of the money,” the President said.

GMA orders standard rehab program for drug inmates in Muntinlupa

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today ordered the implementation of a standard rehabilitation program for the drug offenders confined at the National Penitentiary in Muntinlupa, Metro Manila.

The President, who commended law enforcement agencies for their successful anti-drug drive, said it is imperative to establish a standard and extensive rehabilitation program for inmates to prevent them from committing other crimes.

She told the sectoral representatives in the 11th National Anti-Poverty Commission (NAPC) meeting held this afternoon at the Malacañang Heroes Hall that “one of the things undone” is the setting up of a rehabilitation program for inmates found to be using illegal drugs.

During the meeting, the President also emphasized the importance of the inclusion of universal coverage of the poor under the Philippine Health Insurance Program, or Philhealth, as part of the health program for a strong Republic.

She directed the Philippine Charity Sweepstakes Office to allocate funds for this.

Various topics were tackled during the NAPC meeting presided by the President to improve the plight and standard of living of the poor Filipino families.

These included the re-orientation of the objectives of the Cooperative Development Authority (CDA) to focus on the regulation and supervision of cooperatives.

October was declared Cooperative Month to encourage wider participation of all sectors of society in nation building through cooperativism.

Statement of the President: Cardinal Sin

Cardinal Sin is a champion of Philippine democracy. He brought the church squarely behind the fight for human freedom and strengthened its role in the transformation of government, nation and people. He will be missed very much but we will always turn to him for his wise and endearing counsel on doing what is right and just. He may have retired but his leadership and guidance will live on. I join our people in welcoming His Eminence Gaudencio Rosales as the new Archbishop of Manila, whom I am confident will carry the torch of the faith, as a catalyst for positive change and as an instrument of good governance, just as ably and valiantly as his predecessor.

Statement of the President: WTO

We must now ride the fresh tide of trade politics that is just and fair to the developing nations and takes into account the welfare of the great majority of the world's peoples. The emergence of a new alliance of more than 20 developing countries can be considered a positive outcome of the Cancun summit. We shall continue to work with this alliance in order to defend and preserve the welfare and livelihood of our farmers, fisher folk and all those who struggle in the margins of our economy. We cannot have political security, both in the national and global sense, if we cannot ensure economic security at the grassroots. The developing countries must stick together to uphold this principle.

Statement of the President: President Bush Visit

Maximum-security measures are set for President Bush's visit. This is being handled jointly by Philippine and US authorities. But this visit goes beyond mere concerns over terrorism. It is about the mutuality of Philippine and US interests in peace, security and development—regionally and globally. President Bush and I will reaffirm our commitments to key programs that will push forward political and economic security in this part of the world. The Filipino people continue to benefit immensely—in terms of jobs, livelihood opportunities and public safety—from our strategic relationship with the United States.

GMA bids farewell to Cardinal Sin. Welcomes Bishop Rosales

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today lauded Jaime Cardinal Sin on his retirement as Archbishop of Manila and welcomed his successor, Bishop Gaudencio Rosales of the Diocese of Lipa City (Batangas).

In a statement on the change of leadership in the local Catholic Church hierarchy, the President hailed Cardinal Sin as a "champion of Philippine democracy."

Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo said Cardinal Sin, who reached the retirement age of 75 years on August 31, "brought the church squarely behind the fight for human freedom and strengthened its role in the transformation of government, nation and people."

“He may have retired but his leadership and guidance will live on,” she said, adding that she will always turn to him for “his wise and endearing counsel on doing what is right and just.”

In welcoming 71-year-old Bishop Rosales, President Macapagal-Arroyo expressed confidence that he “will carry the torch of the faith, as a catalyst for positive change and as an instrument of good governance, just as ably and valiantly as his predecessor.

Presidential Spokesman Ignacio R. Bunye said, in an interview with Radio ng Bayan, that Cardinal Sin acted like “a true shepherd” of the flock and a “true leader” of the people” at the critical juncture of the nation’s history.

Bunye said that the Macapagal-Arroyo administration’s policy has always been to respect the church as an institution. “Palagay ko ay papatuloy naman na magiging maganda ang ugnayan ng simbahan at ng pamahalaan (I believe that good relations between the church and the government will continue),” he added.

GMA seeks implementation of universal health insurance

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today directed the Department of Health (DoH) to implement a universal health insurance for some 30 million indigents throughout the country.

At the Malacañang meeting of the Executive Committee of the National Economic and Development Authority (NEDA), Health Secretary Manuel Dayrit discussed the Philippine Health Sector Reform Agenda (HSRA).

Dayrit said that implementing such a plan under the Philippine Health Insurance Corporation (PhilHealth) “means health insurance coverage for about 30 million indigents.”

The President, who chairs the NEDA board, also called for improvement of the quality and accessibility of health care for the poor, particularly in the provision of public preventive facilities and rural health units (RHUs).

At the same time, the Chief Executive instructed the Department of Trade and Industry (DTI), along with the DoH, to make cheap medicines available to more hospitals nationwide and to reduce the cost of hospitalization for indigent patients.

As one means of upgrading the quality of service in government hospitals, Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo suggested giving them financial autonomy.

She said that the Philippine health system should be made more pro-poor, financially stable and less prone to partisan politics.

In her state of the nation address at the 3rd Regular Session of the 12th Congress, the President said she wanted to be forceful in the field of health services, like the implementation of effective measures to fight the severe acute respiratory syndrome (SARS).

Investor confidence remains strong — Camacho

Finance Secretary Jose Isidro Camacho said today that the confidence of foreign investors in the Philippines remains strong despite distracting political events.

“Foreign investors continue to be focused in our economic fundamentals,” Camacho said, adding “they see the Philippines as the next round of opportunity when it comes to investing”.

Camacho, who recently visited Paris, London and Singapore expressed optimism that the Philippines’ investment climate will continue to improve in the coming months.

“They (investors) continue to hold a positive view of the Philippines and expressed satisfaction over our economic numbers and ongoing fiscal and reform programs,” Camacho said in a news briefing in Malacañang.

Foreign investors are very particular with the Philippines economic and business policies and are concerned on their continuity. “They want good governance, especially on policy reforms, under the present leadership, to continue,” Camacho explained.

He said that the financial market has normalized and continued to recover lost ground after the July 27 Oakwood incident. This is evidenced by the improving price of global bonds, he added.

“We have noticed that the spreads of our bonds in the financial markets have begun to tighten, tighter than before the Oakwood incident,” Camacho said.

Camacho said that the continued weakness of the peso would probably persist because of pessimistic domestic sentiment brought about by too much politics. It can also be attributed to the dominance of local players in the currency markets, such as overseas Filipino workers, exporters and importers who were affected by the unfavorable political events.

The upcoming state visit here of US President George W. Bush is expected to benefit the local financial market, he said.

“President Bush’s state visit here in October would help boost investor confidence in our financial markets. Bush’s visit marks the turning point in RP-US relationship since the Americans pulled out and closed their military bases here in the country,” Camacho said.

Camacho said that investors believe the visit of President Bush and possibly the economic and military packages that he would be bringing with him will further spark business activities in the country.

Bush visit goes beyond concerns on terrorism — GMA

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said the visit next month of US President George W. Bush to Manila goes beyond the mere concerns over terrorism.

In a statement, the President said that the visit “is about the mutuality of Philippine and US interests in peace, security and development – regionally and globally.”

The President said that during the eight-hour visit here of President Bush she would reaffirm with him their commitments to key programs that will push forward political and economic security in this part of the world.

She said the Philippines continues to immensely benefit from the strategic partnership with the US in terms of jobs, livelihood opportunities and public safety.

Hours after the September 11, 2001 terror attacks in the US, the President was one of the first leaders in the Asia-Pacific region who condemned the incident and sympathized with the American people.

A day later, she expressed the Philippines full and unqualified support for the US in spearheading an international coalition against global terrorism.

During her state visit in Washington last May, the US government pledged to give the Philippines a minimum of $356 million in defense and security assistance.

Later in his press briefing in Malacañang, Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said the country should give importance to the Bush visit, the US being a strategic partner and ally of the Philippines.

“He is a very important ally. We have very strategic partnership and a lot of Filipinos benefit from this strategic alliance with the United States. So we have to give the importance that this visit deserves,” Bunye said.

Aside from this, the US government has been continuously providing various forms of assistance, particularly grants from the United States Agency for International Development (USAID).

Bunye said that Ambassador Victoriano Licaros, former spokesman of the Department of Foreign Affairs (DFA), would be the principal spokesperson during the state visit.

GMA, Okinawa Governor Inamine discuss more direct Manila-Okinawa flights

Plans to increase the number of commercial flights from Okinawa to Manila and vice versa were among the salient points discussed in today’s meeting between President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo and visiting Okinawa Governor Keiichi Inamine.

Saying Okinawa is much closer to Manila than Tokyo, Inamine said the route will take only two hours as compared to the five hours travel time from Tokyo to Manila.

Part of Inamine’s working visit is the strengthening of the bilateral relations between Okinawa and Manila.

While here, he intends to visit some of the 1,500 descendants from Okinawa who have been living in the Philippines since the 1940s.

He is also scheduled to visit the Subic Bay Freeport tomorrow with Tourism Secretary Richard Gordon where he will be briefed on Subic’s conversion from a former military base of the United States into an economic zone.

“I would like to see Subic and use this place as a significant reference for Okinawa’s future development and conversion,” Inamine said.

The Okinawa governor expressed gratitude to the International Container Transport Services, Inc (ICTSI) for its interest in participating in a public bidding for the establishment of a container terminal in Okinawa, Japan.

He denied making any discussion with the President on the possible relocation of the United States military training to the Philippines.

Present during the meeting, aside from Gordon, were Speaker Jose De Venecia, Jr., Presidential Legislative Liaison Office (PLLO) chief Gabriel Claudio and ICTSI chairman Enrique T. Razon. Inamine was accompanied by Choel Yogi, Satoshi Sho and Lourdes Wakamiya.

Inamine told the President how grateful he was for the very warm reception she extended to him. He also expressed appreciation for the strong relations between the Philippines and Japan.

For her part, the President extended her admiration for the Governor of Okinawa and the Japanese government.

“We are very happy to have you here and really appreciate your presence in our country,” she told Inamine.

Statement of the President: Bush visit

Our strategic partnership with the United States in fighting terrorism and poverty has the overwhelming support of the majority of our people. The surveys reflect this unequivocally. President Bush is highly respected and appreciated by Filipinos in our country and in the United States. We have forged a genuinely mutual relationship that transcends the colonial ties of the past. President Bush has gone out of his way to help our veterans get more benefits, and in facilitating Filipinos' remittances to the Philippines. He is very sensitive to our national interest and Constitutional prerogatives in the conduct of joint military training exercises. I look forward to a warm, rousing welcome of President Bush by the Filipino people.

Statement of the President: Employment

I am confident that more jobs have been restored in the agricultural sector as the El Niño has abated. We are also determined to strike up more investments in the industrial and services sectors as economic activities pick up towards yearend. More jobs are a result of sound economic fundamentals as much as political security and confidence. We have to shake off the syndrome of destabilization and excessive politicking to get investments on track. The incessant atmosphere of controversy and putting-each-other-down must give way to focus and a sense of national purpose to rev up the economy and drive down crime and terrorism. We are consolidating the nation but we must do so at a faster pace.

Statement of the President: Conduct of public servants

I encourage all departments and agencies to undertake an awareness campaign on the need for upright conduct among public servants in and out of office. Working on a good image for the government does not stop after office hours. People judge the government through work performance as much as the habits of its workers. The symptoms of corruption and profligacy are seen mostly outside of the office than in it – in the lifestyle and personal conduct of officials and employee.

First half budget deficit is P24-B below target ceiling

The January to July budget deficit is P24 billion below the programmed ceiling for the period, allowing the government to boost August spending to spur economic growth, particularly in rural areas.

In a statement, Finance Secretary Jose Isidro Camacho said the budget gap for the first seven months of the year hit P95.4 billion, against a ceiling of P110 billion.

With revenue collections expected to remain on track, the government felt it could use up part of the deficit cushion built up till July and still come in comfortably within the programmed ceiling of P202 billion for all of 2003.

“We are making use of some of that P24 billion headroom to pay obligations, including construction work in the countryside. This will spur growth, especially in agricultural areas hit by El Niño,” Camacho said.

Camacho said that the August deficit is actually good news. This shows that the government is spending for growth while maintaining solid fiscal management.

He said that government tax collection in August was stronger than anticipated, offsetting an unexpected shortfall in the collection of the Bureau of Customs (BoC).

The Bureau of Treasury (BTr) also surpassed its revenue goal for the period.

The Finance and Budget departments are still computing revenue collection and expenditures, but Camacho expects the August shortfall to exceed the P8.1 billion target ceiling. However, the January to August deficit will still be well below the P127.1 billion limits for the period.

Camacho said that the government opted to pay some P11 billion worth of accounts payable that accumulated during the first half of the year to its suppliers and service providers.

“We could afford to be cautious and calibrated in our spending because of the headroom we have created in the first seven months,” Camacho said.

He said that the government is capable of reining in the budget deficit and achieve its growth target for this year, especially since interest and inflation rates remain low.

“Our economy is resilient enough to survive the global economic slowdown, with efforts being focused on sustainable growth through domestic demand,” Camacho explained.

He expressed confidence that the government will meet its 2003 budget deficit target of P202 billion, or about 4.7 percent of the country’s projected gross domestic product (GDP).

Statement of Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye

Re Desire to Go Abroad

If one out of four wants to go abroad, it is still positive sign because three out of four want to stay in the country. And that’s an overwhelming majority.

Our laws guarantee freedom of locomotion and this contributes to the desire of some to try their fortunes elsewhere.

Those in the countryside want to go to the city. Those in the city want to go abroad. And those abroad want to come home.

Re Senator Pimentel’s Suggestion to Crack Down on Spoofs

That was a welcome gesture from Senator Pimentel coming as it does from a respected member of the opposition.

But still the President would not consider any move that could possibly be interpreted as a suppression of the freedom of expression.

GMA receives Kalinga-Apayao twins separated in Taiwan

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today thanked the Lord for the successful surgery separating the Kalinga-Apayao Siamese twins Lea and Rachel Awel in a Taiwan hospital last June.

“Praise God,” the President said when the twins’ parents, Andy and Marietta, accompanied by the Tzu Chi Foundation volunteers, called on her this afternoon in Malacañang.

The parents also thanked the President for providing them support before they left for Taiwan for the operation. The President gave the parents $1,000 in financial assistance.

The President instructed Secretary Corazon Juliano-Soliman of the Department of Social Welfare and Development (DSWD) to make sure that the needs of the Awel twins, aside from the support being given by the Tzu Chi Foundation, will be provided for by the DSWD.

According to Soliman, the Tzu Chi Foundation-Philippines expressed interest to help the Awel twins after they saw the Awel twins and their parents at the Philippine Children Medical Center seeking medical help.

After tests at the Chinese General Hospital showed the twins could be operated on, they were brought to Taiwan.

On June 28, 2003, the Siamese twins were separated successfully.

Soliman said that the Tzu Chi Foundation continues to help the Awel family to make sure that the twins stay healthy and get the proper medication and therapy.

“We will also be working with them to make sure that the twins will have a bright future,” Soliman said. “At least, the twins will have to stay in Manila for six months,” she added.

Tzu Chi Foundation, Philippines was established in 1994. The foundation has already conducted a total of 42 medical, dental, eye and surgical mission from the northernmost Aparri to the southern tip of General Santos City in Mindanao.

Shake off excessive politicking, GMA tells people anew

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today called on the nation to shake off the syndrome of destabilization and excessive politicking to get investments on track and create more jobs for the people.

In a press statement, the President said the “incessant atmosphere of controversy and putting-each-other-down” must give way to focus and a sense of national purpose to rev up the economy and drive down crime and terrorism.

“I am confident that more jobs have been restored in the agricultural sector as the El Niño has abated,” the President said. “We are also determined to strike up more investments in the industrial and service sectors as economic activities pick up towards yearend.”

She noted that more jobs are a result of sound economic fundamentals as much as political security and confidence.

“We are consolidating the nation but we must do so at a faster pace,” she stressed.

Presidential Deputy Spokesman and Cabinet Secretary Ricardo Saludo clarified in a press briefing that the excessive politicking attributed to by the President refers to the period after July.

“Any improvements in the employment picture for the rest of the year according to the President may be retarded by excessive politics and may as well affect business confidence and the economy,” Saludo said.

He expressed the hope that the employment picture will indeed improve and that the political atmosphere gets more focused on the elections “rather than on other ways of conducting politics.”

Saludo said that the private sector would continue to be the main engine of growth, adding that the additional spending of government is meant to offset or exceed the stimulus coming from the private sector.

“We would like to think that a lot of the government spending in the rural sector would be used to pay off liabilities to construction companies and private sector company that will themselves be providing employment to the rural sector, not the government,” he explained.

AFP unequivocally behind GMA, says Gen. Abaya

The entire Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) is unequivocally behind the government of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo as AFP chief, Gen. Narciso Abaya today denied media reports claiming that he was collaborating with some retired AFP generals in a supposed plan to pressure the President to resign.

“I deny that, whatever is written there. That is not true. I don’t know who wrote that. I wish whoever wrote that would give some proof,” Abaya said when asked to comment on a report that he was supporting the alleged call of the 647-strong Association of Generals and Flag Officers (AGFO) for the President to step down.

Abaya gave the reaction to newsmen after the meeting of the Executive Committee of the Department of National Defense (DND) held this morning in Camp Aguinaldo in Quezon City.

The President, in her capacity as acting DND secretary, presided over the meeting.

Abaya said that so as not to confuse the people, the media should first verify their story before having them published. “I appeal to the media to please do not write something that is not verified,” he said.

Retired Brig. Gen. Ernesto Gidaya, AGFO president, also strongly denied that their group is pressuring the President to resign. “In fact, we are behind the President,” he said.

On the issue of graft and corruption, Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye, in his regular press briefing in Malacañang, said that this problem has been the focus of the President’s attention since day one of her administration.

Bunye said that programs are already being put in place “with regards to procurement, disbursements and the authorities for payments” to avoid questionable transactions in the government.

Abaya also described as “rumor mongering” the report that he had obtained a visa for his whole family before the July 27 Oakwood mutiny in Makati City.

He said he obtained a visa only for himself and Mrs. Abaya because they were invited to go to the United States.

“I was supposed to go to the States on July 31 because I was invited by the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, General Richard Myers, as his visitor and I should have a whole day with him at the Pentagon on August 7,” Abaya said.

Although Mrs. Abaya was also invited as guest of Mrs. Myers, he said he decided to postpone the trip to a later date because of the Oakwood incident.

Abaya also said that the military is hot on the trail of confessed international terrorist Fathur Rohman Al-Ghozi who is believed to be in hiding in the Zamboanga area.

“The AFP is pressing the search and arrest and neutralization of Al-Ghozi,” Abaya said.

In a joint command conference with the Philippine National Police (PNP) and the AFP last week, the President directed the AFP to help the PNP in solving high-profile crimes, including the arrest of Al-Ghozi who escaped from Camp Crame last July.

Abaya said intelligence reports indicate that Al-Ghozi could be hiding in the Tungawan area between the boundaries of Zamboanga City and Sibugay province.

Although the pinpointed area is thickly forested, Abaya is optimistic that government authorities would be able to recapture Al-Ghozi even before the state visit of US President George W. Bush next month.

Bush visit won't influence local politics, says Palace

Malacañang today said that local political events are not influenced by the visit of any foreign head of state.

Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye emphasized this in a press briefing today as he debunked claims by certain quarters that the visit of US President George W. Bush on October 18 will have a bearing on President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's decision whether to run in next year's presidential polls or not.

“We conduct our politics independently of any other government or any other outside group,” said Bunye to quash speculations that the Bush visit has something to do with the meeting of the ruling Lakas-NUCD party on October 7.

“These two events are unrelated,” Bunye explained. “The Lakas will be conducting its own procedures so let's just wait to find out what will happen after said meeting.”

Bunye clarified that the holding of the meeting is something that is left to the directorate of the ruling party and has nothing to do with the fact that it will fall on the day the President will be in the ASEAN Summit in Bali, Indonesia.

He also set aside claims that the Lakas is set to choose between the President and Ambassador Eduardo “Danding” Cojuangco for the party's standard-bearer, saying this is something that will have to be discussed in the actual meeting.

Statement of the President: Meeting with retired generals

I have always respected the leadership of the retired generals. Informally, they continue to be part of the chain of command and are valued for their experience and counsel. They show the way of sacrifice and service to the younger officers and a long line of loyalty to the flag and the Constitution. We must continually bridge the generations in the officers' corps. The Armed Forces must learn to live in the longevity of ideals, not quick fix solutions founded on fleeting adventurism. Our retired generals provide the example of daring in war and constructive unification in peace. They are indispensable allies in the reform, transformation and modernization of the Armed Forces.

Statement of the President: Safety nets

The safety nets provided the agricultural sector over the recent years go far beyond P 35 billion and can be found the wide array of physical resources and capacity building programs that have been infused into the countryside. Agriculture has consistently led and fueled our economic growth and there is no doubt that the farmers have been the focus of the broadest range of technical assistance, resource inputs and rural infrastructure facilities. On top of these, we have fought side by side with the developing nations for all forms of relief and fair treatment for the agricultural sector, in all levels of the WTO. The welfare of our farmers and fisher folk shall always live in the center of our development programs and diplomatic initiatives.

Statement of the President: Employment

Jobs are the product of enterprise and investment. Enterprise derives from confidence, confidence is the result of a stable, peaceful and unified nation. We as a people have a job to do and the first thing is to ward off the incessant negativism and politicking that is poisoning the air and derailing the national course. We are consolidating the nation but we must do so at a faster pace. We need greater unity to provide the impetus for reform and growth.

Statement of the President: PAGCOR

The financial state of PAGCOR is open to the public. I wish to dispel any impressions that this institution is a so-called cash cow that is unaccountable to the people and can be milked at will by those in power. PAGCOR is the source of social amelioration and relief for millions of poor Filipinos. This is nothing furtive about its finances and these are bound by the rules of transparency and accountability.

Statement of the President: Al-Ghozi

Al-Ghozi is an isolated tactical target and his capture has nothing to do with Bush visit. The government is hot on the heels of al-Ghozi and we will get him in due time.

Majority of Filipinos want Bush to come — Palace

Malacañang today said the overwhelming majority of Filipinos are in favor of the visit of US President George W. Bush and in pursuing our strategic relationship with the United States.

In a radio interview, Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said the few who have been airing protests against the Bush visit comes from a very small minority.

Bunye's comment this morning came as a reiteration of a statement issued by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo yesterday.

"Our strategic partnership with the United States in fighting terrorism and poverty has the overwhelming support of our people," the President said.

"President Bush is highly respected by Filipinos in our country and in the United States. We have forged a genuinely mutual relationship that transcends the colonial ties of the past," she said.

Bunye said many will benefit from this strategic relationship, the cooperation of the two countries in the fight against terrorism, the pursuit of security and the creation of economic opportunities in the country.

"It's more of a long term strategic and mutually beneficial relationship for the attainment of peace, security and development not only in our country but also in the region," Bunye said.

Bush will arrive in the country on October 18 for an eight-hour visit.

Bush has expressed his desire to help in the development of Mindanao once the government has worked out a final peace agreement with the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF).

The US President initially wanted the US to participate in the RP-MILF negotiations brokered by Malaysia but later opted just to take a "post conflict" role after a peace agreement is secured.

President Bush has gone out of his way to help out Filipino World War II veterans get more benefits, and in facilitating Filipinos' remittances to the Philippines, the President also said.

Press Statement of Deputy Presidential Spokesman and Cabinet Secretary Ricardo Saludo: AFP procurement reforms under way

Reforms to ensure the speedy and adequate delivery of logistics to the battlefield are under way in the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP). Among measures for implementation are higher contract approval levels for the AFP chief of staff and service commanders, the creation of a single Bids and Awards Committee (BAC) for the entire military, and proposed provisions in the national budget tailored to the AFP's needs and operations.

“The President wants these reforms urgently done to keep our fighting men and women well-equipped and provisioned,” says Constanca de Guzman, recently appointed undersecretary for procurement at the Department of National Defense (DND) and head of the presidential task force to reform the AFP procurement process.

De Guzman submitted her task force report to the President yesterday, and will hold a three-day workshop starting tomorrow to jumpstart reforms and devise further measures. The DND procurement chief is a graduate of the National Defense College of the Philippines, she did her doctoral dissertation at the Lyceum of the Philippines on government spending controls.

Under the DND Order 165 issued by the President in her capacity as concurrent defense secretary, the maximum amount allowed for contract approvals by AFP officers were raised from their outdated 1996 levels. The Chief of Staff limit was raised to P5 million (from P1.8 million previously), and those for the Army, Navy and Air Force heads to P3 million (formerly P1.4 million. Approval ceilings for other officers were doubled.

These measures are expected to reduce the practice of splitting contracts and so-called ‘conversion’ to make urgently needed purchases. In addition, the plan to set up one bids and awards committee for the entire AFP will further cut the procurement process, which can take as long as 250 days to two years. There are now 119 BACs in the military; 27 at General Headquarters; 26 at the Army, 28 at the Navy and 38 at the Air Force.

In a related development, Budget Secretary Emilia Boncodin says her department will soon bid out P100 million in contracts for boots, ponchos and battle wear, as instructed by the President. Based on a revised list of items given by the AFP on Sept. 9, the inter-agency BAC, which includes the Budget Department and AFP officials, will finalize bidding terms this afternoon. Secretary Boncodin expects contracts to be awarded by Oct. 28. If all goes well, she says, the soldiers should begin getting their new gear in early November.

GMA wants to raise level of awareness of state personnel on acceptable standard of behavior

Malacañang today stressed the need for raising the level of awareness among government officials and employees on what should be the acceptable standard of behavior for them.

In a radio interview with Radyo ng Bayan, Presidential Spokesman Ignacio R. Bunye was asked to comment on the Macapagal-Arroyo administration’s broadening campaign on morality in government, with state personnel, particularly policemen, being discouraged from patronizing night clubs and bars.

Bunye said, “Ang nais ng ating Pangulo ay bawat ahensiya ay itaas iyong level of awareness ng mga naglilingkod sa pamahalaan, kung ano ang acceptable and what is not acceptable behavior (It is the President’s desire to raise the level of awareness of government personnel on what is acceptable or unacceptable standard of behavior).”

While there is a code of conduct for government employees, Bunye said, it is only appropriate that each agency of the government undertakes its own morality awareness drive.

He said that the department or agency heads should explain to their employees, for example, the proper procedures for dealing with complaints on acts of immorality.

Complaints against appointees of the President, he said, should be brought before the Presidential Anti-Graft Commission (PAGC), while those involving personnel not directly appointed by the President should be filed with the Ombudsman or the Civil Service Commission.

Active, retired generals express anew their unqualified support for GMA

In what could be the biggest show of support by any group in the wake of recent destabilization attempts against the government, retired and active generals came in full force to Malacañang this morning to express their confidence in

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo and their unwavering stand for constitutional authority and the Armed Forces chain of command.

The meeting, long scheduled before a spate of controversies rocked the government in recent weeks, was termed providential by no less than the President for finally pushing through at a time when “rumors and headlines somehow imply a rift between retired generals and the government.”

“Despite the intrigues in the media I never believed that any retired general worth his salt would ever support an extra-constitutional bid for power,” the President said in response amidst published reports that several former generals of the military are plotting to install a new government.

Among the groups that expressed their continued support for the President were The Last Watering Hole Association (TLWHA) led by Ret. Col. Florentino Buenaventura Jr.; Association of Generals and Flag Officers (AGFO) headed by Ret. Brig. Gen. Ernesto Gidaya; Association of Brigadier Generals/Chief Superintendents/Commodore Pensioners of the Philippines (ABCOPOP) headed by Ret. Superintendent Juan Gallardo Abuan Jr.; and Federation of Retired Commissioned and Enlisted Officers (FORCES) led by Ret. Brig. Gen. Angel Okol.

In their respective manifestos, the various groups pledged their respect for authority and vowed to maintain the chain of command which they said should always be respected.

In her response, the President praised the leadership of the retired generals, saying they show the way of sacrifice and service to the younger officers and a long line of loyalty to the flag and the Constitution.

“The Armed Forces must learn to live in the longevity of ideals, not quick fix solutions founded on fleeting adventurism,” she said. “Our retired generals provide the example of daring in war and constructive unification in peace. You are indispensable allies in the reform, transformation and modernization of the Armed Forces.”

She said destabilization plots are now consigned to the rumor mill, fueled by partisan quarters that either wish to usurp Constitutional power or escape the rule of law and justice.

“It is now time to realign our sights upon the crucial tasks of pushing our country forward – creating more jobs, getting investments on track, fighting crime and terrorism, and consolidating all our efforts along the vision of one nation and one people,” the President said.

She said that even before the Oakwood mutiny, her administration has long been instituting reforms and increasing premium for military service.

“Today, we are moving more logistics, funds and financial autonomy to the field, and enforcing policy control, sound management of resources and untrammelled command efficiency,” the President said.

She then asked the retired generals to help her address the most vital concerns of the Armed Forces, saying their experience is indispensable in the service of “our flag and people.”

“I ask you to join us and help us in bringing forth a bandwagon of renewed optimism and enterprise,” she said. “It is time to shake off lethargy and division and look to a new day.”

Statement of Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye

Re Lacson allegations

This shows his penchant for making wild, unsubstantiated charges as part of his smokescreen to take away the attention of the people from the accusations he himself is facing.

Take note that he has yet to submit a single solid, admissible evidence in connection with the Senate probe.

The people will surely see thru this ploy.

Media release by the Office of Presidential Spokesman and Cabinet Secretary Ricardo Saludo: Making farmers and workers competitive

The administration of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has undertaken programs and projects to make farmers, workers and enterprises more competitive as the country opens up to global competition. Rather than just safety nets to help people displaced by foreign competition, the President has pushed programs to enable Filipinos to keep their jobs and business, find new work, set up new enterprises, and hold their own against the world.

Foremost among these programs for competitiveness is the implementation of the Agriculture and Fisheries Modernization Act. The AFMA languished for years until the President, one of its authors when she was a senator, allocated at least P20 billion a year for its implementation starting 2001. In the past two years, over P48 billion has been spent on various AFMA programs, with another P33 billion allocated this year.

Among the initiatives it has funded to make farmers more competitive are new or rehabilitated irrigation covering close to half a million hectares; nearly P40 billion in credit to more than 1 million farmers and fisherfolk; and the hybrid rice program generating income of as much P90,000 a hectare. The Department of Agriculture also has programs to boost production and investment in corn, sugar, coffee and tilapia.

The Strong Republic Nautical Highway, popularly known as the RO-RO system, is reducing the cost of shipping products, especially agricultural goods, from Mindanao to Luzon and the Visayas. This is helping make Mindanao produce more competitive against imports in Metro Manila. Thanks to RO-RO, transport cost is down by one-fourth to one-third for cargo, and travel time is slashed by between 17% and 44%, depending on the route.

Early in her administration, President Macapagal-Arroyo launched a food assistance program for coconut farmers hit by collapsed copra prices. Over 3,100 stores were set up, subsidized with P440 million and serving some 230,000 families of coconut farmers. In April, the government raised vegetable duties to 20%-25% (from 7%) and cracked down on vegetable smuggling to assist farmers. In addition, they were given P5,000-P10,000 direct assistance, plus cold storage and transport facilities for Cordillera farmers.

Credit for micro, small and medium enterprises is another major competitiveness program of the President. The SULONG initiative (for SME Unified Lending Opportunities for National Growth) administered by the Department of Trade and Industry aims to provide funds at a low standard 9% interest for entrepreneurs to expand their businesses and grow from micro to small or from small to medium scale.

Over P12 billion has been lent out from January to July this year alone, with another P10 billion expected to be lent out till December. (Over P600 million was advanced the President's Social Fund to LGUs). In addition, the microcredit program has lent some P2 billion to nearly a quarter of a million women borrowers since the President announced the program in her July 2001 State of the Nation Address.

In her statement, the President said: "The safety nets provided the agricultural sector over recent years go far beyond P35 billion and can be found in the wide array of physical resources and capacity building programs infused into the countryside." The accomplishments enumerated here, along with others too many to list, attest to the Macapagal-Arroyo administration's determination to make the Filipino farmer, worker, and enterprise world-class and wealthy winners.

From supposed plotters to ardent supporters of GMA

The supposed plotters to install a new government turned into supporters of the duly constituted authority as they opted to express their admiration and loyalty to President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo and their unwavering support for the chain of command of the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP).

In this latest game of the generals, the battle-scarred retired generals tried to outdo each other in crafting the best manifesto in support of the present administration.

And President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo was just too glad to hear this outpouring of support.

The Association of Retired Generals and Flag Officers (AGFO), composed of 603 members, reiterated the support that they extended to the President when she assumed office more than two years ago.

In the wake of recent destabilization attempts against the government, AGFO, headed by Ret. Brig. Gen. Ernesto Gidaya, vowed adherence to the Constitution and urged the people to “support the President in the inexorable and daunting task ahead of rebuilding our devastated country.”

“We urge those who dared defy the powers that be and all the people to likewise harness once again their love of country they had so admirably displayed in the unfolding days of the great saga of EDSA People Power II,” the AGFO manifesto said.

The Association of Brigadier Generals/Chief Superintendents/Commodore Pensioners of the Philippines (ABCOPOP), boasting of 46 members, volunteered to be the defender and preserver of the chain of command, citing the recent coup attempt and the disrespect shown by the leader of the group to the President.

“It is imperative for all AFP and PNP officers, cadets and personnel to respect the authority, maintain the integrity, loyalty and strengthen the time-honored tradition of the chain of command which is headed by no less Commander in Chief of the AFP and the PNP,” said the ABCOPOP manifesto read by its chairman and president, Ret. Supt. Juan Gallardo Abuan Jr.

The Last Watering Hole Association composed of more than 700 officers headed by Col. Florentino Buenaventura meanwhile assured President Macapagal-Arroyo of their loyalty, support and esteem.

“We categorically reiterate the unending loyalty and support of the members of the association for her continuing efforts to build a strong Republic,” the LWHA said.

The Federation of Retired, Commissioned and Enlisted Officers (FORCES), the umbrella organization of all military retirees’ organizations, for their part, pledged allegiance to the present administration individually and collectively.

“We shall do our utmost best to help the Arroyo administration attain a sustainable political, socio-economic and military stability,” said its vice president, Brig. Gen. Angel Okol.

“Rest assured that the forces shall go hand in hand with the Arroyo administration in its endeavors to bring prosperity, unity and lasting peace to the nation.”

GMA presents awards to 10 outstanding students

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today led in the annual recognition of what the Filipino youth can do and achieve in the fields of leadership, social responsibility and academic and professional excellence.

In simple ceremonies at the Ceremonial Hall of Malacañang, the President awarded trophies and P20,000 cash prizes each to the Ten Outstanding Students of the Philippines (TOSP), describing them as the admirable young achievers of 2003.

The TOSP awardees this year, chosen from 30 finalists selected from the ten fields of specialization, are the following:

1. Stephanie Sunshine Sy, BS Accountancy and Applied Economics graduate from De La Salle University;
2. Ma. Concepcion Hernandez, BS Computer Science from De La Salle University, Lipa;
3. Julius Cesar Laban, BS Biology, major in Genetics, UP-Los Baños;
4. Mark Anthony Sandoval, Doctor of Medicine, University of the Philippines;

The TOSP was launched on June 19, 1961 on the 100th birthday of Dr. Jose Rizal. It was held annually until martial law was declared in 1972.

The TOSP is a project of RFM Foundation, the Commission on Higher Education, and RFM Corporation, in cooperation with National Bookstore and the Rotary Club of Makati Central.

This year's board of judges include Labor Secretary Patricia Sto. Tomas, former Agriculture Secretary Senen Bacani, Transportation and Communications Undersecretary Jose Cortes, Higher Education Commissioner Dr. Manuel Punzal and RFM Corporation Director Eluterio Coronel.

GMA cites PAGCOR as source of funds for pro-poor programs

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said the Philippine Amusement and Gaming Corporation (PAGCOR) is not a "cash cow" but rather a source of amelioration and relief funds that have benefited millions of poor Filipinos.

"The financial state of PAGCOR is open to the public. I wish to dispel any impressions that this institution is a so-called cash cow that is unaccountable to the people and can be milked at will by those in power," the President said.

"PAGCOR is the source of social amelioration and relief for millions of poor Filipinos. There is nothing furtive about its finances and these are bound by the rules of transparency and accountability," the President added.

Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said the financial records of PAGCOR can be opened to the public. The President wanted PAGCOR and other government agencies to be transparent in their operations, he said.

"But the President wishes to point out that PAGCOR has been the source of amelioration for quite a number of our countrymen and at this stage the President believes the agency is not the cash cow that it is portrayed to be but it is a source of genuine social amelioration," Bunye said.

Bunye said PAGCOR has come up with significant revenues including the record-breaking P1.3 billion in gross revenues in February 2001, a month after the President assumed office.

Fifty percent of PAGCOR revenues is remitted to the National Treasury. The balance is used to pay the five percent franchise tax to the Bureau of Internal Revenue (BIR) and the rest is allotted to the social amelioration program of the Office of the President and other government agencies.

Statement of the President: Transparency International

The story is old hat but we are not being defensive about it. The item at issue is Transparency International's 2002 report on perceptions of corruptions among the business sector, risk analysts and academics that was published in the web a long time ago. We won't argue with the perceptions of others but the report is somewhat unfair in that it fails to take into account the deep reform measures we have undertaken to stem endemic corruption. These reforms lie mainly in procedural and policy initiatives that have plugged revenue leaks and cut down kickbacks from business deals. We are also backed up by a new procurement law passed by Congress. These advances in good governance have not been very obvious to the media but they have nevertheless blunted the edge of corruption. Procedural reforms and strict enforcement of ethical standards are making a big difference, but it will take sometime for perceptions to change. Corruption in the Philippines did not grow overnight and will not be defeated in a day.

Statement of the President: Al-Ghozi

We are not pegging a date for the capture of Al-Ghozi but the hunt will be focused, intense and relentless. The dragnet is closing in on him and we are severely limiting his chances of getting through it. But I am paying a short visit to Mindanao not only to check on this matter but to check on the entire run of peace and development activities that have a bearing on our fight against terrorism and poverty. Al-Ghozi's capture is a key event but it is not the whole pie of security. Many other pieces have to be put in place.

Statement of the President: Anti-kidnapping

The PNP has taken down a good number of the big syndicates in its original list but I am informed that there have been new groups that have sprouted. I have directed the PNP chief to make a quick reassessment and a new order of battle – followed by renewed crackdown. The war against kidnapping is of crucial importance to business confidence and I do not want an extended slack in vigilance. This is a job of the police, the victims' families and the communities where kidnap groups are embedded. We must consolidate our efforts and get this threat out of the way like we did several months ago.

Statement of the President: Coup rumors

We will have to deal with an intermittent spate of rumors and speculations, but the truth is that we have already consolidated the Armed Forces from top to bottom – from the most junior officers to the retired generals. They have given unequivocal support to the chain of command and I believed them. The whispers of a coup are residual put-me-downs and will die down in time as reforms and justice take root. I have ordered the AFP leadership to drive down the message of reforms to the uniformed ranks so that each and every soldier will steel his or her faith in the future of the organization. Oakwood is through and let's forget about it.

Statement of the President: PAGCOR

I expect PAGCOR to take the lead in transparency along the standards of good corporate governance. The board must see through the slew of apparent internal bickering that is causing adverse media reports, determine the truth and undertake reforms if necessary.

Lantin and Bautista sworn in as DOTC assistant secretary and LTFRB chief, respectively

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today swore into office Dante Lantin as assistant secretary of the Department of Transportation and Communication (DOTC) and Maria Elena Bautista as chairman of the Land Transportation Franchising and Regulatory Board (LTFRB).

Bautista, who was formerly an assistant secretary in the Presidential Management Staff, succeeded Lantin as LTFRB chief.

Lantin and Bautista subsequently appeared at a news briefing at Malacañang, and both denied that politics was involved in the reshuffle.

Lantin said that he would not have shown up at the press briefing if he did not accept his transfer to another office, adding that he even told various transport groups to support Bautista in her new duties.

DOTC Secretary Leandro Mendoza, who was present at the oath-taking ceremony and the press briefing, said that Lantin's responsibility will be enlarged as he will take charge of the department's land transportation sector.

Bautista said that having no vested interest in land transportation, she will be able to look at problems and propose solutions objectively. But, she asked for a briefing to familiarize herself with the land transportation industry.

DOTC Assistant Secretary Adelberto F. Yap, who headed the Air Transport Office, was named president of the President Diosdado Macapagal International Airport Corp. at Clark Airbase in Pampanga.

At the press briefing, Yap said that President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo wants the new corporate leadership to accelerate development of Central Luzon, with the Diosdado Macapagal International Airport as its centerpiece.

Hunt for Al-Ghozi part of overall security concerns of gov't, says GMA

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said that the ongoing manhunt for escaped terrorist Fathur Rohman Al-Ghozi is part of the overall security concerns of the government.

In a statement, the President said that when she goes to Mindanao next week, she will not only check on the intensified hunt for Al-Ghozi but also look into "the entire run of peace and development activities that have a bearing on our fight against terrorism and poverty."

The President said that the authorities are not pegging a date for the capture of Al-Ghozi but the hunt, she said, "will be focused, intense and relentless."

"The dragnet is closing in on him and we are severely limiting his chances of getting through it," the President said.

The military reported earlier this week that Al-Ghozi, an Indonesian bomber who escaped from Philippine National Police jail in Camp Crame along with two Abu Sayyaf terrorists, is somewhere near the town of Tungawan in the Zamboanga area.

Malacañang has denied reports that Washington has made the capture of Al-Ghozi a condition for the eight-hour visit of US President George W. Bush on Oct. 18.

“Al-Ghozi’s capture is a key event but it is not the whole pie of security. Many other pieces have to be put in place,” the President said.

The President flies to Jolo in Sulu on Monday then to Tungawan from where she then proceeds to visit and check the socio-economic projects being pursued in Mindanao.

The projects referred to are funded not only by the national and local governments but also by several multinational agencies through their official development assistance (ODA).

“The President wants to make sure that these are being properly implemented,” Presidential Spokesman Ignacio said in a radio interview.

Some of the projects the President will check on are under Mindanao Natin or Mindanao National Initiative. “It’s a wide range of socio-economic development projects,” Bunye said.

GMA pushes job-creation program in rural areas

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today pushed for creation of some 200,000 jobs in the rural areas by accelerating releases within a month of P1 billion in credits for farmers, fishermen and entrepreneurs in the countryside.

Secretary Rigoberto Tiglao, Presidential Chief of Staff, told a press briefing in Malacañang that the President, in a meeting this morning with Secretary of Trade and Industry Manuel Roxas II, Secretary of Agriculture Luis Lorenzo, Jr., and Economic Planning Secretary Romulo Neri, observed that credits and financial assistance trickle only to the countryside.

Tiglao said that they agreed to work for quicker releases of credits for various projects sought by farmers, fishermen and rural entrepreneurs. They expected that liquidity will stimulate transactions in the rural areas.

Although the application papers on these projects have already been processed or approved, Lorenzo said at the news briefing, the funds have been pending release.

Lorenzo said that if all the projects would push through, some 200,000 jobs could be created in the rural areas, with most of them not too dependent on the weather factor.

The unemployment rate went down in July 2003 as a result of the loss of many jobs in the agricultural sector due to fluctuation in the weather with an unlikely combination of dry spell and typhoons hitting the different regions of the country.

“This is the modern equivalent of emergency employment program,” Tiglao said, adding that the Macapagal-Arroyo administration maintains its program priorities of providing jobs, food and shelter to the Filipino families.

Roxas said that 295,000 jobs have been created in the industrial sector and 254,000 more in the service sector. These jobs were the offshoot of some P10.8 billion loans released in the first half of the year. Another P10 billion will be plowed into both industrial and service sectors in the next six months.

Lorenzo said that the credits will fund projects that the farmers can carry out in between planting and harvesting seasons.

“The P1 billion funds to be made available for rural financing is part of the administration’s priority on jobs, food and housing,” he said.

GMA takes exception to report on graft, says reforms now in place

President Gloria Macapagal Arroyo today took exceptions to Transparency International’s report on perception of corruption in the Philippines, saying that the report, aside from being “old hat,” is unfair because it failed to mention some of the reforms undertaken by her government during the past two years.

“We won’t argue with the perception of others but the report is somewhat unfair in that it fails to take into account the deep reforms we have undertaken to stem endemic corruption,” the President said in a statement.

The President said that the item at issue is based on the 2002 report of Transparency International on perceptions of corruption among business executives, risk analysts and academics that was published in the web a long time ago.

A more recent report, carried by The Economist in its August 16, 2003 issue, showed that the Philippines is among the top 10 developing countries with the most stable emerging economy based on a survey conducted by the prestigious Lehman Brothers and Eurasia Group.

The survey, which was conducted to measure a country’s ability to withstand crises and to avoid generating them, showed that the Philippines got 60 points out of a maximum stability score of 100.

Among the countries in Asia, only the People’s Republic of China and Thailand surpassed the Philippines’ stability index.

According to the President, the reforms that her government has instituted lie mainly in procedural and policy initiatives that have plugged revenue leaks and cut down kickbacks from business deals.

“We are also backed up by a new procurement law passed by Congress. These advances in good governance have not been very obvious to the media but they have nevertheless blunted the edge of corruption,” the President said.

She said that procedural reforms and strict enforcement of ethical standards are making a big difference, but added that it will take some time for perceptions to change.

“Corruption in the Philippines did not grow overnight and will not be defeated in a day,” the President said.

In a radio interview, Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye cited administrative reforms being carried out within agencies, particularly the electronic procurement system, lifestyle check, and the investigation and actual filing of criminal charges against employees found to have been involved in anomalies.

“The problem of corruption remains a strong challenge for us and we must work together to lessen this,” Bunye added.

Bunye said that good governance has been one of the primary concerns of the President from the very start of her administration, and part of that is the elimination or minimization of opportunities for graft and corruption.

The report in The Economist also cited the 4.5 percent gross domestic product (GDP) growth of the Philippines for the first quarter, which was higher than Malaysia’s 4.0 percent, Indonesia’s 3.4 percent, South Korea’s 3.7 percent, and Taiwan’s 3.2 percent.

The country's GDP, however, decelerated to 3.2 percent for the second quarter of this year. Nonetheless, the Philippines performed better than its neighbors, with South Korea showing only a 1.9 percent growth while the GDP of Singapore contracted by -4.2 percent and that of Taiwan by -0.1 percent.

In her keynote address at the closing session of the 15th general meeting of the Pacific Economic Cooperation Council, held September 3 in Brunei Darussalam, the President said that her administration has been aggressively putting in place economic reforms to sustain growth and significantly improve the long-term prospects for the Philippines.

"We spent the first two years of my administration strengthening our macroeconomic fundamentals and it has paid off with consistent economic growth and low inflation," the President pointed out.

In the Lehman Brothers survey, Hungary emerged as the country with the most stable emerging economy, with a political-stability index of 73 points.

Following closely behind were Poland, with a score of 72, and Mexico at 69.

GMA orders CIAC President Yap to jumpstart development of Clark International Airport

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today instructed newly installed Clark International Airport Corporation (CIAC) President Adelberto Yap to jumpstart the development of the airport now named after her father, former President Diosdado Macapagal, and make it eventually the country's premier gateway and centerpiece of the development of Central Luzon.

Yap, formerly an Assistant Secretary of the Department of Transportation and Communication (DOTC) and chief of the Air Transportation Office, bared this today as she echoed the President's desire to make it initially a complimentary gateway to the overcrowded Ninoy Aquino International Airport (NAIA).

The President, according to Yap, has instructed him to likewise reorganize the CIAC to make it responsive in the event that the airport will have to take over as the country's premier gateway.

"We are all aware that NAIA has only one runway compared to Clark which has 3.6 km. of runway," Yap said. "I think it would be ideal to allow a lot of incoming traffic to Clark because ultimately it will be the premier airport."

Yap said convenience of passengers would not be sacrificed in the event that the airport becomes fully operational since there are plans for the creation of the North Rail from Clark to Manila that will eventually stretch to Laoag City in Ilocos Norte.

He said the President has yet to give him a target deadline to make the airport fully operational but hastened to add that presently United Parcel Service (UPS) and other airlines are already using the Diosdado Macapagal International Airport (DMIA). "FedEx is also transferring," he said.

At present, Yap explained, the airport can only accommodate three plane roads of passengers, making it necessary for the building of a new passenger terminal.

Yap dismissed insinuations that the DMIA will be competing with NAIA, saying that the two international airports will compliment each other.

GMA cites requirement to achieve culture of peace and security

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said a culture of peace and security could be achieved if the root causes of conflict are properly addressed.

“Even in a time of strife, a culture of peace shall prosper as long as we remain steadfast in addressing not only the immediate causes of conflict, but by boldly striking at its roots — inequity, injustice, economic exclusion,” the President told participants of the Global Cooperation Society (GCS) 2003 International Convention and Peace Conference which opened this morning at the Century Park Hotel in Manila.

The President was welcomed at the hotel by Manila Mayor Joselito Atienza, 5th District Rep. Joey Hizon, Commission on Higher Education (CHED) Commissioner Dr. Manuel Punzal, and Dr. Young Seek Choue, the founder and president of GCS International.

The President said the government’s efforts in addressing the root causes of conflict in Mindanao have brought in valiant allies.

These include Malaysia, which has agreed to host the resumption of the peace talks with the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF), the United States, which has committed to play a key role in post-conflict rehabilitation, and the member states of the Organization of Islamic Conference (OIC), which provide a broad backdrop of support and assistance.

She said the Philippines has also initiated with Indonesia and Malaysia an agreement committed to practical measures against terrorism, an accord other countries in Southeast Asia have since acceded to in the name of regional peace.

“Peace is something that no nation can achieve alone,” she said.

The President said the hope for world peace brought by the declaration of the United Nations of Year 2000 as the International Year of Culture and Peace was shattered on September 11, 2001 “by a senseless and shameless act of terrorism.”

From then on, she said the world was put on danger alert “that we cannot forever be held hostage to terror.”

“We must hunt down terrorists, hold down the threat and never capitulate even as we strive to win the peace at all cost by dint of our durable unity and resolve,” she said.

She said the presence of the 250 Koreans and 100 other foreign delegates in the conference here proves that no amount of senseless and shameless violence could shatter the world’s quest for peace.

“Peace is ours to hold and we shall not let go as long as there are men and women who promote a culture of peace,” she told the participants.

Here in the Philippines, she said the hunt for Indonesian international terrorist Fathur Rohman Al-Ghozi, who is believed to be hiding in the jungles of Mindanao, would be focused, intense and relentless.

She said she would visit Mindanao next week not only to check on the hunt for Al-Ghozi but also on the government’s peace and development initiatives to address terrorism and poverty.

She also lauded Dr. Young Seek Choue whom she and her father President Diosdado Macapagal consider as “one of the great prophets of peace in our contemporary history.”

The GCS International, which has chapters in 40 countries, was founded by Choue and co-founded by 77 distinguished scholars and international leaders including the President’s father, the late President Diosdado Macapagal.

GMA’s transparency program results in gov’t savings

In line with President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's transparency program, a government electronic procurement system has been instituted with startling results in terms of savings and decline in operating expenditures.

According to an accomplishment report, issued recently by the Department of Budget and Management (DBM), the G-EPS serves as the central portal for government procurement opportunities and all procurement information.

Executive Order No. 40, which took effect on April 4, 2002, contains the implementing rules and regulations on the new system of procurement, and requires all government agencies to use the G-EPS. So far, 1,052 out of the total 3,104 agencies, including the government-owned and -controlled corporations, in the bureaucracy have registered with the G-EPS.

As of August 4, 2003 a total of 23,218 new bid notices had been posted on the G-EPS, including that of the United Nations Development Program (UNDP). Suppliers, numbering 3,705, have also registered with G-EPS.

In her message to Congress for the 2004 General Appropriations Act, President Macapagal-Arroyo said the data indicate a broadening of the government's pool of potential suppliers and promoting greater confidence in government's ability to do business.

Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo also noted that "over the medium term, we expect to generate savings of P8.1 billion or a decline by 9 percent in government's maintenance and other operation expenditures as the entire procurement process becomes more transparent and efficient."

"Procurement cost is correspondingly reduced," she added.

By institutionalizing the electronic procurement system, the President said that more government resources will be spent for programs and projects as leakage in government spending is plugged and opportunities for graft and corruption eliminated.

Meanwhile, the President said major reforms in the Armed Forces are being undertaken during her stint as concurrent Secretary of National Defense. The reforms aim to ensure the speedy and adequate delivery of logistics to soldiers in the battlefield, she said.

Defense Undersecretary Constancia de Guzman disclosed a plan to set up one bids and awards committee for the entire Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP).

De Guzman, a graduate of the National Defense College of the Philippines, said that under DND Order 165, the maximum amounts allowed for contract approvals by military officers have been raised from the outdated 1996 levels. "There will be no need to split contracts and engage in so-called 'conversion' to make urgently needed purchases," she explained.

GMA forms fact-finding commish to look into alleged military role in Davao bombings

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has constituted an independent fact-finding commission that will look into allegations of military involvement in the March 4, April 2 and April 3, 2003 bombings in Davao City.

In a press briefing in Malacañang, Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye enumerated the members of the Commission as follows: Fr. Pedro B. Maniwang, chairman, and Anita Alfelor Alagaban, Joji Ilagan Bian, Naguib G. Sinarimbo, and a representative from the Department of Justice as members.

In Administrative Order No. 84, the President gave the Commission 30 days from the date of constitution within which to conduct its investigation and submit recommendations to the President.

The Commission shall have these powers and functions:

- possess all the powers of an investigative body, including the power to summon witnesses, administer oath, take testimony or evidence relevant to the investigation and to issue compulsory processes to produce documents, books and records;
- call upon any agency of the government for assistance as it may require in the discharge of its functions; and
- perform any and all acts as may be necessary and appropriate to this AO subject to the approval of the President.

According to Bunye, Fr. Maniwang is presently parochial vicar of the Sta. Ana Shrine Parish in Davao City. Alagaban is a retired judge, last assigned to a regional trial court of Davao City. Sinarimbo is a legal officer of the Office of Muslim Affairs and a partner in a law office, while Ilagan Bian is current chair of the Mindanao Business Council.

GMA confers 2 gov't highest awards to 15 state workers

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today conferred the two highest government service awards to 15 extraordinary state workers for their exemplary ethical behavior and outstanding public service.

Among 120 nominees nationwide, nine government employees received the Lingkod Bayan Award for their outstanding individual performances of national impact. Six others were given the Dangal ng Bayan Award.

Highlighting the month-long celebration of the 103rd anniversary of the Philippine Civil Service, the conferment of the awards was the result of a rigid, painstaking nationwide search for top government workers made by the Civil Service Commission (CSC) under its Honor Awards Program.

In a simple ceremony held at Malacañang's Ceremonial Hall, the President handed over a gold-gilded medallion and a plaque to each of the Lingkod ng Bayan awardees. The Dangal ng Bayan awardees received trophies designed by National Artist Napoleon Abueva.

The Lingkod ng Bayan awardees were Helen S. Bagasao, Cabanatuan City Social Welfare and Development Officer; Fortunato B. #### Gov't has released P10.9 B as loans for SMEs for first semester this year

A total of P10.88 billion worth of loans has already been released for the first six months of the year under President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's SULONG (SME Unified Lending Opportunities for National Growth) initiative administered by the Department of Trade and Industry (DTI).

DTI Secretary Manuel Roxas II said in a press briefing that the program, now in full blast, aims to provide funds at a low standard nine percent interest for entrepreneurs to expand their businesses and grow from micro to small or from small to medium scale.

The average loan amount, Roxas said, is about P1.2 million going to about 14,000 accounts.

He revealed that there is a second P10 billion that is being mobilized for the second half of the year, adding that the government is on track in mobilizing this amount.

"Perhaps the positive numbers on the employment rate pertaining to services and industry stem or flow from wise investments that have been made," he said.

"These are not doleouts," Roxas said, explaining that these are actual viable loan transactions that the Landbank of the Philippines, Development Bank of the Philippines and Small Business Guarantee Finance Corporation lent out to small and medium enterprises.

He stressed that in the industry sector, about 259,000 jobs were created or increased while in the service sector, another 254,000 jobs or thereabouts were created.

"So there are about half a million jobs in these two sectors which should have been beneficiaries of this SME Sulong program," Roxas said.

SULONG is the brand name for the financing initiatives under the National Small and Medium Enterprises (SME) Development Plan, a priority strategy for developing the SME sector that comprises 99.6 percent of the total Philippine enterprises.

This is a government initiative for the SME sector in order to provide a strong domestic supply base for globally competitive industries.

Under SULONG, government financial institutions (GFIs) have allocated P10 billion to lend out in the next six months. This will be achieved through standardized unified lending program by GFIs for SMEs and standardized accreditation program by GFIs for rural and thrift banks.

GMA, De Sotto discuss means on how to empower poor Filipinos

In seeking to make life easier for millions of poor Filipinos, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo met Friday with one of the world's renowned development economists, Peruvian Hernando de Soto, to discuss measures needed to empower the poor.

The program has always been an important part of the President's vision to empower the poor in the Philippines so as to leverage their extra-legal real estate and business holdings.

The President said De Soto's work as outlined in his best seller, "The Mystery of Capital: Why Capitalism Triumphs in the West and Fails Everywhere Else," provides important inputs for her vision and programs to fight poverty and increase economic growth.

De Soto, author of the best-selling The Other Path (1989) and founder/director of Peru's Institute for Liberty and Democracy, is a champion of market economics and property rights in a part of the world that historically has shown little interest in such ideas.

His promotion of the idea that minimizing regulation can unleash the entrepreneurial spirit of the poor has made him a popular figure in right-wing and libertarian circles.

Until 1992, he was personal representative and principal adviser of former Peruvian President Alberto Fujimori, whose authoritarian rule collapsed in a corruption scandal in 2000.

De Soto's idea is to give the poor certain rights to property they make use of frequently but don't own—like a dwelling in the slum. This way, they can raise capital by selling those rights or use them as collateral in the formal financial system.

The De Soto principle is being used as the basis for the government's move to allow farmers, particularly the beneficiaries of the land reform program, to use their farmlands as collaterals for loans.

Since the 80s and 90s, De Soto has argued that the poor sit on huge sums of "dead capital."

Primarily, this is in the form of dwellings—an estimate in 2000, he said, putting the implied value of this at around $100 billion in the Philippines.

De Soto said that the poor run businesses as well but they do so in the underground sector where they get no legal protection and no rights.

The house, the food stall, the market stand—all these, De Soto said in his best-selling book, have no tangible value that can be converted into new forms of production.

"They don't represent financial leverage," he said.

Gov't giving Honasan all the chances to defend self in rebellion case filed against him

The government is tightening its rebellion case against opposition Sen. Gregorio Honasan for his involvement in the July 27 military adventurism but at the same time giving him all the opportunities to defend himself.

Interior and Local Government (DILG) Secretary Jose Lina, Jr. has announced that Senator Honasan has been given until September 23 to file his counter affidavit before the Department of Justice (DoJ) on the complaint filed against him.

Earlier, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo said that Honasan, like any other Filipino, will be accorded due process. "No citizen, high or low, should be above the law," the President said.

The President called on everybody to leave to the judiciary the main task of “mopping up the legal issues” that have arisen from the Oakwood crisis.

Lina said that his department has presented to the DOJ additional evidence gathered in connection with the Oakwood incident.

These pieces of evidence include supplemental affidavit executed and filed by Col. Enrique Cabos, Chief of the Investigation Division of the Armed Forces of the Philippines, before the DOJ on September 4, 2003.

These include 41 annexes containing 16 affidavits, 23 pieces of documentary evidence, and two video tapes.

Lina said that Col. Cabos has also filed an affidavit with the DOJ on September 12, 2003 against Navy Lieutenant (SG) Antonio Trillanes and the other young officers involved in the Oakwood incident.

According to Lina, the DILG, through the efforts of its various law enforcement agencies, has already identified 56 coup leaders who in one way or another have participated or took part in the failed mutiny.

Earlier, former President Fidel V. Ramos described Honasan as an “ambitious politician” and is no longer an idealistic soldier as he rallied the citizenry to support the President and join in the collective action for the march toward the country’s progress.

Mr. Ramos said that what the country and the Filipino people need at this stage is a continuous period of peace “and not intramural politics” if the country is to achieve significant progress.

President’s radio address to the nation

Magandang araw sa inyong lahat.

Marami pa rin tayong kababayan na walang trabaho. Maraming dahilan ito, kabilang na ang pangamba sa SARS, ang giyera sa Iraq at ang global financial crisis na naglagay sa alanganin sa maraming negosyo sa ating bansa, maging sa buong mundo. Idagdag pa rito ang sunod-sunod na mga bagyong rumagasa sa Luzon at Vizayas. Gayundin ang El Niño na labis na nanalanta sa buong bansa, lalo na sa Mindanao. Ang tagtuyot lamang na dala ng El Niño ay nakabawas na ng tinatayang ikatlong bahagi ng kabuuang mga trabaho sa ating kanayunan.

Walang kontrol ang tao sa ganitong pangyayari ng kalikasan at ang magagawa natin ay maghanda para maibsan ang kanilang masamang epekto, lalo na sa mga manggagawa. Sa mga paghahanda lamang natin malalampasan ang mga pagsubok na ito. Mabuti na lamang, ngayong humupa na ang El Niño, maraming trabaho sa ating kanayunan ay nabalik na.

Bagama’t nabawasan ang trabaho sa agrikultura, ang dalawang iba pang pangunahing sektor ng ekonomiya—the industry and services sectors—ay nagtala ng pagdami ng trabaho. Industry generated 259,000 jobs or 5.5 % increase. While services generated 254,000 jobs or 1.8% growth. Ang mga sektor na ito ang mas matatag na sukatan ng ating ekonomiya dahil ang agrikultura ay pabago-bago ayon sa kalikasan. Idagdag pa rito ang pagtaas ng ating Gross National Product o GNP o sukat ng produksyon.

Inatasan ko ang Kagawaran ng Agrikultura na magpalabas ng PIB maliliit na pautang para dumami muli ang trabaho sa kanayunan. Ang atin namang Public Employment Services Office, o PESO, at Regional Quick Response Teams ng DOLE ay patuloy na umaalalay sa mga displaced workers sa pamamagitan ng counselling at referrals. May mga livelihood programs tayong ipinapatupad upang punan ang kawalan ng trabaho. May mga ahensya rin ng pamahalaan, tulad ng TESDA at OWWA, na nagbibigay ng job and livelihood training. Libo-libo ang natulungan ng pamahalaan sa ilalim ng mga programang ito.

May mga special programs din tayo para sa mga kabataan upang makatulong sila sa kanilang mga pamilya. Kabilang dito ang OYSTERS o Out-of-School Youth Serving Towards Economic Recovery. Libo-libo na ring mga kabataan ang nakinabang sa mga programang ito. Haming sa ibang bansa, itinuturing na matatag pa rin ang ating ekonomiya dahil na rin sa mga repormang ating ipinairal. Even Fitch Ratings had assured our government that it would retain its stable outlook on our country's foreign and local borrowings. Price of global bonds has also improved.

Ayon naman sa DTI, mula Enero hanggang Hulyo ng taong ito, ang approved investment ay umabot na sa halagang P22-B na tinatayang magbibigay ng trabaho sa may 39,000 libong katao.

Determinado ang aking administrasyon na makahikayat ng karagdagang puhunan bago matapos ang taong ito, para mas dumami ang trabaho ng ating mga mamamayan. Dinaragdagan pa rin natin simula noong Agosto ang pondo sa countryside development para makalikha ng mas maraming trabaho sa kanayunan.

Itong pera na utang ng nakaraang administrasyon, binabayaran ko sa ating mga local government units. Nguni't naglalagay tayo ng guidelines na sa mga rine-release na pondo sa kanila, dapat PIM sa bawat bayan ay gagamitin nila para sa micro finance. Iyon din ay makakapagbigay ng maraming trabaho.

Naniniwala rin ako na ang nalalapit na pagbisita ni Pangulong George Bush ng Amerika ay lalong magpapalakas ng tiwala ng mga mamumuhunan sa ating bansa. Ang dala niyang economic and military packages ay lalong magpapasigla ng kalakalan ng ating bayan.

Ang mga trabaho ay produkto ng pamumuhunan, at ang pamumuhunan ay resulta ng tiwala ng mga mangangalakal sa katatagan at kaayusan ng isang bansa. Kaya, dapat nating panatilihin ang katiwasayan ng ating bayan kung nais nating dumami ang trabaho para sa lahat. At pangunahin sa dapat nating gawin ang pagpapahinto ng mga siraan at sobrang pamumulitika na lumalason sa ating pagkakaisa at sumisira sa takbo ng ating pamumuhay.

Huwag na tayong makihalo sa kanila dahil malinaw naman na pansariling kapakanan lamang ang kanilang iniintindi at hindi nila alintana kung ang ginagawa nila ay nakakasira sa bansa. Totoong ito ang pinakamurang paraan para makakuha ng boto o para makapang-agaw ng kapangyarihan, pero ang kapalit naman nito ay ang ating pagkawatak-watak at pagbagsak ng ating ekonomiya.

We as a people have a job to do and the first thing is to ward off the incessant negativism and poison politics that is worsening divisiveness and derailing the national course. Isinasa-ayos na natin ang ating bansa, pero kailangang madaliin natin ito. Kailangan natin ang higit pang pagkakaisa para bumilis ang ating pagbabago at pag-unlad.

Ang crab mentality o paghila pababa ay nagpapalala sa ating mga problema. Ibaling natin ang ating atensyon sa pagsulong ng ating ekonomiya at madagdagan ang mga trabaho. Kung maraming trabaho, lalong gaganda ang takbo ng ekonomiya at maiibsan kung hindi man tuluyang masusugpo ang krimen at terorismo.

Gusto ko ring samantalain ang pagkakataong ito para batiin ang bagong hirang na Arsobispo ng Maynila, ang ginagalang nating Bishop Gaudencio Rosales. I'm confident that Bishop Rosales will carry the torch of faith as a catalyst for positive change and as an instrument of good governance, just as ably and valiantly as his predecessor.

Sa ating minamahal na Cardinal Sin na itinuturing nating kampeon ng pambansang demokrasya, maaaring hindi na natin siya makita, as often as we would want to or as we used to, but nonetheless, alam ko na nakahanda pa rin siyang magbigay ng kanyang makabuluhang payo at tulong sa oras ng ating pangangailangan.

Mga kababayan:

Ang pagdami ng trabaho ay nakasalalay sa pagsisikap ng bawat isa sa atin, sa pagsisikap na makamit ng tuluyan ang ganap na kaunlaran at katiwasayan para sa atin at sa ating bayan. Huwag nating pabayaang manaig ang mga salot sa ating lipunan. Dahil kapag nagkaganoon, tuluyan ng mapapariwara ang bansa at ang mga susunod na henerasyon ay magiging kaawa-awa.

Maraming salamat.

No coup attempt vs. GMA would succeed, says New York Times editorial

The highly respected New York Times has opined that any attempt to topple the government of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo by extra constitutional means, including a coup d'etat, is bound to fail.

In its editorial on Sept. 18, 2003, which was also carried by the International Herald Tribune on the same day, the NYT said that "there is a little chance of a coup attempt succeeding, as Arroyo's opponents don't wield the 'people' power that ousted the dictator Ferdinand Marcos and Arroyo's predecessor, Joseph Estrada."

The editorial also noted that the accusations of money-laundering against the First Gentleman, Jose Miguel Arroyo, "maybe politically-motivated" because they come from Sen. Panfilo Lacson who "is a presidential candidate and a friend of Estrada."

In its editorial, the NYT also called on the country's politicians, as well as other leaders, to wait for next year's elections and not to continue engaging in talks or rumors about plots to destabilize the government.

"Manila's political class bears a collective responsibility to confine its squabbling to the ballot box, rather than the courts or the barracks, and to start providing Filipinos with solutions rather than plots and rumors," the editorial said.

The editorial said that repeated coup rumors and allegations of corruption in high places are destabilizing the Philippine government "at a time when it needs more than ever to focus on repairing the battered economy and fighting poverty."

In a statement Friday, the President said that although there are still "intermittent" spate of rumors and speculations, the truth is that she had already consolidated the armed forces from top to bottom, from the most junior officers to the retired generals.

"They have given unequivocal support to the chain of command and I believed them," the President, who is the concurrent defense secretary, said.

According to the President, the whispers of a coup "are residual put-me-downs and will die down in time as reforms and justice take root."

The editorial also called on the President to decide once and for all whether she will run or not in next year's elections.

The President has consistently said that she did not want to be distracted by politics and would rather focus all her energies in solving the country's problems, notably in the fight against terrorism and poverty.

GMA stresses anew need for unity to hasten change and attract investors

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today stressed the need for unity and order to bring about change and progress in the nation in order to attract job generating investments.

"We as a people have a job to do and the first thing is to ward off the incessant negativism and poison politics that is worsening divisiveness and derailing the national course," the President said in her weekly radio address to the nation.

Let us put our nation in order but we have to do this fast, she said, adding that what the country needs today is more unity to accelerate change and progress.

The President said that jobs stem from investments and investments come as a result of confidence of businessmen in the stability and order of the nation.

Compared with other countries, the President said, our economy remains stable as shown by the assurance of Fitch Ratings that it will retain its stable outlook on the country's foreign and local borrowings.

She also said the coming visit of US President George W. Bush will strengthen the confidence of investors in our country.

Her administration is doing everything within its power to provide more jobs, citing concrete steps already taken, the President said.

She has instructed the Department of Agriculture to release P1 billion for loans to the country folk. The Public Employment Services Office (PESO) and the regional quick response teams of Department of Labor and Employment continue to help displaced workers and livelihood programs are being conducted, she said.

The President noted that while employment has dropped in the agricultural sector, this has been partly offset by an increase in the industry and services sectors. Industry generated 259,000 jobs or 5.5 percent increase while services generated 254,000 jobs or 1.8 percent growth.

Job generation, the President said, is dependent on the effort of every Filipino to work for total development and peace. "Let us not allow the scourges of society to prevail because that will lead to a deterioration of the country and render future generations helpless," she concluded.

GMA turns over check of P500,000 to help promote industrial peace in Laguna

STA ROSA, Laguna — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today turned over a check of P500,000 to the Laguna Labor Management Council (LLMC) to help promote industrial peace and harmony between the labor force and management in industries located in various techno parks in the province.

The President handed the check to Laguna Governor Teresita Lazaro in a simple ceremony held at the premises of Honda Cars Philippines inside the Laguna Technopark in this progressive town.

In her remarks at the turnover ceremony, the President said that she hopes that with the amount, the LLMC would continue to push for labor and management partnership "so that instead of losing, more jobs could be generated."

Among those who witnessed the check turnover were Labor Secretary Patricia Sto. Tomas, Honda president Mitsunari Takano, Department of Labor and Employment (DOLE) Region 4 Director Maximo Lim, and some 30 officers of the LLMC, representing the labor, management and government sectors in the province.

The LLMC, a tripartite industrial peace council, forged in May last year a Social Accord for Industrial Peace, Harmony and Stability through the initiative of the DOLE-Region 4.

To implement the social accord, an Action Plan for 2003 was approved last June and part of it was the conduct of training program on conciliation and mediation, grievance handling, voluntary arbitration, and collective bargaining and negotiation.

The President lauded the industry sector for posting 5.5 increase in employment and the services sector for a 1.7 increase in employment.

Several members of the LLMC, particularly those from the labor sector, expressed their support to the President and her ongoing programs and reforms to strengthen labor-management cooperation.

The President also advised the members of the LLMC to inform their respective managements to directly connect with the National Power Corporation (NAPOCOR) if their firms are consuming more than one megawatt of power to enjoy lower cost.

PR auto industry competitive in Asean market, Ford Motor exec informs GMA

Ford Motor Company Philippines (FMCP) has so far exported 10,000 out of 14,000 vehicles targeted for sale abroad this year, highlighting the capability of the Philippine automobile industry to compete in the Association of Southeast Asian Nation (ASEAN) market, a Ford executive informed President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo Saturday.

FMCP president Henry Co conveyed the information to President Macapagal-Arroyo when she visited the P4 billion Ford plant inside the Laguna Technopark in Sta. Rosa, Laguna. She was accompanied by Labor Secretary Patricia Sto. Tomas.

Co said the FMCP export program makes significant contributions to the Macapagal-Arroyo administration's job creation scheme, aside from pumping millions of dollars into the country's foreign exchange reserves.

To date, he said that the export of Philippine-made Ford vehicles has generated $155 million for the country's export trade.

Co said that the 10,000 Ford units were exported to Indonesia and Thailand.

He said the total number of Ford vehicles exported from the Philippines is expected to reach more than 100,000 units once the FMCP expansion program is completed within the next five years.

According to the FMCP president, a part of their expansion plans is the launching of locally made Mazda vehicles that would be marketed in the country and exported to Thailand and Indonesia by next year. Ford has a manufacturing tie up with Mazda, a Japanese carmaker.

The export of Ford vehicles, which are completely built in this country, has been made possible by the ASEAN Free Trade Agreement (AFTA), Co said.

He also said that Ford Motor Company Philippines is the "biggest customer of RP-sourced components and the only company with a positive trade balance."

Co thanked the President for signing in December 2002 Executive Order 156, which provides for a comprehensive industrial policy and directions for the motor vehicle development program, and the Value-based Excise Tax this year. He said these made the local automobile industry more competitive in the ASEAN market.

But, Co cited one problem for the local car manufacturers — the importation of second-hand vehicles that are mostly shipped through the Subic and Cebu ports.

For the uplift of the local automotive industry, the President directed Secretary Sto. Tomas to coordinate with Subic Bay Metropolitan Authority (SBMA) Chairman Felicito Payumo on a study on how to restrict the importation of used vehicles.

Statement of the President: Re Prime Minister Koizumi

We congratulate Prime Minister Koizumi for winning a renewed mandate to lead Japan. Japan is our biggest source of official development assistance and our second largest trading partner. Prime Minister Koizumi is a friend and partner of the Philippines. We look forward to continuously working with him in pushing for the peace, security and development of our region.

Case Vs. Honasan to be resolved with or without his counter affidavit

If Sen. Gregorio Honasan fails to submit to the Department of Justice (DOJ) by Tuesday (September 23) any counter-affidavit on his alleged involvement in the Oakwood military adventurism of July 27, 2003, the DOJ is expected to proceed with resolving the case, a Department of Interior and Local Government (DILG) official said today.

DILG Undersecretary for legal and legislative affairs Agnes VST Devanadera said the Criminal Investigation and Detection Group (CIDG) of the Philippine National Police (PNP) has filed additional affidavits to bolster its case against the senator. The PNP is one of the agencies under the DILG.

Devanadera said that Senator Honasan has been ignoring the charges against him before the DOJ, probably because he knows the strength of evidence proving his participation in the Oakwood Hotel rebellion. "But, with or without his counter affidavit," she said, "we shall proceed to resolve the case."

Apart from the numerous affidavits executed by witnesses, including soldiers, Devanadera said the pieces of evidence that the CIDG operatives have gathered, include two videotapes from the closed circuit TV at the Oakwood Hotel, in Makati City. This shows that the evidences against Honasan and the rebel soldiers are "authentic and not planted."

At the same time, Devanadera said that the National Bureau of Investigation (NBI) has gathered supplemental affidavits showing the identity of not just five but 56 leaders of the Oakwood mutiny.

She said that the NBI collected additional evidences in a case filed against Army Capt. Milo Maestrecampo and other soldiers belonging to the rebel Magdalo group before Judge Romeo Barza of the Makati Regional Trial Court Branch 16. The Magdalo leader had asked for a re-investigation of the case against them.

The large number of mutiny leaders, Denavera said, indicates that the Oakwood military adventure was not spontaneous as the Magdalo group had claimed. These leaders engaged in recruitment of soldiers that showed up at Oakwood as well as lined up rebel support outside Oakwood, she said.

Statement of Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye

Senator Lacson sounds like a broken record. His allegations regarding the San Francisco properties are a rehash of charges which have been referred by the Senate Blue Ribbon Committee to the Ombudsman. In a resolution, the Ombudsman dismissed the charges for lack of evidence. Clearly, this is part of his squid tactics to cover his own tracks.

Malacañang says gov't budget deficit under control, notes improvement in revenue collections

Malacañang assured the people today that the budget deficit of the national government "is firmly under control."

Secretary Emilia Boncodin of the Department of Budget and Management (DBM) said that “the increased spending in the third quarter is a deliberate decision by fiscal authorities to accelerate implementation of projects that had been delayed due to the tight rein imposed in the first quarter.”

Boncodin said that while the appetite for expenditures had been successfully restrained in the past two quarters, “we owe it to our people to allow them to benefit from such good performance.”

She said that President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo continued to be committed “to keep the cumulative deficit within target.

The DBM secretary also reported that, in the first six months of 2003, revenue collections by the Bureau of Internal Revenue (BIR) and the Bureau of Customs (BOC) have exceeded targets by P24 billion.

“This is a positive sign that the fiscal burden will finally be tamed this year,” she said. In 2003, the Development Budget Coordination Committee (DBCC) expects the deficit-to-gross domestic product (GDP) ratio to decline to 4.7 percent from 5.2 percent in 2002, and this will progressively fall every year until the deficit is eliminated by about 2009, she added.

The Cabinet-level DBCC, which recommends fiscal policy and tracks the government’s fiscal position, clarified that the fiscal problems of the country started in 1998 after the Asian financial crisis.

From 1994 to 1997, it pointed out that the country enjoyed a fiscal surplus totaling over P30 billion, but it was wiped out in 1998. “By 2000, the deficit has ballooned to more than P136 billion in one year,” it added.

Boncodin said that when President Macapagal-Arroyo took over in January 2001, she immediately reversed the expenditure-driven fiscal stimulus policy implemented by the Estrada administration and switched to a government-initiated but private sector-led economic policy.

“Spending is not bad but if you are borrowing what you spend and not earning it from regular income, then the so-called fiscal stimulus is actually an irresponsible undertaking,” she said. “At the risk of the government becoming a drag on the economy, we were forced to clamp down on expenditures to ensure our fiscal sustainability.”

The DBM secretary allayed fears of an expenditure blowout. “Many sectors, including those in the academe, are encouraging government to spend more to compensate for private sector’s present cautiousness,” she said. “That would be the easiest thing to do, particularly with the tremendous pressures in a pre-election year. But the economy’s sustainability is very important to us. We will not trade that off for a short term gain.”

Boncodin admitted that the last two years have been difficult years for the fiscal sector. However, since January 2003, the numbers have improved, with the BIR and the BOC meeting their revenue targets, she said.

GMA seeks descendants of heroes support to advance national interests

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo stressed before heroes descendants today the need to focus attention on moving the country forward.

“Now that the Oakwood mutiny is behind us, it is time to refocus on pushing our country forward. We must now redirect our people’s energies away from too much poison politics and towards what we will do to sustain decent development, solidarity and progress,” she said.

She has been harping on this theme in the face of incessant negativism and divisiveness derailing the national course. She has also been underscoring the need for unity and order to accelerate change and progress in the nation.

The President made her comments this afternoon at Malacañang Ceremonial Hall after thanking the coalition of various foundations and civic organizations and historic clans who responded to the call of lawyer Antonio Meer, organizer of Bayani Tulong Sa Bayaning Kawal set up to provide support for soldiers on the field.

Meer, a grandson of Gen. Miguel Malvar of Batangas who was the last general to surrender to the United States forces in the war for independence, said an initial response of P2 million from the coalition.

“To you I say, yours are also an act of heroism in behalf of our Republic,” the President told the Malvar and Rizal families, Philippine Jaycees, UP Alumni, Sigma Rho, ABS Foundation, Ahon Movement, SM Foundation and others.

“It is incumbent upon our people to give our soldiers the faith, confidence, respect and support they need to perform their duty,” the President said.

The proceeds of the project will augment the benefits and privileges extended to enlisted men of the Armed Forces by the government, like housing and health services.

GMA: True reforms come with peace not with Martial Law

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said genuine reforms should be based on democratic processes and not through destabilization that could only lead us back to the dark days of the Martial Law years.

“Ang ipinaglalaman nating reporma ay sa pamamagitan ng demokrasya at hindi sa pamamagitan ng destabilisasyon para bumalik sa batas militar,” the President said at the Quezon City Hall Rising Garden where the September 21, 1972 declaration of Martial Law was recalled.

Attending the commemoration were the leaders and members of the 3,000-strong Sulong Batayang Sektor Koalisyon, representing the 14 basic sectors in the country. The group took the occasion to further push its reform agenda that it sees as being derailed because of the destabilization plots against the government.

The group said among those being derailed were the P130-billion coconut levy fund that should benefit coconut farmers and strengthen the coconut industry, the collection of the P38-billion Marcos loot to compensate the human rights victims and fast-track implementation of agrarian reform; resumption of peace talks with the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) that would lead to peace and development in Mindanao, and the war against graft and corruption.

More reforms have been realized by her administration in two and a half years than in 14 years of martial law, the President said.

The President said the threat of destabilization brought by the Oakwood mutiny last July 27 has waned. She said the members of the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) and the Philippine National Police (PNP) have already expressed their support to the chain-of-command and the Constitution.

She said she already ordered the AFP hierarchy to relay the various reforms being undertaken by the government down to the lowest ranks to further strengthen their commitment to the Constitution.

On the challenges the country faces today, she said everyone should always remember the spirit of the EDSA people power revolution and continue to uphold civilian rule in the country.

She said the present time calls for everyone to unite and show their nationalism and resolve for democracy and reform.

“Ituloy natin ang ating pagkakaisa upang manatili ang demokrasya at magtagumpay ang reporma sa ating bansa hindi lamang para sa atin kundi para sa ating mga anak at sa mga susunod pang henerasyon (Let’s continue our unity to uphold democracy and the success of reforms in our country not only for us but also for our children and the next generations),” she said.

The program ended with the singing of the “Bayan Ko” led by wheelchair-bound Richard Arceno, the leader of the persons with disabilities (PWDs) sector.

Afterwards the President discussed other issues and concerns with the sectoral leaders at the Quezon City hall licensing office.

Among those present were Social Welfare Secretary Dinky Soliman, Secretary Marita Jimenez, National Anti-Poverty Commission (NAPC) Lead Convenor Teresita Deles, and Mayor Sonny Belmonte.

Statement of the President: Ill-gotten Wealth

The more delay in the release of these funds means the greater is the injustice against our people. Whoever is working to impede the course of justice will have to answer to the people, especially those who had long been victims of social and political tyranny.

Statement of the President: Robbery Investigation

Crime does not pay, whether for petty snatchers or rogues in uniform. The Citibank robbery has been an international embarrassment and I commend the military and police for arresting the suspects in a determined and forceful fashion. The next step is to establish the links between this group and other underworld networks so that we can bring these criminal conspiracies out of the woodwork. This is part of a self-cleansing process within the AFP and the PNP as much as it is a serious crackdown on organized crime. Rogues in uniform will be exposed, arrested and prosecuted. I also take note of another robbery of the Lepanto Mining Company in Benguet and I direct the PNP to track down the suspects with the same degree of decisiveness and alacrity.

Statement of the President: Martial Law

We shall not take the bait of martial law because our democratic institutions are strong enough to withstand the onslaught of destabilization and we have adequate constitutional powers to pursue justice and reforms. Peace and order can be attained through the instruments of democratic vigilance, criminal justice and good governance and not necessarily through military rule. Martial law is an anachronism that goes against the worldwide trend of openness and liberalism. It is a weapon of last resort that we do not need, or seek to wield.

GMA advisers see economic recovery in second half of 2003

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's economic managers today expressed optimism that the economy will recover with a stronger performance expected in the next six months of 2003.

In a press statement, Economic Planning Secretary Romulo Neri, who is concurrently Director-General of the National Economic and Development Authority (NEDA), said that exports growth will spur the economic recovery in the second half of the year.

The NEDA has forecast a 4.5 percent growth of the gross domestic product (GNP) in the second half of 2003 as compared to the 3.9 percent GNP growth rate posted in the January-June period.

Neri said that the Macapagal-Arroyo administration has laid the groundwork for growth-inducing sectoral policies that are expected to capture the financial flows from the economic recovery of the United States and Japan, the Philippines' two leading trading partners.

The sectoral policies, he pointed out, include a productivity program in agriculture that provides for use of hybrid rice and certified seeds, rehabilitation of the irrigation network and application of roll-on-roll-off port facilities and vessels.

The government has also lined up support for medium- and small-scale enterprises by enhancing their access to credit and exempting them from the Minimum Wage Law with the passage of the Barangay Business Enterprise Law, he said.

Other sectoral policies cover support for housing by lengthening loan repayment periods and reducing the bureaucratic requirements; fast-tracking micro-credit lending, particularly the release of P1 billion for loan applications already approved; and more timely payments of payables to government suppliers and contractors.

In a separate statement, Secretary Emilia Boncodin of the Department of Budget and Management (DBM) said that the "appetite for expenditures in the past two quarters" of 2003 had been contained, and that "the budget deficit of the national government is firmly under control."

Boncodin also noted that the Bureau of Internal Revenue (BIR) and the Bureau of Customs (BOC) have finally been meeting their revenue collection targets.

"In the first six months of the year, revenues have exceeded targets by P24 billion," she said. "This is a positive sign that the fiscal burden will finally be tamed this year."

The DBM secretary was likewise hopeful that the budget deficit would eventually be eliminated. "In 2003," she said, "the Development Budget Coordination Committee expects the deficit-to-GDP (gross domestic product) ratio to decline to 4.7% from 5.2% in 2002. This will progressively fall every year until the deficit is eliminated by about 2009."

In the meantime, Boncodin called on government agencies to exercise fiscal discipline in their operations and to direct resources to their best use.

GMA to meet with Mahathir in New York

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo is set to hold one-on-one talks in New York with Malaysian Prime Minister Mohammad Mahathir, particularly on the Malaysian offer to host the resumption of peace negotiations between the Philippine government and the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF), Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said in a radio interview this morning.

The President and Mahathir may also talk about issues concerning peace, security and development in the region, Bunye added.

The primary purpose of the President's New York visit is to address the 58th session of the United Nations General Assembly where she is expected to push the country's bid for a seat in the UN Security Council.

Bunye said that the UN Security Council seat is very important because it is one of the major organs of the UN and decides on most of the major world policies.

Over the prestige that goes with being a member of the Security Council, the Philippines will also be able to take part in the discussions and decision-making process of the world body, Bunye furthered said.

Bunye said that the Philippines has been angling for a seat in the Security Council for so long and now is the most opportune time to really go for it since a seat has been reserved for an Asian representative.

He expressed optimism on the chances of the Philippines landing a seat since the President herself would be making a pitch for it before the UN General Assembly.

While in New York, the President is also expected to meet with the foreign ministers and ambassadors from the Organization of Islamic Conference (OIC) and discuss ways on how OIC member countries can help in the development of Mindanao, especially in the former conflict areas.

The President also plans to call on UN Secretary General Kofi Annan and meet with the members of the Filipino community in New Jersey.

From New York, the President goes to Rome (Sept. 27) for an audience with Pope John Paul II then Paris (Sept. 29) to address the 32nd general conference of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization and visit the Mother House of the Religious of Assumption.

GMA arrives in Zamboanga City en route to Jolo

ZAMBOANGA CITY — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo arrived at 9:25 a.m. today at the Edwin Andrews Airbase here en route to Jolo, Sulu, where she was the guest of honor at the 613th founding anniversary of the province.

The President was met by government officials led by Governor Farouk Hussin of the Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao (ARMM) and Chairman Michael Defensor of the Housing and Urban Development Coordinating Council (HUDCC).

Also in the President's party were Secretary Corazon Juliano-Soliman of the Department of Social Welfare and Development (DSWD) and Lead Convenor Teresita Quintos-Deles of the National Anti-Poverty Commission.

In Jolo, the President would deliver a speech as part of the province's 613th founding anniversary at the Sulu Sports Complex. She will also participate in the Maligay Festival, an annual event that showcases the rich cultural heritage of the Tausug tribe.

Local officials and residents in Sulu have expressed elation over the President's visit because they would be able to present their problems, particularly on the peace and order situation of the province.

Sulu Governor says GMA visit to help project better image of the province

JOLO, Sulu — Sulu Governor Yusup Jikiri today said that the visit here of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo would help in projecting a better image of the province, which had been portrayed as a war-torn area by the media mainly due to the activities of the Abu Sayyaf.

"The President would fairly see for herself that Sulu is not as bad as it has been projected on the papers. We live normal lives here and it is as peaceful as you can get feel of it now," Jikiri said.

Jikiri also emphasized that the provincial government has been supportive of the military and police authorities in their campaign to attain sustainable peace and tranquility in the province, which has been tagged as home to a faction of the Abu Sayyaf terrorists.

“The Abu Sayyaf has weakened and with sincere efforts to cripple its strength, one day this problem would be eliminated in Sulu,” he said with optimism.

The governor said that the Maligay Festival, which is held as part of the celebration of the 613th founding anniversary of Sulu, showcases the rich cultural heritage of the Tausug tribe.

A maligay is a tower-like shape of artistically decorated colorful foodstuff such as steamed rice, native cakes, local delicacies, viands prepared by villagers during festivities like weddings, graduation, baptism, thanksgiving prayer and other religious celebrations.

The festival is a community-oriented annual felicitation in honor of the “maligay” draped in colorful display of the richness of the culture, lifestyle, tradition and values of the Tausugs.

The festival also fosters better understanding, peaceful co-existence and unity in diversity among the people in this province.

GMA leads observance of 613th Foundation of Sulu

One of the highlights in the 613th founding anniversary of Sulu was the Maligay Festival, which showcases the rich culture, lifestyle, tradition, and values of the Tausug, and aims to foster better understanding, peaceful coexistence, and unity among the diverse peoples of Sulu.

In Tausog culture, Maligay signifies thanksgiving, merrymaking, festivity, sharing, peace, security, abundance, prosperity and solidarity. The festival features spectacular events, like cultural presentation, parade, traditional sportsfest, native food exhibit, and beauty pageant.

GMA switches on button that energizes Luuk, Sulu barangay

LUUK, Sulu — Finally, after many years in the dark, some 200 houses in the remote Barangay Kapual here now have electricity after President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo officially switched on today the button that energized the barangay.

The President made a short visit here on board the presidential chopper before she personally led the 613th founding anniversary celebration of the province held this noon at the Sulu Sports Complex in Jolo, just a 2-minute walk from the Provincial Capitol of Sulu.

Before the ceremonial switch-on of the electric facility, the President inaugurated the Children's Playground in front of Luuk Municipal Hall.

The Special Zone of Peace and Development (SZOPAD) Social Fund allocated P6.9 million for the project out of a loan grant from the Organization of Oil Exporting Countries (OPEC) of US$ 1 million.

The President also handed over a check of P200,000 for the construction of day care center here, another check of P300,000 for the livelihood assistance for fishermen for the purchase of fishing boats, and P80,000 for the construction of solar dryer.

Governor Parouk Hussin of the Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao (ARMM) also accompanied the President during her visit here. She was welcomed by local officials led by Luuk Mayor Arbison.

GMA lauds police, military in anti-crime operations

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo said today that the raid on robbers' lair in Taguig, Metro Manila is a serious crackdown on organized crime even as she commended the military and police for arresting the suspects in the series of bank heists that included one on Citibank in Makati City, the first on an international bank.

In a statement, the President said the next step is to establish the links between the robbers' group and other underworld networks "so that we can bring these criminal conspiracies out of the woodwork."

"This is part of a self-cleansing process within the AFP and the PNP as much as it is a serious crackdown on organized crime," the President said.

Saying crime does not pay whether for petty snatchers or rogues in uniform, she said the culprits would be exposed, arrested and prosecuted.

Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said in a press briefing that the President expressed elation over the positive results of the raid which was actually part of a PNP clampdown on robbery syndicates.

The raid netted 12 suspected robbers, some of whom were former policemen.

In a related development, Bunye denied reports that Malacañang has given the go signal for summary executions in the wake of the recent spate of crimes, saying it will not condone any extra-judicial acts.

He also said the President has already asked the PNP to coordinate with the National Press Club in the solution of cases involving journalists.

It is in the wake of this recent spate of crimes that rumors about another coup attempt and the possible declaration of martial law surfaced which Malacañang has repeatedly denied.

Bunye said in the press briefing the President has effectively consolidated the Armed Forces from top to bottom and that she enjoys wide support from the police and the military.

GMA visits Agar-Agar farm in remote Sulu island

MARUNGAS, Hadji Panglima Tahil, Sulu—President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today made a quick visit to this remote island to personally inspect the huge agar-agar (carrageenan) farm here.

The presidential party, which included civilian and local officials, rode in six speedboats from the port of Jolo in going to the island. Travel time was about 20 minutes.

The President was the guest of honor this noon at the 613th founding anniversary celebration of the province held at the Sulu Sports Complex in Jolo.

The President stayed for about 30 minutes in the island before boarding the presidential helicopter for the hop to Zamboanga City where she was scheduled to visit the Camp Navarro General Hospital in the city.

During her visit to the island, the President was accompanied by Chairman Michael Defensor of the Housing and Urban Development Coordinating Council (HUDCC), Secretary Corazon Juliano-Soliman of the Department of Social Welfare and Development (DSWD), Lead Convenor Teresita Deles of the National Anti-Poverty Commission, Governor Parouk Hussin of the Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao and Sulu Governor Yusop Jikiri.

The seaweed farm here, which literally encircles the island, is being funded by the United States Agency for International Development (USAID).

The US government has earlier pledged to extend financial support, mostly in the form of grants, to residents of Mindanao, particularly those in conflict-affected areas.

Earlier, the President also visited Luuk, Sulu where she switched on the electric facility that energized some 200 houses in Barangay Kapual.

Military retirees, business group, former C.O.P.A. member pledge unqualified support for GMA

The umbrella organization of all the military retirees' organizations, the Federation of Retired, Commissioned and Enlisted Officers (FORCES), has pledged its unqualified allegiance and unwavering support for the administration of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, saying it will do its "utmost best" to help in the attainment of a sustainable political, economic and military stability in the country.

Composed of retired soldiers, from the rank of general down to sergeant, FORCES has among its member organizations the Association of Retired Master Sergeants and the Last Watering Hole Association, Inc. that has as its members retired officers from the different services in the military.

It also boasts of individual members from the military organizations that have as members both active and retired military officers such as the Association of Generals and Flag Officers (AGFO).

"Rest assured that FORCES shall go hand in hand with the Arroyo administration in its endeavors to bring prosperity, unity and lasting peace and order in our beloved nation," the group said in its manifesto to the President.

In separate manifestos, the AGFO and the Last Watering Hole Association also expressed unequivocal support for President Macapagal-Arroyo.

The AGFO, in a board resolution, called upon the government and the people "to restrain unscrupulous politicians and/or groups from exploiting the situation for their own ulterior motives to the grave prejudice of national interest."

It also asked that the Senate investigation on the Jose Pidal case be concluded "so that the senators can attend to their constitutional duty of legislation."

The Last Watering Hole Association, also in a manifesto, reiterated its unending loyalty and support to the President's continuing efforts to build a strong Republic.

In a related development, the officers and members of the Zonta Club of Pasig Foundation Inc. also sent a message of admiration and congratulations to the President for her resolution of the mutiny in Makati by misguided officers and men of the Armed Forces.

“Her wisdom and courage reflect an admirably worthy leadership; her decisions and resolution show astute understanding and awareness, and successfully resolved the crisis at no loss of life or property; her swift diffusion of the danger has minimized the extent of adverse national and international repercussions,” the message said.

Meantime, noted businessman Amaury R. Gutierrez has dissociated himself from the Council on Philippine Affairs (COPA), saying he has resigned from the organization over a year ago because of “differences in our perception of COPA policy matters.”

“Since then, I have not participated in COPA’s activities nor have I been consulted on any matter related to the organization’s policies,” Gutierrez said.

Gutierrez made the clarification in view of numerous stories in media regarding destabilizing actions by COPA.

“I want you to know that I’m no longer a member of COPA,” Gutierrez told the President in a personal letter handed to Executive Secretary Alberto Romulo.

In that letter she expressed full support for the administration of President Macapagal-Arroyo.

“I made a promise to Dña. Eva Macapagal in the early days of our association that I shall never abandon Gloria in her political career and I intend to stand by that promise,” Gutierrez said.

Statement of the President: Mindanao peace and development initiatives

The hunt for Al-Ghozi will continue in the sidelines of our advancing peace development initiatives in Mindanao. Muslims, Christians and Lumads are joining hands with the rest of the country in working onwards to development and prosperity. We shall reinforce the support of other nations for our national goals when we travel to the UN in New York and Paris shortly. We are steadily consolidating the domestic and international components of national security and development. Today, we greet all Muslim Filipinos and the world Islamic community in commemorating Isra wal Miraj, as we pray for greater peace, harmony and understanding.

Statement of the President: Alerts mere tactical decisions

These alerts are tactical decisions that are made from time to time and do not impact on the overall state of national stability. In particular, special alert in the Metro Area are part of our overall security plan to provide safety and peace of mind to the millions of people here. These are a deterrent and protective measure and should not cause undue alarm. We need sustained vigilance and I call upon our people to cooperate with the authorities to check any threats to public order.

Statement of the President: Investigate “ghost payroll”

All department and agencies should look into possible “ghost payrolls” and purge these immediately. This is one of the worst forms of robbery of the public coffers, especially if done by purported law enforcers. Those who benefit from it should go to jail.

Statement of Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye: A leader’s options

The nation is undergoing extraordinary circumstances and it is but natural for any national leader to weigh the options of service, sacrifice and responsibility. Although this decision is entirely in the hands of the President alone, many people think that she would be forsaking the country if she did not vie for the polls, despite her earlier decision. But in the end this is a matter of conscience, destiny and divine guidance. We must be patient enough to wait for the decision because there are many other priorities that have to be served and these are uppermost in the President’s order of business.

Peace and development are GMA's priorities in Mindanao

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo said today that the administration is committed to advancing the peace and development initiatives in Mindanao.

The President, who concluded today a two-day visit to Jolo, Sulu, and Zamboanga City, lauded the cooperation of Muslims, Christians and Lumads with the rest of the nation in working for the development of Mindanao.

In a press statement, President Macapagal-Arroyo said that she will “reinforce the support of other nations for our national goals” during her foreign travels to New York, Rome and Paris starting Wednesday (September 24).

Apart from addressing the General Assembly of the United Nations in New York City, Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo will also meet with Malaysian Prime Minister Mohamad Mahathir on the peace process in Mindanao, Presidential Spokesman Ignacio R. Bunye said in an interview with Radyo ng Bayan.

Malaysia is brokering the resumption of peace talks between the Philippine government and the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF).

Bunye said that the President likewise hopes to meet with leaders of the Organization of Islamic Conference (OIC) on a Philippine request for observer status in meetings of the OIC.

“Mayroon ding mga binabalak na panayam ang ating Pangulo sa ating mga kababayan sa Amerika, particular doon sa New Jersey kung saan maraming mga Pilipino ang naninirahan (Our President plans to meet with the Filipino community, particularly in New Jersey),” Bunye said.

In Jolo Monday, President Macapagal-Arroyo participated in the celebration of the 613th anniversary of the Sultanate of Sulu and in the Maligay festival. She also inaugurated several livelihood and development projects, including the electrification of some 200 houses in Barangay Kapual in Luuk, Sulu.

In Zamboanga City, she visited soldiers wounded in battles with outlaws and dissidents, who were confined in a military hospital. She also conferred with senior military officers led by Gen. Narciso Abaya, chief of staff of the Armed Forces of the Philippines.

Asked if the President's visit to Mindanao had something to do with efforts to recapture Indonesian terrorist leader Fathur Rohman Al-Ghozi, Bunye said the President and the military leaders have discussed the continued hunt for the escaped terrorist.

The President said that “the hunt for Al-Ghozi will continue in the sidelines of our advancing peace and development initiatives in Mindanao.”

Palace cites strong fundamentals that could foster economic growth

Strengthening macro-economic fundamentals coupled with prudent economic policies of the government will ensure the country's economic growth for the second half of the year.

Presidential Spokesman Ignacio R. Bunye said during radio interview that the Philippines' economic fundamentals remain strong and that the country's economic performance continues to be better than those of our Asian neighbors.

The government is certain that it will be able to meet its full-year growth target. The robust growth of the domestic demand will offset the weakness in the agriculture output brought about by the El Niño weather phenomenon, Bunye said.

“We are on the right track as far as development is concerned. Our economic managers expect the agriculture sector to post substantial growth, in terms of employment and production, once favorable weather prevails,” Bunye said.

The expected strong output in the agriculture sector during the second half of the year will help strengthen the export sector. The strong economic growth for the second half of the year will enable the country’s gross domestic product (GDP) to grow by 4.5 percent for the second half of 2003, from 3.9 percent from January to July.

The government expects the economy to bounce back sharply in the second half this year on the back of higher exports to the United States and Japan, which are the Philippines’ top trading partners.

Economic Planning Secretary Romulo Neri said that the government has already laid the groundwork for growth inducing sectoral policies that would allow the Philippines to take advantage of the opportunities presented by higher demand from the United States and Japan.

Pump-priming activities by the government will inject new life into the agricultural sector where the unemployment rate has risen to record levels as of July this year due to El Niño.

GMA to advance RP’s peace and development thrusts in 5-day working trip abroad

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo will advance the country’s peace and development initiatives, particularly in Mindanao, during her five-day working visit to the United States, Italy and France.

Although the President will leave late Wednesday evening, her working trip officially starts Thursday, September 25, when she and her official delegation arrive at the Newark International Airport in New Jersey. From the airport, the President and her party will motor to the Waldorf Astoria Hotel in New York City.

In a formal statement, the President said she will reinforce the support of other nations for the country’s national goals during the New York and Paris leg of her trip.

In New York, the President will address the 58th session of the United Nations General Assembly (UNGA) and in Paris, she will speak at the 32nd General Conference of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO).

“We are steadily consolidating the domestic and international components of national security and development,” the President said.

The President’s first official engagement on Thursday is a 30-minute meeting with Malaysian Prime Minister Mahathir Mohamad at the UN Building. The outgoing Malaysian leader would also address the 58th session of the UNGA.

The two leaders are expected to discuss the scheduled resumption of the formal peace talks between the government and the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF), which is being hosted by Kuala Lumpur.

Afterward, she would have a luncheon with officials of the US Institute of Peace to be followed by a roundtable discussion with the US media at her suite at the Waldorf Astoria Hotel.

On Friday, September 26, the President would have a breakfast meeting at the Asia Society Building hosted by the Asia Society and Council on Foreign Relations.

At 10:45 a.m., the President will deliver her address before the 58th Session of the UNGA at the Plenary Hall of the UN headquarters in New York.

The President will be the fourth speaker of the day. The UN has requested all heads of delegation to speak for only 15 minutes.

She would then call on UN Secretary General Kofi Annan at the latter's office at the UN headquarters.

The President would then have a luncheon meeting with the foreign ministers and ambassadors of the Organization of Islamic Conference (OIC) at the Delegates' Lounge of the UN Building.

After this, she would meet with the International Board of Advisors at the Carnegie Suite of the Waldorf Astoria Hotel.

In the evening, the President would meet with the Filipino community at St. Peter's College in Jersey City before the eight-hour flight to Rome.

She and her party would stay for two days in Rome highlighted by the meeting with Pope John Paul II and the Filipino community.

On September 29, she would deliver her address before the 32nd General Conference of the UNESCO in Paris.

In Paris, the President would visit the Mother House of the Religious of the Assumption and also with Filipino community leaders in France.

She and her official delegation are expected to arrive back in Manila before noon of September 30.

GMA unveils package of benefits for soldiers

IPIL, ZAMBOANGA SIBUGAY — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today unwrapped a package of incentives for the officers and men of the armed forces, particularly those fighting in the battlefields of Mindanao.

Speaking at the 4th Infantry Battalion of the Philippine Army based in Tungawan, Zamboanga Sibugay, the President disclosed several benefits that include education, housing and medical aid to soldiers wounded in firefight against secessionist rebels in Mindanao.

Despite the heavy downpour upon her arrival in Tungawan, the President was warmly received and cheered by the big crowd composed of public school teachers, local government officials and employees and residents of neighboring municipalities.

The President said soldiers who were wounded and awarded medals and citations will be given priority to housing and educational benefits.

“Kasama iyon sa inyong bala, sa inyong kabayanihan (It's part of your bullet, of your heroism),” the President said.

Under her administration, the President said she had proclaimed land sites that can accommodate housing for at least 30,000 up to 60,000 soldiers.

The President urged the soldiers to take advantage of the benefits provided under the Pag-IBIG plan of the government.

During her visit at the 4th Infantry Battalion headquarters, the President also donated some P50,000 worth of assorted foodstuffs and medicines.

The donated items were handed to Col. Joselito Bernardo, commanding officer of the 4th IB under the supervision of the 102nd Infantry Brigade commander Col. Emmanuel Cayton.

The President said these medicines were intended for the soldiers everytime they get sick and wounded in the battlefield.

The President expressed pity for the soldiers, particularly those in the battlefield, who could not avail of immediate medical attention, particularly when military physicians are not available.

She said she wanted AFP Chief of Staff Gen. Narciso Abaya to look into their problems and to possibly enter into an agreement with the Secretary of the Department of Health to assign at least one military physician in all government hospitals.

The President said with this arrangement, soldiers getting sick or wounded in the battlefield need not go far to get treatment but can only proceed to the nearest hospital where a military physician is assigned.

“I hope that this program will be implemented soon so that our soldiers would be able to get the immediate treatment they deserve in the nearest hospital in their area of operation,” the President added.

GMA cites peace, livelihood, education priorities for Sulu

ZAMBOANGA CITY — A stable peace and order situation, livelihood and education are the priorities set by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo for the province of Sulu.

Speaking during the celebration Monday of the 613th anniversary of Local Government and Public Administration of Sulu, the President assured Filipino-Muslim constituents of Sulu that her government will continue to bring progress and development to Southern Philippines, particularly to the province of Sulu.

The President was received by enthusiastic Jolojanos who took every inch of opportunity just to take a glance and have a handshake with the Chief Executive.

The President said that upon her return to Manila, she will study the student-classroom ratio of every public school in Sulu so that the government can provide the necessary upgrading of the education system in the province.

She said that after evaluating the situation of education in Sulu, she will release appropriate funds to the Department of Education to construct additional classrooms in the different public schools all over Sulu to accommodate a greater number of students.

At present, the classroom-student ratio of the province is one room for a hundred students packed like sardines in almost all public schools.

In areas where there is unstable peace and order situation, the President said she will initiate the distance learning process of education by adopting the program, “Education by Television.”

The Chief Executive also assured Sulu constituents that the government will immediately start the rehabilitation of two public hospitals in the province and the delivery of necessary medical equipment and services to the people.

She will refer to the Department of Health the allocation of necessary funds to fix Sulu Provincial Hospital and Pangutaran Hospital, even the deployment of health personnel to far-flung areas, especially those who are presently affected by tuberculosis and malaria.

Other presidential actions for Sulu include the rehabilitation of Patikul and Talipao water systems, construction of a cold storage for the Provincial Agriculturist Office so that farmers and fisherfolk could store their harvests before selling them to traveling merchants.

The President also encouraged residents living in the mountains who own vast tracks of land to plant cassava because root-crops will sell not only locally but also in the international market with the help of the government.

She said that she already directed the DPWH to complete the on-going construction of Sulu Circumferential Road to make travel for farmers easier.

“We can develop Sulu not by the rule of the gun, but by peaceful means. Together let us fight rebellion in Sulu,” the President stressed.

The President made the first-ever awarding of six Rajah Baguinda Most Outstanding Tausugs. The awardees were Dr. Cabile Asian, former Senator Santanina Rasul, Dr. Jaman Imian, Prof. Nurulaji Misuari, Dr. Abraham Sakili and Justice Jainal Rasul.

The Rajah Baguinda award was issued by virtue of Sulu Governor Yusof Jikiri’s Administrative Order 2-02-A as a showcase of the Maligay Festival, an event that revives for the first time the cultural heritage of Sulu.

Soldier-awardees priority in housing and other benefits — GMA

IPIL, Zamboanga Sibugay — Soldiers who have received military awards for their heroic actions in battle will be given priority in the list of soldiers applying for housing and other benefits in the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP).

This was announced by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo this morning in Tungawan town, this province, where she made a one-hour side-trip before her return to Manila after visiting Sulu province Monday.

The President declared this policy after conferring the Gold Cross, Bronze Cross, and Military Merit medals to eight soldiers of the Philippine Army in a simple ceremony held at the mess hall of the 4th Infantry Battalion based in this town.

Those who received the Gold Cross medals were 2Lts Marcelo Valdez and Filven Noche; T/Sgt. Eufrazio Flores, Jr. and S/Sgt. Francisco Barcoma.

The Bronze Cross medals were presented to Capt. Epifanio Gaminde VI and M/Sgt. Felix Blanco, while the Military Merit medals were given to T/Sgt. Wilmer Fontanilla and Sgt. Diego Lood, all of the Philippine Army.

“These soldiers have shown extraordinary acts in the battlefield in Jolo and Siocon during the recent encounters with members of the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) and the Abu Sayyaf Group,” the President said.

The 4th Infantry Battalion is only 2-weeks old in the province after it replaced the 33rd IB which was sent to Jolo, Sulu where the former came from.

Witnessing the awarding ceremony were 102nd Brigade Commander Col. Emmanuel Cayton and South Command chief Lt. Gen. Roy Kyamko.

The President said all awardees including those who received the military merit medals are entitled to the priority scheme in the application for housing or loans to buy their own land where they could build their houses.

She said she also approved recently the amount of P100 million for the immediate purchase of military uniforms, combat shoes, raincoats and other needed paraphernalia of the soldiers “who are risking their lives to protect the Constitution and the entire Filipino nation.”

Datumanong clarifies judicial council meeting

An inter-department meeting presided by Justice Secretary Simeon Datumanong was aimed at enhancing the speedy dispensation of justice and not focused on a particular case, like the controversial Kuratong Baleleng multiple murder case.

Datumanong issued the clarification to dismiss insinuations that the council that met Monday was designed to prepare for the expected Supreme Court decision on on the Kuratong Baleleng case.

“No. It’s not about Kuratong Baleleng case,” Datumanong said. “It was about the cooperation and coordination of various agencies in the gathering of evidence and testimonies which we can present to the court so that we can have a speedy dispensation of justice.”

Meeting at the headquarters of the National Bureau of Investigation (NBI), the group, called the Council for the Criminal Justice System, is composed of representatives from the DOJ, the Philippine National Police, Department of Interior and Local Government, NBI and the courts.

Datumanong said it was the first meeting since three weeks ago when they agreed to form the council.

Datumanong said that while the celebrated Kuratong Baleleng case was mentioned during the meeting, discussions were centered on law enforcement and prosecution.

“It’s all about how the law enforcement agencies of the government and the prosecution arm will be able to enforce the law and apply the rule of law,” Datumanong said.

Datumanong stressed that he has no information about the status of the case with the Supreme Court. “We don’t know whatever the decision of the high tribunal on the case but we are prepared because it’s part of our mandate,” he added.

The Justice Secretary also said the council has no definite calendar but can be convened “once in a while to assess our capability on what we are supposed to do, such as, to enforce laws and to apply the rule of law to anyone.”

GMA names Ermita new Defense Chief

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today appointed Presidential Adviser on the Peace Process Eduardo Ermita as new Secretary of National Defense, replacing Angelo Reyes who resigned a month after the July 27 Oakwood mutiny.

In a press briefing, Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said the appointment of Ermita to the post, concurrently held by the President, in an acting capacity, was made in advance “in the interest of the country.”

Bunye said that Ermita was supposed to take over the DND portfolio in six weeks time but the announcement was advanced because of the President’s five-day working visit to New York, Rome and Paris, which starts Wednesday.

Ermita, who is also the concurrent chairman of the Government Peace Negotiating Panel in talks with the Moro Islamic Liberation Front, was acting DND secretary when the President assumed the presidency in late 2001.

He was Vice Chief of Staff of the Armed Forces from 1986 to 1988. He was also DND Undersecretary from 1988 to 1992 during the term of President Corazon Aquino.

The DND post became vacant when Reyes, in the aftermath of the Oakwood mutiny, resigned in what Malacañang described as “an act of sacrifice” and “a good gesture on the part of the secretary.”

Former President Fidel Ramos said Ermita was a good choice, saying he is well rounded in military and civilian matters. He also said Ermita has a good image internationally as a negotiator.

“He should continue his job as negotiator so that he will have more clout,” Ramos said.

Ramos advised the new DND chief to consolidate all armed forces units and their counterparts in the DILG so that they will have more coordination in their operations.

GMA designates Guingona as caretaker during her five-day trip abroad

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today designated Vice President Teofisto Guingona, Jr. as caretaker during her five-day working visit to New York, Rome and Paris, from September 25-30.

In her letter, the President asked the Vice President “to act for and in my behalf during my absence.”

The President is scheduled to leave late tomorrow for New York, the first leg of her trip, to address the 58th session of the United Nations General Assembly.

In a statement, the President said that during her visit to New York and Paris, she would advance the country’s peace and development initiatives, particularly in Mindanao.

While in the United Nations, the President will also meet with Malaysian Prime Minister Mahathir Mohamad and the foreign ministers and ambassadors of the Organization of Islamic Conference (OIC).

Malaysia and the OIC member countries are involved in the ongoing peace process in Mindanao.

Statement of the President: Re Designation of VP as government caretaker

The designation of the Vice President as government caretaker while I am away is a routine, institutional act and there is nothing special about it. Some people are sowing intrigues about our policy differences with the Vice President but these are not pertinent to his designation. I am confident in his full capacity and resolve to uphold and implement Constitutional governance and he will have the full support of the Executive Branch.

Statement of the President: Re Secretary Ermita

I call on the Armed Forces, the Defense department and the public to lend their full support for Secretary Ermita. He comes with an impressive track record in peace, development and security management. He has three priorities: sustain the momentum of reforms in the military organization, bring the peace process into the mainstream of defense doctrine, and push forward the AFP modernization program. I am confident his impressive government record and vast experience will lead him on.

Statement of the President: Re Bar exams leak

Cheating is a bad ticket to the law profession. The Supreme Court did right and we hope that the people responsible for the leak are identified and charged. I am appalled that would-be lawyers are capable of, or can get away with, such dishonesty. This is a grave threat to the integrity of our system of justice. More stringent measures are needed to prevent a recurrence of the shameful incident.

Statement of Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye: Re 2004

We have to wait for the President's decision. The media agenda cannot force it and she has chosen to focus on vital affairs of state. Her trip abroad is important to national security and development and she has a full schedule waiting in New York. She considers it more important to anticipate the fruits of her trip rather than deliver any message on the 2004 polls.

Statement of Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye: Re Pulse Asia

Senator Lacson's politicking has undercut trust in the Presidency and other national institutions including the legislature and the judiciary in a poisoned political atmosphere. Our society is in the middle of a mood swing towards negativism instigated by malicious mudslinging. We have seen the worst and we think the ratings have bottomed out. There are ups and downs and the President has learned to live with them.

New DND chief to fast-track GMA-initiated reforms

Defense Secretary-designate Eduardo Ermita said that he will fast-track reforms initiated by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo to further strengthen the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) and respond to grievances aired by some sectors in the military.

The President named Ermita, Presidential Adviser on the Peace Process, as defense secretary Tuesday (September 23) while he was on an official mission in the Middle East.

A three-term congressman of the 1st district of Batangas, Ermita will assume the DND post on September 30 upon his return with the President from trips to New York, Rome and Paris. Ermita is an official member of the presidential entourage in the five-day foreign trip.

In an interview with Radyo ng Bayan, Ermita noted that President Macapagal-Arroyo, while serving concurrently as defense secretary in the past three weeks, introduced AFP reforms, like speeding up delivery of adequate logistics to soldiers in the battlefield, releasing P100 million for soldiers' boots, ponchos and battle wear, and providing housing for some military families.

Under DND Order 165 issued by the President in her capacity as concurrent defense secretary, the maximum amount allowed for contract approvals by AFP officers was raised from their outdated 1996 levels. These measures are expected to reduce the practice of splitting contracts and so-called conversion to make urgently needed purchases.

"Ating itutulak upang mapabilis ang reporma, lalo na 'yong mga bagay na naging sanhi ng mga ginawang kaguluhan ng mga sundalo o opisyal noong July 27. Makakasiguro tayo na mabibilis ang mga pagpapatupad ng mga reporma na inutos ni Presidente... (I'll push for fast implementation of reforms, especially those in response to the causes of the July 27 military mutiny. I can assure you that the President's reforms will be implemented immediately)," he said.

Ermita said that the President may have plans for appointing a new adviser on the peace process. In the meantime, however, he will continue that function as peace talks with the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) are forthcoming.

He noted that President Macapagal-Arroyo will have a meeting in New York City with Malaysian Prime Minister Mahathir Mohamad whose regime is brokering a peace parley between the Philippine government and the MILF.

The incoming defense secretary appealed to the Filipino people to unite and help the government in efforts to attain peace, stability and progress.

Guingona wishes GMA 'successful journey'

Vice President Teofisto Guingona Jr. today said he "humbly values" the decision of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo designating him to act for and on my behalf "as head of the government caretaker committee during her five-day working visit to New York, Paris and Rome.

Guingona's spokesperson, Danilo Venida, said the Vice President "humbly values the gesture and will work closely with the officials and people in government in discharging this duty."

"Vice President Guingona joins our countrymen in wishing the President Godspeed and a safe, successful journey," Venida said.

Executive Secretary Alberto Romulo sent the President's letter designating the Vice President as government caretaker by fax to the Office of the Vice President at 9:32 a.m. today.

“I am confident that as always this arrangement will ensure national stability and delivery of basic services and that you will always uphold the interest of the nation,” the President said in her letter to Guingona dated Sept. 24, 2003.

The Vice President is expected to join members of the Cabinet and other top government officials at the send-off ceremonies for the President at the Ninoy Aquino International Airport at 11:00 p.m. tonight.

It is the fifth time this year that the President has designated Guingona as caretaker in her absence.

The Vice President was named caretaker when the President visited Kuwait from Feb. 2 to 4; Malaysia, from Feb. 23 to 25; the United States from May 17 to 26; and South Korea and Japan from June 2 to 7, 2003.

No decision yet on GMA’s plans for 2004 — Palace

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has no final plan yet on whether to run in the 2004 elections or not.

“As far as the President is concerned, there is no final decision yet on this matter,” Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said, reacting to reports that the President’s candidacy next year is a “done deal.”

“Ang bagay na ito ay pinagiisipan pa (This matter is being studied). But let’s be patient. Let’s wait for the President to make her decision,” Bunye said.

Bunye said whatever will be the decision of the President “it’s a matter of conscience, destiny and divine guidance.”

Presidential Political Liaison Officer Joey Rufino also clarified reports indicating that the President is definitely going to be picked as the administration’s candidate in next year’s presidential elections.

In a separate radio interview over Radyo ng Bayan, Rufino said the standard bearer of the ruling Lakas-NUCD party has yet to be discussed in a meeting on October 7 to be attended by Cabinet members, officials of government agencies, elected senators, congressmen, governors and city mayors.

While the presidential candidate would be one of the topics to be discussed in the Lakas Party national directorate meeting, Rufino said other items in the agenda include party matters and policies.

During the party meeting, Rufino said party members will also express their support for the President and her program of government.

Malacañang sees RP economy to bounce back

The country’s economic growth that is being stymied by the too much politicking and a destabilization attempt by mutinous soldiers last July is expected to bounce back, Malacañang said today.

Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said a better quality of life for Filipinos is expected soon because of the social and welfare program of the Macapagal-Arroyo administration.

Deputy Presidential Spokesman Ricardo Saludo also shared the view in an interview with the ABS-CBN News Channel (ANC) in reference to the latest Pulse Asia survey which affected the President’s approval rating.

“I think it’s important to note one aspect of the Pulse Asia survey indicating that great many of our people anticipate better quality of life next year,” Bunye said in a news briefing in Malacañang.

“So, this could be indicative of a possible upswing in the ratings of the President in the future survey,” he added.

Saludo also noted that during the first semester of this year, the country's economy suffered a major setback as a result of the Iraq War and the severe acute respiratory syndrome (SARS) virus which dampened tourism and investment.

He also blamed too much politics and the foiled attempt by mutinous soldiers to grab power last July 27 have contributed in pulling down the President's rating.

"The survey was done at the height of the controversy when Senator (Panfilo) Lacson was making all the charges. But eventually you will note that he has failed to support his charges with hard and documented evidence," Bunye said.

"We have seen the Oakwood incident, we have seen the effect on the peso, we have seen the effect on unemployment and all the work factors," Bunye said, in reference to the possible causes of the downtrend in the President's rating.

What the President will do in the coming months, Bunye said, is "to concentrate on doing what she has been doing and that's improving the economy, and with the improve perception of the economy, improve perception of the quality of life. I think things will be better next time around," Bunye said.

Saludo also expressed optimism for a significant economic rebound.

"We feel this is bottoming out that we're seeing. We're probably seeing the worst of this. And we're hoping that the economy starts to grow again, all of that will eventually rebound to an economic pickup in the Philippines," Saludo said.

With positive outlook for the economy, Saludo added that it would mean a big turnaround "particularly in the quality of life, and certainly even in the approval and trust ratings of the President."

GMA leaves tonight for five-day trip to advance RP's foreign policy anchored on peace and development

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo leaves tonight for New York, the first leg of her five-day working visit to the United States, Italy and France, in the pursuit of the country's foreign policy anchored on peace, progress and commitment to the global fight against terrorism.

During her speaking engagements and talks with foreign dignitaries, the President will also advance the country's peace and development initiatives, particularly in Mindanao.

The President has designated Vice President Teofisto Guingona, Jr. as government caretaker while she is on her official mission abroad.

She said that she is confident in the Vice President's "full capacity and resolve to uphold and implement Constitutional governance and he will have the full support of the Executive Branch."

In a separate statement, the Vice President said that he "humbly valued" the President's decision to designate him as government caretaker as she wished the President "Godspeed" and a "safe, and successful journey."

Although the President will leave late Wednesday evening, her working trip officially starts Thursday, September 25, when she and her official delegation arrive at the Newark International Airport in New Jersey. From the airport, the President and her party will motor to the Waldorf Astoria Hotel in New York City.

In a formal statement, the President said she will reinforce the support of other nations for the country's national goals during the New York and Paris leg of her trip.

In New York, the President will address the 58th session of the United Nations General Assembly (UNGA) and in Paris, she will speak at the 32nd General Conference of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO).

The President’s first official engagement on Thursday is a 30-minute meeting with Malaysian Prime Minister Mahathir Mohamad at the UN Building. The outgoing Malaysian leader would also address the 58th session of the UNGA.

The two leaders are expected to discuss the scheduled resumption of the formal peace talks between the government and the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF), which is being hosted by Kuala Lumpur.

Afterward, she would have a luncheon with officials of the US Institute of Peace to be followed by a roundtable discussion with the US media at her suite at the Waldorf Astoria Hotel.

On Friday, September 26, the President would have a breakfast meeting at the Asia Society Building hosted by the Asia Society and Council on Foreign Relations.

The Good News: Max's chicken eyes further expansion abroad

Give it to the Pinoy.

The House that Fried Chicken Built will soon try to accommodate the big foreign market.

With the success it is reaping here and some key areas of the United States, Max's Chicken is eyeing expansion abroad to continue the legacy that started 59 years ago in a residence-turned café on Scout Tuazon in Quezon City.

Some of the areas being eyed by the Filipino chicken chain are Hawaii, New York, Las Vegas and some parts of California.

Serving mostly American servicemen shortly after the Second World War, the restaurant has since become a household name with its native and flour-free chicken concocted by a niece of Stanford-educated Maximo Gimenez, the owner.

To date, the company has expanded to 90 company-owned and franchised stores in the Philippines and the United States.

Last year, it was named as the Most Outstanding Filipino Franchise by the Philippine Franchise Association of the Philippines for having opened 38 franchised branches in a span of five years when the Pinoy chicken chain started franchising its stores.

It was cited for having maintained food quality and service amid the expansion.

Max's Franchising Inc. Chief Executive Officer Robert Ocampo said the chain was honored for its good operations franchising program.

"We were able to grow at a steady pace, in terms of sales and also employment opportunities," he said.

The restaurant ended 2003 with P2.2 billion in sales and hopes to breach the P3 billion mark at the end of the year. It currently employs 1,500 workers and provides 400 to 500 job opportunities for Filipinos annually.

Even the branches abroad are crewed by Filipinos who originally come from the Philippines, according to Ocampo.

In spite of the bird flu epidemic that hit neighboring countries, Max's hopes to open 37 more franchises this year, placing the yearend total to 50. It also hopes to open its 100th branch before the end of the year.

Since opening its first branch in 1960, there was no stopping expansion as Max's followed suit with branches in Makati, Caloocan and in Southern and Northern Luzon. In the US, it can be found in four key areas of California where many Filipinos reside.

It was only after 48 years did Max's entertain the idea of franchising, mainly due to numerous offers from interested parties. In 1993, Max's tapped the help of FranCorp, an American franchising company to help in the study which resulted in the establishment of Max's Franchising Inc in 1997.

A year later, the restaurant opened its first franchised store in Harrison Plaza followed by 37 more in the next five years.

The company is currently studying the Mindanao market for expansion possibilities. It would soon open stores in key cities in Bicol and Western Visayas.

"We hope to be in each major city in the Philippines," Ocampo said.

Despite its success locally, Max's is keeping its expansion efforts abroad as conservative as possible.

"The owners, in penetrating the US market, are very conservative," Ocampo said. "That's why their initial entry points are areas where there are strong or big Filipino communities."

Max's clientele in the US are 99 percent Filipinos, according to Ocampo.

"It's so difficult to get Americans to patronize the stores. If you have a strong base of Filipinos in the area, you have a market," he said.

Statement of the President: Re Anti-terrorism

The opposition must never make terrorism a political issue.

By doing this they are playing into the hands of evil.

They are out of touch of the security needs of our nation.

It is my obligation to protect the people and I will stop at nothing to do so.

If the opposition wants to waffle on defending the nation, they would do so at their peril, and at the peril of the average Filipino.

The issue is not the elections, it is protecting the people.

That is what I am doing; and that is what they should be supporting.

Statement of the President: Re SC ruling

We welcome the Supreme Court ruling as a vindication of good governance.

We are confident that the decision would pave way for the junking of other charges leveled against President Arroyo.

We hope that the High Court's ruling would serve as a wake-up call for the opposition to shift their campaign to a higher plane instead of engaging in the politics of obstruction and harassment.

GMA cites need for ‘holistic thinking’ towards good government

BATANGAS CITY – Stressing moral governance in her platform of government, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has reiterated that what the country urgently needed is a holistic thinking towards good government.

The President said that her late father, President Diosdado Macapagal-Arroyo was former student of the late President Jose P. Laurel.

She said that with the late Laurel, her father learned the principle of fundamental thinking where it is now popularly known as holistic thinking.

She likewise expressed elation and respect for the Laurel family during the 37th commencement exercises on Wednesday of the Lyceum of Batangas where she was welcomed by the university President Peter P. Laurel.

“Maraming natuto ang tatay ko sa matandang Laurel.

Ang natutunan ng tatay ko sa late President Laurel nung propesor pa niya sa U.S.T. ay yung tinatawag na fundamental thinking, sa ating lengguwahe ngayon, yung holistic thinking, yung hindi na iisipin ang pangyayari sa sariling niyang pangyayari na bahagi ng isang kabuuan,” she said.

She said that if we looked at the system as a whole in solving the problem, then we look at the holistic system rather than solve it by itself it will have the tendency in outgrowing the system.

She even extended her congratulation to all the Lyceum graduates, the parents and their relatives.

“Binabati ko ang lahat ng nagtatapos ngayon, mga estudyante ng Lyceum maganda ang inyong kinabukasan dahil maganda ang inyong pinag-aralan dito sa Lyceum,” she said.

She told the graduates that during her three-year term, for the last 11 years there was low level of reported strikes whether labor or transport unrest.

She added that with the immediate prioritization and implementation of foreign policy in her term, this has become the great weapon for investment and jobs creation.

“Dahil sa foreign policy marami ang namuhunan, marami ang nagtiwala, nadagdagan ang trabaho,” she said.

She attributed this foreign policy with the late President Laurel and his son, the late Vice-President Salvador Laurel who were the great believers and implementors of foreign policy.

She said that from 5 million cellphone units, under her term, the country now registered 25 million cellphones units.

She said that before her term it is only 2,006 call centers but now it has 60,006 call centers nationwide.

With this fundamental changes, she said that more jobs will be created in the next six years if God providence allowed her.

“Sa fundamental changes na ginagawa natin para magkaroon ng ginhawa, para magkaroon ng trabaho ang ating mga graduates,” she said.

GMA to provide scholarship for each poorest family

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo said today that her administration would provide one scholarship for each of the poorest families in the country under her Education for All program as early as next school year.

Speaking at the 39th commencement exercises of the Novaliches High School in Quezon City this morning, the President said the Education for All program would be launched within this year, if she would be given the people's mandate in the May 10 elections.

“Sa susunod na school year puwede nating bigyan ng scholarship bawat isa sa pinakamahirap na pamilya sa ating bansa (Next school year, we could provide scholarship for each of the poorest families in our country),” she said.

The President said details of her Education for All program would be spelled out on Easter Sunday.

The Education for All program is a continuation of her Student Assistance Fund for Education for a Strong Republic (SAFE 4 SR), she said, adding that SAFE 4 SR has helped the families of poor students to come up with much-needed fund, particularly towards the end of their schooling.

In launching SAFE 4 SR, she noted that 40 percent of the parents of senior college students from poor families usually run out of funds when their children reach 3rd and 4th year college. That eventually results in high dropout rate, she said.

This year alone, the President said that almost 150,000 3rd and 4th year college students were provided with interest-free fund assistance.

The President advised the 1,333 graduating secondary students to reciprocate the sacrifices of their parents by doing their best in whatever course they would take and to stay away from illegal drugs that have already ruined the lives of many students and families.

President Macapagal-Arroyo handed out the certificates and other awards to the top 16 graduates led by class valedictorian Sally Baltazar who garnered the PGMA Leadership Award and PGMA Academic Excellence Award.

The President was warmly welcomed by some 3,000 students, teachers, parents, and local officials led by Quezon City Mayor Feliciano Belmonte when she arrived at 7:45 A.M. at Novaliches High School in Barangay San Agustin.

Among the welcomers were City Schools Superintendent Dr. Victoria Fuentes, school principal Sheridan Evangelista, and Barangay chairman Almario Francisco.

GMA orders CHED to work out details of scholarship program

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo directed the Commission on Higher Education (CHED) officials today to prepare guidelines of the one scholar for one member of every indigent family program to be started this school year opening in June.

Addressing the 35th Commencement Exercises of Pasay City East High School (PCEHS) at Cuneta Astrodome, Pasay City this morning, the President said she plans to make the announcement about the Education for All Program in her Easter Sunday message.

The Chief Executive disclosed to the 810 graduating students that the scholarship program would be the next thrust of her administration, if she gets a fresh mandate in the May 10 national elections.

According to President Macapagal-Arroyo, the government learned about 40 percent of college dropouts are children of families from the marginalized sector.

Because of this, the Chief Executive has formulated the Student Assistance Fund for Education for a Strong Republic (SAFE 4 SR) that would provide easy-to-pay loans for third and fourth year college students so they can finish their studies to ensure a better future after graduation.

She also urged the graduating class to pursue their studies either in vocational or college courses and help their parents in completing their studies by being working students during their first two years in college.

The President stated that upon reaching senior year in college, cash-strapped students could avail of the P8,000 emergency loan funds as their assurance in completing their studies and in getting their diplomas.

“I had directed the CHED officials to come out with the details of the education for all scholarship program so we can implement it this coming school year opening. I will make the proper announcement this Easter Sunday,” said President Macapagal-Arroyo who was applauded not only by the graduating students but also by the parents of the 2003–2004 graduating class of PCEHS.

She also stressed to the parents that her administration would pursue not only the well-being or the health of indigent families but also the education of their children.

The President noted that this is only a “down payment” from her brief governance and in her next installment, she wants to make sure that all poor families in our country will be entitled to one scholarship aside from Philippine Health Insurance Corporation (PhilHealth) cards.

The President said the scholarship program would be based on the listing of indigent families with PhilHealth cards.

Pasay City Mayor Wenceslao Trinidad, Pasay City Representative Consuelo Dy, Department of Education (DepEd) Regional Director Corazon Santiago, Division Superintendent Rosalinda Tongco and PCEHS Principal Lourdes Monje assisted the President in presenting medals to honor students.

Presidential Medal for academic excellence was awarded to class valedictorian Edgardo Carlos Jr., while the Presidential Medal for leadership went to Jonna Lauchengco.

Other awardees of PGMA Certificates of Awards for Outstanding Achievement were Mary Grace Mendoza for campus journalism, Perlita Valera for arts and culture, Rodalyn Runez for technology and entrepreneurship, Jacky Egalin for athletics and Jonna Lauchengco for student leadership.

GMA praises community elders for help in maintenance of peace and order

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has lauded the 1,691 members of the Councils of Community Elders (CCE) for their help in maintaining peace and order as well as in providing information to law enforcement agencies that leads to arrests of some criminal elements.

“Thank you for what you have done together with the police and my administration. We have made significant gains in peace and order during the short period that I have been President,” she said.

The President spoke extemporaneously at the closing ceremony of the 1st National Conference of the Councils of Community Elders Wednesday night at the Manila Hotel.

In her remarks, the President told the elders that without their cooperation, the Philippine National Police (PNP) campaign against criminality would have not gained positive results.

She said that in her short presidency, the government’s intensive campaign against organized crime, particularly kidnapping-for-ransom and illegal drugs, has unprecedented achievements.

The campaign against illegal drugs has netted some 23,000 drug pushers and users and P22 billion worth of illegal drugs, aside from the dismantling of drug laboratories in Metro Manila and the nearby provinces of Bulacan and Cavite, she said.

On the anti-kidnapping drive, the President said that even Teresita Ang-See of the Citizens Action against Crime Movement has been impressed with its results. “Mismo si Tessie Ang-See na parating bumabatikos sa ating accomplishments na ipinagamalaki, siya ay pumunta sa Malacañang noong isang lingo at sinabi na in the last 11 years, this is the lowest kidnapping rate,” she added.

Before her speech, the President received a copy of the covenant of the CCE for a peaceful, crime-free community.

The goals of the covenant are: reinforcement of the crime prevention program and activities such as the campaign against street crimes and terrorism; enhancement of the drive against organized crime groups; strengthening of barangay crime monitoring and reporting system; and improvement of PNP response with the support of the community and other pillars of the criminal justice system.

The President ordered Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose D. Lina, Jr. to prepare an executive order that would institutionalize the Councils of Community Elders.

The President also urged the elders, along with business and community leaders, to help the PNP by sending their recommendations on studies being conducted to introduce reforms in the police organization.

Present during the occasion were Secretary Lina, businessman Jose Miguel Varela, Don Emilio Yap of the Manila Bulletin, and other top officers of the PNP.

GMA to parents of this year’s graduates: Choose your future

In four high school and one collegiate commencement exercises that she went to today, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has only one overriding message to both graduates and parents: Choose your future.

“We have two choices for the future in the forthcoming elections,” she said. “A future under a leadership based on experience or one that is untested with no platform of governa*”

Statement of the President: Re Anti-terrorism

Terrorism is a crime against all humanity, and there are no political or religious undertones to the anti-terror campaign.

Questions raised over the legitimacy of the arrests can be fully addressed in the courts.

As far as I am concerned, the apprehension of these suspected terrorists is a product of diligence and hard work on the part of the police and the military, which deserves full commendation and praise.

The people can rest assured that the government is using all means at its disposal to stave off this threat.

Statement of the President: Re Racist attack on Filipinos in Northern Ireland

I have directed the Department of Foreign Affairs to immediately look into this matter and to coordinate with the Irish authorities for the protection of other Filipinos who are in that country.

We condemn this attack not only because the victims are Filipinos but because we abhor all forms of racism, what with more than 8 million Filipinos in foreign lands and thousands of foreigners residing in our country.

Racism is out of place in a rapidly integrating world seeking to rid itself of discrimination and inequality arising from color and creed.

Statement of the President: Re NAKTF campaign

I acknowledge the accomplishments of the NAKTF and the Philippine National Police in the relentless campaign against kidnapers, but I am saddened by the fact that a four-year old girl's life was needlessly sacrificed in this latest incident.

The government takes full responsibility for this and will provide the necessary assistance to the innocent civilians who were injured in the clash in Navotas.

I have likewise ordered an investigation as to who should take responsibility for the death of Jennifer Gallano as well as the injury of six other children.

The end can never justify the means, and lapses on police operations must never be tolerated.

I expect the NAKTF and the PNP to review their rules of engagement to avoid a repetition of this unfortunate event.

Statement of Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye: Nuisance cases

We expect more nuisance cases to crop up in the following weeks as the elections draw near.

The President remains unperturbed by the rash of disqualification cases.

We are prepared to answer any charges in the proper forum.

We remain confident that these accusations will eventually be junked by the COMELEC and the Supreme Court, or in any other tribunal because they are absolutely baseless and utterly bereft of merit.

Government to honor commitment to release APOs

OSLO, Norway — Chief government peace negotiator Silvestre H. Bello III said yesterday during the Oslo formal talks that the government would continue to honor its commitment to release alleged political offenders (APOs)

Bello informed the National Democratic Front (NDF) panel that within one month from April 5, 2004, the government (GRP) panel would work for the release of 32 APOs, including nine individuals covered by the 2001 release order of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo.

Ms. Zenaida Llesis, who is one of the seven women APOs, will be given the highest priority because she is a nursing mother.

In 2001, the NDF panel submitted to the GRP panel in Oslo a list of 121 APOs. Of this total, 98 had already been released by the government.

The GRP continues to release APOs as one of its confidence-building measures for the ongoing peace negotiations with the NDF to end the 35 years of armed conflict in the Philippines.

The GRP's commitment to release APOs refutes the statements made the NDF chairman Luis Jalandoni that the government is not complying with the agreement to release APOs and that this non-compliance is causing delay in the peace negotiations.

GMA orders review of rules of engagement

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today ordered a review of the rules of engagement of the National Anti-Kidnapping Task Force (NAKTAF) and the Philippine National Police after a four-year-old girl was accidentally killed in a shootout Thursday between their operatives and suspected kidnapers in Metro Manila.

“The end can never justify the means and lapses on police operations must never be tolerated,” the President said in a statement.

The President said the directive was “to avoid a repetition of this unfortunate event.”

Jennifer Gallando was hit by a stray bullet and was declared dead on arrival in Tondo Medical Center after five suspected kidnapers engaged NAKTAF operatives in a firefight.

Four kidnapers were also killed — three at the shootout – and one in a nearby hospital.

The President also lauded the NAKTAF and the PNP for their successes in the campaign against kidnapping syndicates in the country.

“I acknowledge the accomplishments of the NAKTAF and the PNP in the relentless campaign against kidnapers, but I am saddened by the fact that a four-year old girl’s life was needlessly sacrificed in this latest incident,” the President said.

The President said the government would take full responsibility for the incident and would also assist the civilians who were injured in the clash in Navotas.

GMA signs law improving tax collection efficiency

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today enacted two bills expanding the jurisdiction of the Court of Tax Appeals (CTA) and institutionalizing the use of Alternative Dispute Resolution system in the country.

The signing ceremony was held on the occasion of the oath-taking of the new Court of Appeals and Sandiganbayan justices this afternoon at the Rizal Hall of Malacañang.

The signing of the two bills into law was witnessed by Senate President Franklin Drilon, Speaker Jose de Venecia, Jr., Sen. Francis Pangilinan and Congressmen Raul Gonzales, Marcelino Libanan, Aleta Suarez and Salacnib Baterina, and Supreme Court Chief Justice Hilario Davide, Jr.

The act expanding the jurisdiction of the Court of Tax Appeals, elevating it to the level of a collegiate court with special jurisdiction and enlarging its membership, amends for the purpose certain sections of Republic Act 1125 as amended, otherwise known as the law creating the Court of Tax Appeals.

Docketed as House Bill 6673, authored by Reps. Suarez, Libanan and Exequiel Javier, and Senate Bill 2712, authored by Sens. Drilon and Ralph Recto, the new law seeks to improve the tax collection efficiency of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, Bureau of Customs and other collecting agencies of the government by lodging both the criminal and civil jurisdiction over tax cases with the CTA.

It would also effectively enhance and maximize the development of jurisdiction and judicial precedence on tax matters which is of vital importance to revenue administration.

Under this new law, the CTA shall be of the same level as the Sandiganbayan and its judges bearing the new titles as justices.

The act institutionalizing the use of Alternative Dispute Resolution (ADR) system in the country has been docketed under House Bill 5654, authored by Congressmen de Venecia, Libanan, Baterina and Oscar Rodriguez, and Senate Bill 2671, authored by Senators Pangilinan, Noli de Castro, Manuel Villar and Joker Arroyo.

It seeks to bring justice nearer to the people by providing for the alternative method of settling disputes between and among the litigants in appropriate cases.

Before the enactment of this law, traditional access to the court system has been hampered by several factors such as vacancy in the judges positions in the judiciary; lack of prosecutors, public attorneys or adjudicators, heavy caseload of the existing courts; and high cost of litigation as a result of delay in the disposition of cases.

It was noted that lengthy proceedings are not only costly but also tedious, creating more avenues for graft and corruption in the process.

The ADR system provides a cogent solution to the said problems as it involves conciliation, mediation, early neutral evaluation, mini-trials and arbitration. While there are existing mediation processes already available to party litigants, these, however, are limited in scope and application.

The institutionalization of the system covers a wide range of dispute resolution mechanisms for efficiency and better administration of justice.

With the establishment of the Office for Alternative Dispute Resolution, a more participative, innovative and less costly procedures for settling disputes will now be in effect as the system also consists of practices in mediation and arbitration which are consistent with international practices.

The Supreme Court and the Department of Justice are amenable to the proposal in view of the many benefits of the ADR system.

The Office for Alternative Dispute Resolution will be an attached agency to the Department of Justice.

Palace clears “Ching” Suva of wrongdoing

The Presidential Anti-Graft Commission (PAGC) today dismissed the graft charges against Press Undersecretary for Media Relations Carmen Suva for lack of merit.

In an 8-page resolution, the PAGC, after a careful review of the records, recommended to President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo the immediate dismissal of the case “for lacking in probable cause.”

The case stemmed from the non-inclusion of a 1999 model of Toyota Tamaraw FX GLX in the respondent’s 2000-2002 sworn Statement of Assets and Liabilities (SAL).

“After a thorough evaluation of the evidence on record, the Commission is of the considered view that herein respondent did not violate Section 7 of Republic Act No. 3019, and Section 8 (a) of Republic Act No. 6713,” said the PAGC in the ruling, which was affirmed by Executive Secretary Alberto Romulo.

After presenting to the Commission respective argumentations and evidence by the complainant and respondent, the PAGC ruled in favor of the respondent.

The Commission gave credence to the affidavit submitted by Suva’s son-in-law admitting that he is the rightful owner of the controversial 1999 Toyota Tamaraw FX GLX with plate number BSA-555.

“All told, there being insufficiency of evidence on record to prove that the respondent willfully and feloniously omitted as one of her assets the subject vehicle in her 2000 – 2002 SALs, the Commission is not convinced that the offense charged has been committed,” according to the decision submitted to the Office of the President (OP) by PAGC Director Dario Rama and Commissioner Teresita Baltazar.

Suva, fondly called “Tita Ching” by newsmen covering the Malacañang beat, has served the Malacañang Press Office for four decades now in a stint spanning six presidents — from the administration of the late President Diosdado Macapagal to his daughter, President Macapagal-Arroyo.

She had rose from the ranks and had been serving the Press Office for an uninterrupted 42 years since 1962.

In 2002, “Tita Ching” was given a gold necklace in recognition of her 40 years of unblemished and dedicated service to the government.

She was also the recipient of the “Outstanding Employee” of the Department of Public Information in 1980 and the “Outstanding Woman Employee” of the Office of the Press Secretary (OPS) in 1989 to edify her untainted record in public service.

Arrest of Abu Sayyaf suspects result of hard work, all their rights to be respected — Palace

The legitimacy of the arrests of four Abu Sayyaf terrorist suspects can be fully addressed in the courts, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo said today in a statement in the wake of criticisms over the arrests.

“As far as I am concerned, the apprehension of these suspected terrorists is a product of diligence and hard work on the part of the police and military, which deserves full commendation and praise,” said the President who is bent on eliminating or neutralizing terrorist activities in the country.

She assured the country the government is using all means at its disposal in the anti-terror campaign, terrorism being a crime against all humanity for which there are no political or religious undertones.

Four Abu Sayyaf terrorist suspects were arrested recently and a cache of explosives taken, averting their plans to stage a Madrid-like bombing attack in Metro Manila which could lead to the death of hundreds. One has already been formally charged before the Department of Justice.

In line with the President’s uncompromising stand against terrorism, Malacañang called on the opposition and other quarters to help the government’s anti-terrorism campaign instead of obstructing it.

All rights of the Abu Sayyaf suspects are being respected and all procedures on due process are being observed, Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said this afternoon in a press briefing at Malacañang.

“We leave the handling of this to the AFP. I’m sure they are aware of the proper procedures and we believe these procedures will be followed,” Bunye said in response to queries why the suspects have not been presented to the media and the public.

Meanwhile, Bunye said the chairman of the National Republican Congressional Committee (NRCC), Rep. Tom Reynolds, has apologized for including the Philippines in a list of countries harboring terrorists.

Reynolds accepted responsibility for the mistake and the US government deeply appreciates what the Philippines has been doing in the war against terrorism, Bunye said.

“The chairman of the NRCC himself apologized to the Philippine Ambassador and gave the assurance that they will take the necessary remedial action,” Bunye said.

GMA saddened by Jennifer’s death; vows to curb lapses in law enforcement

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today warned that lapses in the conduct of police operations against suspected criminals would not be tolerated.

The President issued the warning as she ordered a full-dress investigation to pinpoint responsibility for the death of a four-year-old girl in Thursday’s shootout in Navotas between law enforcers and suspected kidnapers.

At the same time, the President ordered a review of the rules of engagement of the National Anti-Kidnapping Task Force (NAKTAF) “to avoid a repetition of this unfortunate event.”

“The end can never justify the means, and lapses on police operations must never be tolerated,” the President stressed in a statement.

Jennifer Gallardo was hit by a stray bullet and was declared dead on arrival at the Tondo Medical Center following a shootout between NAKTAF operatives and five suspected kidnapers.

Four of the suspects were also slain—three of them on the spot and the fourth in a nearby hospital.

To alleviate the suffering of Gallardo's family, Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo said the government would take full responsibility for the incident. She also offered assistance to the civilians who were wounded in the crossfire.

At the same time, the President cited the efforts of the NAKTAF and the Philippine National Police (PNP) against kidnapers.

Ramos: 'My main concern is to ensure the victory of K-4 in the coming polls'

Former President Fidel V. Ramos today assured the K-4 coalition led by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo of his unequivocal support, saying that his primary and immediate concern now is to ensure the victory of the entire K-4 ticket in the May 10 polls.

In a press conference in Malacañang, the former President also took exceptions to charges that he was involved in alleged moves to junk K-4 senatorial bet, Sen. John Osmeña.

"I wish the good senator well as a member of the K-4 coalition and as an official senatorial candidate of the Lakas-CMD and the K-4 coalition," Ramos said.

Osmeña has charged that Ramos was involved in moves to junk him from the K-4 slate in favor of independent candidate Heherson Alvarez.

Ramos said that a lot of people are convinced that the allegations against Sen. Osmeña are untrue and can be refuted in a court of law. "I hope he can establish a credible defense," he added.

The former president is chairman emeritus of the Lakas-Christian Muslim Democrats (CMD), the leading party in the Koalisyon ng Katapatan at Karanasan sa Kinabukasan, or K-4.

"Obviously, there's someone or some people doing this. But not me. Why should I?" Ramos rhetorically asked, calling the filing of a criminal case against Osmeña a demolition job.

"Our efforts, including those of the good senator, must be focused in finding out who is that person or persons," Ramos said.

Ramos is chairman of the Ramos Peace and Development Foundation and has pitched for the Philippines and the government of President Macapagal-Arroyo in international economic forums.

He said that he will continue to exert his best efforts and to give his time and modest resources toward empowering the Filipino people and attracting more investments, trade, tourism, technology transfer, and other forms of regional and international cooperation for a better future for all Filipinos.

GMA swears in new associate justices, judges

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today inducted 17 new associate justices of the Court of Appeals (CA), one associate justice of Sandiganbayan, three assistant solicitor generals and Regional, Metropolitan and Municipal Trial Court judges.

The oath-taking took place during the signing of Republic Acts 9282 and 9285 at the Rizal Hall of Malacañang.

Joining the President in inducting the 17 new CA associate justices was Supreme Court (SC) Chief Justice Hilario Davide, Jr.

The new CA associate justices are Isaias Dicdican, Santiago Javier Rañada, Arcangelita Romilla Lontok, Lucenito Tagle, Jafar Dimaampao, Celia Librea-Leagogo, Monina Arevalo Zenarosa, Pampio Abarintos, Mariflor Punzalan Catillo, Teresita Dy-Liacco Flores, Arturo Tayag, Sesinando Villon, Vicente Yap, Ramon Bato, Jr., Romulo Borja, Edgardo Camello and Rodrigo Lim, Jr.

Sandiganbayan Presiding Justice Minita Chico-Nazario then witnessed the oath-taking of Jose Hernandez as associate justice of Sandiganbayan.

Solicitor General Alfredo Benipayo later joined the President in officiating the oath of office to Assistant Solicitor Generals Marissa dela Cruz-Galandines, Vida San Vicente and Bernard Hernandez.

Those who were inducted Regional, Metropolitan and Municipal Trial Court judges were Virgilio Macaraig, Bartolome Flores, Joselito Villarosa, Calixto Adriatico, Angelo Albano, Gina Bibat-Palamos, Reginald Fuentebella and Candelario Gonzales.

Other government officials present in the ceremony were Senate President Franklin Drilon, Speaker Jose de Venecia Jr., Acting Justice Secretary Merceditas Gutierrez, and Public Attorney's Office (PAO) chief Persida Rueda-Acosta.

NPA stepping up extortion activities — Ermita

Communist guerrillas of the New People's Army (NPA) have intensified their extortion activities disguised as "progressive taxation" in the light of the forthcoming elections.

The National Intelligence and Coordination Agency (NICA) issued this assessment during a briefing on the national security situation called by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo in Malacañang this morning.

The briefing was attended by Defense Secretary Eduardo Ermita, former Presidents Fidel V. Ramos and Corazon C. Aquino, Senate President Franklin Drilon and House Speaker Jose de Venecia, Jr.

According to Ermita, the NPA has also been mounting sabotage operations against business establishments and government facilities and infrastructure projects.

"The trend has risen for the past years (inflicting) estimated damage of around P713 million worth of properties due to NPA atrocities, especially on those who do not give in to their progressive taxation," Ermita said.

The Secretary noted, however, that the NPA strength had gone down to 8,690 from about 9,500 in the previous years.

Ermita also said at least 249 barangays, representing six percent of the 42,000 barangays nationwide, were still considered under the influence of the communist guerrillas.

He also pointed out that the figures indicated that in recent years, the NPA has increasingly engaged in terrorism apart from its guerrilla operations.

"Due to a mounting reliance on terrorism by the NPAs, civilians have borne the brunt of conflict as shown in the charts of the NICA," Ermita said.

“The atrocities since the 90’s have become qualitatively more significant, bolder and sensational as it involved assassination of political personalities, liquidation, ambushes for which the NPA have openly and brazenly claimed responsibilities,” Ermita said.

The Good News: IMF projects 4.5 percent economic growth for RP in 2004

The International Monetary Fund (IMF) has projected a 4.5 percent growth of the Philippine economy this year, even if less than the 4.9-5.8 percent gross domestic product (GDP) target of the government.

The IMF also had good words for the monetary authorities and fiscal managers of the country for their success last year.

The Philippine GDP grew 4.5 percent in 2003 despite the global economic slowdown, the severe acute respiratory syndrome (SARS), the US-Iraqi war, a failed mutiny and destabilization attempts. Its Gross National Product (GNP) then also grew 5.5 percent.

"Economic growth should continue to be favorable," the IMF said in an advisory/statement released in Washington and Manila.

The IMF based its growth projection on the expected good performance of the export sector, largely on account of the recovery in the global economy.

Furthermore, it noted the important economic reforms undertaken by Philippine authorities in recent years and the favorable macroeconomic performance with sustained growth and declining inflation.

On the country's monetary authorities, and fiscal managers, the IMF gave its stamp of approval for measures they adopted to contain financial market pressures while keeping inflation at an average of three percent, below the 2003 target, and instituting tight expenditure patterns to check the budget deficit.

The IMF also gave its nod to the continuance of the country's post program monitoring expected to extend to 2009 when the government has programmed its financial position to get back to the black.

The IMF commended the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas for its conduct of monetary policy which helped contain market pressures in 2003. It also lauded fiscal managers for the belt-tightening program of the government that resulted in a lower than programmed budget deficit.

It urged economic managers with the support of lawmakers to continue implementing bold structural reform measures to maximize the country's growth potential and fast track the debt reduction process.

The IMF also commended the authorities' steadfast resolve to strengthen tax administration which helped to halve the declining trend in the revenue-GDP ratio and the tight control over spending.

However, the IMF warned the GDP growth could be considerably weighed down by uncertainty from the political environment.

It also cautioned the government against a further depressed spending pattern, particularly on capital outlay.

Statement of Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye: Re Anti-terror campaign

There is no politics or ethno-religious discrimination in the government's anti-terrorism drive.

We shall not fall into the hands of extremists who want to use the alleged oppression of Muslims to justify lawless violence.

The AFP and PNP have always conducted themselves professionally and without bias in targeting terrorist cells.

We have always considered the anti-terror campaign a responsibility for both Muslims and Christians.

GMA's patubig project now covers entire Quezon City

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has ceremonially opened the faucet of a water truck in Novaliches, Quezon City, making potable water now available to all poor families in the metropolis.

The President launched another project under her Patubig program Friday afternoon in Sitio Tawid Sapa I, Barangay San Agustin.

The President said that San Agustin is the last barangay in Quezon City to be provided with clean water through delivery by water trucks, static water tanks, or water pipes under the Patubig ni Pangulong Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo project.

"Ito ang huling lugar sa Quezon City na walang tubig. Buong Quezon City me tubig na (This is the last barangay in Quezon City without clean water. It is now provided with clean water. The entire city now has water)," she said.

The Chief Executive advised the public to report to the Metropolitan Waterworks and Sewerage System (MWSS) or the Maynilad Water Services Inc. (MWSI) any area that is not yet serviced or inventoried by the Patubig project.

President Macapagal-Arroyo arrived 5:25 P.M. in Sitio Tawid Sapa I and was welcomed by some 2,000 residents and local officials led by Barangay San Agustin chairman Almario Francisco.

Also at hand for the welcome were eight persons with disabilities (PWDs) from the nearby Bahay Pangarap, a branch of the Tahanang Walang Hagdanan of the Philippine Charity Sweepstakes Office (PCSO), led by Supervisor Virgilio Torres, who is a wheelchair-bound PWD.

After the opening of the water project, Francisco accompanied the President to the nearby Gulayan ni Pangulong Gloria project in the barangay.

Palace assures Filipino Muslims that they are not being discriminated against in anti-terror campaign

Malacañang today assured Filipino Muslims that they are not being discriminated against in the government's stepped-up campaign against terrorism and that religion or ethnic origins have never been taken into consideration in this campaign.

In a statement, Presidential Spokesman Ignacio R. Bunye said that there is “no politics or ethno-religious discrimination” in the government’s anti-terrorism drive that has so far rounded up a number of suspected members of the Abu Sayyaf terror group and seized a cache of explosives, averting what could have been Madrid-type bombing attacks in Metro Manila.

Bunye said that the administration will not “fall into the hands of extremists who want to use the alleged oppression of Muslims to justify lawless violence.”

“The AFP (Armed Forces of the Philippines) and the PNP (Philippine National Police) have always conducted themselves professionally and without bias in targeting terrorist cells,” Bunye said.

Bunye stressed that the anti-terror campaign is a responsibility of all Filipinos, whether they are Muslims or Christians.

In an interview with Radyo ng Bayan, Bunye also fended off criticisms of alleged indiscriminate arrests of Muslims who were being tagged as terrorists.

“Ang importante dito ginagawa ng ating armed forces at ng police, sa tulong na rin ng mga mamamayan, iyong kanilang dapat gawain para labanan ang banta ng terorismo (What is important is that our armed forces and police, with cooperation from the citizens, are doing their job to fight the threat of terrorism,)” he said.

Bunye said that criticisms against military and police operatives would not deter them from performing their mission. “If there are legal issues, these will be answered in the proper forum,” he added.

He said that the arrests of terrorist suspects have been carried out not only based on “solid information” gathered by the intelligence community, but primarily for the purpose of protecting the people.

Bunye assured the families of the Abu Sayyaf members who have been arrested that their rights will be protected and all procedures on due process will be observed.

On travel advisories of foreign governments advising their nationals against visiting the Philippines due to Abu Sayyaf threats, Bunye said that the government prefers not to dispute them anymore.

Bunye said that despite travel advisories, foreign tourists continue to visit the country. “We will just go on with our daily activities,” he said.

GMA: Gov’t does not plan to increase power rates

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has ruled out any increase in power rates even after the May 10 elections.

The President said Friday that Secretary Vince Perez of the Department of Energy (DOE) had been misquoted in a news report that the cap of 40 centavos per kilowatt hour (KWh) on the purchased power cost adjustment (PPCA) would be lifted 50 days from now.

“Kinausap ko na si Secretary Vince Perez tungkol diyan at hindi totoo ‘yan (I’ve talked with Secretary Perez on that (cap removal) and that’s not true),” she said.

Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo imposed the cap almost two years ago. As a result, the National Power Corporation (NAPOCOR) has been charging P2.22 per kwh, instead of P3.01 in Luzon.

The Energy Regulatory Commission says that only Malacañang has the power to lift the cap. The President, who imposed the cap, has no plan to change it.

GMA leads officials in celebrating Cardinal Sin's 50th year as priest

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today joined former President Corazon Aquino and other officials in celebrating the golden jubilee of the ordination of Jaime Cardinal Sin, Archbishop Emeritus of the Manila Archdiocese, which was commemorated by a solemn mass at the Manila Cathedral in Intramuros, with Sin himself as the main officiating priest.

Pope John Paul II, in a special message read by the Papal Nuncio to the Philippines Antonio Franco, said: "The occasion aptly commemorated Cardinal Sin's gift of priesthood, as shown by his long and eventful tenure, and fruitful shepherding of his flock, and of his love for Christ and the Gospel."

Cardinal Sin, who was wheeled into the Cathedral since he could not walk because of failing health, said in a message: "I cannot retell my life without EDSA. It is perhaps the most important chapter of my life. I admit finding a secret joy and pride in being called the Cardinal of the EDSA revolution."

Sin said that he does not claim that it was a right but it was a blessing that he was the archbishop of Manila when the EDSA rebellion in 1986 happened. Sin was also one of those instrumental in the downfall of former President Joseph Estrada in what is now known as EDSA 2.

Cardinal Sin was ordained in Roxas City, Capiz, on April 3, 1954 by the late Bishop Antonio Frondosa.

He first served the Roman Catholic Church as a missionary in the Panay hinterlands against the wishes of his bishop, who wanted him to pursue studies in Rome.

Sin was appointed bishop of the Jaro Archdiocese on March 19, 1967 at the age of 39, and as metropolitan bishop of Jaro in October 1972. At the age of 46, he was installed Archbishop of Manila. He became a cardinal on May 26, 1976.

Among those who assisted Cardinal Sin in celebrating the mass were Manila Archbishop Gaudencio B. Rosales, Cebu Archbishop Ricardo Cardinal Vidal, and Auxiliary Bishop of Manila Socrates Villegas.

Chief Justice Hilario Davide, Jr., Speaker and Mrs. Jose de Venecia, Jr. and K-4 vice presidential candidate Sen. Noli "Kabayan" de Castro also attended the mass.

GMA praises women health volunteers for promoting social welfare in Nueva Ecija

MUNOZ, Nueva Ecija — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today praised the women of Nueva Ecija for their role in promoting social welfare of the people, particularly in the provision of health care.

The President, who arrived to an enthusiastic welcome here this morning, spoke before a meeting of the Boluntaryong Manggagawa ng Nueva Ecija at the Multi-Purpose Gymnasium of the Central Luzon State University.

"Grabe ang malasakit ninyo para alagaan ang kalusugan ng inyong mga inaalagaan (You show great concern for the health of people under your care)," she told the audience, composed mostly of members of the Provincial Federation of Barangay Health Workers and the Day care Workers Association, both of Nueva Ecija. Also in attendance were nutrition scholars, service point officers and barangay executives.

She said that the health workers could be of help in implementing the government's family planning program. Her administration, she pledged, would look for ways to provide the volunteers with incentives.

Noting that most of the women volunteers are married to farmers, the President underscored the importance of modernization of agriculture in developing not only Nueva Ecija but the country as a whole.

She said that her administration has prioritized propagation of the “Gloria Rice,” a high-yielding variety developed in China and adopted right here in Muñoz, which has increased production. “At hindi lamang iyon, ang presyo ng karaniwang bigas na binibili ng mga mahihirap ay nananatiling matatag (Furthermore, the price of rice has become stable),” she said.

The President praised the “good work” of the National Food Authority, which has started early its palay-buying program, at P9.19 per kilo, to the benefit of farmers.

The President arrived here after attending a holy mass, held at the Manila Cathedral, on the occasion of the 50th anniversary of the presbyteral ordination of retired Manila Archbishop Jaime Cardinal Sin.

She met with barangay captains, headed by Leonardo Garcia, president of the Association of Barangay Chairmen of Nueva Ecija. Also present at the meeting at the CLSU gym were Nueva Ecija governor Tomas Joson, and Congressmen Josefina Joson, Aurelio Umali and Raoul Villareal.

She subsequently had lunch with mayors, headed by San Antonio Mayor Dr. Jose Salonga, president of the Nueva Ecija Mayors’ League.

Political parties, led by Joson clan, assure GMA of ‘landslide victory’ in Nueva Ecija

MUÑOZ, Nueva Ecija – All political parties in Nueva Ecija, led by the Joson clan, assured President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today that they fully support her candidacy in the May 10 elections and, in particular, she will score a “landslide victory” in the province.

Nueva Ecija Governor Tomas Joson III made the assurance in welcoming the President to the general assembly of Barangay Health Workers at the multi-purpose gymnasium of the Central Luzon State University here.

“Ang ating bansa ay malalagay sa panganib kung hindi si Pangulong Gloria ang magiging Pangulo muli pagkatapos ng Mayo 10 (Our country would be in danger if our President Gloria would not be the next President after May 10),” Joson said.

Joson said that the other political parties are really concerned about the future of the country if the President’s bid for a full six-year term would fail.

“Umasa po kayo na ang mga hidwaan, yung mga hindi pagkakaintindihan sa aming mga politiko ay aming isasaisantabi alang-alang sa inyong tagumpay sa darating na halalan (You can rest assured that we, politicians, will set aside our misunderstandings so that you will win,” Joson told the President.

The governor admitted that the administration’s strong start in agricultural modernization, micro-finance and livelihood assistance to the farmers, along with her successful job creation program, would go to naught if the President would not win.

He also said, in an ambush interview at the Talavera National High School in Talavera, Nueva Ecija, that all political parties in the province are confident that the President will have a landslide victory in Nueva Ecija.

“Definitely, we will try our best,” Joson said right after the President boarded the presidential chopper for the trip back to Manila.

Joson said that all political parties, including rival factions, were present at the luncheon meeting with the President at the CLSU Research, Extension and Training Center.

“You know this is the first time that the different political parties, even our political rivals, joined each other to express our full support to President Gloria,” Joson added.

Vice Presidential candidate Noli “Kabayan” de Castro, Press Secretary Milton Alingod, National Food Authority administrator Arthur Yap, Presidential Assistant for Northern Luzon Secretary Rene Diaz accompanied the President in her fruitful visit here.

The local officials present during the President visit here were Governor Joson, Nueva Ecija 3rd District Representative Aurelio Umali, 1st District Rep. Josefina Joson, 4th District Raoul Villareal and Talavera Mayor Manolito Fausto.

GRP, NDF conclude ‘frank and fruitful’ round of negotiations

OSLO, Norway—The government of the Republic of the Philippines (GRP) and the National Democratic Front (NDF) today concluded what both panels jointly billed as a “frank and fruitful” round of formal peace talks.

Presidential Adviser on the Peace Process Sec. Teresita Quintos Deles said the panels for both the government and the NDF “rose above expected contention issues to hammer out substantive agreements.”

Deles said that the two panels agreed to have another round of formal negotiations on April 26 to 29.

She said that the two panels were resolute in not allowing any issue to derail the agenda jointly set for the latest round of talks, which was held from March 30 to April 2 here.

Deles said that as expected and as scheduled within the formal agenda, the NDF brought up the matter of the NDF’s inclusion in a US listing of terrorist organizations, and demanded that the GRP take a more active stance in the NDF’s removal from the same.

“But, with the GRP upholding the position that the ultimate resolution of the terrorist listing issue requires effective measures to be undertaken by both sides, we quickly moved above and beyond the matter,” Deles said.

“There were apprehensions—aired by the Speaker of the House of Representatives, no less—that only a delisting of the NDF would ensure the progress of the talks. But, after an affirmation of shared principles on national sovereignty and the protection of human rights and international humanitarian law, both the GRP and the NDF panels agreed that there were more than enough common themes to move forward on, and there was no need to stray from the agenda,” Deles said.

More substantively, the GRP and NDF panels agreed:

- To finally set in motion the full operationalization of the Joint Monitoring Committee (JMC), which is the principal mechanism tasked to monitor the implementation of the Comprehensive Agreement on Respect for Human Right and International Humanitarian Law (CARHRIHL). In this light, members of the JMC held their first formal meeting on the second day of the peace talks (April 1). They also agreed to form a Joint Secretariat that will be up and running within the month.
- On a common draft of the “Guidelines for the Work of the Reciprocal Working Committees on Social and Economic Reforms (RWCs-SER), the panels also moved closer to finalizing the Preamble and the Declaration of Principles of the Comprehensive Agreement on Social and Economic Reforms, and reaffirmed their commitment to an accelerated schedule for the RWCs-SER.
- To continue working for the release of alleged political prisoners and detainees, pursuant to the GRP’s commitment under the Oslo Joint Statement of 14 February 2004. The GRP committed to take steps to obtain the release of 32 prisoners and detainees named in a list submitted by the GRP, within 30 calendar days starting April 5, 2004.

Chief Government Negotiator Silvestre Bello III noted that in 2001, the NDF panel submitted a list of 121 alleged political detainees. Of this total, 98 had already been released by government. The latest GRP list of 32 detainees nominated for release includes nine individuals covered by the release order of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo in 2001. It also includes seven women, 10 minors, and six sick and/or elderly persons.

Deles said that “of the seven women, the case of nursing mother Zenaida Llesis will be given the highest priority and she shall be released forthwith.”

The two panels also agreed to work for the indemnification of human rights victims of the Marcos regime.

Deles noted that that an administration bill on the matter has been certified by the President as urgent and has already passed the House of Representatives. The bill, which would set aside P8 billion from the assets covered by the January 30, 2004 custodian agreement between the Republic of the Philippines and the PNB, is awaiting similar resolution at the Senate.

Both the GRP and the NDF discussed general and specific issues pertaining to alleged violations of human rights and international humanitarian law.

In particular, Deles said “concerns were raised about reported attacks on human rights workers, leaders and supporters of legal organizations including some progressive party-list groups, as well as reported attacks on communities, civilians, and properties.”

The panels agreed to look into the complaints and to refer their findings to the JMC, Deles said.

Deles said that on complaints of harassment and the collection of permits to campaign fees by the NPA, both panels agreed to affirm in a joint statement “that freedom of thought and expression, freedom of conscience, political and religious beliefs, freedom of movement and travel, as well as the rights to free speech, press and assembly shall be observed and protected.”

Deles said that with a desire to build on the “fruitful” talks, the panels agreed to meet again on April 26 to 29, in a venue yet to be finalized in consultation with the Royal Norwegian Government.

The latest round of talks were held under the auspices of the Royal Norwegian Government, to whom both panels expressed their deepest gratitude.

Tricycle drivers, out-of-school youth express support for GMA’s candidacy

More than 10,000 officers and members of the Federation of Tricycle Operators and Drivers Association (TODA) in the National Capital Region (NCR) today pledged their full support to the administration and candidacy of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo during a rally at the Quezon City hall grounds this afternoon.

Jun dela Cruz, president of the NCR TODA federation, said they openly support the President because she has supported their cause, particularly when the Metro Manila Development Authority (MMDA) made a standing order phasing out the two-stroke motorcycle engine in 2002 because it allegedly contributed to more pollution in the metropolis.

“President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo supported our cause when the MMDA made a resolution phasing out the two-stroke motorcycle engines in year 2002,” Dela Cruz said.

Dela Cruz, also president of the 30,000-strong Quezon City TODA federation, said some 90 percent of the tricycles in Metro Manila still use the two-stroke motor engines.

He said illegal logging and smoke-belching buses, and not the two-stroke engines, should be first eliminated as it contribute more to over pollution in Metro Manila.

During the rally, the President allocated P1 million for the establishment of a cooperative in Quezon City that would sell cheaper 2T engine oil and rice for the members of the tricycle groups in the area.

Dela Cruz said they are planning to sell the 2T engine oil at P50-P55 per liter compared to its present P63 to P65 per liter cost.

The President also instructed National Food Authority (NFA) Administrator Arthur Yap to help the TODA cooperative sell rice at P16 per kilo for its members.

Aside from Yap, also present were Quezon City Mayor Feliciano Belmonte, vice presidential bet Noli “Kabayan” de Castro, Vice Mayor Bistek Herbert Bautista, Department of Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose LIna Jr., and Senatorial bet Mar Roxas.

Afterwards, the President proceeded to the Quezon Memorial Circle fronting the city hall where some 10,000 out-of-school youths (OSYs) welcomed her.

The OSYs are members of the Negosyanteng Out-of-School Youth (NegOSYouth) under the President’s “Kalinga sa Kabataan” Emergency Employment Program.

The President led the distribution of certificates of recognition for best practices to 13 OSY entrepreneurs in Metro Manila.

For her birthday, 100 children of TODA members gave the President a birthday cake and sang “Happy Birthday” at the QC hall grounds. The OSYs also sang Happy Birthday for the President.

Good News: Road/bridge-building achievements under GMA's watch cited in DPWH report

Bridges of peace, roads to progress.

At the rate the government is building them, this probably is the best way to call the bridges and roads that were constructed under the watch of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo.

In the short span of two years, the President, has built a total length of 9,960 lineal meters of bridges and 6,911 kms of roads since 2001, the Department of Public Works and Highways has announced.

A total of 163 bridges have been built under the "Tulay ng Pangulo sa Barangay" project, 120 bridges under the "Tulay ng Pangulo sa SZOPAD" project, and 49 bridges under the "Tulay ng Pangulo sa SALAM" project.

The DPWH has 819 other ongoing and proposed bridges with a total length of 24, 570 lineal meters. These will be completed between now and 2005 under the "Tulay ng Pangulo" program.

Of the 6,911 kms of roads that were either improved or constructed, 2,542 were paved, according to the DPWH.

In addition, the government has completed 2,860 flood control projects and 11,513 classrooms under the Department of Education school building program. It has also completed 17, 255 other infrastructures nationwide including those for local roads and local flood control, aside from water supply and national buildings.

In line with the President's vision for a Strong Republic, the DPWH takes a big responsibility in the nation's fight against poverty, being a lead agency in building the infrastructure or foundation that will breathe life to the national economy.

"When the DPWH says it is building bridges to connect towns and communities, it actually means building bridges of peace and understanding," DPWH Secretary Florante Soriquez said. "When we say we are bridging roads to open new territories, we actually mean we are building roads towards progress and prosperity."

In her first State of the Nation Address, the President detailed her new policy thrusts and policies, the most urgent of which is winning the war against poverty within a decade. Such thrust is to be achieved by modernization of agriculture, development of tourism, improvement of law and order and decongestion of traffic.

Special priority was also given to the improvement of infrastructure in Mindanao, which received only 23.6 percent of the DPWH budget in 2000.

Nationwide projects to kick-off on PGMA birthday tomorrow

A unique present for the President

Government agencies and non-governmental organizations will celebrate President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's birthday on Monday April 5, 2004, with simultaneous kick-off key pilot activities showcasing the President's achievements in pursuing development and the welfare of the people.

The series of activities will serve as their gift for the Chief Executive.

The day-long celebrations start with a holy mass for the President at the San Agustin Church in her birthplace in Lubao, Pampanga. The President will attend the mass together with some 5,000 farmers and local officials of Lubao, to be followed by a breakfast salu-salo at the church patio.

Shortly after the breakfast the Friends of PGMA and Cabinet ladies together with Gawad Kalinga (GK) movement, the City government of Angeles and Ms. Luli Arroyo will launch the construction of "Gloria Village"—a housing project for the benefit of indigent families in Angeles City.

For its part, the Department of Environment and Natural Resources (DENR) will mount a concerted nationwide tree planting activity to be led by DENR Secretary Elisea Gozum, also in Lubao. DENR will be distributing seedlings in its regional offices. The seedlings most of which are fruit-bearing trees and easy to grow vegetables shrubs, will be planted in designated parks, nurseries, orchards and gardens for the project. Patents will also be distributed per region.

The Department of Health (DOH) will also kick-off its national blood-letting program "Dugtong Buhay, Handog sa Kaarawan ni President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo." The program will involve blood donation missions around key hospitals in NCR, CARAGA and Regions IV, VI, VII and XI. DOH will also be honoring 2,401 barangay health workers who have been instrumental in the President's call for assuring the immediate delivery of basic health services via the barangay health centers.

Also, the Department of Agriculture will be conducting testimonial plugs on the adoption of "Gloria Rice" under the hybrid commercialization program to be presented at the DA lobby. The department will also hold the GMA rice harvesting festival in Don Simeon and San Antonio, Nueva Ecija. Farmers will also be given discount cards as part of the on-going "Feed Assistance Program."

GMA joins El Shaddai in Palm Sunday mass, prays for peaceful, orderly and credible elections

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has called on members of the influential religious group Yahweh El Shaddai to pray for peaceful, orderly and credible elections on May 10 and for all the candidates to avoid black propaganda and character assassinations in the campaign.

The President joined some 1.5 million members of Bro. Mike Velarde's El Shaddai in celebrating a midnight Palm Sunday mass at the AMVEL Business Park in Barangay San Dionisio, Parañaque City.

In her short message, the Chief Executive asked for intercessory prayers of the El Shaddai members during Holy Week so that the candidates would uplift their campaign and focus on issues.

"During this season of Lent, I am urging you my brothers and sisters in Yahweh El Shaddai to pray for peaceful, orderly and credible elections and also pray for uplift of the kind of campaigning by others, some of whom are using black propaganda and character assassinations instead of laying their platforms of government," she said.

The President said that Saturday night was her 13th attendance in the celebration of Palm Sunday Mass with the El Shaddai, five of them during election years in 1992, 1995, 1998, 2001 and 2004.

She stressed that it is important, like a divine plan, to have a time-off from the campaign so that every candidate can have a time of silence for discernment and prayer for the coming polls.

“May you have a prayerful Holy Week and a very happy Easter this coming Sunday,” the President told fellow El Shaddai members.

The Mass was officiated by Parañaque Bishop Jessie Mercado, who was assisted by Manila Auxiliary Bishop Socrates Villegas and Rev. Fr. Randel Sanchez.

In his homily, Bishop Villegas stressed to the El Shaddai faithful the importance of PSST (Pray, Silence, Say No, and Think) before choosing the next leaders of the country in the May 10 polls.

“Holy week is not only for feelings, Holy Week is the time to discern, to renew our faith. Next month there will be an election, and as we vote for the next leaders of government, always be reminded of PSST,” Villegas said.

President Arroyo was received warmly by Bro. Mike and wife, Sister Belen Velarde, upon her arrival to attend the two-hour Mass.

Koalisyon ng Katapatan at Karanasan sa Kinabukasan (K-4) senatorial bets Miriam Defensor-Santiago, Ramon Revilla, Jr., Manuel Roxas III, Robert Jaworski, John Osmena, Lito Lapid, Robert Barbers, Parouk Hussin and Orlando Mercado also attended the El Shaddai midnight mass.

Other government officials present were House Speaker Jose de Venecia, Jr., who was accompanied by his wife, Gina, and Tourism Secretary Roberto Pagdanganan.

Palace: GMA is taking measures to avert possible power crisis

Malacañang assured the public today President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has been taking measures to avert a possible power shortage in the near future.

“The President is doing everything to see to it that the Electric Power Industry Reform Act (EPIRA) is implemented,” Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said this morning in a radio interview.

EPIRA calls for the privatization of generation and transmission sub-sectors to compete the restructuring of the country’s power industry.

The President recognizes the need to focus attention on the energy sector because a gauge in the progress of the country is a vibrant energy sector and if we cannot give it the proper and necessary attention, the progress of our country may be delayed, Bunye said.

In a television interview last week, the President said “we have to privatize our generation cost now and we also have to bring in new power plants” as she emphasized the power industry is next in the reform agenda of the government.

She has ordered Energy Secretary Vince Perez to privatize our generation cost not sequentially but to prepare the bidding documents for all and to sell the moment anybody is willing to buy.

The response from the energy sector has been favorable with different multinational groups and power companies showing keen interest in acquiring generation assets of the National Power Corporation (NAPOCOR), according to Finance Secretary Juanita Amatong who also chairs the Private Sector Assets and Liabilities Management Corporation (PSALM).

Amatong said then the Napocor board had already approved the sale of some of its plants – the 22-megawatt Loboc, two-megawatt Barit, 0.4-megawatt Cauayan, 3.5-megawatt Talomo and 1.55-megawatt Agusan hydroelectric plants

The President said she has been inaugurating a number of power plants lately, citing off the cuff those in Bantayan Island in Cebu, Meran in Iloilo, and two others in Batangas City.

The President also ruled out Saturday any increase in power rates even after the May 10 elections.

Perez had been misquoted in a news report that the cap of 40 centavos per kilowatt hour on the purchased power cost adjustment would be lifted 50 days from then.

Only Malacañang has the power to lift the cap, according to the Energy Regulatory Commission. The President imposed the cap two years ago and has no plan to change it.

ROCO leaders rejoin GMA camp

The core group behind the Reform Oriented Citizens Organization (ROCO) has switched back its support to President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo to prevent what it called “ominous development in FPJ’s candidacy.”

ROCO, composed mostly of members of the 9th and 10th Congress and former Constitutional Convention (ConCon) delegates, used to provide the engine for the campaign machinery of Alyansa ng Pag-asa presidential candidate Raul Roco.

The erstwhile ROCO political leaders said that national interest and leadership experience have influenced their decision to shift back their support for President Macapagal-Arroyo’s bid for a full six-year term in the May 10 elections.

“We regret abandoning Senator Roco with all his idealism and crusade for good governance, but we certainly could not hang on to a leadership campaign while the prospect for a great disaster over the leadership issue looms in the horizon,” they said.

On Friday, they called on President Macapagal-Arroyo at Malacañang to pledge their support for her in the coming polls. Their group included former Laguna Congressman Rodolfo Tingzon, former Pangasinan 4th District Congressman Jose Bengzon, former Lakas National Spokesman and Ifugao Governor Gualberto Lumauig, former Congresswomen Luz Bakunawa of Masbate and Venice Agara of Bohol and former ConCon delegate Emil Ong.

Earlier, former Congressman Jerry Paras of Negros Occidental, for Governor Rodolfo Valencia of Mindoro Oriental, and Caloocan 1st District Congressman Edgardo Erice had rejoined the President’s camp.

Former Rep. Herminio Aquino, now Pag-asa vice presidential bet, was chairman of ROCO. Lumauig replaced Aquino as ROCO chairman.

More ROCO leaders, including former congressmen, governors and mayors, are expected to jump to the GMA bandwagon.

GMA taps cooperatives to expand gov’t’s micro-finance program

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today tapped the expertise and resources of private cooperatives to speed up the delivery of the government’s micro-financing program for the marginalized sectors of society, especially unemployed women.

The President specifically called on the Project 4 Development Cooperative in Quezon City to help implement the government’s micro-financing program by scouting around for potential beneficiaries.

“I know that the Project 4 Development Cooperative has a track record for lending (small livelihood loans). Look for more women in Quezon City or other places to offer these loans,” the Chief Executive said keynote speech at the 31st general assembly of the cooperative.

Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo also said the Project 4 cooperative could be a conduit of the government’s National Livelihood Support Fund (NLSF).

She revealed that the government’s soft loan financing for women offers loans ranging from P2,000 to P100,000 for small and medium enterprises.

President Macapagal-Arroyo, who is seeking a full six-year term in the May 10 elections, pointed out that the NLSF has been instrumental in providing micro-financing to one million jobless women who now have their own sources of income.

“That is part of my platform, to provide one million jobs a year over the next six years,” she added.

“That is why this election is not about me. This election is about you. How you could gain more power. It is only proper that you are further empowered to provide employment not only for residents of Quezon City, but other areas as well,” the President stressed.

Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo cited the Project 4 cooperative for efficient management of its finances, with assets now reaching P200 million.

Joining the President in the Project 4 event were senatorial candidates of the ruling Koalisyon ng Katapatan at Karanasan para sa Kinabukasan (K-4) Miriam Defensor-Santiago, Parouk Hussin, Orlando Mercado and Rodolfo Biazon.

The Good News: FedEx to remain in RP and invest $450 million in business expansion

Federal Express Corporation (FedEx) will remain in the Philippines after all as it junked its plan to relocate to China.

Moreover, it will invest $450 million to expand and move operations of its Asia-Pacific hub from Subic to Clark to continue providing revenue to the government and employment to Filipinos.

FedEx signified plans of moving to China in August last year but the move was averted, thanks to President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo declaring open skies in cargo in SBIA and DMIA, thus resolving differences between Philippine and American transport officials.

Over this clearing action by the President, FedEx also prefers doing business with the Philippine government and the many advantages of operating in the country, according to Clark International Airport Corp. president Adelberto Yap.

FedEx prefers the country's cheap and skilled labor, the work culture of Filipinos who can readily adapt to Americans and has no problems with communicating here.

Also, Clark already has a two-runway capacity at the Diosdado Macapagal International Airport which has yet to be built in China.

Yap said he will sign a 25-year lease agreement with FedEx on April 11 in Memphis.

FedEx signed a letter of intent with the Guangzhou Airport Authority in August last year as it considered leaving Subic and transferring there because Philippine transport officials did not grant the demand of their US counterparts in July last year for seventh freedom operations in the country.

Seventh freedom rights allow a carrier to fly to other destinations from a particular hub without first passing its home base, which Philippine transport officials deemed a violation of the Constitution and the RP-US air transport agreement.

This led FedEx to sign a letter of intent with the Guangzhou Airport Authority in August last year to signify its plan to move to China.

But President Macapagal-Arroyo resolved the differences, issuing Executive Order 253 in December last year, declaring open skies in cargo in SBIA and DMIA

Subic Bay became the Asia-Pacific hub of FedEx in 1995, connecting 19 key Asian cities. The hub enables overnight delivery to the US West Coast from Penang, Singapore, Kuala Lumpur, Manila and East Timor.

Construction of FedEx's new hub at Clark should start next year for a smooth transition from Subic from which it will continue operating for two more years. The contract between the Subic Bay Metropolitan Authority extends up to 2007.

FedEx decided to leave Subic because it can no longer expand there, it being primarily for port terminals.

Pampangeños' birthday wish for GMA: Victory in May 10 polls

LUBAO, Pampanga – Victory in the May 10 presidential elections.

That is the birthday wish of thousands of her kinsfolk for President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, who returned today to her hometown for the celebration of her 57th natal day.

President Macapagal-Arroyo's birthday celebration began with a mass at the St. Augustine Church here, with members of her family in attendance.

From Malacañang Palace in Manila, the President reached the church in time for the morning mass, which she traditionally attends every year she celebrates her birthday.

Thousands of people gathered at the church area, many of whom could no longer be accommodated inside and had to stand in front of the gate just to catch a glimpse of the President.

Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo's family, relatives, friends and supporters all have one common wish on the occasion of her birthday – victory in the presidential elections so that she could see the fulfillment of her government programs for the country's progress and the welfare of the people.

Statement of the President on her Holy Week Message

There is no more I can ask for on this day than for peace and solidarity among our people.

Let us celebrate the Holy Week in the tone of sacrifice, forgiveness and concern for one another.

Let us make it a time to contemplate the blessings that have come our way from the Almighty: the wholeness of our families, the peace of our communities and the unity of the Filipino despite the trials of a harsh and uncertain world.

Let us be thankful to God for the great gifts bestowed upon us.

Statement of the President on Anti-Terrorism

The Muslim faith is for peace and we respect Islam as a way of peace.

It is unfortunate that Islamic principles and beliefs are being twisted and exploited to justify sinister acts because we know that our Muslim brethren condemn terrorism as much as we Christians do.

But the problems besetting the Islamic faith in regard to terrorism are not only for Muslims to address, but also for all of us since what is at stake here is the security of the whole citizenry and the whole nation.

There is no hate campaign or witch hunt directed against Muslims.

They too play a vital role in nation-building and their concerns are being looked at and properly addressed.

Statement of the President on Spratly Islands

The Philippine government adheres to the peaceful, civilized and collective settlement of disputes among country-claimants on the Spratly Islands.

All our policies and actions have consistently been oriented toward this direction.

We expect all country-claimants to observe and respect the principle of non-occupation until such time that the matter is settled in the proper international forum.

GRP, NDF panels confident of overcoming obstacles to peace negotiations

The government of the Republic of the Philippines (GRP) and the National Democratic Front (NDF), political arm of the Communist Party of the Philippines (CPP), are confident they can overcome any obstacle that may hinder progress of their peace talks.

GRP Chief Negotiator Silvestre H. Bello III made this point in a formal statement read at the Malacañang press briefing this afternoon. Bello has just returned from another round of peace talks in Oslo, Norway, on March 30-April 3.

Bello assured the people that the “partners in these peace efforts ... pursue the track of the peace negotiations towards the attainment of a just and lasting peace in our country.”

According to Bello, the GRP and NDF peace panels have agreed on three important goodwill and confidence-building measures. These are:

- The GRP shall work for the freedom of 32 prisoners and detainees, including nine covered by a presidential release order in 2001, within 30 days starting today (April 5). The government has released 98 alleged political offenders out of a total of 121 individuals whose names were in the NDF list submitted to the GRP in 2001.
- The GRP shall take steps to ensure the indemnification of the victims of human rights violations under the Marcos martial law regime. President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has already earmarked P8 billion from the Marcos family's Swiss bank accounts returned to the government.
- Both GRP and NDF reaffirmed commitment to comply with their obligations under the Comprehensive Agreement on Respect for Human Rights and International Humanitarian Law (CARHRIHL). Bello said that this aims at ensuring the protection of rights of individuals to freedom of thought and expression, freedom of conscience, political and religious beliefs, freedom of movement and travel, as well as the rights to free speech, press or assembly.

“The reaffirmation was made by the panels in light of complaints received by either side regarding reported attacks on human rights workers, leaders and supporters of legal organizations, as well as reported attacks on communities, civilians and properties,” Bello said.

The next round of talks will be held from April 26 to 29 at a venue mutually agreed upon by both parties, in consultation with the third party facilitator, the royal government of Norway.

The Second Oslo Joint Statement, issued after the March 30-April 3 peace talks, noted that both panels initialed the guidelines for the conduct of work on social and economic reforms.

They also completed negotiations on the introductory sections, including the Preamble and the Declaration of Principles, of the draft Comprehensive Agreement on Social and Economic Reforms, it said.

According to the Oslo Joint Statement, the Joint Monitoring Committee (JMC) initialed, at its first formal meeting, the rules of procedure that will guide the members and observers of the JMC in carrying out their mandated duties.

The Reciprocal Working Committee on Social and Economic Reforms and the JMC have scheduled meetings in May and June 2004.

No hate campaign or witch hunt against Muslims – GMA assures nation

There is no hate campaign or witch hunt directed against Muslims, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo emphasized today as she deplored anew efforts to taint the government campaign against terrorism.

“The Muslim faith is for peace and we respect Islam as a way of peace. It is unfortunate that Islamic principles and beliefs are being twisted and exploited to justify sinister acts because we know our Muslim brethren condemn terrorism as much as we Christians do,” the President said in an official statement.

The problems besetting the Islamic faith in regard to terrorism are not only for Muslims to address, but also for all of us since what is at stake here is the security of the whole citizenry and the whole nation, the President furthered said.

“They too play a vital role in nation-building and their concerns are being looked at and properly addressed,” the President said.

Last week, the President said terrorism is a crime against all humanity and there are no political or religious undertones to the anti-terror campaign.

The legitimacy of the arrests can be fully addressed in court, she said, as she lauded the military and the police for their diligence and hard work.

Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said there is “no politics or ethno-religious discrimination” in the government’s anti-terrorism drive that has rounded up a number of suspected members of the Abu Sayyaf terror group and seized a cache of explosives, averting what could have been a Madrid-type bombing attacks in Metro Manila.

“The AFP and the PNP have always conducted themselves professionally and without bias in targeting terrorist cells,” Bunye added.

What is important here, Bunye said, is that our armed forces and police, with cooperation from the citizens, are doing their job to fight the threat of terrorism.

He said that criticisms against the military and the police will not deter the authorities from performing their mission.

Bunye also assured the families of the Abu Sayyaf members who have been arrested that their rights will be protected and all procedures on due process will be observed.

GMA-De Castro team attend El Shaddai Palm Sunday mass

Front-running vice presidential candidate Senator Noli “Kabayan” de Castro, together with President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, joined some 1.5 million Yahweh El Shaddai followers in the celebration of the midnight Palm Sunday mass that ushered in the Holy Week.

President Macapagal-Arroyo and Senator de Castro were seated beside El Shaddai spiritual leader Brother Mike Velarde and his wife, Sister Belen, during the mass at the AMVEL Business Park in Barangay San Dionisio, Parañaque City.

The President called on her fellow El Shaddai supporters to pray for peaceful, orderly and credible elections on May 10 and for a high level of campaign that focuses on platform of governance instead of mudslinging, black propaganda and character assassination.

De Castro leads his rivals for the vice presidency by a wide margin in the latest survey conducted by the Social Weather Stations for Manila Standard.

Koalisyon ng Katapatan at Karanasan sa Kinabukasan (K-4) senatorial bets Miriam Defensor-Santiago, Ramon Revilla Jr., Manuel Roxas III, Robert Jaworski, John Osmeña, Lito Lapid, Robert Barbers, Parouk Hussin and Orlando Mercado also attended the El Shaddai mass.

Other government officials present at the mass were House Speaker Jose de Venecia, Jr., and his wife, Gina, and Tourism Secretary Roberto Pagdanganan.

GMA’s birthday wish: Peace, prosperity and unity for the Filipino people

LUBAO, Pampanga – Even on the occasion of her 57th birthday today, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has nothing in mind but the welfare of the nation, wishing for peace, prosperity and unity for the Filipino people.

In remarks after the birthday mass celebrated in her honor at the St. Augustine Church here, the President, a devout Catholic, said that this week being “Semana Santa, “should be celebrated with sacrifice, forgiveness and giving support to each other.”

“Ito ang panahon para magnilay-nilay sa mga biyaya sa atin ng Maykapal, ang kabuuan ng ating pamilya, ang kapayapaan sa ating pamayanan at ang pagkakaisa ng ating lakas at sa hindi katiyakan sa mundo (This is the time to thank God for the blessings, solidarity of the family and peace in the community as well as unity in the face of uncertainties),” she said.

After thanking the Lord Almighty for the gifts that she received on her natal day, the President expressed her gratitude to all her friends and all Filipinos all over the country who greeted her.

Former Presidents Fidel V. Ramos and Corazon C. Aquino greeted the President personally by attending the birthday mass. Also present were House Speaker Jose de Venecia, Jr., members of the Cabinet, members of the First Family composed of First Gentleman Jose Miguel Arroyo, daughter Lulli and sons Mikey and Dato, as well as the members of the K-4 team, namely vice presidential candidate Senator Noli “Kabayan” de Castro, Sen. Rodolfo Biazon, former Sen. Miriam Defensor-Santiago, Richard Gordon, Orly Mercado and Parouk Hussin.

Before the start of the mass, former President Ramos said that his birthday wish for the President is for her and the whole K-4 team to win in the coming elections.

Former President Aquino, on the other hand, said she wished the President all the best, good health and success. “I hope that she will receive all the blessings she is asking for,” Cory said.

Former Senator Santiago, who shook hands with President Fidel V. Ramos before the arrival of Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo, recounted her conversation with the former President. She said Ramos told her that “I am campaigning for you.”

“So I said, I believe you,” Santiago said, emphasizing that this being the Holy Week, she should be filled with forgiveness and tolerance.

The two were among the protagonists in the 1992 presidential elections where Ramos won and Santiago lost.

According to daughter Luli, the President will spend her time resting in Malacañang after the birthday mass here, adding that the whole Arroyo family will be gathered at the Palace for an intimate dinner.

“We will continue to campaign for the President here,” Luli said, after the President left, expressing her fervent hope that her Mommy will be able to continue her programs and realize her dream of a progressive Philippines.

Later, Luli represented the President in the inauguration of “Gloria Village,” a housing project for indigent families in Cauyan, Angeles City. The village was built by the Friends of PGMA and Cabinet ladies in cooperation with the Gawad Kalinga and the city government of Angeles City as a birthday gift for the President.

Other activities during the President’s birthday were as follows:

- Simultaneous tree planting activities nationwide, with Environment and Natural Resources Secretary Elisea Gozun leading a tree-planting activity in Lubao, Pampanga;
- Launching of the unified ticketing system for the LRT and the MRT from Cubao, Quezon City to Legarda in Manila;
- Conducting a blood donation activity nationwide. A recognition ceremony for 2,401 barangay health workers was led by Health Secretary Manuel Dayrit also in Lubao, Pampanga;
- Groundbreaking of the Manila North Rail project in Caloocan City, with Transportation and Communication Secretary Leandro Mendoza and Presidential Adviser for Priority and ODA Projects Secretary Marita Jimenez as guests of honor;
- Inauguration of a Drug Rehabilitation Center in barangay Capipisa, Tanza, Cavite. The center was once a big shabu laboratory which was raided by police authorities; and
- Presentation of an audio-visual production showing the testimonies of farmers who have increased their yields through the use of “Gloria Rice,” hybrid variety and thanking the President for her efforts in improving their lot. The presentation was produced by the Department of Agriculture.

OPS officials deny mock polls story

Officials of three government information agencies denied today having conducted mock elections among their officers and personnel last March 30-31 saying the published reports “are baseless, to say the least.”

Philippine News Agency (PNA) Executive Editor Iluminado Varela, Philippine Broadcasting System (PBS) Director Rafael Dante Cruz and National Broadcasting Network (NBN) Channel 4 General Manager Jose Isabelo all denied there was such a poll, which was allegedly topped by Senator Panfilo Lacson.

“We are disappointed that such a story, which was built around statements like ‘employees and officials who requested anonymity, are given credence at all by the reporter,’” Varela said referring to Bulletin Reporter Roy Sinfuego.

In his letter to Bulletin Editor in Chief Cris Icban, Varela said it is unfair to mention PNA without providing details substantiating the allegation.

“It is on record that in its 30 years of service to the nation, PNA has never been involved in mock elections or has been the subject of election surveys,” he said.

Another story which came out in Malaya had no byline, but mentioned that officials of the three government agencies under the Office of the Press Secretary “were taken aback by the results of the mock poll.”

It also stated that officials “even made an attempt to hide the results of the mock elections to the media for fear that they could reach the President.”

“The story is baseless,” said the three officials. “No mock election or similar survey had been conducted on that date or at any other time.”

GMA calls on Pangasinenses to rally behind K-4

BAYAMBANG, Pangasinan – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo asked the people of this town Sunday night to help change the life of the ordinary Pangasinense for the better now that their leaders are together with her in Koalisyon ng Katapatan at Karanasan Para sa Kinabukasan (K4).

During the Balikbayan Grand Ball and Coronation Night of “Pista’y Baley 2004” in honor of the town’s patron saint Senor San Vicente Ferrer, the President reminded Pangasinenses that Gov. Victor Agbayani, Vice Governor Oscar Lambino, and the board members and Bayambang Mayor Leocadio de Vera are running under her coalition, K-4.

She said that they are all behind her platform of creating one million jobs each year, emphasizing that her administration produced a million jobs each year since taking over in 2001 compared to the half million in former President Estrada’s time.

The President recalled she acquired funding for the San Roque Irrigation Project in the province during her last visit to Japan.

The President vowed to deliver not only irrigation project, but also clean water to all barangays in the country.

The President crowned Merinessa Fernandez Junio Miss Bayambang 2004 with the assistance of Mayor de Vera before addressing the huge crowd at the Bayambang Park Auditorium.

Pangasinan officials headed by Gov. Agbayani surprised the President with a prayer, wishing her success in the May polls on the eve of her birthday, and presented her with a cake. The President gamely blew out all the candles.

After the occasion, the President motored to Clark Air Base where she spent the night.

The President arrived at 8:00 a.m. Monday at the St. Augustine Church in Lubao, Pampanga for her birthday mass officiated by Archbishop Paciano Aniceto.

FG inaugurates the Macapagal Rehab Center in Cavite

TANZA, Cavite – What used to be a clandestine drug laboratory producing tons of shabu worth millions of pesos is now a rehabilitation center named after former First Lady Doña Eva Macaraeg-Macapagal.

No less than the First Gentleman Jose Miguel Arroyo led the inauguration of the rehabilitation center which, he said, is President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo’s gift to the Filipino people on the occasion of her 57th birthday.

The First Gentleman flew here from Lubao Pampanga, where he and the President attended mass at San Agustin Church on the occasion of the President’s 57th birthday.

Present during the inaugural ceremony were Anti-Illegal Drugs Special Operations (AID-SOT) Task Force Chief and PNP Deputy Director General Edgar Aglipay and Center for Ultimate Rehabilitation of Drug Dependent (CUREDD) Director Bonaparte Francisco.

The President approved Aglipay's recommendation for the conversion of the 3000-sq/m former shabu laboratory into a drug rehabilitation center to decongest the PNP-administered drug rehabilitation facility inside Camp Bagong Diwa in Bicutan, Taguig.

This is the first time a former shabu laboratory has been converted into rehabilitation and treatment center for the victims of drug abuse.

The First Gentleman stressed that Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo is the first president to do so.

He likewise cited the anti-illegal drug team of the president and their dedication.

According to Francisco, the Doña Eva Macapagal Rehabilitation Center would serve as a halfway house for drug patients undergoing rehabilitation in Camp Bagong Diwa.

He said from Camp Bagong Diwa, drug patients would be transferred to the facility here one to two months before the release and formal integration to the society.

Already, he said, the Center has 100 drug patients.

Aglipay said the newly-opened facility will initially accommodate at least 250 drug dependents coming from Southern Tagalog provinces, with preference to those coming from Cavite, Rizal, Batangas, and Quezon.

On July 25, 2003, the shabu lab was raided by a team led by Aglipay and confiscated some 113 kilos of shabu, 700 kilos of ephedrine, a yacht, two motor boats, two jet skis, a van, and assorted shabu-making equipment.

The seacrafts were believed to have been used in transporting precursors and finished shabu product through the sea to facilitate the immediate transportation.

The raid was done a day after authorities arrested Li Ya Lan, alias Jackson Dy, a Chinese national and believed to be the leader of the Jackson Dy group that was nabbed in Parañaque City.

To date, the AID-SOTF has raided and dismantled a total of 22 laboratories and warehouses with a total value of P22 billion.

Dy is among the 31 top drug traffickers and shabu manufacturers arrested by the task force.

For his part, Tanza Mayor Raymundo del Rosario thanked the President for the project, noting it is the people of Cavite who will benefit most from the rehabilitation center.

Thousands of farmers greet GMA on her birthday

LUBAO, Pampanga—Agriculture Secretary Luis "Cito" Lorenzo thanked more than one thousand farmers from Central Luzon who gathered here to show their support for President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo on her birthday.

Lorenzo said the farmers came early and were excited about meeting the President who introduced the commercialization of hybrid rice, also known as "Gloria Rice," which has led to an increase in their income.

“They wanted to show their appreciation and affection to the President who has been a consistent advocate of agricultural modernization and rice-sufficiency,” Lorenzo added.

A group of hybrid rice farmers belonging to areas outside Central Luzon also prepared a video tape containing their greetings and birthday wishes for the President in different dialects, which was presented by the Department of Agriculture to thousands of the President’s supporters, including K-4 senatorial candidates.

In the said videotape, Antonio Villanueva, a hybrid rice champion farmer of Ilocos Sur, led other farmers from Laguna, Pampanga, Cavite, Pangasinan and other parts of the country in wishing the President a happy birthday.

According to Villanueva, farmers like him who have shifted to planting “Gloria Rice,” have experienced a higher yield, and better income. He said he was able to harvest as much as 10.7 metric tons per hectare using the hybrid rice seeds endorsed by the Department of Agriculture.

Villanueva’s sentiments were echoed by other hybrid farmers who joined a visit to a technology farm in Victoria, Laguna last Saturday. Farmer Jaime Morados of Cavite said he has been able to help his married children with their family’s needs because of “Gloria Rice.”

Among the farmers who sent their greetings were Rudy Placino of Victoria, Laguna, Roberto Julao of Guagua, Pampanga, Terry Balatibat of Pila, Laguna, and Luciano Galicia. There were also birthday messages from “Gloria Rice” farmers from as far as Kalinga-Apayao, Bohol and Davao City.

Lorenzo personally conveyed to the President the warmest wishes of the hybrid rice farmers. “She was deeply touched by the personal stories of these farmers on how Gloria Rice improved their lives,” Lorenzo added.

According to the DA Secretary, the country will likely produce more grains between January and March this year, with palay seen to be 9 percent higher and corn up by 12.8 percent, from their respective levels a year ago.

Gov’t open to limited ceasefire with rebels on Holy Week, election period

Malacañang today said that the government will consider a limited ceasefire with the communist rebels during the Holy Week and in next month’s elections.

Chief Government Peace Negotiator Silvestre H. Bello III said at the press briefing in Malacañang, that the ceasefire is an important matter that the negotiating panels of the government and the National Democratic Front should discuss.

“There is a possibility of ceasefire for the Holy Week, maybe from Thursday up to Easter Sunday but these things have to be discussed by both panels,” Bello said.

He said there is also a possibility of an election ceasefire.

Bello, however, said that ceasefires during the Holy Week and the elections should be only for a limited period.

He said that the declaration of a ceasefire will depend on the recommendation of the Armed Forces of the Philippines.

“If they will consult us, definitely we will give our recommendation,” Bello said.

A clear platform can make or break a candidate in next month’s polls – GMA

A clear platform on how each candidate would solve the ills now plaguing the country should be the main issue in next month's presidential polls.

This, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo believes, is what will make or break each of the candidates gunning for the highest post in the land.

In a television interview over the Iglesia ni Kristo-owned Cable Channel Net 25, the President told 'Con Todos Recados' hosts Ellaine Fuentes and Totoy Talastas that in her consultations with the people all over the country, she found out that what they really want to know is the platform of each of the presidential candidates.

"Gusto nilang malaman ang balak ng ibat ibang kandidato tungkol sa pagbabago ng kanilang buhay lalo na sa mga bagay ng ekonomiya, trabaho, presyo, hanapbuhay... hindi yung mga generalities kundi yung specifics. Yun ang kanilang pinagbabatayan (They want to know how each of the candidates can change their lives particularly on issues affecting the economy, employment, prices, jobs ... not generalities but specifics. That would be the basis of their decision)," she said.

The President deplored that the campaign had degenerated into character assassination and black propaganda instead of purely tackling issues.

"Okay lang po kung isyu, puwede nating pag-usapan, puwede nating linawin. Ang problema kapag character assassination at black propaganda, yan ang problema (It's okay if it's issues, they can be talked about, they can be cleared. The problem is if it's character assassination or black propaganda)," she clarified.

The President noted that like her father, the late President Diosdado Macapagal, she believes that the basic issue now confronting the country is poverty.

In her four-point agenda against poverty, the President revealed that creating jobs is of paramount importance that is why she said the government is focused on creating an environment conducive to investors.

In the countryside, focus is on agriculture and land reform, which, according to her, was her father's legacy during his presidency.

Direct services to the poor has also been taken care of, she said, like her water for the waterless program, housing and Medicare benefits.

The fourth agenda in her program, she said, is good governance.

On the issue that she has the undue advantage of using government resources for her campaign, the President said she is not the first President nor the first politician running as an incumbent.

The Chief Executive cited the case of former President Marcos who was even charged but subsequently cleared by the courts.

"Hindi mapaghihiwalay yon at rule na yon in favor of Marcos noong panahon niya. Marami pa pong jurisprudence tungkol sa mga incumbent na tumatakbo (It cannot be separated and the courts have ruled in favor of Marcos during his time. Besides, we have many jurisprudence about incumbents running for office)," the President said.

GMA stresses value of education, morality and faith in God in address to high school graduates

CONCEPCION, Tarlac – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo counseled graduates of a public high school in this town today to keep in mind that education, morality and faith in God are the keys that open opportunities to a better life.

Speaking before 1,042 graduates of the Benigno S. Aquino National High School in Barangay San Nicolas, Concepcion, the President recalled the struggles to obtain good education by her father, the late President Diosdado Macapagal, to stress the value of education in improving one's life.

But, Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo said, "Hindi lang edukasyon ang mahalaga. Mahalaga rin ang mabuting moralidad at pananampalataya sa Diyos. (It's not only education that is valuable. It is also important to have moral values and faith in God)."

The President arrived in Concepcion by helicopter at 7:45 A.M. She was accompanied on the presidential chopper by Speaker Jose de Venecia, Jr., Press Secretary Milton Alingod, and Lupita A. Kashiwahara.

Tarlac Governor Jose Yap, Concepcion Mayor Benjie Lacson, and Congressmen Jesli Lapus and Benigno Aquino III, School Division Superintendent Victoria Aguas, high school officials, students and parents welcomed the President after alighting from the chopper on the campus.

In her speech, the President recalled how her father, born to a poor family, walked to school everyday, borrowed books from classmates, and nearly failed to attend the commencement exercises for lack of shoes.

But, according to the President, her father studied hard and graduated valedictorian of his high school class. With financial help from a rich townmate, he graduated from the UST College of Law and topped the bar examinations, she said.

Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo said that her father eventually became a congressman, senator, vice president and president. One of the significant achievements of his presidency was the proclamation of a land reform program that freed farmers from the bondage of unjust tenancy nationwide.

"Kung ang Tatay ko ay hindi nag-aral na mabuti, hindi marahil namin narating ang tugatog ng tagumpay(If my father did not study hard, we would have not reached the pinnacle of success)," the President said.

Like her father, the President said that she also studied hard and absorbed in school as much knowledge as she could. She graduated at the top of her class from elementary to high school and college. She became an economist and joined the government service as official of the Department of Trade and Industry under former President Corazon Aquino.

President Macapagal-Arroyo handed diplomas to the graduates led by Paul Kenneth Miclat as class valedictorian.

Statement of the President: Re Muslim Christian solidarity

I am glad in the growing solidarity of Muslims and Christians behind our campaign against terrorism.

Everyone can be assured that this campaign will continue to be carried out without any ethnic or religious bias, and with only the enforcement of impartial justice in mind.

Every Filipino must guard against the exploitation of his or her faith to justify terrorism.

This is our common enemy and our fight must not be divided.

Statement of the President: Re Faith in the Filipino voter

Let us shake off this doomsday syndrome about the forthcoming elections.

It demeans our people to say that a close race is a recipe for post election chaos.

We must have greater faith in the Filipino and our strong and courageous adherence to democracy.

What is more important is to make every vote count, and to safeguard the democratic process.

For every election in our history, the will of the people and the strength of our institutions have upheld clean, honest and orderly polls.

This will happen in May 10 and in every future election in our country, and I am confident that the results will be accepted and our political stability will remain unsullied.

Statement of Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye: Re MILF

We do not negotiate with terrorists and as far as the government is concerned, any faction of the MILF harboring terrorists is beyond the ambit of the peace process.

All salient agreements with the MILF explicitly exclude terrorists from the process.

We are strictly enforcing this caveat.

Statement of Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye: Re Presidential debate

This election is about issues and how each candidate will bring about specific changes to improve the lives of the average Filipino.

President Gloria has a clear vision and a very specific platform.

She believes the people deserve to hear about the specifics of her program and debates are central to bringing these specifics to the people so that they can judge for themselves the power of each candidate's agenda.

In her case, President Gloria wants to debate her agenda to bring clean water to every barangay, cut the price of medicines in half, extend more loans for the self employed, create 6 million new jobs and extend electricity to every barangay in the nation.

President Gloria is disappointed that her main challenger does not want to attend the PPCRV-COMELEC debate.

A debate without him is meaningless.

In the meantime, she will be promoting her specific agenda of change to the people.

GMA's 'landmark' North Rail project will ease travel & promote trade

Malacañang today welcomed the North Rail project whose construction will be funded by a $400 million loan to be provided by the People's Republic of China.

In a radio interview this morning, Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said the North Rail project is one of the "landmark projects" of the Macapagal-Arroyo administration.

"Actually, mayroong North Rail project tayo, mayroon ding South Rail. Itong North Rail ay aabot hanggang La Union. Imu-modernize talaga itong ating rail system na matagal nating napabayaan (Actually, we have a North Rail project. We also have a South Rail project. The North Rail will reach up to La Union. Our rail system, which has long been neglected, will be modernized)," he said.

Bunye said that modernization of the rail system would not only ease travel to different regions of the country, but also speed up the movement of goods and, thus, promote trade.

The Presidential Spokesperson also expressed the appreciation of the Macapagal-Arroyo administration to the Chinese government's extension of a US$400 million loan for the project.

Funding for the North Rail project has been secured by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo during her working state visits to China.

Speaker Jose de Venecia, Jr. has said that the project would constitute a "lasting legacy" of President Macapagal-Arroyo to the Filipino people, because it would boost the Philippine economy and help promote greater unity and solidarity among the Filipino people.

China's $400 million loan will be concessionary, with three percent interest and a five-year grace period.

The North Rail project will be implemented jointly by the Philippine National Railways (PNR), Bases Conversion Development Authority (BCDA) and its subsidiary, the North Luzon Railways Corp., Department of Transportation and Communication (DoTC), and the National Machinery and Equipment Corp. owned by the Chinese government.

Spirit of Capas is how to achieve peace and prosperity, says GMA

CAPAS, Tarlac—President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said that in remembering the sacrifices of those who perished in the infamous Death March some 60 years ago, the Filipino people must strive to work for peace not only in society but also in their hearts.

In her remarks at the Capas National Shrine here, the President said that in commemorating Bataan Day or Araw ng Kagitingan, which also falls on Good Friday, the people should think of ways on how to achieve peace and prosperity, on how to make sacrifices and on how to care and serve one's fellow men.

"Ito ang diwa ng Capas, ito ang diwa ng Bataan Death March. Ito ang diwa ng Semana Santa. Ito ang pangangailangan ng ating bansa sa mga panahong ito (This is the spirit of Capas. This is the spirit of Bataan Death March. This is the spirit of the Lenten Season)," the President said.

The President recalled the heroism and the sacrifices of more than 50,000 Filipinos who marched the 155-kilometer Bataan to Capas, Tarlac Road under a sweltering heat, with no water, food and shelter.

Waxing philosophical, the President said that the Death March did not actually end in death but in triumph "because we won the war and this was the beginning of a new hope for change."

The President said that everybody yearns for change, particularly in the search for peace and prosperity, including the present generation, adding that she, too, yearns for change for the Filipino people, a change for the betterment of their lives.

She fondly recalled that while hundreds of people were executed from breaking away from the Death March column and it was lucky indeed for her paternal uncle, Angel Macapagal, to escape while in Lubao, Pampanga.

The President said that war is a burden that humanity has to contend with. But in order to avoid war, we should strive to remove the reasons for most conflicts in the world, like inequity, injustice, ignorance and poverty, the President added.

And this is what she has been doing during her presidency, the President said, attracting foreign investments into the country so that people can have stable jobs and, therefore, food on their tables and security in their homes.

The President also reiterated her administration's policy of seeking peace with all sectors in society, including the communist rebels and the secessionist forces in Mindanao.

She then thanked Tarlac Governor Jose Yap, who was among those in the audience, for being a member of the government peace panel that is currently holding talks with the National Democratic Front (NDF).

The President was accorded a 21-gun salute upon her arrival at the shrine after addressing the 56th graduation rites of the Benigno S. Aquino National High School in Concepcion, Tarlac.

Assisted by Defense Secretary Eduardo Ermita, the President laid a wreath at the shrine.

Other officials who welcomed the President here were Tarlac 2nd District Congressman Benigno Aquino III, Tarlac 3rd District Congressman Jesli Lapus and Mayor Reynaldo Catacutan.

GMA authorizes Occupational Specialty Pay for air traffic controllers

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has authorized the grant of Occupational Specialty Pay (OSP) to air traffic controllers in recognition of the unique duties and responsibilities of their profession.

The grant was contained in Administrative Order 97 signed March 24 but took effect March 1 of this year.

Under AO 97, a monthly OSP of P2,000 each shall be given to those holding positions as air traffic controller I and II, senior traffic controller, supervising air traffic controller, assistant chief air traffic controller, chief air traffic controller, air traffic services supervisor, and director I and II of air traffic service.

The Technical Incentive Allowance (TIA) being received by air traffic controllers will be integrated into the OSP. Henceforth, according to the AO, no separate payment shall be made for the TIA for the Air Traffic Controllers.

The OSP shall be charged against the savings of the Air Transport Office. In case of deficiency, the balance shall be charged against savings of the whole Department of Transportation and Communication (DOTC). Any remaining deficiency shall be charged against the Miscellaneous Personnel Benefits Fund.

In authorizing the grant, the AO cited the role the air traffic controllers play in providing air traffic control services to the flying public in order to maintain safe, expeditious and orderly flow of air traffic.

It also said that lives and properties are at stake and must be protected through the conduct of alert and efficient air traffic control services.

The AO also cited air traffic control as a vital component in the preservation of Philippine sovereignty and implementation of national security policies.

Boncodin assures release of teachers' honorariums for poll duty on April 25

Here's good news for teachers who will render poll duties in next month's elections.

The Department of Budget and Management (DBM) announced today that P1.4 billion for the honoraria and per diems for all public school teachers and members of the Board of Canvassers in the May 10 elections would be released on April 25.

Budget Secretary Emilia Boncodin made the announcement at a press briefing in Malacañang to ensure that all the teachers will be paid in advance.

"We will release that on April 25 as programmed and as agreed upon with the Commission on Elections (COMELEC) and the Department of Education (DepEd)," Boncodin said.

Boncodin said the release of the P1.4 billion is part of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's commitment to ensure that two weeks before the conduct of May 10 local and national elections, all the members of the Board of Inspectors and Canvassers would already get their two-day honoraria at P1,000 per day.

She also assured that the third day honoraria will be paid after the election once the DepEd, the COMELEC, and DBM have determined the actual number of teachers scheduled to participate in the elections.

Boncodin added that the funds would be released directly to DepEd.

Boncodin also reported that the DBM has released P3.3 billion to the COMELEC, including the funds for absentee voting, to cover all the operating expenditures of the poll body in the forthcoming elections.

She reiterated that P4.7 billion has been allocated for the COMELEC. The remaining P1.4 billion which goes to the honoraria and per diems of all teachers and elections officials would be released on April 25.

GMA's bid in the May 10 polls gets another boost from Tarlac officials

TARLAC CITY, Tarlac—President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's bid for a full six-year term in the May 10 elections got another boost today with the expression of full support of provincial officials of Tarlac.

In a luncheon he hosted for the President here, Tarlac First District Congressman Gilbert Teodoro, a ranking member of the Nationalist People's Coalition, said they would exert all efforts so that the President would win overwhelmingly in Tarlac.

Teodoro, a top lieutenant and nephew of Eduardo "Danding" Cojuangco, NPC founder and chairman emeritus, said that only the President has the experience and know-how to handle the affairs of the state, including world affairs.

He said that it is only fitting that the President should be given a fresh mandate so that she can pursue her programs of government, particularly those that would benefit the marginalized sector of society.

The luncheon meeting was also attended by Tarlac Governor Jose Yap, Vice Governor Marcelino Aganon, Tarlac Second District Congressman Benigno "Noynoy" Aquino III, and Tarlac City Mayor Genaro Mendoza.

Among the municipal mayors who were present at the luncheon meeting were Rodolfo Guerrero of Anao, Estelita Aquino of Moncada, Elpidio Ibarra of Paniqui, Wilfredo Sawit of Pura, Gil Beltran of Ramos, Reynaldo Malazo of San Manuel, Vicente Pacada of San Clemente, and Emmanuel Guiam of Victoria.

Earlier, in Capas and Concepcion, Tarlac, the President also got the assurance of support from Tarlac Third District Congressman Jesli Lapus.

Political observers here said that this is the first time in the history of the province that the Aquinos, Teodoros and the Cojuangcos are all supporting the candidacy of a single presidential candidate.

Isabela Congressman Faustino Dy III, chairman of NPC, has also said that majority of his colleagues in the House of Representatives, who are from his party, are supporting the President.

GMA cites call centers, business process out-sourcing as haven for jobseekers

CAMILING, Tarlac—President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today told fresh college graduates here that call centers and business process out-sourcing are two new industries that are a rich source of employment opportunities.

In a keynote address at the graduation rites of the Camiling Colleges here, the President said call centers and business process out-sourcing can accommodate great numbers of job applicants.

"But you have to speak the English language well to work at a call center," Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo told the graduates.

On the other hand, she explained that business process out-sourcing requires proficiency in accounting and short-hand writing for transcription purposes.

The Chief Executive recalled that before she took over the presidency in January 2001, there were only about 2,000 workers in the call centers and business process out-sourcing.

"Ngayon, dahil inayos natin ang imprastraktura para doon, 50,000 na ang nagtatrabaho sa call centers, sa business process out-sourcing, nadodoble pa taun-taon (Today, since we have improved the infrastructure in these sectors, there are now 50,000 workers in the call centers and business process out-sourcing. And this is doubled every year)," the President said.

Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo also noted strong confidence of investors in the domestic business climate under her administration, citing as example the $500-million fund infusion into the San Miguel conglomerate, giving rise to business expansions, creation of new products and new dealers, and more jobs.

The President also reiterated that the government's micro-financing program for small and medium enterprises has provided sources of livelihood for some one million women under her leadership.

Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo emphasized that she intends to create one million jobs yearly over the next six years if she is given a new mandate in the May 10 elections.

Gov't has not overspent in first quarter, says Boncodin

Malacañang today assured that the national government has not spent more than its target or more than its programmed expenditures in the first quarter of the year nor has it window-dressed the revenue figures for the period as alleged by certain quarters.

Budget Secretary Emilia Boncodin made the assurance as she denied allegations of overspending in the first quarter and incorporating money from the Comprehensive Agrarian Reform Program (CARP) in the first quarter outlay in the General Fund.

She said preliminary numbers on the deficit figure for the first quarter show that it will be below the P58.9 billion target for the first quarter.

“Our policy with regards to CARP, and that is something we announced last year, is that, we will only record the proceeds from the CARP as they are spent, in other words, whatever we spent for CARP will be the same amount of revenues that will reflect in the revenue numbers,” Boncodin said.

Proceeds from the Marcos wealth, she explained, is kept in a separate special account by the Bureau of Treasury and not with the General Fund. She expects that CARP will start reporting disbursements for March and that it is also the same number that will reflect in the revenue actual figures.

Boncodin pointed out that the program of government continues even under a reenacted budget.

“We have come up with a fiscal program as early as last year when we submitted the 2004 budget to Congress and we have not changed our targets up to now,” she said. “We will only make some changes, if that is at all possible, in the middle of this year, which is our normal adjustment period.”

Boncodin reported that the country's deficit target for this year remains at P197.8 billion.

“So we are not inventing any new program just because it is election season. In fact we are being very faithful to what was submitted to Congress in 2004,” she stressed.

The Good News: FedEx, Boeing look at Clark as ideal site for business expansion

Instead of relocating, multinational delivery giant Federal Express Corp. has decided to stay in the Philippines and invest $450 million to expand and move operations of its Asia-Pacific hub from Subic to Clark, assuring continued revenues to the government and employment to Filipinos.

Clark International Airport Corp. president Adelberto Yap said President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's open skies declaration for cargoes in Subic and Clark has got a lot to do with the decision, saying it resolved differences between Philippine and American transport officials.

"This is a done deal," Yap said. "I'm scheduled to go to Memphis on April 11 and sign the 25-year lease agreement with FedEx which is reserving 50 hectares for their future operation in Clark."

FedEx had signified plans of moving to China in August last year after Philippine transport officials junked its demand for seventh freedom operations in the country, saying it is a violation of the Constitution and the RP-US air transport agreement.

Seventh freedom rights allow a carrier to fly to other destinations from a particular hub without first passing its home base.

In deciding to keep its operations in the country, FedEx cited the country's cheap and skilled labor, the work culture of the Filipinos who can readily adapt to Americans, and the ease of communication with the locals who speak English.

It also cited the two-runway capacity of the Diosdado Macapagal International Airport in Clark, which has yet to be built in China.

FedEx decided to leave Subic because it could no longer expand there. Recently two of their aircrafts crashed in the water after overshooting the runway.

FedEx's fresh expansion plans come on the heels of aircraft maker Boeing Co.'s ongoing negotiations with the government to set up a regional logistics and maintenance base worth $400 million also at Clark.

A delegation led by Roger Kip Taylor, head of Asia Project Development for Boeing, that includes Col. Alexander Cox, head of strategic planning of the US Pacific Command based in Hawaii, was looking at leasing some 80 hectares of what was once the biggest American base outside the United States.

“To put up an investment like that would need no less than $400 million because of the equipment and facility,” Yap said. “You can just imagine the jobs to be generated there.”

He said two meetings had already taken place but as yet no firm proposals had been put on the table.

About 60 percent of the aircraft used by commercial carriers operating in the Asia-Pacific region were built by Boeing.

The US government is funding a $150 million modernization program for the Armed Forces of the Philippines and much of it includes maintaining the Boeing C-130 transporter aircraft.

Statement of the President on the Fight Against Terrorism

Our fight against terrorists has been relentless. We have stopped their plans but they are adamant and persistent. We caught six in the dragnet in Metro Manila but some are still in hiding. We have intercepted their explosives cache but they may be shipping in more.

Our sea and airports are under 24-hour surveillance.

Justice will catch up with the terrorists in the end. One by one, the witnesses in Basilan and Sulu are coming out and pointing to the evildoers.

We are closely watching foreigners in the country who may have taught them to make bombs, and who may have laundered money from the Al Qaeda and the JI into the pockets of local bombers.

We shall respect diplomatic conventions and be circumspect in assessing our evidence. But once we have it, they will be arrested and brought to justice.

This is a universal fight for democracy and freedom. And no set of extremists shall hold hostage the democratic bond of nations.

Statement of the President on the Energy Situation

The combined efforts of the Department of Energy (DoE), the private sector and the Energy Regulatory Commission (ERC) are the key to the consolidation of our power strategy.

We need long-term stability as well as long-term protection for the average customer.

Affordability must live side by side with sustainability.

We aim to energize 1,500 barangays a year and eventually bring the cost of power to a level that is the lowest in Asia.

Statement of the President on the Sandiganbayan Decision on Estrada

We welcome the Sandiganbayan decision on the request for a Lenten break by former President Joseph Estrada.

The granting of the three-day retreat reflects the true meaning of the Lenten Season.

President's Lenten Message

Ang Semana Santa ay panahon ng pagninilay. Si Panginoong Hesukristo ay naghandog ng Kanyang buhay upang tubusin tayo sa ating mga kasalanan. Tiniis Niya ang lahat ng pasakit, para patunayan kung gaano Niya tayo kamahal. Bilang pasasalamat, gawin nating makabuluhan ang paggunita sa Kanyang pagdurusa at Kanyang kamatayan.

Pag-isipan nating mabuti kung ano pa ang ating magagawa bilang pagsunod sa Kanyang mga utos at aral. Kailangan din nating pasanin ang ating sariling krus. Kailangan din nating magmalasakit at dumamay sa ating kapwa. Kailangan nating mag-alay bawat isa ng tulong para sa kapakanan ng ating bayan.

Sa maikling panahon ng aking pagiging Pangulo, inihandog ko ang aking sarili para ipaglaban ang pagbabago para sa karaniwang Pilipino. Wala akong tanging hangad kundi ang tapusin ang aking nasimulan at wakasan ang kahirapan.

Tulad ng pagkamatay ni Hesus sa krus, ang bawat isa sa atin ay dapat ding maghandog ng sarili nating sakripisyo. Magtulungan tayo para sa kapayapaan at kaunlaran ng ating bansa. Magkaisa tayo para sa maginhawang pamumuhay nating lahat. At tulad din ng Kanyang muling pagkabuhay, ang ating mga pagsisikap ay maghahatid sa atin ng isang magandang bukas.

GMA creates Salam force composed on Muslims to oversee police matters in Muslims areas

Muslim members of the police force will be engaged actively in the government's stepped up anti-terrorism campaign, Malacañang said today.

This developed as President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo ordered Tuesday night the creation of the Salam Police to oversee police matters concerning Muslim communities and designated Presidential Assistant on the Peace Process Teresita Quintos Deles as officer-in-charge on Muslim police matters.

The President's action came after she had a dinner-dialogue with Muslim leaders, along with movie actor and Muslim convert Robin Padilla, at the Music Conference Room of Malacañang last night.

Salam Police will be composed of Muslim members with Philippine National Police. The search committee for members of this special force would be the three Muslim PNP provincial commanders in the Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao (ARMM), Zamboanga and Basilan.

Padilla welcomed the President's immediate action.

"We would like to express our gratitude and thanks to Madame President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo for the positive result as she directed Secretary Deles to take charge of monitoring the arrest and possible human rights violations against our fellow Muslim brothers," Padilla said.

He particularly welcomed the President's creation of the Salam Police to ensure the safety of Muslims and protection of their rights.

Padilla called on his Muslim brothers to stay calm and set aside any plans against the government.

Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye reiterated in a radio interview this morning what the President has been saying all along about the government campaign against terrorism, there is no racial or ethnic bias in it.

The arrests of some suspected terrorists are not directed at Muslims but results of legitimate operations by the military and the police, Bunye explained.

"I am glad in the growing solidarity of Muslims and Christians behind our campaign against terrorism," the President said.

“Everyone can be assured that this campaign will continue to be carried out without any ethnic or religious bias, and only the enforcement of impartial justice in mind,” the President stressed.

Yesterday, the police presented to media six suspected terrorists who belong to the Abu Sayyaf Group.

They were identified as part of a group that was planning to bomb 46 targets in Metro Manila, including the United States and Israeli embassies. Shopping malls, commuter trains and television stations were also part of their targets.

The suspects were arrested late last month and more than 50 kilos of trinitrotoluene (TNT) and other bomb components were seized from them, according to the police.

Four of the six presented were tagged by some of their former hostages as their captors in the kidnap-for-ransom staged by terrorists in a posh Palawan resort in May 2001 and in Sipadan, Malaysia in 2000.

No letup in fight against terrorism – GMA

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said that there will be no letup in the fight against terrorism, assuring the public that the country’s sea and airports are under 24-hour surveillance.

“Our fight against terrorists has been relentless. We have stopped their plans but they are adamant and persistent. We caught six in the dragnet in Metro Manila but some are still in hiding,” the President said in a statement, referring to the Abu Sayyaf terrorists arrested by police authorities, thereby nipping in the bud a Madrid-level attack in Metro Manila.

The President cautioned that although authorities have intercepted their explosive caches, the terrorists could be shipping in more.

The Chief Executive expressed confidence that justice will soon catch up with the terrorists in the end.

“One by one, the witnesses in Basilan and Sulu are coming out and pointing to the evildoers,” she said.

Authorities, according to her, are closely watching foreigners in the country who may have thought their local counterparts how to make bombs and who may have laundered money from Al Qaeda and the Jemaah Islamiyah into the pockets of local bombers.

“We shall respect diplomatic conventions and be circumspect in assessing our evidence. But once we have it, they will be arrested and brought to justice,” she warned.

The President said the campaign against terror is a universal fight for democracy and freedom, adding that no set of extremists shall hold hostage the democratic bond of nations.

GMA underscores Filipino people’s need to change and to think of the nation’s interest

MOUNT SAMAT, Pilar, Bataan—President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today underscored the need for the Filipino people to change and to think not only of their personal interests but also of the nation and their fellow men.

In her speech at the Dambana ng Kagitingan here as part of the celebration of the Araw ng Kagitingan, the President said the Filipinos’ enemy today is not a foreign invader but themselves.

“Ang kaaway natin ngayon ay hindi estranghero kung hindi ang kapwa Pilipino na ang hanap ay sariling interes, hindi pambansang malasakit (Our enemy today is not a foreigner but our fellow Filipinos who are only after their self-interest and not the interest of the nation),” the President said.

The President particularly cited Japan, saying that Japan, the country's tormentor in World War II, is now the major source of the official development assistance (ODA) and investments that have helped create jobs in the Philippines.

She then appealed to the people to help her face the new challenges and the new threats to society.

"Tulongan ninyo ako sa aking ipinaglalaman na pagbabago, hindi lamang sa pagbabago ng lipunan o pamahalaan, kung hindi sa pagbabago ng sarili, ng sariling diwa, ng sariling puso, ng sariling kaluluwa (Help me in my fight for change, not only in changing the society or government but also in changing oneself, one's spirit, one's heart, one's soul," the President said.

According to the President, the commemoration of Araw ng Kagitingan, April 9, which falls on Good Friday, makes the occasion all the more significant.

She exhorted all the World War II veterans and the new generation of Filipinos to help her, while commemorating the Lenten Season and the Fall of Bataan, in forging ahead a new sense of unity.

"Iisa lamang ang ating bansa, iisa lamang ang ating kapalaran, iisa lamang ating hinaharap, uunlad tayo or lulugmok tayo nang sama-sama (We have only one nation, one fate, one future, and together we will either rise or sink)," the President said.

It is only fitting, the President said, that we should all give due recognition not only to those who have shed blood in the battlefields but also to those who have steadfastly worked for the betterment of their countrymen.

GMA extols Filipino veterans in Bataan rites

PILAR, Bataan — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today extolled and thanked Filipino war veterans who remain the guiding lights in the pursuit to uplift the people and the country during the Araw ng Kagitingan and Philippine Veterans Week rites at the Dambana ng Kagitingan in Mount Samat here.

In her speech at the shrine, the President extolled the Veterans Federation of the Philippines under the leadership of Col. Emmanuel de Ocampo and other veterans groups for strengthening their influence in the policy-making of her administration.

Because of them, her administration has had a good start in setting right the system of the Philippine Veterans Affairs Office (PVAO) so that veterans now receive their pensions and other benefits faster.

More than 70 percent of the pensions now are received through direct bank remittances which are faster and safer than through the mail, the President said.

The President also said that in its brief term, her administration already has set aside almost P40 billion for pensions and other benefits of 260,000 veterans compared to only about P31 billion by the past administration.

Her administration has also raised old age pension, paid for about 20,000 in educational benefits and 20,000 in burial assistance, and hospitalization benefits for 4,000, the President said, even as her administration tightened up on spending to lessen the budget deficit.

More than 20,000 have benefited as the PVAO spiked its free dental and medical missions for veterans in the provinces, the President said.

The President recalled that after her state visit to the United States last year, President George W. Bush gave medical equipment worth more than P50 million to the Philippine Veterans Hospital for veterans in the country and signed two laws increasing the health care benefits and other privileges of Filipino veterans living in the US to the tune of $40 million every year.

She has ordered the PVAO to hasten the processing of pending applications for benefits and clean the list of veterans to make sure that only genuine veterans get to accept pensions and benefits. The President also reactivated the Military Service Board to process more than 100 applications to prove their service during World War II.

Present during the rites were members of the diplomatic corps headed by US Charge d' Affaires Joseph Mussomelli and his Japanese counterpart, Akio Egawa.

Cabinet members present at the rites were Defense Secretary Eduardo Ermita and Press Secretary Milton Alingod. Also present were Monsignor Antonio Dumaul of the Archdiocese of Balanga, AFP Vice Chief of Staff General Rodolfo Garcia and other major service commanders of the Armed Forces of the Philippines.

Provincial officials who attended the rites were Governor Leandro Roman, Congressman Antonino Roman, Vice Governor Rogelio Roque and Subic Bay Metropolitan Authority (SBMA) Chairman Felicito Payumo.

Upon arrival at the Dambana ng Kagitingan, the President was accorded military honors before she laid a wreath at the shrine. Mussomelli and Egawa also laid wreaths at the shrine.

The President also awarded trophies to the winners of the national oratorical contest conducted by the Department of Education, in coordination with the sons and daughters of the Veterans Federation of the Philippines. Sheila Mae Unlos won in the college level and Raiza de Leon in the high school level.

Laguna's dominant political party now part of K-4

STA. CRUZ, Laguna—President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo officiated today the mass oath-taking of 609 Kaibigan ni Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo (KGMA) municipal and barangay coordinators to highlight the alignment of Partido Dimasalang of Laguna Governor Teresita Lazaro with the administration's Koalisyon ng Katapatan at Karanasan sa Kinabukasan (K-4).

“Starting today, the Partido Dimasalang will be officially part of our Koalisyon ng Katapatan at Karanasan sa Kinabukasan. I also want to acknowledge the countless support of KGMA in helping me spread government accomplishments here in Laguna,” said the President in acknowledging the newly-sworn members of KGMA to the administration coalition.

Present during the KGMA induction ceremony held at the covered court of the Pedro Guevara Memorial National High School (PGMNHS) here were Gov. Lazaro, Provincial Board Member and K-4 vice gubernatorial bet Edwin Olivares, PGMNHS Principal Emilio Ulpindo and other provincial and local candidates of the administration.

She also promised to bring the “Patubig ni Gloria” program to the province in her next administration if she will be given a chance to have a new six-year mandate in the May 10 elections.

The President explained that during her short three years in the Presidency, she was able to alleviate the woes of every ordinary family in Quezon City, Metro Manila and nearby Cavite province by providing them with potable drinking water.

She said that if she will be given another opportunity to lead the country up to year 2010, Laguna residents would be assured of having clean water under her next term of office.

The Chief Executive also stressed the more than a million jobs she had created in the past three years and a big part of these jobs were created in the industrial and special economic zones in Laguna.

“If somebody asks you about the jobs I am talking to you then, bring them to numerous factories in Sta. Rosa, Biñan, Cabuyao. Under my short leadership I always visited these places to inaugurate new factories, to attend in the expansion programs of other companies such as the Intel's US$ 1 billion investment here in Laguna," the President said.

She also discussed the successful hybrid "Gloria Rice" that resulted in economic activities in this part of Southern Luzon and increased farmers' income.

There are also jobs that had been created, she said. Because of the construction of several shopping malls in the region.

Other government thrusts that she said would be highlighted in her next administration are the creation of additional one million jobs a year, lowering of the prices of medicines to complement the majority of Filipino holders of PhilHealth cards.

Earlier, Gov. Lazaro and Olivares led the KGMA members in serenading the President with a birthday song and presenting her a birthday cake.

- Zambo del Norte execs endorse GMA for May 10 polls
- Gov't job generation program on track with 1.4 million new jobs created in January – NEDA

The Good News: RP exports expected to further surge in the coming months

National Economic Development Authority Director General Romulo Neri said export growth is expected to further strengthen "due to projected higher exports to Japan and other countries in the coming months."

Trade and Industry Secretary Cesar V. Purisima also said that exports would further gain momentum in the coming months.

"We expect to continue seeing a positive growth trend in our exports in the coming months," he said, adding that electronics would still be "the main driver of growth."

Earlier, the National Statistics Office reported that a healthy global demand for electronics that boosted its key trade sector accounted for the 7.5 percent increase in the country's export income in the year through February.

NSO figures saw February exports rise from $2.789 billion to $2.999 billion, far outstripping the 4.1 percent rise in the year through January.

Electronic exports, accounting for two-thirds of the economy's output, were 6.6 percent higher at $1.976 billion.

The NSO attributed the growth to the economic recovery of Japan which has become the country's main export market, accounting for 17.4 percent of the aggregate export income in February at $523.14 million, up by 24.9 percent from $418.76 million last year.

Purisima pointed out that non-traditional electronic exports were also gaining ground.

"The growing rate of the non-traditional products reflect our gains from the country's product diversification strategy and expansion to Asian markets," he said.

Purisima noted the decline in exports to the United States but said this was compensated by orders from neighboring countries.

He said the improving US economy is not currently translated to an increase in Philippine exports since they are being absorbed by China, Malaysia, Singapore, and Hong Kong.

Purisima stressed that the country's commitment to bolster intra-Asian trade and the strategies to penetrate the huge China market is working for the Philippines, saying that seven of the country's top 10 export destinations are Asian markets.

Zambo del Norte execs endorse GMA for May 10 polls

Leaders of Zamboanga del Norte yesterday endorsed President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo as their official candidate for the May 10 presidential elections.

Two representatives and 14 incumbent mayors, together with other candidates for various posts in Zamboanga del Norte, pledged their support during an informal dialogue with the President Wednesday afternoon at Malacañang's Aguinaldo Room.

Led by Zamboanga del Norte First District Rep. Cecilia Jalosjos-Carreon, the provincial leaders said they are endorsing the President because she is "the best leader to bring social reforms and usher the country into prosperity."

They said the President has the experience and has shown and espoused good governance.

"We pledge our allegiance and support to your presidential bid as the country elects our leader on May 10, 2004. We will actively campaign for your presidential election," Rep. Jalosjos-Carreon said, as she led the reading of their statement of support.

Among those who signified their support were 2nd District Rep. Roseller Barinaga, La Libertad Mayor Manuel Sulit, Sergio Osmeña Mayor Augustines Magsalay, Jose Dalman (Ponot) Mayor Oliveros Dalman, Katipunan Mayor Patchito Equia, Manukan Mayor Eugene Caballero, Pres. Manuel Roxas Mayor Carlito Feras, Sindangan Mayor Winnie Albos, Godod Mayor Erlinda Te, Baliguian Mayor Teofilo Suson, Leon Postigo Mayor Ruperto Jamora, Liloy Mayor Bechu Uy, Salug Mayor Jesus Lim, Sibuco Mayor Nurunniam Edding, and Polanco Mayor Francis Olvis, a vice gubernatorial candidate.

Gov't job generation program on track with 1.4 million new jobs created in January – NEDA

Director General Romulo Neri of the National Economic and Development Authority (NEDA) has said that the Philippine economy continues to pick up as shown by the creation of 1.4 million net new jobs in January this year, as against last year's 414,000 jobs.

"This indicates that economic activity continues to pick up and that the government's job generation programs and strategies are on track," Neri said in a statement.

Neri said that the January 2004 Round of the Labor Force Survey released by the National Statistics Office showed that services contributed about 940,000 jobs to the economy, a big improvement from 284,000 in 2003, while industry put in 466,000 jobs, a reversal from last year's job loss of 14,000 and also the highest increment since 1999.

Neri, however, said that the new entrants of 1.7 million into the labor force, representing a 5.2 percent growth rate from its year-ago level, outpaced the high employment creation for the period of 1.4 million new jobs.

Neri said he shares the sentiments of Labor Secretary Patricia Sto. Tomas who believed that the labor force figures released last week indicate increasing capacity of the economy to create jobs. "In the last three years, employment has grown annually by about 1.06 million compared to just a third of a million per year under the previous administration," said Neri.

"However, the increase in labor force of 5.2 percent, which is even higher than the 2.3 percent population growth rate, outpaced the gains in employment. This is because more Filipinos are joining the labor market at a much faster pace than the record number of jobs our economy has created," he added.

Neri, who also the socioeconomic secretary, added that a closer look at the figures indicates that there are signs of positive sentiments toward the labor market.

"The relatively higher labor participation rate (around 67.2 percent of the total working age population compared to 65.7 percent last year) means that more people went out looking for jobs during the past year and that prospects for jobs in the near term are quite bullish," Neri said.

The percentage of those people waiting for rehire or job recall increased by almost 30 percent, according to the NEDA chief.

Moreover, the number of discouraged workers, meaning those who believed that no work is available, declined by 4.46 percent compared to a year ago, showing increased confidence in the economy.

This increase in the so-called labor force participation, or the proportion of the labor force to the total household population that was 15 years old and above, is backed up by a decline in the number of those who previously did not join the labor force such as students.

For example, the number of young workers (15-24 years old) who opted to go to school rather than enter the labor force declined by 7.72 percent to six million.

Neri also stressed that the quality of employment, as shown by results of the labor force survey, also appeared to have improved in January 2004.

“The number of workers who worked 40 hours or more rose by two million, an increase of 11.2 percent compared to a year ago. The number of part-time workers, meaning those who have worked less than 40 hours, dropped by five percent shedding 581,000 jobs,” Neri said.

The chief economic planner said the government will continue to enforce measures that will generate more jobs to match the increase in the number of labor force entrants.

Neri said these measures include fiscal discipline to sustain macroeconomic stability and marketing the Philippines as an information technology and services center.

He added that empowering local government units through productive public works projects, and reducing the cost of doing business, like bringing down the cost of power especially in export processing zones, can also result in stronger job creation.

The Good News: RP remains good place for business, 4 trade commissioners say

Don't be daunted by all those doomsday scenarios being peddled about by administration detractors on business in the Philippines.

Don't be daunted by the country's political uncertainties due to the May polls and the economic slowdown.

So goes the thinking of the trade commissioners of four countries. They believe the Philippines remains a good place for business.

While security threats in the country continue, this is not primary in the list of concerns of foreign businessmen, the trade commissioners agree.

And to back their faith in the country, they will stage the Second World's Finest Food Trade Show next month, the trade offices of Australia, Canada, New Zealand and the United States announced recently.

The business event is an affirmation of their optimism to step up trade ties with the Philippines, Australian senior trade commissioner Alan Morrell said.

"The Philippines is seeing some sectors of economy moving quite well. Food comes into that category and consumer goods in general," Morrell amplified in a press conference at the Australian Embassy in Makati.

The retail business is growing and the existence of small chains in the country attests to the strong consumer demand in the country, according to US Agriculture Trade Officer Michael Woolsey.

"The platform for important products is growing," Woolsey stressed.

"The Philippines is a very significant export market and trade partner," said Canadian Trade Commissioner Richard Bale. He went on to add that the Philippines was Canada's largest export market in Southeast Asia last year.

From New Zealand, Trade Commissioner Ramoncito Bernales said they are strengthening their presence in the country by continuing to identify market strategies.

Yes sir! Doomsday scenarios, political uncertainties, an economic slowdown notwithstanding, there's much to be gained doing business in the Philippines.

Trust those Australian, Canadian, American and New Zealand trade commissioners. They know their business.

RP, Canada provide P40-M grant for street children and Bajao

The Philippines and Canada are providing P40.68 million worth of assistance for the street and urban working children in the Visayas and Mindanao, including the Bajao families in Zamboanga City and Lamitan, Basilan.

Augusto B. Santos, deputy director-general of the National Economic and Development Authority (NEDA), said these projects will not only uplift the conditions of those children in the Visayas and Mindanao, but will also provide more opportunities to improve the economic well-being of Bajao families.

Santos, who chairs the Philippines-Canada Development Fund (PCDF), noted that the Street and Urban Working Children Project (SUWCP) includes school supplies and rice assistance, along with capability-building for social workers and volunteers.

The one-year P24.16-million project, of which P6.26 million is from PCDF, also has a component for barangay councils for the protection of children and local government units, he said.

The SUWCP, a project of the Department of Interior and Local Government (DILG), will benefit children in the cities of Bacolod, Iloilo, Cebu, Mandaue and Lapu-lapu in the Visayas, and Zamboanga, Cagayan de Oro, Davao, Cotabato, and General Santos in Mindanao.

On the other hand, the P16.52-million Project Hope for Bajao Families will have components on social preparation, establishment of culturally sensitive communities, livelihood services, and networking/advocacy. PCDF has committed P11 million for the project, which will run from January 1, 2004 to December 31, 2004.

PCDF is a joint undertaking of the governments of the Philippines and Canada through the NEDA and the Canadian International Development Agency (CIDA), respectively.

The Good News: Tourist arrivals in RP increase despite negative travel advisories

Notwithstanding negative travel advisories, tourist arrivals in the Philippines increased 8.9 percent in February from 162,626 last year to 177,104 this year.

The renewed interests for travel to the Philippines are shared by North Americans, Europeans, Australians, Japanese, Koreans, Indonesians and Singaporeans.

Driven mostly by increased arrivals from France, Germany and Switzerland, tourists from Western Europe rose 21 percent from last year's February figures of 7,378 to 8,943.

Visitors from Northern Europe, bolstered by double-digit growths in arrivals from Denmark, Ireland, Norway, Sweden and the United Kingdom, rose 27.4 percent.

The biggest arrivals however were registered by North America, which despite negative travel advisories coming from the United States and Canada, has not affected the mood of their travelers.

Visitors from North America rose 19.4 percent to 40,407 in February from 33,845 in the same month last year. Americans alone comprise 36,034.

In its travel advisory last January 16, the US government warned American travelers about terrorist threats in the Philippines, advising them to postpone non-emergency travels, particularly to Mindanao.

On March 8, the Australian government also issued a travel advisory telling its citizens to "exercise extreme caution particularly in commercial and public areas known to be frequented by foreigners."

Despite these, however, tourists from Australia, along those coming from Canada, Japan, Korea, Indonesia and Singapore registered double-digit growths.

More than half, or 55 percent of the total number of tourists came from members of the Association of Southeast Asian nations, as well as East Asia that includes China, Hong Kong, Japan, Korea and Taiwan.

ODA to boost construction in 2004 – NEDA Chief

Projects funded by official development assistance (ODA) will boost infrastructure construction in 2004.

Socioeconomic Planning Secretary Romulo L. Neri made this forecast at a recent meeting of the Chamber of Real Estate and Builders' Associations, Inc.

According to Neri, the public infrastructure undertakings this year include construction of the Iloilo and Bacolod airports, the North Rail Project, and the South Rail Project. In Southern Luzon, the projects include improvement and rehabilitation of the Batangas Port, extension of the Southern Tagalog Arterial Road from Lipa City to Batangas City, and rehabilitation and extension of the South Luzon Expressway.

Neri, who heads the National Economic and Development Authority (NEDA), said the number of several good infrastructure projects this year accounts for, among other factors, the higher growth forecast of the government in 2004 which is 5.2 to 6 percent, up from 5.5-percent actual gross national product in 2003.

Neri noted that due to fiscal tightening to meet the deficit, government construction dragged down the 2003 economic figures when public construction declined by 29 percent, while private construction expanded by 10.4 percent.

Due to better prospects in construction, Neri said investments in the sector will grow by 7.7 to 8.3 percent. Of this, public investment in construction is expected to surge by 10.1 to 11 percent, while its private counterpart will expand by 5.0 to 5.9 percent.

The growth in the country's construction sector will not only benefit the housing industry but will also result in more private sector initiatives, he said.

BONTOC, Mountain Province — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo revealed here today that she and her family went on a retreat in Baguio City during the Holy Thursday and Good Friday.

“I went on retreat on Holy Thursday and Good Friday. It was officiated by Baguio Bishop Senson and Father Castro, the parish priest of St. Joseph of Pacdal which is our parish,” the President said during a press conference at the Ridgebrook Hotel here.

On Holy Thursday, the President said they reenacted the Last Supper by having their own passover meal of bitter herbs, unleavened bread and fruits and vegetables.

The President said they also had a traditional fellowship customary during the time of Jesus Christ.

As part of the retreat, the President and the First Gentleman also watched The Passion of the Christ on Thursday at the SM City in Baguio.

“We discussed it also for reflection and part of the sharing of the retreat masters the next day where we have the annual confession and counseling,” Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo said.

GMA views killing of Abu Sayyaf leader as a major victory in anti-terror drive

BONTOC, Benguet — President Gloria Macapagal Arroyo viewed the killing of a senior Abu Sayyaf leader as a “major victory” in the government’s intensified campaign against terrorism.

At the same time, the President cited all the government agents who participated in the operation that led to the slaying of Abu Sayyaf leader Hamsirajih Sali who was wanted by the law for involvement in a chain of kidnap-for-ransom and terrorist activities.

“I congratulated everybody involved (in the operation) and this is a major victory in our fight against the Abu Sayyaf and terrorism,” the President said during a press conference at the Ridge Brook Hotel here.

The President said Sali is the highest ranking Abu Sayyaf leader in Basilan who carries a P5-million bounty on his head.

“We are really working very hard so that our country will be safe from terrorism. So this follows on the heels of that very, very big catch that we had the weeks before the Holy Week,” the chief executive said.

President Macapagal-Arroyo said the government is working round the clock in the fight against terrorism in close coordination with other countries through the sharing of intelligence and other vital information.

The President said the death of Sali was the result of very professional surveillance and good tactical operations by the troops, policemen and intelligence operatives.

The President arrived 10 a.m. at the football field of the Mountain Province State Polytechnic College here on board the presidential helicopter from Baguio City.

She was accompanied by First Gentleman Jose Miguel Arroyo, sons Dato and Mikey, Presidential Assistant for North Luzon Renato Diaz, Press Secretary Milton Alingod, and National Food Authority (NFA) Administrator Arthur Yap.

The President proceeded to the political rally at the town plaza where she was welcomed by some 5,000 residents and municipal and provincial officials led by Mayor Luis Claver Sr.

During the rally, Sabangan Mayor Jupiter Dominguez, president of the Mt. Province Mayors’ League, turned over to Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo a copy of their declaration of unqualified support to her candidacy.

After the press conference, the President had lunch with local officials where she also invited her former “yaya,” Kammy Alawas, who took care of her when she was still four years old in Timogan, Iligan.

- “Patubig ni Gloria” brings joy to barangays in Cavite City
- GMA launches scholarship program targeting five million poor families
- GMA orders probe on mass jailbreak in Basilan

The Good News: $1 million grant okayed for phase II of Mindanao rural development project

The poor people of Mindanao have much to look forward to with the World Bank having extended a $987,648 grant to follow up and continue rural development in their area in the thrust to alleviate their plight.

The grant has been approved to support project preparations for the second phase of the Mindanao Rural Development Project (MRDP) which was designed to address specific concerns of poor rural communities in five provinces.

These are North Cotabato, Sultan Kudarat, Agusan del Sur, Compostela Valley and Maguindanao where individual and community livelihood programs have been started with the proper training provided to ensure their successful implementation.

Specifically, the grant will support the Department of Agriculture in contracting technical assistance and engaging the next set of local government units and communities for the second phase of the MRDP.

This means more people and communities will be drawn into the MRDP and benefit from it to gain more income and provide their families and children with better opportunities.

The MRDP was initially funded through a $22-million loan issued by the World Bank and a grant of $1.25 million from the Global Environment Facility.

The latest grant is funded from the Japanese government's Policy and Human Resources Development trust fund administered by the World Bank.

In addition to the grant for the MRDP, the World Bank also extended a $716,000 grant to strengthen the capacity of the government's procurement program that seeks to eliminate corruption in the bureaucracy.

World Bank officials said the grant for capacity building will help strengthen the Government Procurement Policy Board to enforce and implement the Government Procurement Reform Act.

Funding for this grant is through the Asian Financial Crisis Response Fund of the Asia-Europe Meeting trust fund also administered by the World Bank.

GMA woos Umingan, Pangasinan

UMINGAN, Pangasinan – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo last night said that the country is winning the battle against terrorism in her administration.

Speaking at the town fiesta here, the President said top Abu Sayyaf leader with a P5 million peso prize on his head, Hamsiraji Sali, was killed in Basilan on Maundy Thursday.

The President pointed out that because of the participation of the local community and foreign allies such as the US, the country is winning the fight against terrorism.

The President also emphasized that because of the help of the likes of Speaker Jose de Venecia, there is now a ceasefire between government and the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) in Mindanao. Also with the help of Speaker de Venecia, the formal peace talks with the CCP/NDF/NPA have started.

“These are among the accomplishments of your President who is a genuine daughter of Pangasinan, who for a long time, has been helping the province of Pangasinan,” she said.

“Unlike the others who claim to be from Pangasinan, but until now has not contributed even a bag cement to Pangasinan,” the President added.

The President expressed hope that in the coming elections the residents will be together with the Koalisyon ng Karanasan at Katapatan sa Kinabukasan (K-4).

The President earlier donated to the municipality of Umingan one patrol car to strengthen it’s campaign against drugs.

The coming of the President here is the first time ever a president attended a fiesta in this town. It was the reason Umingan Mayor Alain Rabang, an NPC party member, has defected to the Lakas Party of the President.

Mayor Rabang said that the people of Umingan usually vote for the presidential candidate who makes an effort to go there and campaign.

“This is the first time in Umingan that a fiesta is being graced by the president of the land and a re-electionist at that, and the people will never forget such a gesture,” Mayor Rabang said.

Umingan is a 35,000-vote-rich town, one of the biggest in the sixth district of Pangasinan. Urdaneta still has the biggest number of registered voters.

Congressman Conrado Estrella III said the victory of the President in the May elections would ensure more irrigation, farm-to-market roads, and construction of bridges needed to reach far-flung barangays in Umingan.

Also present during the first night of the town fiesta here were Speaker de Venecia and other neighboring mayors of Umingan.

“Patubig ni Gloria” brings joy to barangays in Cavite City

CAVITE CITY – After six years of experiencing water problems, the residents of this city now have reason to rejoice because they now have clean and potable water.

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo personally brought the good news to some 2,000 families beneficiaries of one of her top priority programs when she inspected the ongoing “Patubig ni Gloria” project at Barangay 10-M here.

The President arrived here at 10:30 this morning from Malacañang to inspect the Patubig project from which some 1,785 households now get potable water since it was launched in two barangays of this city on March 1, 2004.

Barangay 10-M, where some 200 families are the direct beneficiaries, is the latest to get water. First were Barangays 10-A and 10-B.

Local and barangay officials led by Barangay Captain Pedrito Ibuya warmly received the President upon her arrival.

“According to Captain Ibuya almost six years ninyo ng pinoproblema ang mabaho at madilaw na tubig dito sa inyong lugar. Now we have a solution to finally ease your problem,” the President told the residents.

The President told the residents that while they are awaiting for the completion of the laying of the regular connection from the pipeline of Maynilad, the water concessionaire would deliver free potable water to their barangay.

“The construction of the regular pipe connection to your residences will be completed in three years, but, for the meantime, we will deliver potable water at your doorsteps,” the President said.

To date, some 805,920 households are already being served by the “Patubig ni Gloria” project in Metro Manila, Rizal, Cavite and Bulacan province since it was launched last December 31, 2003 in Payatas, Quezon City.

The objective of the project is to identify waterless communities, particularly in the depressed areas and to ensure that the health and well-being of millions of Filipinos are maintained by providing them with clean and potable water.

GMA launches scholarship program targeting five million poor families

BIÑAN, Laguna—Easter Sunday gained added dimension as President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo formally launched today a scholarship program that will provide free education to five million children of indigent families.

“On this Easter of hope, the scholarship program offers the promise of a bright tomorrow to millions of poor students and their families,” the President said.

Dubbed “Isang Iskolar Para sa Mahirap na Pamilya,” the program offers two years of free college education or vocational training for poor but deserving students.

The President set off the scholarship program at the Performing Arts Theater of the University of Perpetual Help here, where she distributed scholarship certificates to the first batch of 30 students. The first 1,000 scholars would come from Biñan.

The scholars can enroll in any government-run college or university, or any vocational school accredited with the Technical Education and Skills Development Authority (TESDA).

“Education for many is the key to rebirth and transformation. Today, I signed an executive order expanding access to secondary education through the “Isang Iskolar Para sa Mahirap na Pamilya Program,” the Chief Executive said at the launching rite.

“Now, any capable, diligent Filipino child can get a college or vocational diploma through our free public elementary and secondary schools in the Iskolar and SAFE 4 SR programs,” the President added.

The Iskolar ng Pamilya program covers the first two years of college education with the government shouldering P20,000 for the period for basic tuition, transportation and food allowance.

The President said the program, which complements the SAFE 4 SR (Students Assistance Fund for Education for a Strong Republic) would make education accessible to all, especially the poorest of the poor.

The President noted that only 10 out of 100 pupils that enter grade school finish college. She said education is one sure way of pulling people out of poverty. A successful college or vocational graduate can help the rest of the family.

President Macapagal-Arroyo said the list of prospective scholars would be culled from the roster of card-bearing members of the Philippine Health Insurance Corp. (PhilHealth).

The President directed the Department of Social Welfare and Development (DSWD), the Department of the Interior and Local Government (DILG) and the Department of Health to assist the PhilHealth in identifying the projected family-beneficiaries of the program using records of the National Statistics Office to determine their economic status.

Under the executive order, the Commission on Higher Education (CHED) and TESDA are responsible for implementing the program in consultation with the Department of Education, the National Economic and Development Authority, the DSWD, DOH and DILG.

The magnitude and scope of the Iskolar program are unprecedented in the government's long history of extending support to deserving students. One student from each of the five million families would be a major boost to the current 400,000 scholars which hardly make a dent in the overall needs for quality education, it was noted. Current loans and student assistance are generally not enough to cover the total cost of college education, Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo said.

Joining the President at the launching ceremony were Laguna Gov. Teresita Lazaro, Biñan Mayor Hermis Perez, UPH president Dr. Antonio Tamayo, Iloilo Rep. Augusto Syjuco, CHED acting chairman Manuel Punzal, TESDA Director General Ancetes Guia, DILG Secretary Joey Lina, Education Secretary Edilberto De Jesus, Presidential Assistant for Education Mona Valisno, National Food Authority chief Arthur Yap and pro-administration senatorial candidate Pia Cayetano.

GMA orders probe on mass jailbreak in Basilan

BIÑAN, Laguna—President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo ordered this afternoon a full-dress investigation on the Black Saturday mass jailbreak at the Basilan rehabilitation center.

The President issued the order during a press briefing at the University of Perpetual Help in Biñan, Laguna where she launched earlier the Iskolar ng Mahirap na Pamilya Program.

"I am ordering a thorough investigation on this matter to look for a possible collusion in the jailbreak and make them answerable for their offenses," the President said.

Fifty-three inmates of the rehabilitation center, among them suspected members of the dreaded Abu Sayyaf armed group, bolted the detention center in Isabela City, Basilan. Eight of the escapees were reported killed and nine recaptured by responding soldiers and policemen.

Despite the incident, President Macapagal-Arroyo maintained that the government's anti-terror campaign remained on stream, citing as among its gains the killing on Maundy Thursday of Abu Sayyaf senior leader Hamsiraji Sali and five other suspected members of the group.

The President also mentioned the capture in Metro Manila of six other suspected Abu Sayyaf leaders and the confiscation of a cache of explosives believed intended for a series of bomb attacks in the metropolis.

Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose Lina told reporters that hot-pursuit operations are being conducted by joint forces of the Philippine National Police (PNP) and the military to recapture the escapees.

Lina said PNP chief Director General Hermogenes Ebdane Jr. is personally supervising the manhunt.

The Good News: Filipinos have edge in Asia in call center business

The Filipinos' positive work habit has given them the edge over their Asian neighbors, notably India, as a favorite destination of foreign investors engaged in the call center business.

This was the assessment of Jon Kaplan, an American information technology expert who said the Philippines "is a choice destination for companies outsourcing their non-core functions because of the Filipino's attitude toward work."

"While it is cheaper to outsource call center jobs from India, which has 95,000 seats, the Philippines is a choice destination for companies outsourcing such services because Filipinos are more enthusiastic in satisfying customers," Kaplan noted.

Kaplan, chief of the International Committee for American Teleservices Association, pointed out that it was not a matter of lower costs.

Kaplan, who is also president of the Ohio-based TeleDevelopment Services, a call center consulting, training and management recruiting company, also said "Filipinos put more time and effort into the job while call center agents in other countries, especially in the United States, treat it as no more than a job," he added.

Against this backdrop, the local call center industry is expected to attain a hefty growth rate of between 75 percent to 100 percent annually, surpassing India's 50 percent.

Kaplan recommended, however, that Philippine call centers have to be familiar with pertinent American laws regulating the operations of call centers to be able to comply and continue their quality service and observe high standards, as well as to develop programs to effectively guide their employees on career paths to sustain the company's growth.

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo on various occasions underscored the remarkable growth of the call center industry and the business process outsourcing as veritable havens for jobseekers, specially the fresh college graduates.

The President stressed, however, that prospective job hunters in the call center community must be able to speak the English language well, while those eyeing employment in the business process outsourcing must be proficient in accounting and short-hand for transcription purposes.

The Chief Executive recalled that before she took over the presidency in January 2001, there were only about 2,000 workers in the call centers and business process out-sourcing.

“Ngayon, dahil inayos natin ang imprastraktura para doon, 50,000 na ang nagtatrabaho sa call centers, sa business process out-sourcing, nadodoble pa taun-taon (Today, since we have improved the infrastructure in these sectors, there are now 50,000 workers in the call centers and business process out-sourcing. And this is doubled every year),” the President said.

Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo also noted strong confidence of investors in the domestic business climate under her administration, citing as example the $500-million fund infusion into the San Miguel conglomerate, giving rise to business expansions, creation of new products and new dealers, and more jobs.

The President also reiterated that the government’s micro-financing program for small and medium enterprises has provided sources of livelihood for some one million women under her leadership.

Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo emphasized that she intends to create one million jobs yearly over the next six years if she is given a new mandate in the May 10 elections.

Statement of the President: Re Basilan Escape

Let us stop the blame tossing and finger-pointing and mop up this problem soonest.

Let us get the fugitives first and resolve the issue of accountability later.

If the massive manhunt requires cordoning off the whole Basilan province to prevent the escapees from fleeing to other provinces, so be it.

I appreciate the solid performance of the AFP and the PNP in keeping our people safe and secure during the Holy Week but they must show the same teamwork in getting the remaining Basilan prisoners and make sure they are locked up.

Some of the escapees are indeed Abu Sayyaf members and they pose a threat not only to those who stood witnesses against them in the courts but also to the whole community.

Statement of the President: Re Anti-terrorism

The United States and the Philippines have worked as strong strategic partners in the war against terror.

Those who are talking about fictitious diplomatic reproaches or anything of the sort only want this partnership to fail, and they are playing into the hands of terrorists.

Our partnership with the US has resulted in several gains, not only in terms of the Balikatan training exercises, but in terms of solid tactical gains such as the foiling of the Madrid-level attack with the arrest of six suspected Abu Sayyaf bandits and the killing of senior Abu Sayyaf commander Hamsiraji Sali and five of his men in a recent encounter in Basilan.

Everyday, Philippine and American counterparts meet to share information and map out new strategies to combat terrorist groups and their networks.

Statement of Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye: Re Jueteng

The law enforcement agencies have waged a strong, consistent, anti-jueteng campaign.

We are not for the legalization of jueteng and we are bearing down hard on jueteng operators.

There are several proposals from the past on the legalization of jueteng but they have never been acted upon at the level of the Palace.

More Opposition leaders shift support to GMA, K-4 bets

CABUYAO, Laguna – With less than a month away from the presidential elections, a number of opposition political allies have switched support to President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, her vice presidential running mate Senator Noli “Kabayan” de Castro and the Koalisyon ng Katapatan at Karanasan sa Kinabukasan (K-4) senatorial candidates.

The leaders of presidential candidates Fernando Poe, Jr. of Koalisyon ng Nagkakaisang Pilipino (KNP) and former Education Secretary Raul Roco of Alyansa ng Pag-Asa pledged their support to the K-4 ticket in the house of former Congressman Rodolfo Tingzon of Laguna.

Those who shifted their loyalty to the administration camp and pledged to campaign for the “Gloria–Kabayan” team were incumbent Naic, Cavite Mayor Efren Nazareno of Alyansa ng Naic and former Cabuyao, Laguna, Mayor Jun Alimagno.

Earlier, former opposition leaders who had deserted the FPJ and Roco camps were Tingzon, Gualberto Lumauig of Ifugao, Emil Ong of Northern Samar, Luz Bakunawa of Masbate and Atty. Roy Almor.

Others who defected to the administration were Dr. Virgilio Lazaga, chairman of the Alyansa ng Pag-Asa Calamba Chapter and Pedro Reyes, Jr., chairman of the Raul Roco Movement.

President Macapagal-Arroyo received a manifesto of support from different political organizations, like Kapisanan ng 1st District of Laguna (Biñan, San Pedro and Sta. Rosa), Brothers Club of Roco Party and the Calamba Professional League during a visit to this town Sunday.

Lapian ng Manggagawa president Jose Malvar Villegas also presented to the President the LM manifesto of support for the 12 K-4 senatorial bets and to the “Gloria – Kabayan” tandem.

“I am very much delighted with your support to the whole ticket of the Koalisyon ng Katapatan at Karanasan sa Kinabukasan. I do believe that we will join hands towards victory for the betterment of every ordinary Filipino family,” said President Macapagal-Arroyo in accepting the different manifestos handed by her newly-converted supporters.

GMA working on no-cash benefits for workers

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo’s immediate concern now is to find ways to provide workers with “non-cash benefits” to ease the burden of day-to-day living.

Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said, in an interview with Radyo ng Bayan this morning, that the Department of Labor and Employment (DOLE) is helping the President formulate measures on the provision of non-cash benefits to the workers.

Bunye cited as example of such non-cash benefits the discounted price of diesel products sold to drivers of public utility vehicles (PUV) by a network of gas stations nationwide.

He noted that the discount on sale of diesel products helped convince a large group of PUV drivers/operators not to join the recent transport strike. These are the kinds of benefits, giving discount or monitoring of prices so as not to affect the ordinary family, that the President had in mind, he said.

Bunye said that the Macapagal-Arroyo administration also continues its program of selling goods, including medicines, at cheap prices.

Twenty categories of medicines, particularly drugs needed for daily maintenance dosage, are now sold by government hospitals at half their usual prices, he said.

In response to the President's call for help in bringing medicines within reach of the ordinary Filipinos, Unilab and Glaxo are now manufacturing quality drugs and selling them at lower prices, he said.

GMA cites fruitful RP-US alliance in fight vs terrorism

The partnership between the Philippines and the United States in the fight against terrorism has been fruitful, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo said today.

"Our partnership with the US has resulted in several gains, not only in terms of Balikatan training exercises, but in terms of solid tactical gains such as the foiling of the Madrid-level attack with the arrest of six suspected Abu Sayyaf bandits and the killing of senior Abu Sayyaf commander Hamsiraji Sali and five of his men in a recent encounter in Basilan," the President said in a statement released this morning.

According to the President, Philippine and American officials meet regularly to share information and map out new strategies to combat terrorist groups and their networks as she belied "fictitious diplomatic reproaches" designed to foil the RP-US partnership.

Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye also brushed off the report of an alleged accusation from the US that the Philippines has been weak in its response to the crackdown on terrorism, saying the story sources are unnamed.

The government is determined to pursue the fight against terrorism, Bunye said in a follow up to the President's statement.

Before the Black Saturday mass jailbreak of Abu Sayyaf detainees in Basilan, the operations against terrorists produced positive results, including the death of a top Abu Sayyaf leader and the capture of his cohorts, Bunye said.

"What is clear is the government is very determined to fight terrorism. We are doing this as a country, we are doing it as part of our international commitment against terrorism. We will continue to wage the fight," Bunye stressed.

On the mass jailbreak in Basilan, Bunye said an investigation is on going to determine how it was staged and to pinpoint responsibility of the negligence that allowed the escape.

The manhunt for the escapees still on the loose goes on and the Philippine National Police, with the help of the Armed Forces of the Philippines and the citizens, is confident of capturing them, Bunye said.

GMA's vision: Convert Sta. Rosa into Detroit-type hub of car making in RP

STA. ROSA, Laguna – A Detroit-type hub of car manufacturing in the Philippines.

That's President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's vision for Sta. Rosa as she unveiled expansion plans of different car manufacturers in this fast-growing town at the outskirts of Metro Manila that are expected to generate more jobs under her watch.

Speaking before some 5,000 residents at a political rally Sunday night in Barangay Kanluran, Sta. Rosa, the President noted the gradual transformation of this town into the local version of Detroit, capital of the United States' car industry, within her short presidency.

President Macapagal-Arroyo stressed the importance of maintaining the confidence of foreign investors in the country's leader in the next six years to ensure continuity of the massive expansion programs of the various automotive manufacturers.

The Chief Executive warned local residents not to commit the mistake of voting for a candidate without experience in running the government if they don't want to shoo away foreign investors from Sta. Rosa.

The President said the Ford Company decided to invest about US$50 million in its plant in Sta. Rosa after she had met with its officials in the course of her state visit to the United States.

She added that the Japanese car makers Toyota, Nissan, Mitsubishi and Honda are all expanding their plants in Sta. Rosa, under her administration.

This car industry boom has helped President Macapagal-Arroyo achieve her government's goal of creating 1.1 million jobs annually every year since 2001.

"We must not waste our strong start because if we choose a different leader for the next six years, these foreign investors would lose their confidence and might transfer their investments out of the country if an inexperienced President would assume power," the President said.

Joining President Macapagal-Arroyo and vice presidential bet Sen. Noli "Kabayan" de Castro in Sunday night's rally were K-4 senatorial candidate Orlando Mercado and the pro-administration Laguna local bets, including reelectionist Governor Teresita Lazaro and running mate Erwin Olivares, Mayor Leon Arcillas and running mate Manuel Alipon, and reelectionist First District Rep. Uliran Joaquin.

Also present at the rally were City Council bets Raul Aala, Aries Alcabasa, Arlene Arcillas, Jose Cartano, Mythor Cendeña, Boy Factoriza, Artemio Gomez, and Toto Sigue.

Filipino voters, now more mature, will make May 10 polls clean, honest, peaceful and credible, says Bunye

Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said today that the Filipino voters have become more mature and will help bring about clean, honest, peaceful and credible elections on May 10.

In a radio interview, Bunye also said that President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has been working diligently to fulfill her promise to uplift the lives of the people.

"Inilalapit niya yong kanyang mga programa sa ating mga kababayan," (She is trying to bring her programs to the people)," he said.

Bunye expressed hope that the Filipino people will appreciate, understand and give utmost support to her as she works hard for them.

"Sana'y mabigyan ng pahalaga iyong pagpupunyagi ng ating Pangulo at siya ay kalingain nila sa darating na eleksiyon (We hope that they will give importance to the hard work that the President has shown and that they will support her in the coming elections)," he said.

If elected, GMA assures a school in every barangay and a computer in every school

A school in every barangay. A computer in every school.

That's the plan of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo for the next six years, should she be given the chance to serve a full term after next month's polls.

In line with her education-for-all program, the President, according to Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye, seeks to identify barangays which until now have no school buildings and build them in the next six years, and install at least one computer for every school.

"Alam naman natin na ang ating Pangulo talagang isa sa kanyang pangunahing prayoridad itong paghahatid ng edukasyon sa ating mga kababayan (We all know that one of the priority programs of the President is the delivery of education to our citizens)," Bunye said in a radio interview.

He said the President has assured public school teachers assigned to poll duty that they would get their increased honoraria in advance as announced by Budget Secretary Emilia Boncodin.

The honorarium has been increased from P700 to P1,000 a day. The first two days of service will be paid in advance, according to Bunye.

"This is the first time in our history that before elections, the funds for the teachers' honoraria will be in the hands of the Department of Education," he said.

A total of P1.4 billion has been allocated for the purpose and will be released on April 25.

The Department of Education, Bunye said, now has enough budget for the recruitment of new teachers to address the shortage normally experienced during the opening of classes.

Massive nationwide support for GMA now evident

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has been reaping the fruits of her untiring efforts to reach out to the people with an outpouring of support to her quest for a full six-year term, notably from local political leaders, including defectors from the floundering opposition parties Koalisyon ng Nagkakaisang Pilipino (KNP) and the Alyansa ng Pag-asa.

The latest massive defection came from Mountain Province which the President visited over the weekend.

Earlier on, local political bigwigs have been hopping into the ruling Koalisyon ng Katapatan at Karanasan para sa Kinabukasan (K-4) bandwagon as the President, vice presidential bet Sen. Noli "Kabayan" de Castro, and her senatorial team barnstormed major cities and provinces across the country.

The bandwagon syndrome had already resulted in the clinching of the Bicol Region and the vote-rich provinces of Tarlac and Laguna, and of late, Mountain Province in Northern Luzon which the President visited on Easter Sunday. The President has also received bipartisan support from leaders of vote-rich Cebu and Pangasinan provinces, as well as in most parts of Mindanao.

Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo received a pleasant Easter gift when the entire KNP ticket in Mountain Province presented her a manifesto of support signed by mayors of the 10 municipalities of the upland province led by Sagada Mayor Tomas Killip.

Majority, if not all, of the incumbent officials of Mountain Province belonged to the KNP or the Nationalist People's Coalition (NPC).

Citing President Macapagal-Arroyo's "ability to address our concerns," Killip, also president of the League of Municipalities of Mountain Province, assured her of their unqualified support in the May 10 elections.

"Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo has been very, very consistent in visiting us and in showing her support for the people here. She is a President whom we found to be very easily accessible, one who sincerely takes pain to listen (to our problems)," Killip said.

An investigative report recently published by the magazine Newsbreak had noted that the President's "energy never wanes in merciless heat or pouring rain" as she reaches out to the common people in the heat of the campaign season.

Erstwhile KNP gubernatorial candidate Harry Dominguez has also defected to the K-4, saying that he made the decision upon seeing that he was the only local leader supporting movie actor Fernando Poe, Jr.

Early this month, Rep. Gilbert Teodoro (1st Dist. Tarlac), a ranking NPC member, also pledged full support to President Macapagal-Arroyo.

Teodoro, a nephew of business tycoon Eduardo "Danding" Cojuangco, NPC founder and chairman emeritus, vowed to "exert all efforts so that the President would win overwhelmingly in Tarlac."

Teodoro's switch of political affiliation marked the first time that the politically fractious Aquino, Teodoro and the Cojuangco families in Tarlac are uniting behind one presidential candidate.

Teodoro's support of the President was announced in a luncheon meeting attended by Tarlac Governor Jose Yap, Vice Governor Marcelino Aganon, Tarlac Second District Congressman Benigno "Noynoy" Aquino III, and Tarlac City Mayor Genaro Mendoza.

Present during the affair were Tarlac mayors Rodolfo Guerrero of Anao, Estelita Aquino of Moncada, Elpidio Ibarra of Paniqui, Wilfredo Sawit of Pura, Gil Beltran of Ramos, Reynaldo Malazo of San Manuel, Vicente Pacada of San Clemente, and Emmanuel Guiam of Victoria.

Earlier, in Capas and Concepcion towns, also in Tarlac, the President also received the assurance of support from Congressmen Aquino and Rep. Jesli Lapus (3rd Dist. Tarlac).

Rep. Faustino Dy III of Isabela, NPC chairman, said majority of his colleagues in the party are supporting Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo.

The President and the K-4 coalition have also welcomed into the K-4 fold a team of top local officials from the camp of presidential candidate Raul Roco. The group was led by former Alyansa ng Pag-asa Eastern Visayas regional coordinator Emil Ong.

Ong's departure from the Roco camp is seen as ominous of the impending collapse of Roco's political machinery in Eastern Visayas.

A week before Ong's defection, President Macapagal-Arroyo also received an overwhelming declaration of support from Bicolandia leaders led by Camarines Sur Gov. Luis Villafuerte, his Vice Governor Imelda Papin, Camarines Norte Gov. Jesus Typoco, Albay Gov. Al Francis Bichara, Sorsogon Gov. Raul Lee and Masbate Gov. Antonio Kho.

In Laguna, incumbent Gov. Teresita "Ningning" Lazaro, previously a supporter of deposed President Joseph Estrada, orchestrated a mass oath-taking of 609 municipal and barangay coordinators as members of the Kaibigan ni Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo (KGMA).

The oath-taking ceremony, officiated by President Macapagal-Arroyo herself, was an affirmation of the switch of Lazaro's Partido Dimasalang to K-4.

Pulse Asia survey gives GMA a “significant lead” over FPJ

If elections were held today, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo would get a fresh six-year mandate, beating closest rival Fernando Poe Jr. by a narrow margin, results of the Pulse Asia Survey released today showed.

The survey, conducted nationwide from March 27 to April 4 and covering 4,800 registered voters, gave the incumbent President 34 percent against Poe's 31 percent.

A Pulse Asia executive viewed Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo's edge as a “significant lead” coming as it does while the President and her number one challenger are neck-and-neck on the campaign trail.

Pulse Asia said the three-percentage point difference is greater than the 1.4-percent margin of error.

“This is the first time that President Arroyo has a statistically significant lead, although small, over Mr. Poe,” said Pulse Asia executive director Ana Maria Tabunda.

Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo and Poe were tied at 32 percent in the previous Pulse Asia survey conducted between February 16 and March 20.

A separate survey made by the Social Weather Stations (SWS) on March 11 to 19 also had the two leading candidates in a statistical tie, with Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo getting 32.9 percent versus Poe's 34.9 percent. The SWS survey involving 2,000 respondents has an error margin of 2.2 percent.

In another SWS survey conducted from February 17 to 25, the President scored 31.8 percent, while Poe got 30.5 percent. The narrow margin put the two contenders in a statistical deadlock.

The latest Pulse Asia survey result showed former Sen. Raul Roco in third place with 12 percent, followed by Sen. Panfilo Lacson with 10 percent, and Bro. Eddie Villanueva of the Jesus is Lord charismatic movement with three percent.

Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo's acceptance in Metro Manila, which is traditionally pro-opposition, improved by six percent, while Poe went down by five percent.

The President retained domination in the Visayas, but Poe was strongest in Mindanao and among the working class.

Pulse Asia also noted that erstwhile undecided voters have started to make a choice as Election Day draws nearer.

The survey indicated that the number of undecided voters dropped to 22 percent from 35 in the previous survey, while those who said they may still make up their minds decreased to 19 percent from 23 percent.

In the vice presidential race, Sen. Noli “Kabayan” de Castro, running mate of Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo, continued to enjoy a comfortable lead over Sen. Loren Legarda of the Koalisyon ng Nagkakaisang Pilipino. De Castro had 49 percent compared to Legarda's 35 percent. Herminio Aquino, running mate of Roco, was third with four percent.

Palace denies charges of “Oplan Checkmate”

Malacañang vehemently denied today allegations that it will launch a so-called “Oplan Checkmate” designed to ensure the victory of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo in the May 10 elections.

Deputy Presidential Spokesman and Cabinet Secretary Ricardo Saludo, in a press briefing at the Palace, said the allegations were merely part of a black propaganda being waged by the opposition camps against the President and her senatorial team in the Koalisyon ng Katapatan at Karanasan para sa Kinabukasan (K-4).

“We would not sabotage the country’s future by undertaking such a plan that is merely fictitious and part of the black propaganda that is being held against the administration,” Saludo said.

Saludo also said President Macapagal-Arroyo has maintained her policy of having “honest, orderly, peaceful and credible” elections, enunciated in 2001 when she took over the presidency from the failed Estrada administration.

Saludo said next month’s electoral exercise is crucial to enable the next administration to govern in a “stable and productive way” until 2010.

The Palace official likewise underscored the relevance of the elections in retaining investors’ confidence in the domestic economy which is basically essential to a speedy economic recovery and creation of more employment opportunities.

Palace: “No plans of pulling out RP contingent in Iraq”

The Philippine government has no plans yet of pulling out the 41 Filipino peacekeepers in Iraq to ensure the safety of fellow Filipinos working in the war-torn country.

According to Deputy Presidential Spokesman and Cabinet Secretary Ricardo Saludo, the Middle East Preparedness Team headed by Ambassador Roy Cimatu and other foreign affairs officials are closely monitoring the situation in Iraq and would immediately advise President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo in what course of action to take.

“Here, we are awaiting the proposals, suggestions, recommendations of our officials on the ground there because they would know how feasible it is at the moment and what would be the best course of action to take. So, we await their report, we are in coordination with them and we will advise our people of what action would be taken as soon as it becomes clearer,” Saludo said in a press briefing this afternoon in Malacañang.

Saludo assured the relatives of overseas Filipino workers (OFWs) in Iraq that the repatriation program is part of standing measures the government is planning to assist every Filipino national in Iraq.

“Our mission there is to continue to assist the Iraqi people in their efforts to build the democracy and to resume progress and development and we will look at the situation on the ground and see whether we are still able to assist them in any way. And to ensure that our nationals are safeguarded, we shall have to defer that decision until we make our own assessment of our role and also of the safety of our nationals,” he added.

Saludo expressed the hope for the smooth resolution of the conflict in Iraq.

GMA's lead over FPJ shows public appreciation of her work for the people — Palace

Malacañang welcomed today the results of a survey, conducted nationwide March 27-April 4, 2004 by Pulse Asia, giving President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo a significant 3 percent lead over her closest rival, opposition presidential candidate Fernando Poe Jr., in the May 10 elections.

In separate radio interviews this morning, both Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye and Presidential Campaign Spokesman Michael Defensor expressed elation over the favorable survey outcome.

Bunye said that the President's 34 percent rating to Poe's 31 percent shows that the people appreciate the President's focus on governance, particularly in providing them services in health and education, and livelihood projects.

"Nakikita na ng ating mga kababayan kung gaano kasinsero ang ating Pangulo sa kanyang paglilingkod (The people now see how sincere the President is serving them)," Bunye said.

Bunye noted that even in Metro Manila, which has been considered a traditional opposition bailiwick, the President's rating increased by an impressive 6 percent while that of Poe declined by 5 percent.

He said that the President has emphasized the provision of basic services to the people of Metro Manila, like health, education and clean water, and that she has made herself "visible" through frequent visits to urban centers.

"We are very pleased with this development," he said, adding that President Macapagal-Arroyo will continue to bring the government closer to the people and articulate on her program of governance.

Defensor noted that President's lead exceeded the survey's margin of error of 1.4 percent, indicating that this is a clear advantage on the part of the President. "Lumamang na kami nang kaunti. Inaasahan naming sa darating na mga araw ay talagang gaganda pang lalo ang ratings ng ating Pangulo (The President enjoys a slight edge and in the future, we expect her ratings to further improve)," he said.

Statement of Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye: On Roco's health

The President is concerned about Senator Raul Roco's health. She wishes him well.

Kidnapping of two Malaysians won't affect friendly ties between RP and Malaysia

Malaysian Ambassador Mohamed Taufik Mohamed Noor said today that the abduction of two Malaysians, along with an Indonesian, off Sabah's Linkian Island would have no adverse effect on the friendly relations between the Philippines and Malaysia.

In an interview at Malacañang following his farewell call on President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, Ambassador Taufik said that his country and the Philippines are signatories to an agreement on combating transnational crimes. "Cross-border crimes should not affect bilateral relations of countries," he said.

The outgoing ambassador said that the Malaysian government had been assured by both the Department of National Defense (DND) and the Department of Foreign Affairs (DFA) of their full cooperation in tracking down the kidnapers.

Taufik said the Malaysian government had been informed that the kidnapers were Tausug-speaking. According to press reports, the kidnapers could be members of the Abu Sayyaf terrorist group.

For security reasons, he declined to reveal the names of the kidnap victims, saying only that they are Malaysians of Chinese descent. The Indonesian is also of Chinese origin.

On the resumption of the formal peace talks between the Philippine government and the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF), he said that preparations for the parley have been progressing well. The Malaysian government has been serving as third party convenor of the peace talks.

“I am encouraged by the fact that the Malaysian advance team, which visited the country last month, has reported favorably on the formation of a monitoring team,” he said. The advance team and the forthcoming arrival of the monitoring team will boost the confidence of both sides in sitting down and tackling the issues once and for all, he added.

Taufik said that Malaysia remains committed to hosting the formal peace talks, although no date has yet been fixed.

During his the farewell call, Taufik was conferred the Order of Sikatuna, with the Rank of Datu (Grand Cross), by the President. The presidential citation states that the President, by virtue of the power vested in her by law, has caused His Excellency Mohammed Taufik, ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary of Malaysia to be inscribed in the roster of “The Order of Sikatuna.”

GMA cites role of Vietnam in forging Code of Conduct in South China Sea

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today lauded Vietnam for the active role it played, along with the Philippines, in forging the Declaration of the Regional Code of Conduct in the South China Sea.

In a courtesy call this morning at the Music Room of Malacañang, the President told Le Van Bang, special envoy of the Vietnamese Prime Minister Phan Van Khai, that the agreement, signed in November 2002 in Phnom Penh, Cambodia by the 10-member Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) and China had eased tension in the disputed territory.

The Philippines, Vietnam, China, along with Brunei Darussalam and Taiwan, have claims on the Spratly group of islands that straddle the South China Sea.

Under the treaty, the claimant countries have agreed to resolve their territorial and jurisdictional disputes by peaceful means, without resorting to the use of force.

The President also expressed her support for efforts to find a diplomatic solution to the impasse on the entry of Myanmar into the ASEAN-European Union (ASEM) meeting.

The visiting special envoy conveyed the invitation of the Vietnamese government for the President to attend the 5th ASEM summit meeting to be hosted by Hanoi in November 2004.

The Chief Executive also thanked the Vietnamese government for the warm reception that she got during her state visit to Hanoi on Nov. 6 to 7, 2002.

She conveyed her best wishes for the success of the ASEM-5 summit meeting.

ASEAN member countries are the Philippines, Brunei Darussalam, Thailand, Indonesia, Malaysia, Singapore, Vietnam, Laos, Cambodia and Myanmar.

Aside from Myanmar, Cambodia and Laos are also seeking entry into the ASEM summit meeting.

China, South Korea and Japan are also members of ASEM.

UE counterparts in the ASEM are United Kingdom, France, Germany, Italy, Belgium, The Netherlands, Luxemburg, Spain, Portugal, Ireland, Sweden, Greece, Denmark, Finland, Iceland, and European Commission.

Present during the courtesy call to President Arroyo were Vietnam Ambassador to the Philippines Dinh Tich, Deputy Chief of ASEM-5 Secretariat Nguyen Ten Minh, Foreign Affairs Executive Director of European Office Assistant Secretary Jaime Yambao and DFA Executive Director for Asia-Pacific Office Theresa Lazaro.

GMA orders DFA to check on conditions of Filipinos in Iraq

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo instructed today the Department of Foreign Affairs to check the status of the Philippine humanitarian contingent in Iraq and verify whether there was indeed a Filipino among those foreign civilians hostages by Iraqi vigilantes.

In a radio interview, Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said the President's instruction was for the DFA officials to assure the safety of the Filipinos helping in the reconstruction and rebuilding of Iraq and in strengthening the democracy of the war-torn nation.

Newspaper reports said that the Filipino civilian hostage was later released by his captors.

Bunye said volunteers who have finished their tour of duty and have not renewed their contracts are back in the country while those who opted to stay are doing so on their own volition.

The Presidential Spokesman cited the importance of the country's role as member of the international community against terrorism, saying the government is ready to cooperate with them anytime.

He urged the citizenry to continue to be vigilant to protect the gains that the country has achieved.

"We should always be alert," he said. "We have to be eternally vigilant to protect our democracy. But we don't need to be hysterical. We have to go about our normal ways but we should always be on the alert."

In an earlier statement, Bunye said the country has been involved in the fight against terror even before 9-11, noting how it took a stand with the global community, entailing great sacrifices and formidable responsibilities.

"We have gained considerably against terrorist groups through sharing intelligence, information and training with other countries and we expect enough goodwill commensurate to our efforts and sacrifices," Bunye said.

IMF: Arroyo reforms resulted in economic growth

Reforms in government spending, investment incentives and reduced corruption under the administration of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo resulted in a healthy 4.5 percent growth in the Philippine economy despite efforts by various sectors to destroy the economic competitiveness of the country.

This was contained in a report on the Philippines by the International Monetary Fund (IMF) which also warned that sustained economic growth could be put at risk by a change in government leadership.

"The economic outlook for the Philippines is likely to remain subject to considerable uncertainty in the period ahead, particularly the uncertain political environment ahead of the elections, which could bring downside risk to the bright outlook," the IMF said in the diplomatic language of its report.

The IMF said that growth under the Arroyo administration was better than expected despite the impact of the war in Iraq, a military mutiny, legal cases against the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas, the attempt to impeach the Chief Justice and the resignation of the Finance secretary.

The IMF said that efforts to destroy the economic competitiveness of the Philippines were the causes of the depreciation of the peso against the dollars. This belied efforts by opposition politicians to blame the President for the deterioration of the peso-dollar exchange rate.

The IMF pointed out that under President Arroyo's policies, gross reserves rose to $16.9 billion by the end of the year, 'well above short-term debt.' Her tight control over spending and improved tax collection resulted in reducing deficit in 2003 to 4.9 percent of GDP, an improvement over the 5.5 percent levels of 2002.

Inflation stayed at an average of three percent in 2003, well below a 4.5 to 5.5 percent target for the year. This means that consumer prices stayed at a manageable range, well within reach of ordinary wage earners.

The President directed government spending heavily on infrastructure and human resources development, even as she strengthened governance by fighting corruption, reduced deficit and debt. These steps would insure sustained growth in the future, the IMF reported.

The IMF noted that President Macapagal-Arroyo is investing considerable resources in human resource development. This includes increased spending in education as a continuing foundation of a sustained economic growth in the future.

The IMF also noted that the President has strictly strengthened transparency in government, pursued efforts against corruption, including life style checks and reduced excessive regulations. These efforts, the IMF said, have improved the climate for investments in the country.

The IMF said that full implementation of the anti-money laundering law will remove threats of international sanctions against the Philippines. This would mean that international banks would be more inclined to support government efforts to finance infrastructure projects and remove barriers for overseas workers channeling remittances through the banks.

The country's economic growth was also supported by rising agricultural production and remittances by overseas Filipinos.

The IMF report was made as part of its annual consultation with the Philippines on how the country could sustain its momentum of economic development and to determine areas for further development.

NPC bigwigs formalize pledge of support for GMA

A total of 33 congressmen from the Nationalist People's Coalition (NPC), led by Isabela Congressman Faustino Dy III, NPC chairman, today formalized their pledge of support for the bid of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo for a full six-year term in the May 10 elections.

In a call in Malacañang, the NPC congressmen assured the President that they would actively campaign for her election among their constituents.

Only 28 of the NPC congressmen joined the call in Malacañang but the remaining five expressed their solidarity with the group in supporting the President's candidacy.

Earlier, Dy has assured the President that majority of the ranking NPC members would back her candidacy.

Tarlac Congressman Gilberto Teodoro, a nephew of businessman Eduardo "Danding" Cojuangco, NPC founder and chairman emeritus, has earlier assured the President that he would exert all efforts so that she would win "overwhelmingly" in Tarlac.

Among those who called on the President were Congressmen Felix Fuentebella of Camarines Sur, Conrado Estrella III of Pangasinan, Benasing Macarambong of Lanao del Sur, Marcelino Libanan of Eastern Samar, Vincent Garcia of Davao City, Eduardo Veloso of Leyte, Rodolfo Albano of Isabela, Roseller Barinaga of Zamboanga del Norte, Douglas Cagas of Davao del Sur, Joseph Ace Durano of Cebu, Generoso Tulagan of Pangasinan, Tomas Dumpit of La Union;

Gerry Espina of Biliran, Francisco Nepumoceno of Pampanga, Jeslie Lapus of Tarlac, Simeon Kintanar of Cebu, Jurdin Romualdo of Camiguin, Juan Bondoc of Pampanga, Nerissa Soon-Ruiz of Cebu, Agapito Badelles of Lanao del Norte, Jesnar Falcon of Surigao del Sur.

Earlier on, local political bigwigs have been hopping into the ruling Koalisyon ng Katapatan at Karanasan para sa Kinabukasan (K-4) bandwagon as the President, vice presidential bet Sen. Noli “Kabayan” de Castro, and her senatorial team barnstormed major cities and provinces across the country.

The bandwagon syndrome had already resulted in the clinching of the Bicol Region and the vote-rich provinces of Tarlac and Laguna, and of late, Mountain Province in Northern Luzon which the President visited on Easter Sunday. The President has also received bipartisan support from leaders of vote-rich Cebu and Pangasinan provinces, as well as in most parts of Mindanao.

The President and the K-4 coalition have also welcomed into the K-4 fold a team of top local officials from the camp of presidential candidate Raul Roco. The group was led by former Alyansa ng Pag-asa Eastern Visayas regional coordinator Emil Ong.

Ong’s departure from the Roco camp is seen as ominous of the impending collapse of Roco’s political machinery in Eastern Visayas.

A week before Ong’s defection, President Macapagal-Arroyo also received an overwhelming declaration of support from Bicolandia leaders led by Camarines Sur Gov. Luis Villafuerte, his Vice Governor Imelda Papin, Camarines Norte Gov. Jesus Typoco, Albay Gov. Al Francis Bichara, Sorsogon Gov. Raul Lee and Masbate Gov. Antonio Kho.

In Laguna, incumbent Gov. Teresita “Ningning” Lazaro, previously a supporter of deposed President Joseph Estrada, organized a mass oath-taking of 609 municipal and barangay coordinators as members of the Kaibigan ni Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo (KGMA).

Workers urged to rally behind GMA

Labor leaders today called on the country’s workforce to rally behind the candidacy of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo “to sustain the momentum of the country’s economic growth.”

“Only President Arroyo can propel a sustained economic growth generated by more domestic and foreign investments,” Nelson Ramirez of the United Filipino Seafarers said in an interview.

Noel Josue, president of the Kaibigan ng OCWs (overseas contract workers), also called on his colleagues to support Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo’s bid for a full six-year term.

“Without Gloria (Macapagal-Arroyo) at the helm of government, we can expect capital and investments to leave the country. This means that there will be more jobs lost as plants will have to close,” Josue said.

Ramirez is also chairman of the party list group Pinoy Overseas Party (POP), with Josue sitting as secretary general of the party.

“What this country needs is more investments so that Filipino skills and talents could be harnessed to build the nation instead of the educated class seeking work overseas,” Ramirez said.

The two labor leaders pointed out that investors would only put their money in a country whose leaders have proven ability to ensure economic stability and business viability.

“Only President Macapagal-Arroyo has shown the ability to manage the economy and has a clear program for economic growth,” Josue noted.

Both men also cited results of a research conducted by the CitiGroup Inc., an investment bank, which suggested to foreign investments a stay in their investment plans in the Philippines until President Macapagal-Arroyo obtains another mandate in the May 10 elections.

“The signs are clear. Investors are not certain that (opposition presidential candidate Fernando) Poe would be able to make the right decision on the economy. He might have good economic advisers, but investors doubt he can make an economic decision,” Ramirez stressed.

He said they still have to hear Poe personally articulate on his economic program for the country, and not merely echo his advisers’ opinions. “He should be able to face public scrutiny of his program.”

Josue said Poe should “get out from behind the skirts of his spokespersons.”

“If he cannot explain his own position by himself, then he is not fit to serve as president. The last thing this country needs is a dummy being manipulated by vested interest. As far as can be seen, Poe is nothing more than a dummy,” Josue added.

The two labor leaders also pointed out that investments reached P56.74 billion last year under the Arroyo administration, representing a growth of P55 billion over the 2002 figure. In addition, there was a P33.27-billion new capital from foreign investors, plus $675.8 million investments in the local stock market.

Business expansions generated by the new investments created over three million jobs across the country. “All of these jobs would be lost if the investors leave the country,” the labor leaders warned.

“Workers who wanted to keep their jobs and the unemployed who hope to find work should take the elections seriously and bet on the candidate who can best assure them job security and more job availability,” they added.

GMA vows to provide water to all barangays

CAVITE CITY—Given the chance, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo wants to have clean potable water in all waterless barangays in the country.

“This is part of our platform in the government. We’ll build on the strong start. At kung bibigyan po ako ng susunod na anim na taon lahat ng barangay ng Pilipinas ay magkakaroon ng dumadaloy na malinis na tubig (If I will be given the chance to serve six more years, I want all barangays in the Philippines to have clean water),” the President said after inspecting the ongoing “Patubig ni Gloria” project at Barangay 62-M here.

The President revealed her plans when she visited this city for the second time in a span of only two days. The President went here last Sunday (April 11) to inspect the Patubig project in Barangay 10-M.

Local and barangay officials from six barangays led by Barangay Captain Benjamin Enriquez of Barangay 62-M warmly received the President upon her arrival here at exactly 3:00 in the afternoon.

In her remarks, the President informed the residents that the bidding for the construction of new deep wells in barangays 62-M, 62-A, 62-B, 61-A, 53-A and 53-B has been completed.

The contractor who won the award in the public bidding, she said, would start drilling for the construction of the new deep well in the area on Friday.

“Sa Biyernes ay magsisimula na ang drilling sa bagong deep well ng sa ganoon pagkatapos ng drilling ay magtuloy-tuloy na ang pagdaloy ng malinis na tubig sa inyong mga gripo (On Friday, drilling for the new deep well will start so that clean water could now flow freely from your faucets),” the President said.

The Chief Executive informed them that since the Patubig ni Gloria project was started last Dec. 31, some two million households in the country are already being served especially in Metro Manila, and the provinces Rizal, Cavite and Bulacan.

Statement of the President: Re Iraq situation

While the Philippine government is determined to help the Iraqi people in rebuilding their nation, the safety of our peacekeeping forces in Iraq is still our utmost concern.

The government will take all precautionary measures to ensure the safety of our contingent.

The decision on whether or not to withdraw our peacekeeping forces will depend on the security situation in Iraq in the days to come.

But our commitment to democracy in Iraq and to the progress of the Iraqi people is unsullied.

We stand shoulder to shoulder with the international community in this commitment and that is why we are not making any rush decisions.

The Good News: GMA's efforts in attracting foreign investors paying off

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's efforts to attract investors appear to be paying off.

This, after investments in government-run economic zones surged 516 percent in the first quarter of the year, reaching P21.87 billion compared to only P3.55 billion in the same period last year.

Philippine Economic Zone Authority (PEZA) Director General Lilia de Lima, in a report to Malacañang, said the amount is equal to 77 percent of the total investments registered by the agency for the entire 2003.

"The surge could be attributed to the decision of more multinational and local companies to make their presence felt in the Philippines by setting up more facilities while at the same time expanding existing plants," de Lima said.

She said the number of projects approved by PEZA also increased by 39 percent to 78 projects from the first quarter of the year from the 56 projects in the same quarter last year.

For the month of March alone, PEZA-registered investments went up by a hefty 1,830 percent to P8.99 billion from a measly P466 million approved in the same month last year. The number of projects increased by 63 percent from 16 to 26.

The report indicated that investments in the information technology sector jumped 89 percent to P2.6 billion in the first three months of the year from P1.37 billion in the same period last year. The number of IT projects doubled to 14 this year from only seven last year.

For the month of March alone, PEZA approved P5.48 billion in new and expansion projects of existing ecozone locators and another P1.77 billion from new enterprises that are setting up new facilities in the Philippines for the first time. It also okayed P1.62 billion worth of investments last month.

Big-ticket projects approved by PEZA last month include the P3.14 billion expansion project of Japanese-owned Nidec Philippines Corp. and the P1.57 billion steel plant of Global Steelworks International Inc. (National Steel Corp.) in Iligan City.

Palace welcomes Ombudsman ruling clearing GMA, two DOJ officials of graft on Maynilad deal

Malacañang has welcomed an Ombudsman decision clearing President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo and two ranking officials of the Department of Justice (DOJ) of graft charges in connection with a government deal with the Maynilad Water Services, Inc.

“It is a very welcome decision and it is a reiteration of the law,” Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said.

Bunye also chided the President’s accusers by insinuating that they were ignorant of the law providing that the Chief Executive enjoys immunity from suit and could only be removed from office through impeachment.

“Parang naturuan pa nga iyong nag-file ng complaint na ito. It looks like they don’t know that the President is immune from suit and the only way to remove a president is by filing an impeachment complaint,” Bunye pointed out.

Bunye also stressed that the primary consideration of the deal with Maynilad was to continue supplying clean water to the people residing in the utility’s service grid consisting of the western portion of Metro Manila.

“This (potable water) is a very important commodity that should also be made available to the consumers,” the Palace official said.

The Ombudsman, in a 20-page decision written by Teresita Butardo-Tacata, noted that there was nothing in the records to show that Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo had a hand in the transaction.

“There is nothing from the case records that would demonstrate the participation of (the President) in the negotiation of the agreement that led to the completion of the controversial Amendment No. 2,” the ruling stated.

The Ombudsman also noted that the complainant, lawyer Melanio Mauricio who is also an opposition senatorial candidate, “merely drew conclusions from unreliable sources, the veracity of which has to be ascertained together with the inclusion of President Arroyo who participation in the case was practically out of the way.”

The Ombudsman likewise gave the other respondents in the case a clean bill of health. They are Acting Justice Secretary Merceditas Gutierrez and Undersecretary Manuel Teehankee, and executives of Maynilad and Benpres Holdings.

GMA to focus on 6 basic public services if elected

CABUYAO, Laguna – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo enumerated the six basic public services that will serve as the foundations of her next administration if given a fresh mandate in the May 10 elections.

In a local caucus held Tuesday night at the Gulod Elementary School Covered Court in Barangay Gulod, Cabuyao, the President made known her top priority in her next six years in office.

The priority programs are the creation of jobs, livelihood, education, health care, essential services, and electricity, the President said.

In job creation, the President stressed her plans of sustaining the generation of 1.1 million new jobs a year in the next six years.

She said that in her short presidency, her government was able to provide P21 billion on soft loan assistance to small and medium enterprises (SMEs).

The President said she is willing to triple it up to P63 billion for future SME entrepreneurs and also to cover those jobless Filipinos victimized by labor disputes.

To complement the recently launched “Isang Iskolar sa Bawat Mahirap na Pamilya” program in University of Perpetual Help (UPH) in Biñan, Laguna under the “education for all” project, President Macapagal-Arroyo also promised the construction of more school buildings to solve the shortage in classrooms.

She added that in the past three years, the Macapagal-Arroyo administration has distributed some 20,000 computer units to different schools nationwide and would provide one computer per school in her next administration.

The Chief Executive mentioned that for the first time majority of poor families have been enrolled on Philippine Health Insurance Corporation (PhilHealth) that will provide them free hospitalization.

Her next target is to continue providing medicines at half the price for indigent families.

And for the basic service, President Macapagal-Arroyo will continue to provide water to waterless areas in country.

Presently, she said, around four million households are now receiving potable water in Metro Manila, Quezon City and nearby provinces of Rizal and Cavite under her “Patubig ni Gloria” program.

Lastly, President Macapagal-Arroyo will lower the cost of electricity in the country to make it the cheapest in Asia.

She said that upon assuming power in 2001, the price of electricity in the Philippines was the second most expensive in the region but she lowered it to sixth in the past three years.

“We will continue our electric reform that I have started to achieve our goal to make the price of electricity in the Philippines the cheapest in Asia,” said the President.

With the President during the caucus were her running mate Senator Noli “Kabayan” de Castro and Koalisyon ng Katapatan at Karanasan para sa Kinabukasan (K-4) senatorial bet Pia Cayetano.

President Macapagal-Arroyo was welcomed here by K-4 provincial candidates led by Laguna Governor Teresita Lazaro, vice gubernatorial bet Edwin Olivarez and Calamba City Mayor Severino Lajara, who is running for congress in the 2nd District of Laguna.

Steps taken to cope with possible water lack

The government has taken the necessary measures to cope with the impending water shortage well before it surfaces, Malacañang said today.

It has implemented water conservation and has taken to cloud seeding to induce rain, Presidential Deputy Spokesman Ricardo Saludo said in a radio interview this morning.

And to make up for the reduced water flow to rice lands in parts of Bulacan and Pampanga, the government has resorted to dig shallow tube wells.

The government has set aside an emergency fund of P10 million to P50 million to dig the shallow tube wells and has implemented new techniques in planting to insure a bountiful harvest, Saludo said.

The water level at the Angat Dam in Bulacan, dipped below the critical level of 180 meters to 179.92 meters Tuesday.

During the water crisis that hit Metro Manila and Luzon in May 1998, the water level at Angat Dam dipped to as low as 158 meters.

Angat Dam supplies 97 percent of Metro Manila's potable water requirements and water for irrigation in Bulacan and Pampanga.

The Department of Environment and Natural Resources (DENR) then said it had already identified deep well sources of ground water, each of which can be tapped for 2,800 cubic meters in addition to the desalination plant in Sucat which can produce 4,000 cubic meters daily to lessen the dependence on Angat Dam for water supply in Metro Manila.

Besides the continuous call to conserve water, the DENR also has been looking for measures to lessen non-revenue or unaccounted water. The area covered by Maynilad Water, Inc. loses about 71 percent of its water or about 1.6 million cubic liters a day. In the Manila Water Company, Inc. coverage the losses are 51 percent or 770,238 cubic meters a day.

Palace: Surge in GMA rating stops further fall of the peso

Malacañang today said that the result of recent survey showing President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo gaining a significant lead in the presidential derby has somewhat calmed the market, resulting in the appreciation of the peso.

In an interview, Deputy Presidential Spokesman Ricardo Saludo quoted Bangko Sentral Governor Rafael Buenaventura as saying that the threat of political instability has subsided because of this development.

Buenaventura has said there was no more fear of a free fall in the peso less than a month before the country goes to the polls.

The peso Tuesday rallied to its highest level of 55.80 in nearly three months after the latest opinion polls showed the President, seeking a full term, surging into the lead over movie actor and opposition standard bearer Fernando Poe Jr.

Add to this, Saludo said, the fact that the country's international reserve has risen and breached the $16 billion mark.

"Kaya naman ang merkado ay napanatag na at hindi tayo kukulangin sa dolyar sa mga darating na buwan (That is why the market has somewhat calmed as we have ample supply of dollar reserves)," he said.

The International Monetary Fund (IMF), in its report on the Philippines the other day, said that efforts to destroy the economic competitiveness of the Philippines were the causes of the depreciation of the peso against the dollar, belying efforts by critics who said the President was to blame for the depreciation of the peso.

The IMF pointed out that under President Macapagal-Arroyo, gross reserves rose well above short-term debt due to her tight control over spending.

Saludo noted that investments approved by the Board of Investments has also risen 13-fold in the first quarter alone.

BOI figures showed that investments grew to P108 billion from only P7.5 billion in the same period last year.

“Ito ay nagpapahiwatig ng umaakyat na tiwala o confidence sa ating bansa sa taong ito (This only goes to show the growing investor confidence in our country this year),” he noted.

Palace explains mechanics of gov’t scholarship program

Two education-oriented programs of the Macapagal-Arroyo administration complement each other to ensure that indigent families can send at least one child each through college.

The two programs are the “Iskolar sa Bawat Mahirap na Pamilya” launched on Easter Sunday by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo and the Student Assistance Fund for Education for Strong Republic (SAFE 4 SR) which was set in motion earlier this year.

Deputy Presidential Spokesman Ricardo Saludo, in an interview this morning with radio station DZRB, explained that the scholarship program was designed to enable five million poor but deserving students to study for at least two years in any state college or university, or finish a two-year technical or vocational formal training.

On the other hand, the SAFE 4 SR, which is akin to the study-now pay-later scheme, advances funds to enable senior college students to settle obligations with their respective schools so that they could join the graduation ceremonies and receive their diplomas.

To avail themselves of the “Iskolar” program, the prospective family-beneficiaries need only to present their PhilHealth Family Card to the school administrators who will provide the funds to cover tuition and incidental expenses such as reference books and other materials.

Saludo explained that the scholarship funds would actually come from the national government, but coursed through the Commission on Higher Education.

Scholars who opt for technical or vocational training can enroll in schools accredited with the Technical Education and Skills Development Authority (TESDA).

Saludo also said financial assistance obtained under the SAFE 4 SR is interest-free and payable from five to 10 years.

“Education for many is the key to rebirth and transformation. Today, I signed an executive order expanding access to secondary education through the “Isang Iskolar Para sa Mahirap na Pamilya Program,” the Chief Executive said at the launching rite for the “Iskolar” program.

“Now, any capable, diligent Filipino child can get a college or vocational diploma through our free public elementary and secondary schools in the Iskolar and SAFE 4 SR programs,” the President added.

The “Iskolar ng Pamilya” program covers the first two years of college education with the government shouldering P20,000 for the period for basic tuition, transportation and food allowance.

The President said the programs would make education accessible to all, especially to the poorest of the poor.

Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo also noted that only 10 out of 100 pupils that enter grade school finish college. She said education is one sure way of pulling people out of poverty. A successful college or vocational graduate can help the rest of the family, she said.

Under the executive order implementing the “Iskolar” program, the CHED and TESDA were designated to spearhead implementation of the program in consultation with the Department of Education, the National Economic and Development Authority, the Department of Social Welfare and Development (DSWD), Department of Health (DOH) and Department of Interior and Local Government (DILG).

GMA calls on business leaders to join her in securing the country’s future, bares 6-point agenda

Two days after the release of an opinion poll showing her gaining a significant lead in the presidential derby, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo asked the business community today to join her in securing the future of the country around a platform “that is pro-poor, fiscally responsible and forward thinking.”

In a speech at the joint general membership luncheon meeting hosted by the Makati Business Club (MBC) at the Hotel Intercontinental in Makati City, the President outlined a pro-poor agenda for the next six years, vowing to lead the Philippines to a new era of unity and prosperity.

“Much is at stake in this election,” she said. “We must offer hope, not fear, sunlight not darkness. We must take the hopes and dreams for the poor seriously. The poor of this nation deserve no less. We ignore them at our own peril.”

The President told the “movers and shakers” of the country’s business community that the future is in their hands. “Let us secure that future together,” she said.

In the next six years, the President pledged to:

- Triple loans to self-employed and small business owners;
- Build 3,000 new schools, grant a college or vocational-technical scholarship to every qualified poor family and put a computer in every school;
- Bring electricity to 1,500 barangays a year and reduce the cost to become the lowest in the region;
- Bring clean water to all 45,000 barangays;
- Reduce by half the price of commonly-used medicine; and
- Create one million jobs every year.

“Through the reforms I have made – and will continue to make – I will continue to increase revenue collection, clamp down on tax cheats and cut waste, fraud and abuse in our government,” the President stressed.

The President also pledged to continue the fight for self-sufficiency in rice, more roads, bridges and highways, more property rights and more legal rights.

“Most importantly, I will fight for the people who have no voice,” she said.

The Chief Executive, seeking a full six-year term in next month’s polls, noted how she toiled hard in her first three years to develop a three-pronged economic strategy to make the free enterprise system work and undo the neglect of the previous administration.

First, she said, she increased investments that provided people with education and training they need to get high wage work, including more scholarships with English as the prime teaching language, and scores of other practical investments for equipping the people.

Second, she said, she strengthened international ties and regained the confidence of international investors resulting in a 26 percent increase in direct foreign investment that were directly responsible for millions of new jobs as a result of investments from companies like Intel, Toyota, Ford, P&G, Federal Express, and UPS, among others.

Third, she said, she provided a major increase in support for the self-employed and small and medium-sized businesses that are really the backbone of the economy.

Saying her plan for the next six years is not an idle promise, the President claimed that she has the experience to deliver on her pledges.

“We must invest in our nation and our people if we are to succeed,” she pointed out. “The hardworking Filipino is the central pillar of the nation. The working poor deserve the right to a rising standard of living, fair access to the courts, clean water, affordable energy, a good education, high wage jobs and economic incentives for our self-employed and entrepreneurial class.”

She proposed a new Philippine nationalism based on championing the country’s most valuable asset, “the people of the Philippines, who work hard and play by the rules every day.”

“I intend to lead the Philippines to a new era of unity and prosperity. I intend to make the hard decisions and to provide the new, specific ideas to mark the beginning of the end of poverty as we know it. I intend to unite the nation based on respect for rich and poor alike. We are all in this together and must sink or swim together,” the President said.

The President said that the business leaders have a clear choice. “You can vote for a six-point plan of action and a record of accomplishment; or vote for someone who has no plan for education, no plan for clean water, no plan for job creation, no plan for health care, no plan for energy, and no plan for international relations,” she said.

In these challenging times, the President said, the country has a clear choice between two candidates: to move forward with an experienced, hands-on leader who has a specific platform for change; or take a risk of an inexperienced actor who is too reliant on advisors to make important decisions.

Management Association of the Philippines president David Balangue introduced the President during the luncheon meeting while MBC chairman Ricardo J. Romulo gave the welcome remarks.

Bishops Businessman Conference national co-chairman Ricardo S. Pascua delivered the invocation while MBC executive director Guillermo Luz called the meeting to order.

An open forum followed the President’s speech, with Cesar E. A. Virata, president of the Bankers Association of the Philippines, Francisco Guerra III, member of the American Chamber of Commerce, and Menardo Matero, director of the European Chamber of Commerce of the Philippines as panelists.

Reject politics of silence, people urged

Apparently concerned that an academically ill-prepared, but immensely popular political neophyte might win the May 10 presidential race, the University of Sto. Tomas (UST), the oldest university in Asia, went out of their way and spent a great deal of money to voice out its apprehensions.

The prestigious school bought full page advertorials in major newspapers to publicize their appeal to “reject the politics of silence and cosmetics that perpetuates the spell on the people of the photogenic and the ignominious.”

The school’s statement, entitled “New Politics, New Hope,” urged the electorate to “condemn the calculated silence of some candidates and compel them to speak their mind.”

Without mentioning names, the school officials were obviously referring to opposition presidential bet movie actor Fernando Poe Jr., a high school dropout, who has steadfastly evaded challenges to a debate on national issues. Poe has also consistently side-stepped public clamor for him to elaborate on his platform of government.

“Campaign strategists have so exploited the characteristic spell exerted by celebrities and personalities of Filipinos so that they feel that their candidates, whom they surround with the patina of show business (if the aspirants are not show-biz folks themselves) can win the ballot by taking a vow of silence,” the statement said.

It said that such silence “disguises their dull minds while betraying their dark motives.”

“By not addressing the issues, they deprive the people of making an intelligent choice. Their silence means they are enemies of democracy,” the statement stressed.

The UST called on the people to vote those who would work for national solidarity. “The majority of our people are the victims of the depredations of clannish, unreformed traditional politicians, whether young or old, an over-regimented and battered bureaucracy, whether civilian or military, a vicious oligarchy, a mercenary entertainment complex, and profiteering businessmen.”

The school noted that Philippine democracy faces another test with the holding of local and national elections on May 10.

The institution also enjoined the people to “banish escapism and fight for the truth.”

GMA allays fears of post-election disturbance

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo assured the nation today that she can deal with civil disturbance quickly even without bloodshed in the event it happens after the May 10 elections.

“I think I have already shown that in May 1, 2001 and Oakwood incidents,” she pointed out in an open forum that followed her speech in the President Candidates Series of ‘04 sponsored by the Makati Business Club during its Joint General Membership Meeting at the Hotel Inter-Continental in Makati City.

The President expressed the thought that the business community should have given her credits for having acquired the experience of dealing with such incidents.

The President, however, said that the business community should not be pessimistic. “While we are prepared for the work, we also prepare to go for the best, which is unity and reconciliation,” she said.

The President cited former President Fidel V. Ramos’ narrow victory in the 1992 presidential elections. “Yet he was very quickly able to unify the nation,” she said.

The Chief Executive stressed that she has been working on unifying the nation since her first day of her Presidency.

“But in a nation that was so divided, in EDSA II, in a nation when the gap between the rich and the poor was exploited in order to bring about the May 1 incident, we must continue to work for unity,” she said.

The President expressed the wish and intention that in her next administration, with a new electoral mandate, she will be able to fully unite the nation and truly bring about what is called by many as a government of national unity.

“It is something about healing and building the nation together,” she said.

RP now ‘net depositor’ of IMF, GMA says

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said the Philippines, if it wishes so, could stop borrowing from the International Monetary Fund (IMF) as the country is now a “net depositor” in the funding agency.

“Right now, kung gusto natin. Technically, puwede na tayong mag-graduate sa IMF (Right now, if we want. Technically, we could be a graduate from the IMF lending program),” the President said.

The President made the statement during an open forum with some 300 members of the CODE-NGO (Caucus of Development NGO), a network of some 2,500 non-government organizations (NGOs) nationwide, at the Diosdado Macapagal Hall of the UP College of Economics in Diliman, Quezon City.

The President arrived 3:00 p.m and was welcomed by CODE-NGO national coordinator Joel Pagsanghan and chairperson Rory Tolentino.

Among those present were Housing Secretary Mike Defensor, Social Welfare Secretary Corazon “Dinky” Soliman, Professor Alex Magno, and moderator Sheila Coronel of the Philippine Center for Investigative Journalism.

Under her administration, the President said the Philippines became a net depositor in the IMF.

“Yung ating deposit doon bilang stockholder ay mas malaki nang konti sa ating utang sa kanila (Our deposit as a stockholder is now a little bit higher than our debt to the IMF),” the President said.

If we really want to lessen our foreign debt, the President said, the country should lessen its foreign borrowings.

The President said she has canceled some borrowings during the last Donors’ Forum to stop the country’s debts from piling up.

The President said we should also lessen our budget deficit, hoping the country could have a balanced budget “sometime in the middle of my next term.”

The President said balancing the budget deficit is not that difficult since the country stayed in the ceiling in year 2001 and 2003 because of improved revenue collections and controlled government spending, and the renewed drive against graft and corruption.

GMA says RP would be a rice exporter in the next 6 years

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo reiterated today that the country would attain rice sufficiency this year, and eventually evolve into a rice exporter within the next six years.

In an open forum following her speech at the general membership meeting of the influential Makati Business Club held at the Hotel Inter-Continental in Makati City, the President said her administration spent an unprecedented P20 billion a year on agricultural modernization.

Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo said the government was able to vigorously pursue agriculture modernization with record expenditures, yet stayed within the deficit ceiling.

The President also told the MBC that dramatic improvements in rice harvest under her administration reduced rice importation from one million metric tons to only 500,000 metric tons, representing a 50 percent growth.

This year, there has been no importation of rice yet, the Chief Executive said.

Citing a report by Agriculture Secretary Luis Lorenzo, the President said Japanese investors are interested in buying Gloria hybrid rice and seeds being produced in the country.

Lorenzo told the President that some Japanese businessmen who have tasted the Philippines' hybrid rice found it more delicious than the Jasmine rice of Thailand.

Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo has been promoting the high-yielding "Gloria Rice" among the farmers in her provincial sorties, saying it would definitely improve their income by 200 to 300 percent.

"Our farmers are now into hybrid seed growing as well. Once we have a stable supply of hybrid rice, our government can help the farmers shift to rice exportation," the President said.

Statement of the President: Re Iraq situation

Today, I have instructed the Department of Foreign Affairs and Ambassador Roy A. Cimatu to set up an Iraq Team to prepare contingency plans for the safety, relocation or evacuation of Filipinos in Iraq in view of the prevailing security situation in that country.

The Iraq Team is also tasked to identify and locate all our nationals and establish working relationships with appropriate peace and order authorities in Iraq, taking into particular consideration the fact that civil order and authority have not been fully restored.

In the meantime, our Philippine Humanitarian Contingent (PHC) will stay on in Iraq. The PHC Commander, Brigadier General Jovito S. Palparan, Jr., has determined that his area of operational responsibility is safe and secure.

However, as precautionary measure, members of the contingent will limit their activities to their camps for the time being. We will also hold further deployment of other members of the PHC.

Eight (8) PNP officials currently with the contingent will be assigned to our Embassy in Baghdad to form part of our Iraq Team.

These PNP officials will work directly with local authorities and will, among others, help the team address situations critical to the safety of our nationals. They will also coordinate with security forces of private contractors that employ Filipinos.

The rest of our contingent will form a reserve that will be on call by the Iraq Team, to provide manpower for the survey of Filipinos and for possible relocation/evacuation, among others. We have sufficient transportation and communication equipment and other logistics already on the ground. We will provide additional resources as may be necessary.

The DFA has set up a hotline for relatives of Filipinos in Iraq (DFA 24-Hour Action Center 834-4000, 834-3333).

I call on all Filipinos in Iraq to have themselves registered, even if their contracts did not pass through Philippine agencies, or do not comply with the minimum standards imposed by our government.

We will coordinate all our actions with our Coalition Partners and the leaders of Iraq. Protecting our nationals in Iraq presents certain unique challenges. We will face these challenges and do what is necessary to meet our objectives.

We stand together with our Coalition Partners in building a secure and democratic society in Iraq.

Statement of Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye: Re Janjalani

With our success in reducing the capability of the Abu Sayyaf through the neutralization of its key leaders, we are confident that the bandits' chieftain, Khadaffy Janjalani, would fall soon.

Janjalani is the only one holding the Abu Sayyaf bandits together so we are certain that his neutralization would spell doom to this band of criminals and terrorists.

GMA inaugurates P83-M Hall of Justice in Pasig City

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has inaugurated the P83.5-million Pasig City Hall of Justice that would serve as one-stop shop of legal services for convenience of the people in filing, hearing and settling of their criminal and civil cases.

The President motored to Pasig from her previous engagements in Makati City and University of the Philippines in Diliman, Quezon City in time for the blessing of the Hall of Justice, officiated by Monsignor Rodolfo Gallardo. She cut the ceremonial ribbon to formally open the 8-storey building to the public.

The building will house 20 courtrooms of the Regional Trial Court and Metropolitan Trial Court, the City Prosecutor's Office, the Public Attorney's Office, Records Room, Parole and Probation Office, and other judicial offices.

In her speech, the President said that the new Hall of Justice exemplifies effective partnership of the national and city governments in strengthening the peace and justice program in the country.

"This Hall of Justice is a good contribution of Pasig to what I'd already said when I started as President, that there is a need for strengthening peace and justice in our country," she said.

The President lauded the leadership of Pasig City Mayor Soledad Cruz Eusebio for financing construction of the Hall of Justice building, as well as the continued success of her government in maintaining a climate conducive to both local and foreign investments in the city.

Earlier, Mayor Eusebio had told the President that the newly-constructed building is dedicated to the people of Pasig so that they can have easy access to judicial services.

Eusebio said that her administration believes in what Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo had stated in the first few months of her presidency, "that no person shall be deprived of his rights by reason of poverty."

"May this modern Hall of Justice be the site of perpetual disposition of legal matters or disputes to render everyman his due and be a by-word to all of the incomparable love for peace, equality and justice by Pasiguñeos," Mayor Eusebio said.

The building has a total floor area of 8,793 square meters, centralized air-conditioning system, narra parquet finish courtrooms, parking space and an elevator. The construction of the building started on June 7, 2003 and was completed April 1, 2004.

Executive Secretary Alberto Romulo, former Trade Secretary and K-4 senatorial candidate Manuel Roxas III, Housing Secretary and Presidential Campaign Spokesman Michael Defensor, and Metro Manila Development Authority Chairman Bayani Fernando accompanied the President to the inauguration rites.

Aside from Pasig City Mayor Eusebio, her husband former Mayor Vicente Eusebio, Vice Mayor Lorna Bernardo, Congressman Toti Cariño, Atty. Roman Romulo (a son of Executive Secretary Romulo), Association of Barangay Captains president Gregorio Rupisan, Jr., and Pasig RTC executive judge Edwin Villasor welcome the President.

Malacañang denies role in Roco's leave from presidential campaign

There is no secret meeting or any kind of arrangement between Malacañang and Alyansa ng Pag-asap presidential candidate Raul Roco, who has withdrawn from campaigning for the May 10 elections purportedly to seek medical treatment in the United States.

Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye made the denial in an interview with Radyo ng Bayan this morning.

"Definitely, walang pagpupulong, walang arrangement," he responded when asked whether Malacañang had any role in former Senator Roco's leave from the political campaign.

Bunye said that, like what President Macapagal-Arroyo has been doing, the people should continue to pray for the early recovery of former Senator Roco.

In the interview, the Presidential Spokesman also noted an article of political analyst Jose Abueva, a professor of the University of the Philippines, naming Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo as "the candidate to beat" in the presidential derby.

According to Prof. Abueva, Bunye said, the Pulse Asia survey used a broader base of respondents and, therefore, there was a slim margin of error. Conducted from March 27 to April 4, 2004, Pulse Asia gave the President a 3 percent edge over her closest rival, Koalisyon ng Nagkakaisang Pilipino presidential bet Fernando Poe, Jr.

Bunye said that the "3 percent lead, net of margin of error, will translate to (an edge) of about 500,000 to 600,000 votes" in favor of President Macapagal-Arroyo.

"Iniinterpret din niya itong latest moves in the camp of presidentiable Roco at ang analysis niya'y makakapabor sa Pangulong Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo (He also interpreted the latest moves in the camp of presidential Roco and his conclusion was that they would favor the President," he said.

GMA orders setting up of Iraq team to safeguard Filipinos in Iraq

LUCENA CITY — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today instructed the Department of Foreign Affairs (DFA) and Ambassador Roy Cimatu of the Middle East Preparedness Team to set up an Iraq Team to ensure the safety and possible relocation or evacuation of Filipinos working in the strife-torn country.

In a press conference at the West I Elementary School in Barangay Iyam here, the President said the Iraq Team is tasked to identify and locate all Filipino nationals and establish working relationships with appropriate peace and order authorities in Iraq.

"I have instructed the Department of Foreign Affairs and Ambassador Roy Cimatu to set up an Iraq Team to prepare contingency plans for the safety, relocation or evacuation of Filipinos in Iraq in view of the prevailing security situation in that country," she said.

The President arrived 10:15 a.m. here and was welcomed by Mayor Ramon Talaga, 2nd District Rep. Lyn Punzalan, 1st District Rep. Raffy Nantes, and Southern Luzon Command (SOLCOM) Commanding General Maj. Gen. Alfonso Dagudag.

The President was accompanied by Defense Secretary Eduardo Ermita, Housing Secretary and Campaign Spokesman Michael Defensor and Press Secretary Milton Alingod.

The President said the Iraq team was activated because civil order and authority have not been fully restored in Iraq.

The President said although the Philippine Humanitarian Contingent (PHC) will stay on in the meantime in Iraq, there will be no further deployment of other PHC members to the area.

But as precautionary measure, the President said members of the contingent would limit their activities to their camps for the time being.

“The PHC Commander, Brigadier General Jovito S. Palparan, Jr., has determined that his area of operational responsibility is safe and secure,” the President said.

The President said eight Philippine National Police (PNP) officials currently with the PHC would be assigned to the Philippine embassy in Baghdad to form part of the Iraq Team.

“These PNP officials will work directly with local authorities and will, among others, help the team address situations critical to the safety of our nationals. They will also coordinate with the security forces of private contractors that employ Filipinos,” the President said.

The President said the rest of the PHC contingent would form a reserve that would be on call by the Iraq Team, to provide manpower for the survey of Filipinos and for possible relocation/evacuation, among others.

“We have sufficient transportation and communication equipment and other logistics already on the ground. We will provide additional resources as may be necessary,” the President said.

The President said the DFA has already set up a hotline for relatives of Filipinos in Iraq. This is the DFA 24-Hour Action Center with telephone numbers 834-4000 and 834-3333.

“I call on all Filipinos in Iraq to have themselves registered, even if their contracts did not pass through Philippine agencies or do not comply with the minimum standards imposed by our government,” the President said.

The President said the PHC and the Iraq Team would coordinate all their actions with the coalition partners and the leaders of Iraq in building a secure and democratic society in Iraq.

“Protecting our nationals in Iraq present certain unique challenges. We will face these challenges and do what is necessary to meet our objectives,” the President said.

GMA assured of a clean sweep by K-4 in Cainta, Rizal

CAINTA, Rizal – A sweep by the administration’s senatorial candidates deserves another.

So goes the thinking of Cainta Mayor Nicanor Felix as he predicted last night another clean sweep by the administration’s senatorial line-up and a win for President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo in his town.

Felix delivered a 13-0 sweep for the administration in the 2001 senatorial elections and hopes to duplicate that this time with a 12-0 show for the Koalisyon ng Karanasan at Katapatan sa Kinabukasan (K-4).

“Though it will be tough, we are assuring President Macapagal-Arroyo that we will work hard again to deliver another sweep for the K-4 ticket, including the President and Sen. Noli de Castro,” Felix said in a chance interview here.

He stressed he has been pushing for block voting during his campaign sorties in a determined effort to achieve the sweep.

The President now enjoys support of the majority of Cainta’s 142,000 voters, said Felix who is going all-out for an overwhelming victory for her next month.

“A vote for me is a vote for President Macapagal-Arroyo,” said Felix.

Earlier in a rally here, the President praised Felix for the 13-0 sweep he delivered to the People’s Power Coalition in the 2001 polls.

Guardian International presents manifesto of support for GMA

LUCENA CITY — Some 200 officers and chapter leaders of the Guardians International Inc. today presented President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo with a manifesto of support for her bid for a six-year term in the May 10 elections.

Guardians International chairman retired Gen. Nestorio Gualberto and Banahaw Chapter “Supremo” ret. Gen. Edgardo Abenina handed the manifesto to the President during a rally at the West I Elementary School in Barangay Iyam here.

In supporting the President, the Guardians noted the “strong gains” the country has achieved under her administration.

They also expressed hope that the President and her entire Koalisyon ng Karanasan at Katapatan sa Kinabukasan (K-4) would continue to enjoy good health and sound mind and lead the country on the road to a strong Republic.

The President thanked the Guardians International for the expression of support and unity and for being an active partner of the government in providing better service to the people.

The President also thanked the group for calling on the people to unite behind her administration to achieve the reforms that every Filipino wants.

GMA acts to provide water to Cainta & Taytay, Rizal

CAINTA, Rizal — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo ordered the rehabilitation of an old pipeline in Ortigas Avenue Wednesday night to solve the 30-year-old problem of lack of water in parts of the towns of Cainta and Taytay.

Speaking at the launching of “Patubig ni Gloria” program in Sitio Upper and Lower Quatro in Valley Golf Subdivision, Barangay San Juan, Cainta, the President announced the joint rehabilitation project through the initiatives of Cainta Mayor Nicanor Felix and Taytay Mayor June Zapanta, together with the Manila Water Services, Inc.

“Tonight, the Manila Water Services, with the assistance of Mayor Felix of Cainta and Mayor Zapanta of Taytay, will start the construction and rehabilitation project of the water pipeline in Ortigas Avenue to bring clean drinking water to Cainta and Taytay,” she said amidst applause of some 5,000 residents who attended the ceremony.

President Macapagal-Arroyo promised that the rehabilitation project would be completed at the end of June. By July this year, the waterless residents of Cainta and Taytay would have clean water, a part of the basic services program of her next administration.

The Chief Executive has already directed 10 water tanks of potable water delivered to the residents of Barangay San Juan, here in Sitio Quatro, three times daily.

The daily rationing of clean drinking water would benefit some 6,000 households or 23,000 individuals in the barangay.

The President stressed that these 23,000 Cainta residents are only part of the four million people who have been receiving potable water since she initiated her Patubig ni Gloria program on December 31, 2003 in Barangay Payatas, Quezon City.

Present during the program were Mayor Felix, Barangay San Juan chairman Gilberto Intenga, Philippines Amusement and Gaming Corporation (PAGCOR) managing head Ram Agoncillo, Manila Water Services president Antonio Aquino, Metropolitan Waterworks and Sewerage System (MWSS) administrator Orlando Hondrade and former Energy Regulatory Commission Chairman Manuel Sanchez.

Gov't, NDF panels score breakthrough in peace talks

The formal peace talks between the Government of the Republic of the Philippines (GRP) and the National Democratic Front (NDF) has reached an important breakthrough with the secretariats of both parties naming their nominees for the Joint Monitoring Committee (JMC).

The JMC will be the primary body to oversee the implementation of the Comprehensive Agreement on Respect for Human Rights and International Humanitarian Law (CARHRIHL).

CARHRIHL is an important cornerstone in the GRP-NDF peace process. Although it was signed in August 1998, it was only in February and March this year that the GRP and NDF organized the JMC during the two rounds of peace talks at Oslo, Norway.

In a joint statement, GRP and NDF called the “formation, operationalization and organizational meeting of the JMC” an “important breakthrough” in the formal talks between them.

The JMC will be the primary body for the airing and receiving of complaints and reports of human rights violations and violations of the international humanitarian law between the GRP and NDF.

The JMC will be co-chaired by Prof. Carlos P. Medina, Jr., (GRP) and Fidel V. Agcaoili (NDF). Other members of the JMC are Atty. Edgardo B. Gayos and Atty. Robert I. Larga (GRP) and Coni K. Ledesma and Danilo F. Borjal (NDF).

Sitting as NDF independent observers to the JMC are Supreme Bishop Tomas A. Millema and Maria Hilao-Enriquez. On the GRP side are Mercedes Contreras Danenberg and Mary Aileen Bacalso.

Making up the JMC Secretariat are Executive Director Ma. Carla Munsayac-Villarta, Fe A. Oaing, Linda N. Cañete, Sandra L. Garcia and Atty. Ma. Ngina Teresa Chan-Gonzaga of the GRP and legal consultant Atty. Edre U. Olalia, Marissa P. Dumanjug-Palo, Irvin. M. Cuasay, Rosie N. Tumbagahon and Lovie C. Ebio of the NDF.

Ambassador Paul Moe of the Norwegian government, which is acting as third party facilitator to the peace talks, graced the occasion held at the Catholic Bishops Conference of the Philippines (CBCP) compound in Manila as did Medina and Agcaoili who briefed the press on the importance of the breakthrough.

GMA cites gov't efforts in raising the price of copra

TAYABAS, Quezon – Three years ago, when President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo assumed the presidency, the price of copra in the countryside was a measly P2.50.

Today, after she worked hard to improve the plight of the coconut farmers, the price of copra in the market has gone up to as much as P22.50, a feat which the President herself is proud to tell.

“Umangat ang buhay ng magniniyog, umangat ang buhay ng Quezon (The life of the coco farmers improved, the standard of living in Quezon also improved),” intoned the President during a speech that followed the mass-oath taking of Kaibigan ni Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo members here.

The President cited several reasons for the unprecedented increase in the price of copra during her short term in office.

She said she worked hard to expand the market of copra while making negotiations for the lifting of the copra ban in several countries.

“Tayo ay naghanap ng bagong bansang bibili ng ating produkto. Tayo ay gumawa ng negosasyon para pigilin iyong mga nagba-ban ng ating kopra sa ibang bansa (We looked for new markets which will buy our product. We negotiated to prevent the banning of our copra in other countries),” the President said.

She said the country developed coco diesel 2T oil through setting up of coconut oil mills in various parts of the country. Other oil mills were rehabilitated, she added.

“Tayo ang naghanap ng mga bagong gamit sa ating kopra (We were the ones who looked for new uses for our copra),” the President said.

She then called on the support of the coco farmers in the province to allow her to continue what she had started by giving her a fresh mandate in next month's polls.

“Siguro kung yan ang simpleng mensahe na ibibigay sa ating mga kapatid sa Quezon, palagay ko, kung ganoon lumaki ang kita ng ating magniniyog, sapat na dahilan na dapat bumoto sila kay Pangulong Gloria at sa ating mga kandidato ng K4 (If that is the simple message we want to convey to our brothers here in Quezon, that would be reason enough for them to vote for me and the entire K4 ticket),” she said.

The President then reiterated her six-point agenda if given the chance to serve another six years.

She pledged to:

- Triple loans to self-employed and small business owners;
- Build 3,000 new schools, grant a college or vocational-technical scholarship to every qualified poor family and put a computer in every school;
- Bring electricity to 1,500 barangays a year and reduce the cost to become the lowest in the Asian region;
- Bring clean water to all 45,000 barangays;
- Reduce by half the price of commonly-used medicine; and
- Create one million jobs every year.

Business leaders agree GMA's lead in Pulse Asia survey strengthened the peso

Business leaders have affirmed that President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's surge in a poll survey has restored investor confidence in the local market and triggered the recovery of the peso against the dollar.

“I believe that there was a direct relationship in what happened (peso rally). I’m convinced that the business community is far more optimistic now based on what has transpired,” business executive Roberto Romulo told reporters at a forum of the influential Makati Business Club (MBC) in Makati City on Wednesday.

MBC Executive director Guillermo Luz and other prominent members of the club agreed with Romulo, saying President Macapagal-Arroyo’s significant lead in the latest Pulse Asia survey was a major factor in the peso gain at the foreign exchange market.

“I am sure that may have contributed to the rally (of the peso) in the sense that the market reacts to this type of news very quickly. But let’s look at it from a broader perspective. I think the peso has dropped in value artificially mainly because of political anxiety and nervousness ahead of the elections,” Luz said.

“The price that you see on the peso at P56 (to $1) really was in anticipation of problems during the elections. But I think that if people will step away and not get into an exaggerated scenario, you will see the peso gain in value. In fact, I predict that after the elections, the peso will gain,” Luz added.

David Balangue, president of the Management Association of the Philippines, shared the observations of Romulo and Luz. “I think it did help, because there were no other developments that would pull the exchange rate other than that one (President Macapagal-Arroyo’s lead in the survey).”

Balangue pointed out that “there were no external developments that would cause the peso to strengthen other than the survey results.”

Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas Gov. Rafael Buenaventura said earlier the threat of political stability subsided following the President’s strong performance in the survey.

Buenaventura said anxieties that the peso would fall further has dissipated.

The peso rallied on Tuesday to its highest level of P55.80 to $1 in nearly three months.

During the same forum, Luz commended the President for setting clear targets of her administration if given a fresh six-year mandate by the people.

“We like to see people set specific targets because you can measure them by those targets. And we’d like to see actually all candidates including the senators, the congressmen, and the mayors and governors set targets for their specific work areas,” Luz said.

He cited Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo for setting high targets including having the lowest electricity rate in Asia, but added that the President has to do a lot of reforms to attain her goals.

“Unless the voters get specific targets and a specific pledge from the politician, we cannot measure them and measurement is very important,” Luz stressed.

President Macapagal-Arroyo was the last presidential candidate to face the MBC in a series of forums organized by the group to enable the candidates to elaborate on their respective platforms.

In her speech, the President identified six objectives of her administration. These are wider access to financial assistance by the self-employed and small businessmen, build 3,000 additional schools, grant of college education or vocational-technical scholarship to every qualified family, energize 1,500 barangays every year, deliver clean water to all 45,000 barangays, reduce by 50 percent the price of common medicines, and create one million jobs every year.

Exodus to GMA camp continues

PANDI, Bulacan—It looks like there's no stopping the exodus to the administration camp.

Barely had the euphoria of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's surge to a significant lead in the presidential derby had died down, when a fresh wave of erstwhile opposition stalwarts from two towns of this province shifted their support to the President and her entire K-4 coalition ticket.

The new administration allies –former Koalisyon ng Nagkakaisang Pilipino mayoralty bet in Norzagaray, Bulacan Amado T. Pascual and his vice-mayoralty running mate Lauro Castillo along with eight councilors in their tickets – were welcomed by the President's son, Pampanga Vice Governor Mikey Arroyo.

Arroyo expressed elation over their pledge of support to her mother, President Arroyo, and thanked them for joining her camp. He said that her mother has always extended her hand to anyone who believes in her vision and governance.

"I would like to welcome you to our team and your offer of support to my mom and support to her government," he told the supporters during the brief welcoming rites held here Wednesday.

Pascual, for his part, told the Governor of their full support to the presidency of her mother. "Kaming lahat ay sumusuporta kay President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo dahil mukhang malalampaso ang oposisyon sa darating na halalan," he said.

The Norzagaray mayoralty candidate added that he has yet to see any program of government from the KNP that will address the problems faced by local governments like Norzagaray.

Eighteen opposition groups and supporters also joined the exodus to President Arroyo's camp led by Jerry Esquivel, president of the confederation of Norzagaray Tricycle Operators and Drivers Association (TODA) with 2,000 members.

Esquivel said in an interview that their group realized that the President has a clear vision for good governance. Their previous presidential candidate, Fernando Poe Jr., he said, has no clear platform of government.

The other groups that also bolted from the opposition camp and shifted their support to the President included Eduardo Santos, president of the Immaculate Concepcion Tricycle Operators and Drivers Association (TODA) with 500 members.

Reelectionist Pandi Mayor Oliver "Ike" Andres likewise expressed full support to President Arroyo's presidential bid and to her senatorial candidates along with his line-up of eight councilor candidates.

The President has been reaping the fruits of her untiring efforts to reach out to the people with an outpouring of support to her quest for a full six-year term, notably from local political leaders, including defectors from the floundering opposition parties KNP and the Alyansa ng Pag-asa.

The bandwagon syndrome had already resulted in the clinching of the Bicol Region and the vote-rich provinces of Tarlac and Laguna, and of late, Mountain Province in Northern Luzon which the President visited on Easter Sunday.

The President has also received bipartisan support from leaders of vote-rich Cebu and Pangasinan provinces, as well as in most parts of Mindanao.

Early this month, Rep. Gilbert Teodoro (1st Dist. Tarlac), a ranking NPC member, also pledged full support to President Macapagal-Arroyo.

Teodoro, a nephew of business tycoon Eduardo "Danding" Cojuangco, NPC founder and chairman emeritus, vowed to "exert all efforts so that the President would win overwhelmingly in Tarlac."

Earlier, in Capas and Concepcion towns, also in Tarlac, the President also received the assurance of support from Congressmen Benigno “Noy” Aquino III and Rep. Jesli Lapus (3rd Dist. Tarlac).

Rep. Faustino Dy III of Isabela, NPC chairman, said some 33 of his colleagues in the House are now supporting Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo.

The President and the K-4 coalition have also welcomed into the K-4 fold a team of top local officials from the camp of presidential candidate Raul Roco. The group was led by former Alyansa ng Pag-asa Eastern Visayas regional coordinator Emil Ong.

Ong’s departure from the Roco camp is seen as ominous of the impending collapse of Roco’s political machinery in Eastern Visayas.

A week before Ong’s defection, President Macapagal-Arroyo also received an overwhelming declaration of support from Bicolandia leaders led by Camarines Sur Gov. Luis Villafuerte, his Vice Governor Imelda Papin, Camarines Norte Gov. Jesus Typoco, Albay Gov. Al Francis Bichara, Sorsogon Gov. Raul Lee and Masbate Gov. Antonio Kho.

In Laguna, incumbent Gov. Teresita “Ningning” Lazaro, previously a supporter of deposed President Joseph Estrada, orchestrated a mass oath-taking of 609 municipal and barangay coordinators as members of the Kaibigan ni Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo (KGMA).

Palace denies internal survey; accuses KNP of self-delusion

Malacañang today vehemently denied conducting an alleged internal survey showing opposition standard-bearer Fernando Poe, Jr. with a commanding lead over President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo.

Secretary Gabriel Claudio, campaign manager of the Koalisyon ng Karanasan at Katapatan sa Kinabukasan (K-4), said that with the series of setbacks it has suffered, the opposition is now experiencing “an extreme case of self-delusion.”

Claudio charged that the opposition is now in a “state of denial” because all surveys conducted by credible and prestigious organizations have shown that the President is pulling away while Poe, despite his much-vaunted popularity, is fast sliding down.

Claudio said that the recent Pulse Asia survey that showed the President ahead over FPJ by a statistically significant 3 percent and the massive defection of its members to K-4, not to mention its internal squabbling, could have made a toll on Sen. Edgardo Angara, president of the Laban ng Demokratikong Pilipino (LDP).

The Palace official also said the pressure on Angara must have prompted him to issue an incredible claim that FPJ is leading by 20 percent over the President in an unpublished internal survey purportedly commissioned by Malacañang itself.

“No such survey exists,” Claudio stressed. “This could only have existed in the mind of Senator Angara.”

At a Makati Business Club (MBC) forum on Wednesday, business leaders roundly applauded the President’s 6-point plan of action for the next six years.

MBC chairman Ricardo Romulo recalled the 47.6 percent rating given by the group members to Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo, while Poe got zero.

Claudio also cited a Business World-Roper Consumer Confidence index showing 42.6 percent of the respondents virtually endorsing the Macapagal-Arroyo administration.

Even the latest Social Weather Stations (SWS) survey, once-preferred by the opposition, graphically showed Poe's decline from 36.3 percent in January this year to 32.0 percent last March, a drop of 4.3 percent in just one quarter, or 1.33 percent per month. With a voting population of 37 million, that means 492,000 Filipinos changed their minds every month.

As to Poe's withdrawal from the race, Claudio said that the K-4 does not want to comment on the opposition's internal dynamics, but so-called sources from the many fronts in the opposition have pointed to this direction.

Claudio said that with the de facto withdrawal of presidential candidate Raul Roco, the President Arroyo's bid for a full six-year term is expected to get another major boost.

In fact, he said, a number of Alyansa ng Pag-asa stalwarts, have already defected to K-4 even before the announcement of Roco's ailment, Claudio said.

Construction of Marikina-Infanta road to start next week — GMA

LUCBAN, Quezon—President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo announced here today that construction of the Marikina-Infanta road would formally start next week to speed up the transport of goods and services between Metro Manila and Quezon.

The President said the road project would enable Quezon to catch up with other provinces in the CALABARZON (Cavite-Laguna-Batangas-Rizal-Quezon) economic zone in development.

“Para sa inyong kinabukasan kailangang simulan natin iyang Marikina-Infanta road na iyan para madaling magbiyahe iyong mga magtatayo ng puhunan (We need to start construction of the Marikina-Infanta road to speed up travel, particularly for the investors),” the President said in her keynote address at the 22nd commencement exercises of the Southern Luzon Polytechnic College (SLPC) here.

The President said she would revisit Quezon on Tuesday (April 20) for the groundbreaking rite for the route considered crucial to Quezon province's development to keep pace with the rapid progress in the CALABARZON.

The President said she initiated the opening up of the route in 1989 when she was still at the Department of Trade and Industry (DTI).

The President lamented that until now, Quezon remains wanting of economic development, while the other CALABARZON provinces have been booming with the entry of more and more factories and industries.

“That's why I will be back in Quezon on April 20 to groundbreak the Marikina-Infanta road,” the President said.

The Marikina-Infanta road is also viewed as a part of the development of Mega Manila.

Earlier, the President led the oath-taking of some 5,000 members of the Kaibigan ni Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo (KGMA) Tayabas chapter at the Tayabas municipal stadium.

Statement of the President: Re Iraq situation

We want a “zero-casualty” goal for Filipino civilians and peacekeepers as tension continuously escalates in Iraq.

All government agencies and the public should support this aim.

We will stand by our international commitments and we will make sure our nationals are safe.

I admire the courage of our peacekeepers and workers but they should take care, keep together and keep in close contact with the Iraq Team.

For lack of platforms, anti-GMA forces now resort to mudslinging, black propaganda

The forces against President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo have no platforms, thus they resort to mudslinging and black propaganda, Malacañang said today.

“In the absence of a clear, specific platform and program, they are resorting to mudslinging. I feel this will backfire on them because the people want concrete programs and not character assassination,” Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said this morning in a radio interview.

In contrast, the President has clearly spelled out her six-point program for the next six years, Bunye said.

The President vowed to triple the loans for the self-employed and owners of small and medium business enterprises.

She will build 3,000 new school buildings, provide more scholarships and provide each school with a computer.

She will lower the cost of electricity and provide 1,500 barangays with electricity yearly.

She will provide potable water for all 45,000 barangays.

She will reduce by half the prices of commonly used medicines.

She will create one million jobs a year.

The business community liked it when the President enumerated these six targets when she addressed them in a general membership luncheon meeting at the Makati Business Club Wednesday because they are specific and measurable, Bunye stressed as he pointed out that the opposition groups come out only with very general and motherhood statements.

Because they are to the point, there is no doubt that the President will be able to accomplish her targets, Bunye said.

In the first year of her administration, the President built 550 new schools, and based on this track record, the building of 3,000 new schools over the next six years is no empty promise, Bunye said.

The President has already reduced the cost of medicines, and one million jobs a year is easily achievable because of the number of small and medium business enterprises the government has set up, Bunye said.

P4-B mega dike to solve perennial flooding in CAMANAVA — GMA

MALABON, Metro Manila — The ongoing construction of the P4-billion mega dike project of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo in the CAMANAVA (Caloocan, Malabon, Navotas, Valenzuela) zone is expected to solve the perennial flooding in the area, especially in Navotas and Malabon.

During a “Pulong Bayan” and the distribution of Certificates of Entitlement to Lot Allotment (CELA) held at in the Plaza Rodriguez Amphitheater here Thursday night, the President and running mate Senator Noli “Kabayan” de Castro discussed the government’s action to solve the almost daily flooding of some parts of Caloocan, Malabon, Navotas and Valenzuela due to high tide.

“In resolving the almost daily flooding in CAMANAVA, particularly in Navotas and Malabon areas, the construction of the P4-billion mega dike was started during my administration,” said the President to the applause of some 8,000 people who trooped to the amphitheater to show their support for her bid in the May 10 elections.

Housing and Urban Development Coordinating Council (HUDCC) chairman Amado Bagatsing, National Home Mortgage Finance Corporation (NHMFC) president Angelico Salud and Malabon Officer-in-Charge Mark Allan Jay Yambao witnessed the awarding of CELAs and Community Mortgage Program Certificates of Awards (CMPCA) to some community organizations.

The President handed to Rufino Guinte, president of the Samahan ng Pagkakaisa ng Dumpsite, Catmon Homeowners Association, Inc., a community mortgage certificate worth P8,406,340 for some 4,203.17 square meters.

This will benefit a total of 159 informal settlers, each of whom will get 20 to 30 square meters homelot worth P52,870 each.

The People’s Coalition for Housing Rights Homeowners Association, Inc., represented by its president Gregory Arada, also received 3,119.58 square meters worth P6,239,160. About a hundred members are expected to benefit from it.

The President distributed CELAs to 419 beneficiaries in Flordeliz Village Homeowners Phase I (196) and II (223).

Earlier, the President and Senator de Castro led in the distribution of CELAs and PhilHealth cards to some 4,000 indigent families at the Valenzuela Astrodome.

Around 117 members of the Riverside–Ugong–Malaya Homeowners Association, Inc. in La Mesa Street, Ugong, Valenzuela were among the CELA beneficiaries.

GMA welcomes former opposition supporters to K-4

MALOLOS CITY, Bulacan – The mass exodus of opposition candidates and supporters to the administration's Koalisyon ng Karanasan at Katapatan sa Kinabukasan (K-4) continues with President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo swearing in today 700 volunteers for the GMA Movement.

The President led the mass oath-taking of the Norzagaray Volunteers for GMA at the Hiyas Convention Center here this morning.

In the oath-taking, the volunteers promised to lend their capabilities and talents for the success of the vision and the mission of the GMA Movement.

They further dedicated their services to the country as a whole in their commitment to the Chief Executive.

“Ito, bilang pagtanggap sa hamon ng kasalukuyang panahon na itaguyod ang ating dakilang bayan sa bagong yugto ng dakilang kasaysayan tungo sa isang matatag na Republika (This is in accepting the challenge of the present time to uphold our great country in the new chapter of history towards a strong Republic),” the volunteers swore.

The President acknowledged their full support for her government and her presidential bid in the May 10 polls.

She also extended her appreciation to Bulacan Governor Josie Dela Cruz, Congressman Willie Villarama, Congresswomen Lorna Silverio and Neneng Nicolas and Bulacan Vice Governor Rely Plamenco for their efforts in bringing the volunteers to the GMA Movement.

Other officials present included Malolos Mayor Danny Domingo and Mrs. Gina de Venecia, wife of Speaker Jose De Venecia, Jr.

“Kayong mga taga-Norzagaray, maraming salamat sa inyong tulong, Kailangan ko po ang tulong ninyo (Thank you people of Norzagaray for your help),” the President told the volunteers.

She said that with their help it would be easier for her to explain her six-point program for the next six years which includes to triple the loans for the self-employed and owners of small and medium business enterprises; build 3,000 new school buildings, provide more scholarships and provide each school with a computer; lower the cost of electricity and provide 1,500 barangays with electricity yearly; provide potable water for all 45,000 barangays; reduce by half the prices of commonly used medicines and create one million jobs a year.

Early this morning, the President promised to provide the 10,000 resident families of the town soon with a new water system that will bring them clean, potable water when she and her party inspected the water system at the North Hill Village in Barangay Tigbe, Norzagaray, Bulacan.

She said she was able to get assistance from Germany thru the Asian Development Bank for the laying of water pipelines in Norzagaray.

“Magdadala tayo ng malinis na tubig sa Norzagaray pati na rin sa buong bansa (We will bring clean water to Norzagaray and to the whole country),” she said.

Palace: Nothing but compassion for Erap

Despite former President Joseph Estrada's recent rhetoric against President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, Malacañang said today it has nothing but compassion for the deposed leader and would like to wish him the best on his birthday on Monday, particularly a speedy recovery from his knee ailment.

But Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye told a radio interview this morning that it would be impossible for Estrada to realize his birthday wish of having a new president on June 30.

“It’s wishful thinking,” Bunye said. “Pero palagay ko hindi matutupad ang kanyang birthday wish (His wish for a new President will not be realized).”

Published reports quoted Estrada, who is in jail for plunder charges, as saying that his birthday wish is to see his bosom friend, opposition standard-bearer Fernando Poe Jr., win in next month’s presidential polls.

Bunye said that with barely three weeks left in the campaign period, the President is pulling away, as shown by the latest Pulse Asia survey result where the President surged ahead by a statistically significant three-point lead over Poe after being locked in a tie in the previous surveys.

A March 20-25 survey conducted by New York-based NOP World Asia Pacific (formerly Roper ASW Asia Pacific) among Metro Manila consumer-voters showed the President also leading over her rivals by 35 percent.

This means two in every five consumer-voters in Metro Manila, which is traditionally an opposition bailiwick, would vote for the President if elections were held today.

Surprisingly in the NOP survey, Poe was poor fourth, with 11.4 percent, having been overtaken by Sen. Panfilo Lacson, who was second with 16.1 percent and former Senator Raul Roco, third, with 12 percent.

The Makati Business Club, also in a survey conducted among members in late January, gave the President a resounding 47 percent lead over her rivals, while Poe got zero.

Compounding Poe’s woes is the reported internal squabbling in his camp and the recent exodus of erstwhile opposition stalwarts to the administration camp, citing organizational flaws in the opposition’s Koalisyon ng Nagkakaisang Pilipino.

The President has been reaping the fruits of her untiring efforts to reach out to the people with an outpouring of support to her quest for a full six-year term, notably from local political leaders, including defectors from the floundering opposition parties KNP and the Alyansa ng Pag-asa.

The bandwagon syndrome had already resulted in the clinching of the Bicol Region and the vote-rich provinces of Tarlac and Laguna, and of late, Mountain Province in Northern Luzon, which the President visited on Easter Sunday.

The President has also received bipartisan support from leaders of vote-rich Cebu and Pangasinan provinces, as well as in most parts of Mindanao.

GMA cites need to privatize NAPOCOR; eyes lowest power rate in Asia

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo underscored today the importance of privatizing the National Power Corp. (NAPOCOR) and the Transmission Corp. (TRANSCO) to attain her vision of a stable power supply and the lowest electricity rate in Asia.

The President issued the statement during an interview with the Masbate-based radio station DYME. The program host informed Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo that electricity rates in their province remained high despite the fact that the government-run National Electrification Administration (NEA) has written off a huge debt of the local power distributor Masbate Electric Cooperative (MASELCO).

Asked about her long-term solution to the country’s energy problems, the President replied that electrification of the 45,000 barangays nationwide is one of the six major priorities of her administration if given a new six-year mandate by the people in the May 10 elections.

“Dadalhin natin ang kuryente sa lahat ng barangay ng Pilipinas at gagawin natin na pinakamababa sa buong rehiyon (We will bring electricity to all barangays nationwide and we will make it the cheapest in the region),” President Macapagal-Arroyo said.

The President recalled that when she took over the presidency in January 2001, the Philippines had the second most expensive electricity in Asia. At present, the Philippines now ranks No. 6 in the list, she added.

“Pero siyempre, hindi pa tayo kuntento diyan. Ang importante dito ay i-privatize natin iyong ating industriya dahil ang gobyerno ay dumadanak na ang dugo sa NAPOCOR at sa TRANSCO (But of course, we are not yet contented with that. What is important is to privatize our power industry because the government has been hemorrhaging on NAPOCOR and TRANSCO),” the President pointed out.

Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo also emphasized the need for structural reforms in the energy sector through the construction of new power plants to cope with increasing demand.

The President noted that the basic problem in Masbate is the inefficient transmission system of MASELCO, hence its operations remain deficient despite the debt relief granted by NEA.

The President also explained that NAPOCOR spends P6 to generate one kilowatt hour of electricity in Masbate, but sells this at the subsidized rate of only P3.70 to MASELCO.

GMA eyes wider access to funds for SMEs

NORZAGARAY, Bulacan – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo vowed here today to spur Filipino entrepreneurship by providing wider access to financial assistance for small and medium enterprises (SMEs).

The President made the pledge during an interaction with residents of this town where she inspected her project to deliver potable water to the North Hill Village.

“We will triple loans for entrepreneurs in small and medium enterprises,” the President said. She added that last year alone, her administration lent out P21 billion to SMEs compared to only P6 billion registered by the failed Estrada administration.

Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo also called on her supporters to help disseminate information regarding the six top priorities of her administration if given a fresh mandate in the May 10 elections.

“Kailangan ko po ang tulong ninyo para ipaliwanag ang anim na pinaka-importanteng punto sa aking plataporma (I need your help to explain the six most important points of my platform),” the President said.

The Chief Executive, who is standard-bearer of the ruling Koalisyon ng Karanasan at Katapatan sa Kinabukasan (K-4), reiterated that creation of one million jobs every year remained her primary objective. Along this line, she underscored the significance of attracting more investments into the domestic market that would generate additional employment opportunities.

The President cited Norzagaray’s cement industry as a potential attraction to investors.

Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo identified delivery of clean water to the people as the third major concern of her platform of government. “We will bring clean water to all barangays,” she said, citing her “Patubig ni Gloria” project that has been bringing clean water to blighted communities in Metro Manila and the suburbs, including Northeast Village.

The President revealed that a more permanent water project would be set up in Norzagaray with the assistance of the German government.

The fourth priority of an extended Macapagal-Arroyo administration is electrification of all barangays nationwide, targetting 1,500 barangays every year. Corollary to this, the President said she intends to make power rates in the country the cheapest in Asia.

Her fifth priority, President Macapagal-Arroyo said, is to institute reforms in the education system. This includes construction of 3,000 new school buildings across the country, granting scholarship to one child each of five million poor families, and providing a computer in each public school.

The President's sixth primary objective is to cut the cost of common medicines by 50 percent.

"Six promises for the next six years. Help me bring this message to the people," the President told the Norzagaray residents.

GMA awards certificates, cash to health workers, towns in anti-measles campaign

GUIGUINTO, Bulacan – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today led the awarding of certificates and cash incentives to the four outstanding towns and barangay health workers of this province as part of its measles elimination campaign.

More than a thousand barangay health workers participated in the campaign also dubbed as "Ligtas-Tigdas."

The President led the awarding rites. She was assisted by Senator Francis Pangilinan, Bulacan Governor Josie Dela Cruz, Health Secretary Manuel Dayrit, Congressman Willie Villarama, Bulacan Vice Governor Aurelio Plamenco, Guiguinto Mayor Ambrosio Cruz and Regional Health Director Ethelyn Nieto.

The town awardees were District 1 of the municipality of Bulacan represented by its Mayor Anacleto Meneses and municipal health officer Dr. Elisa Villanueva; District 2 from the municipality of Pandi represented by Mayor Oliver Andres and municipal health officer Dr. Imelda Atal; District 3 of Angat represented by Mayor Leonardo De Leon and health officer Dr. Guillermo Bartolome; and District 4 of Obando represented by municipal health officer Onesmo Joaquin.

The outstanding town awardees along with their outstanding barangay health workers will receive P500,000 worth of construction materials and P100,000 cash incentives donated by the Bulacan provincial government.

The President, in her short message, hailed the barangay health workers (BHW) for being role models in eliminating the killer measles disease.

"Ang gagaling ng mga BHW at ako ay natutuwa sa inyong pag-appreciate, sa inyong malasakit at nawa'y magkaroon kayo ng mas magandang buhay (The BHW are all good and I appreciate your concern)," she told the BHWs at the Provincial Engineer's Office Covered Court here.

She said the BHWs should be given priority in registering with the Philippine Health Insurance (PhilHealth) since they are the ones who provide the fast health care delivery system in the country.

She instructed Health Secretary Manuel Dayrit to give importance to the BHWs in the issuance of PhilHealth cards.

GMA orders creation of task force to go after "kotong" cops

MALOLOS CITY—President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today directed the Department of Transportation and Communication to create a task force that will go after unscrupulous policemen preying on hapless jeepney drivers.

The President issued the order to Transportation and Communication Assistant Secretary Reynaldo Berroya during a multi-sectoral dialogue at the provincial capitol's gym here attended by some 500 Bulakeños supporting her candidacy for a full six-year term in the May 10 elections.

Jun Pereda, president of the Bulacan Alliance of Transport Associations (BATAS), read a list of grievances to the President.

Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo vowed to take immediate steps to address their concerns, among them the so-called "kotong cops" or mulcting policemen.

Pereda also cited their clamor for fare hikes, as well as problems with sanctions for traffic violations.

Reacting to Pereda's concerns, the President instructed the regional DOTC officials to immediately address the jeepney sector's complaints.

The President also assured the mass transport industry stakeholders that there would be regular consultations spearheaded by the regional transportation officials tentatively scheduled to start on Tuesday next week.

As part of good governance, President Macapagal-Arroyo gave assurances that her administration would vigorously pursue socio-economic upliftment amid a peaceful and orderly environment.

The President thanked leaders of the other sectors, notably commerce and industry, agriculture and fisheries, overseas Filipino workers and the senior citizens, for attending the meeting.

She hailed the overseas Filipino workers (OFWs) for their $8-billion remittances which has propped up the national economy.

During the interaction, Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo elaborated on her six-point platform of government if given a fresh six-year mandate.

The President told the members of the Bulacan Chamber of Commerce and Industry led by Pedrito Calalang as chairman, that she intends to triple the loans for the small and medium enterprises (SMEs).

"Mahigit P21 bilyon ang napautang sa mga SMEs, gagawin natin itong triple sa susunod na anim na taon para makatulong lalo sa inyong maliliit na negosyante (We have already loaned out over P21 billion to SMEs. We will triple that over the next six years to speed up the growth of the small businessmen," the President said.

Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo also vowed to strengthen the senior citizens sector by increasing their benefits.

Other sectoral leaders present included Hector de los Santos, chairman of the Municipal Agricultural and Fisheries Council of Malolos; OFW representative Eric Raul, and Ranulfo David, representing the senior citizens.

The Good News: Hefty growth in investments, tax collection reported to Malacañang

Approved investments in the first quarter grew by a hefty 1,334 percent while tax collection improved by 10.1 percent in the latest figures released by the Board of Investments and the Bureau of Internal Revenue respectively.

In a report to Malacañang, Trade and Industry Secretary Cesar Purisima said BOI-registered investments rose to P108 billion from only P7.5 billion in the first quarter last year.

Of these, he said, 99 percent of the amount (P106.8 billion) represented the cost of "one-time" projects approved, meaning these are capital-intensive projects that are not expected to be generated yearly. These include infrastructure, build-operate-transfer and telecom projects.

"This manifests the renewed business confidence of foreign investors in our economy despite election anxieties," Purisima said.

While the bulk of capital investments (97.52 billion) were foreign sources, Purisima said local investors, for their part, committed to finance projects worth P10.74 billion.

In terms of sectors, manufacturing accounts for P794 million in investments while information technology represents P276 million.

Thirty four projects were approved in the first quarter which are expected to create some 5,100 jobs once they are fully operational.

"The growth in our first quarter investments right in the middle of the election season shows that we are on the right track in our investments strategy. This belies the opinion of some businessmen of a wait-and-see mode of investments," Purisima said.

For the first three months of the year, the Bureau of Internal Revenue (BIR), the government's main collection agency, yielded P98.774 billion, a growth of P10.1 percent from a year ago.

Revenue collection for the month of March alone, reached P33.6 billion, surpassing the BIR's revenue goal for the period by P1.4 billion.

The March collection, representing 17.3 percent or P4.95 billion growth from month-ago level, trimmed the BIR's shortfall for the first quarter to P2.11 billion from P3.52 billion as of February.

"The bureau remains bullish that it can sustain its strong monthly collections vis-à-vis this coming April and May," the BIR said.

GMA vows to eliminate 'termites' in judiciary system

Stressing that "justice is a bedrock of democracy," President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has vowed that, if elected to a full six-year term in the May 10 polls, she will sweep clean the judiciary and use her influence to provide equal justice to all Filipinos, whether they be rich or poor.

Speaking before the Philippine Bar Association (PBA), which observed its 113th foundation at the Manila Peninsula Hotel in Makati City Friday night, the President said that, under her new administration, she "will clean up the judiciary, the courts and people working like termites in and out of the judicial system."

The Chief Executive warned violators of the law that they will be pursued, arrested and jailed.

"Lilipulin nating iyong mga sinasabi ng ating mga kasapi ng Diplomatic Corps at tinatawag nilang hoodlums in robes, na sila ang nagiging sagabal sa investments na pumupunta rito (We will eradicate what members of the Diplomatic Corps call hoodlums in robes, who are obstacles to the flow of investments here)."

President Macapagal-Arroyo also stressed that, under her new administration, there would be "a government of true national unity."

She invited the opposition to forget politics and to send their brightest representatives to the government where positions of responsibility would await them.

"Ang aking pamahalaan ay magiging isang tunay na pamilya ng lahi. Kasama rito ang mga kintawan ng kabataan, kababaihan, cultural communities, senior citizens, partido ng oposisyon (My government will be a family of the race. It will bring together representatives of the youth, women, cultural communities, senior citizens and the opposition)," the President said.

Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo envisioned her new government like a mirror that once raised up, it will reflect the overall picture of the country.

After calling for detoxification of the country's political system, she said, "it is time we employ the blessings of civility to heal a wounded society. Civility is the glue that will bind Filipinos together.

The President appealed to all Filipinos for help so that, together, they can build the force of "new unity."

"Mabubuhay muli ang puwersa, ang disiplina sa batas kung mangingibabaw ang pambansang interes sa sariling kapakanan (The force of discipline under the law will prevail once national interest overcomes selfish motives)," she said.

Before her speech, the President presented Awards of Recognition to Associate Justices Santiago J. Rañada Jr., Celia C. Librea-Leagogo, Estela M. Perlas-Bernabe, Arturo Tayag, Vicente Yap, Edgardo A. Camello and Magdangal M. de Leon of the Court of Appeals; Commissioner Manuel A. Barcelona Jr. of the Commission on Elections; and Commissioner Ronald Olivar Solis of the National Telecommunications Commission.

Statement of the President: Re Opposition

I look forward to the unification of the opposition because this will limit the contest to two camps and sharpen the contrast between the two protagonists: an administration that has engaged in a civilized, decent and platform-based campaign, and an opposition that has largely spewed negativism, mudslinging, harangues and threats.

I also aim to unify the nation and the opposition as part of my plan.

There are some bright lights in the opposition but they have not been allowed to shine.

They are welcome to the national unification effort that will consolidate the nation behind the fight for change for the average Filipino.

In my mind, this campaign is about unifying the whole nation and not simply about unifying the opposition or the administration.

Statement of the President: Re Election related violence

The PNP must conduct a close watch over armed groups and preempt poll related violence.

I condemn all forms of attacks against political candidates as an attack against the democratic process.

The PNP must leave no stone unturned in the investigation of the Masbate incident in order to bring the perpetrators to justice.

Statement of the Presidential Spokesman Ignacio R. Bunye: Re Former President Estrada

We respect the Sandiganbayan's decision and it will be done.

High satisfaction rating enhances GMA's chances in May 10 election

The remarkable increase in President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's public satisfaction ratings from -3 percent in November 2003 to 30 percent in March 2004, based on a survey by the Social Weather Stations (SWS), bolsters her chances in the May 10 elections.

Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye made that statement in a radio interview with RMN Network this morning. "Iyan ay very welcome development at talagang iyan ay magpapalakas lalo ng chance ng ating Pangulo (That's a very welcome development and that will really enhance the President's chances)," he said.

Bunye said that the people now appreciate the value of the basic services being rendered to them by the Macapagal-Arroyo administration.

Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo, he said, has made herself highly visible by going to places only a few presidents before her had ever visited.

"Ito siguro ang (ilan) sa mga dahilan kung bakit ang kanyang approval rating ay tumaas from -3 percent to 30 percent at malaking jump ito. (These are among the reasons why the President's ratings have jumped from -3 percent to 30 percent). This is a big jump," he said.

According to the SWS survey, conducted March 21 to 29, 55 percent of the 1,400 respondents nationwide, who were all registered voters, expressed satisfaction with President Macapagal-Arroyo's performance in office.

Join me in my next administration, GMA calls on opposition

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo called on the opposition anew today to join her in the quest for unity in her next administration.

“There are some bright lights in the opposition but they have not been allowed to shine. They are welcome to the national unification effort that will consolidate the nation behind the fight for change for the average Filipino,” the President said in a statement.

Part of the President’s plan is to unify the nation and the opposition to bring about a “government of true national unity” under her new administration.

The President also said she welcomes the efforts of the opposition to unify, saying the “unification of the opposition will limit the contest to two camps and sharpen the contrast between the two protagonists.”

But the President also said that the campaign is about unifying the whole nation and not simply about unifying the opposition or administration.

In addressing the Philippine Bar Association (PBA) Friday night during its 113th foundation program at the Manila Peninsula, the President also asked the opposition to forget politics and send their brightest representatives to the government where positions of responsibility would await them in her full six-year term.

She also said it is time then to employ the blessings of civility to heal a wounded society as civility is the glue that will bind Filipinos together.

The President appealed to all Filipinos for help so that “together, we can build the force of a new unity.”

GMA cites Iglesia Filipina Independiente as ‘inspiration’ for her pro-poor agenda

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today lauded the Iglesia Filipina Independiente for helping the poor and working for peace that have, in part, been the source of inspiration for her pro-poor agenda.

The President spoke before the First National Congress of Laymen of the Iglesia Filipina Independiente, held this morning at the Plenary Hall of the Philippine International Convention Center in Pasay City. Theme of the meeting was “Keep Alert, Stand Firm in Your Faith, Be Courageous, Be Strong.”

Before the meeting opened, 18 laymen of the Iglesia Filipina Independiente coming from different provinces, cities and municipalities presented to the President a manifesto expressing their full support for her bid for a full six-year term in the coming elections. The laymen were led by Pepito M. Pico as national president.

Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo said that Iglesia Filipina Independiente has been known in Philippine history as a symbol of love of God and country. She noted the church’s work for the poor, particularly the laborers.

“Kayong mga miyembro ng Iglesia Filipina ay nangunguna sa serbisyo sa mga mahihirap, kayo’y nangunguna sa paghahanap ng kapayapaan, kaya kasama ninyo ako (Members of Iglesia Filipina lead in serving the poor, you also lead in the search for peace; so, I am with you,” the President said.

“Kayo ay bahagi ng inspirasyon para sa akin ding sariling pro-poor agenda (You are part of the inspiration of my pro-poor agenda,” she told some 2,000 Iglesia Filipina Independiente members who attended the meeting.

The President reiterated her six promises, if given a mandate by the people in the May 10 elections, that would uplift the living standards as well as promoting peace and unity among the Filipino people.

She said that the first goal of her new administration is to create one million jobs annually in the next six years. She has already gained experience in creating 1.1 million jobs during the short period of her presidency.

She said that she would triple the loans for small and medium enterprises (SMEs). In 2003 alone, her administration lent P21 billion to SMEs entrepreneurs.

She said that all barangays throughout the country would be provided with clean water. As of now, the administration has been supplying clean water to four million people in Metro Manila and nearby provinces.

She said that 1,500 barangays would be energized each year. In the brief period of her presidency, her administration has brought electricity to some 2,000 barangays per year. The target number of barangays is reduced to 1,500, because this aspect of the electrification program will be spread out for six years.

She said that her administration would build 3,000 schoolhouses each year and would supply a computer to each school in the country. It would also provide one academic or vocational scholarship to every poor family.

She said that as part of the health program, her administration would provide poor families with medicines at half their usual prices.

GMA tops mock polls among lawyers in Eastern and Western Visayas

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo handily topped a mock election held Friday in Cebu City among more than 300 members of the Integrated Bar of the Philippines (IBP) from Eastern and Western Visayas.

The President got 148 votes, more than double the 63 votes garnered by second placer Raul Roco who flew to the United States early this week to undergo medical tests.

Surprisingly, Eddie Gil, who has consistently been the tail-ender in the Social Weather Stations and Pulse Asia surveys and only recently reinstated by the Supreme Court as a candidate, got 45 votes over Fernando Poe, Jr. and Brother Eddie Villanueva who were tied with 39 votes each.

The mock polls were held amidst reports in Cebu City that former Cebu Governor Lito Osmeña, head of Promdi Party, would shift support for the President in the wake of Roco's departure for the US.

Some IBP members, however, expressed the view that the votes for Gil were made as a sign of exasperation for the lopsided contest, in favor of the President. Some lawyers even wrote "Eddie Hell" on their ballots.

In the mock polls, K-4 vice presidential bet Sen. Noli "Kabayan" de Castro and Sen. Loren Legarda had 109 votes each.

The mock elections were held during a convention of the IBP Cebu Chapter on the eve of the President's visit to Cebu City to address the golden anniversary of the Associated Labor Unions-Trade Union Congress of the Philippines.

In a related development, four Cebuano representatives affiliated with the Nationalist People's Coalition reiterated their support for the President.

They are Rep. Simeon Kintanar (2nd District), Rep. Antonio Yapha (3rd District), Rep. Ace Durano (5th District) and Rep. Nerrisa Soon-Ruiz (6th District).

The four were among the 33 NPC congressmen from Luzon, Visayas and Mindanao who called on the President in Malacañang early this week.

There are 63 NPC congressmen nationwide, but according to Durano, only around 45 were supporting the candidacy of the President.

The three gubernatorial aspirants in Cebu, Vice Governor John Gregory Osmeña, former Agriculture Undersecretary Celestino Martinez, Jr. and Capitol Consultant Gwendolyn Garcia, are all supporting the President's bid for a fresh six-year term.

GMA approves P800 daily travel allowance for gov't personnel

Travel allowances of government personnel regardless of rank and destination anywhere in the country have been increased to P800 per day to cover hotel and lodging, meals and incidental expenses.

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo approved the new rate through Executive Order 298 which prescribes rules and regulations and new rates of allowances for official local and foreign travels of government personnel.

In case officials and employees who travel abroad are not provided transport money by the host country or sponsoring organization or agency, they will be entitled to the Daily Subsistence Allowance (DSA) provided under the United Nations Development Program (UNDP) Index which can be secured from the Department of Foreign Affairs.

When the country of destination is not listed in the Index, the DSA for the nearest country shall be adopted.

Unless otherwise stated in the UNDP Index, the DSA shall be apportioned as follows: a) fifty percent for hotel/lodging; b) thirty percent for meals; and c) 20 percent for incidental expenses.

Local travel allowances will also be apportioned in this manner.

Payment of expenses for travel that are less than 30 days will have to be approved by the head of office/bureau or equivalent. Travels that will last for 30 days or more and payment of travel expenses therefore shall be approved by the department secretary or his equivalent.

In approving the new EO, the President cited the need to rationalize the travel allowances in view of the increasing cost of goods and services.

The new rates were based on the recommendation of the Travel Rates Committee.

The new EO states that claims for reimbursement of actual travel expenses in excess of the travel expenses authorized may be allowed upon certification by the head of agency concerned as absolutely necessary in the performance of an assignment and presentation of bills and receipts.

EO 298 was signed by President Macapagal-Arroyo on March 23, 2004 and took effect immediately.

GMA pays tribute to teachers, parents

DAGUPAN CITY — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today paid tribute to both teachers and parents in molding the character of students, saying they are the ones who will guide the students in life after graduating from college.

In a speech early this afternoon at the 82nd Commencement Exercises of the University of Pangasinan here, the President lauded the teachers for the time they spend in imparting knowledge to the students and paid tribute to the parents for their sacrifices.

“Tandaan ninyo na ang inyong mga teachers at moderators ang gumasta ng panahon para mamahagi ng kaalaman at magandang mga asal. (Remember your teachers and moderators who spend time to impart knowledge and good manners),” she said.

“Your teachers, your mentors are the ones who go out of their way to recognize your talents. Ito ang maaari ninyong puntahan para sa payo, for your homework problems (they are the ones who could give you advice and help you in your homework),” she added.

The President told the students that their teachers are people they can trust and who bring out the best in them. “They are the ones, who inspire you to be better persons to the end,” she said.

In paying tribute to parents, the Chief Executive said they have nothing in mind but the best for their children.

“Naghirap sila kasama ninyo at humangad ng inyong tagumpay (They sacrificed along with you and wished nothing but your success). They forced you to do your best,” she said.

Saying that she’s also a parent, the President said parents are silent martyrs hoping that their children would have a better life than they themselves had.

“Sa aking sariling buhay, ang aking mga magulang ang tumulak sa akin upang maging magaling dahil naniniwala sila na ang edukasyon ang magbubukas sa atin sa mundo ng mga pagkakataon (In my own life, my parents were the ones who pushed me to be the best because they believe that education will open the windows of opportunity),” she said.

The President told the students that in the short time that she served as president, she created this opportunity for more jobs and promised to produce one million more a year if given the chance to serve another six years.

TUCP vows all-out support for GMA candidacy

CEBU CITY—The 1.2 million strong Trade Union Congress of the Philippines (TUCP) pledged here this afternoon its unqualified support to the candidacy of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo who is seeking a fresh six-year mandate in the May 10 elections.

The expression of support was conveyed to the President by lawyer Cecilio Seno, national executive vice president of the union, to highlight the observance of the 50th founding anniversary of the Association of Labor Union – TUCP at the Waterfront Hotel in Lahug this city.

In rallying behind Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo, the organization cited her “genuine concern for the welfare of workers and their families.”

The union leaders, who came from all over the country for their convention here, also expressed their confidence “that a continuation of the policies of the (Macapagal-Arroyo) administration is imperative in preserving the current investment climate, business confidence and, subsequently the job security of the millions of workers.”

“Therefore, (the ALU-TUCP) give their support squarely behind the candidacy of Her Excellency President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo in her bid for a full six-year term,” the manifesto stated.

The document, entitled “Manifesto of Solidarity with President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo,” also cited their concern about the “great challenges the country is facing and the need for steady, experienced and credible leadership,” as well as their aspiration for an honest, orderly and peaceful national elections.

The labor leaders also manifested their gratitude to the President who, they said, continuously consulted with them about her major labor policy decisions even as she was still a senator and a vice president of the country.

For his part, TUCP president Democrito Mendoza urged their members to show to the country that there is such a thing as labor vote.

“We must vote as one. We must ensure that we support only those who listen to us. Let us vote for the President who is always with us,” Mendoza stressed in endorsing Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo’s candidacy.

GMA launches 3 agri-related projects in Pangasinan

LINGAYEN, Pangasinan – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo launched here today three project for the farmers in line with her administration’s Hunger-Free Philippines program.

The projects, are the National Rice Festival under the Unlad-Ani Program of the Department of Agriculture, the Hunger Free Philippines Program under the auspices of the Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO) and the Abot Kaya Feeds Program also of the DA.

In a speech at the Narciso Ramos Sports Complex Gym here, the President said the Hunger-Free Philippines is part of her administration’s program where the Philippines and the President won the CZeres award as an outstanding female leader in the fight against poverty and hunger.

“This is just like an Oscar award, and it a great honor that the Philippines and I was given this award,” the President said.

She said that farmers of the nation were instrumental in planting and fishing, and reaping the food for every table of each Filipino, the reason why she was given the award.

Under the Unlad Ani Program, the President awarded representatives of provinces and towns which have achieved high level of productivity in hybrid rice (Gloria Rice) production.

The President, assisted by Agriculture Secretary Luis Lorenzo, Jr., awarded P500,000 worth of rice-related agricultural projects per province and P150,000 per municipality.

The President noted that before, one hectare of riceland yields only 80 cavans of palay. The harvest of those who are using hybrid rice, she said, has doubled. The topnotcher in this field of competition, she said, harvested 270 cavans a hectare.

The President disclosed that the Department of Agriculture is preparing for the wet season by providing seed support for 200,000 has. of hybrid rice and 350,000 has. for certified seeds. Next year, she claimed, the country will be self-sufficient in rice, there will be no more importation if she remains President.

“If I am no more President, we do not know the programs of others who want to be President,” she said.

The President stressed that because of the government’s support for the rice farmers, the National Food Administration is buying hybrid rice at P10 pesos per kilo.

On farmers who use the hybrid rice seeds for planting, the President displayed a “discount card” which farmers can use for their planting needs.

“Those farmers who avail of this discount card will have P1,200 for hybrid rice seeds and P345.00 for certified seeds,” the President said.

The Good News: Foreign banks optimistic on peso recovery after May 10 polls

Foreign banks were even more optimistic in declaring a more dramatic recovery of the peso after the May polls, saying it could bounce back to its early 2003 level of P52 to the dollar.

This was after the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas had earlier predicted a recovery of P54 to the dollar level in the aftermath of the election which is expected to be tightly-fought between incumbent President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo and opposition standard bearer Fernando Poe Jr.

"It's not far-fetched, we see that as a possibility," said John McGowan, treasury chief of the Hong Kong and Shanghai Banking Corp. (HSBC) Philippines.

According to McGowan, the market, however, would be watching the appointment of new officials to key positions on the fiscal and monetary departments.

"A hundred day honeymoon is usual while everyone is watching out who will be appointed into the economic team," McGowan said. "It doesn't really matter who will win, the important factor is the removal of the uncertainty.

He said foreign banks have no expectations of who will win the presidency, but he admitted that in a close fight, the incumbent with political machinery would win.

The peso began recovering this week, appreciating to as high as P55.66 to the dollar for the first time since January after results of opinion polls showing President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo surging to a significant three-percentage lead over actor Fernando Poe Jr. were released.

"Exactly how far this recovery will go and for how long, we don't know," McGowan said, adding that the first decisions of the new administration would be critical in sustaining the market.

Palace reiterates GMA welcomes formation of a 'united opposition'

Malacañang today reiterated President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's belief that a one-on-one presidential contest between the administration and the opposition in the May 10 polls would enable the electorate to make a better choice.

Presidential Spokesman Ignacio R. Bunye welcomed, in a radio interview with the RMN Network this morning, a possible united opposition that could emerge from the “make or break” talks between presidential candidates Fernando Poe Jr. and Senator Panfilo “Ping” Lacson, scheduled for tomorrow (Monday).

“Ang nasabi ng ating Pangulong Gloria, siguro ay mas maganda kung magkasama na sila para maginging talagang one-on-one race ito (What President Gloria (Macapagal-Arroyo) has said it might be better if they (Poe and Lacson) unite so that this would be a one-on-one race),” he said.

Bunye explained that, in a one-on-one contest, the voters would see the difference in both platforms of government offered and conduct of the political campaign being waged by the administration and the opposition.

On the part of the President, he said, she could demonstrate how her political campaign is conducted “at a high plane and in a civilized manner.” This is in marked contrast with the mudslinging campaign style by the opposition, he added.

“Maipapakita rin niya iyong contrast noong maliwanag at specific programs haming doon sa programa ng kabila na very general, motherhood statements at walang maliwanag na patutunguhan (She would also be able to show her clear and specific programs compared with those of the opposition, which are very general, motherhood statements and without clear goals),” he said.

Bunye said, “Kaya, iyan ang reaction ng ating Pangulo, na siguro ay mas mabuti ng magkaroon ng united opposition (This is why the President’s reaction is that it would be better to have a united opposition).”

Malacañang mum on possible Roco withdrawal from presidential race

Malacañang refuses to comment on the possibility of former Senator and Education Secretary Raul Roco withdrawing from the presidential race for health reasons.

“We won’t enter into any speculations on this matter,” Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said this morning in a radio interview.

If Roco can’t really go through with his candidacy for health reasons, his supporters are all mature and know what is best for them, Bunye said.

“Maybe they are now thinking whom they will choose. We leave it to them. They know what will be best for our country,” Bunye offered.

Bunye admitted President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo talked with Roco through the phone before the Alyansa ng Pag-Asa’s standard bearer left for the United States early last week.

But that was only to express her concern for his health and wish him a speedy recovery. After that, Bunye said he knows of no other communications between the President and Roco.

Roco has admitted he may withdraw from the presidential race if his health fails. However, he feels he can go on.

“If I find out that I would no longer be able to serve the Filipino people efficiently, I would tell them not to vote for me. But so far what the doctors are telling me is that I can still engage anyone in a debate the moment I return, even without sleep,” Roco was quoted as saying from Houston, Texas where he is undergoing tests at an undetermined hospital to determine what really is his ailment.

“The fight is on and I will try to be there before the end of the month,” Roco also said from Houston.

Roco went through an operation for prostate cancer in 1996, his campaign manager and spokesman Dr. Jaime Galvez-Tan admitted. Speculations are that it is the same sickness bothering him now. However, his doctors in Houston, who have been subjecting him to exhaustive checks, have yet to issue any definitive statements on his condition.

Required logistics for May 10 elections released, says Presidential Spokesman

All its obligations have been fulfilled in releasing the required logistics for the May 10 elections, Malacañang stressed today.

Citing Budget Secretary Emilia Boncodin, Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said all the necessary funds have been forwarded to the Commission on Elections (COMELEC) except for the honoraria of public school teachers who will man the precincts.

The funds for the teachers' poll duty pay, which have been increased and will be given them in advance, will be available on or before April 26 as scheduled, Bunye clarified.

On the part of Malacañang, everything that has to be done has been done, according to Bunye who stressed President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's determination to have clean, honest, peaceful and credible elections.

Bunye also issued an appeal for the citizenry to stay calm, cast their votes and make sure their ballots are counted in the wake of disputes between the National Movement for Free Elections (NAMFREL) and the COMELEC.

COMELEC Chairman Benjamin Abalos gave assurances they are more than ready for the elections, contrary to the fears expressed by NAMFREL in the ABS-CBN television show "Impact 2004" which guested officials of COMELEC and NAMFREL.

GMA responds to plea for a barangay day care center building

BORONGAN, Eastern Samar – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo ordered Education Secretary Edilberto De Jesus today to ask the DepEd provincial director to provide a lot in the vicinity of the Eastern Samar National Comprehensive High School (ESNCHS) for a Day Care Center building.

The President issued the directive during the Pulong Bayan held at the ESNCHS gymnasium in response to the need of Barangay-C residents for a site for a Day Care Center building.

She also ordered the DepEd to fast track studies to improve the quality of teaching in the day care centers.

The President told a crowd of 5,000 from multi-sectoral groups who attended the Pulong Bayan, part of the plan of her ongoing Bridge School program is to develop and improve the teaching system in the Day Care Centers.

And to uplift the lives of residents, the President told them she has tasked the Philippine Tourism Authority (PTA) to put up quality hostel facilities in Guiwan town.

Known for its white sands, Guiwan can be developed like the world famous Boracay island beach resort to attract local and foreign tourists, the President observed.

If Guiwan is developed as a tourist spot, it would provide jobs to residents here, the President said.

The President also said she provided financial assistance for an irrigation project in Dolores Valley, the second biggest town in Eastern Samar.

She also ordered the Department of Energy to replace old electric posts with steel ones and to put up a sub-power station to solve the province's power problem.

GMA bats for stronger partnership between government and labor

CEBU CITY—President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo batted here on Saturday for a stronger partnership between the government and the labor sector based on a continuing policy of consultation, friendship and cooperation.

In a speech delivered at a general assembly of the Association of Labor Unions-Trade Union Congress of the Philippines (ALU-TUCP) at the Waterfront Hotel here marking their 50th anniversary, the President said she was so happy “to formalize our alliances.”

The presidential address came on the heels of the ALU-TUCP endorsement of Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo's candidacy in the May 10 elections.

The President said the manifesto of support has “made it very clear that ALU-TUCP is part of our coalition Koalisyon ng Katapatan at Karanasan sa Kinabukasan (K-4).”

President Macapagal-Arroyo described the 1.2 million strong ALU-TUCP alliance as the “biggest labor federation in the country.”

In her speech, the Chief Executive also called on organized labor to help maintain industrial peace in the country by doing away “unreasonable wage demands.”

Democrito Mendoza and Cecilio Seno, national president and executive vice president, respectively, of the federation, presented the “Manifesto of Solidarity” with President Macapagal-Arroyo wherein they pledged unequivocal support to her candidacy.

The federation cited the President's contribution to the promotion of welfare of workers, particularly in health care, housing, labor relations and other concerns and expressed confidence that her leadership would continue preserving and promoting investment climate, business confidence and job security of workers.

President Macapagal-Arroyo also cited the support of Cebu's political bigwigs led by Mayor Tommy Osmeña, and Congressmen Raul del Mar and Antonio Cuenco.

GMA, road network connection Samar tons to hasten trade improvement, job creation

BORONGAN, Eastern Samar – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today disclosed plans to build a network of roads to connect all towns of Samar to hasten trade improvement and job creation on the island.

The President also said a six-point program that she intends to carry out nationwide in the next six years, if elected in the May 10 elections, would minimize poverty and unite the Filipino people.

The President discussed her program before some 5,000 representatives of multi-sectoral groups that attended a Pulong Bayan held at the gymnasium of the Eastern Samar National Comprehensive High School here Sunday morning.

“We have a clear platform of government, which will address the poverty and unite our country. The people of Samar islands are among the beneficiaries of our programs,” the President said.

The goals of her program are:

Statement of the President Re Wage Issue

I acknowledge the clamor of our workers for better pay and I believe ordinary Filipinos must not only be guaranteed jobs, but also be paid well enough to sustain their daily family needs.

This is being done in a way that is acceptable to both the employers and the workers, and determined by the market as well as social and humane considerations.

I am confident in the capacity of the tripartite wage boards to perform their tasks fairly and in a timely manner.

Statement of Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye Re Shell Incident

The incident is condemnable, although it is isolated and does not affect the stability of the overall security situation.

These acts of terrorism are clearly intended to influence public perceptions in the run up to the elections, to instill fear or to erode confidence.

The President has already ordered the intensification of security measures to thwart terrorist attacks.

These include stepped up public vigilance and cooperation to check criminality and terrorism.

GMA vows to fulfill her father's dream of extending train services to southern tip of Luzon

SORSOGON CITY—President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has vowed to fulfill a “dream project” of her late father, President Diosdado Macapagal, to extend the train services down to Matnog, Sorsogon.

At a Pulong Bayan, held Sunday afternoon at the Sorsogon City Gymnasium, the President said that providing railway services down to Matnog, at the southernmost tip of Luzon, is not a dream anymore under her watch.

“I would like to report to you that my administration has been able to find financial assistance for this project,” she said, adding that it signed early this year with the People's Republic of China a loan agreement for US$ 900 million.

In the question and answer portion of the Pulong, President Macapagal-Arroyo and her vice presidential running mate Senator Noli de Castro both assured the people of Sorsogon City that the railway project was real and not a political gimmick.

The Chief Executive said the strong bilateral relations that her administration had forged with China helped clinch the loan agreement with the China National Technical Import Export Corporation (CNTIEC).

The CNTIEC had made a feasibility study on the Manila–Matnog rail route that was completed in November 2003, she said.

President Macapagal-Arroyo said that the bidding for construction of the project will held after expiration of the election ban imposed by the Commission on Elections (COMELEC).

The President acknowledged the presence in the Pulong Bayan of Mrs. Gina de Venecia, wife of House Speaker Jose de Venecia, Jr. She thanked Speaker de Venecia for his role in sealing the loan agreement with the CNTIEC.

Sorsogon Governor Raul Lee, Camarines Sur Governor Luis Villafuerte, Albay Governor Al Francis Bichara, Camarines Norte Governor Jesus Typoco, Catanduanes Governor Leandro Verceles and Masbate Governor Antonio Kho attended the Pulong Bayan. The provincial executives have pledged their support for President Macapagal-Arroyo's bid for a six-year term in the May 10 elections.

Also present in the Pulong Bayan were Sorsogon City Mayor Sally Lee and Irosin Mayor Lilia Gonzales.

Six Bicol governors make show of support for GMA

SORSOGON CITY – In a show of their unwavering support for President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo in the May 10 elections, six Bicolano governors joined her in barnstorming the regional bailiwick of Alyansa ng Pag-asa presidential bet Raul Roco.

Governor Raul Lee of Sorsogon, Governor Al Francis Bichara of Albay, Governor Luis Villafuerte of Camarines Sur, Governor Jesus Typoco Jr. of Camarines Norte, Governor Leandro Verceles Jr. of Catanduanes and Governor Antonio Kho of Masbate went out in force to welcome President Macapagal-Arroyo, who visited this city Sunday.

The Bicol provincial executives also expressed their support for Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo's vice presidential running mate Sen. Noli de Castro and the entire senatorial slate of the Koalisyon ng Karanasan at Katapatan sa Kinabukasan.

The governors, along with their leaders and followers, noted that President Macapagal-Arroyo was able to solidify the Bicol votes ahead of next month presidential polls, making her the “candidate to beat” in the region.

In Sorsogon, 11 out of the 14 mayors had assured Governor Lee of their support for the Gloria-Kabayan team and the K-4 senatorial bets.

Among the local executives, who attended the Pulong Bayan and the groundbreaking ceremony for a P219 million New Sorsogon City Hall project, were Sorsogon City Mayor Sally Lee, Irosin Mayor Ma. Lilia Gonzales and Juban Mayor Maria Teresa Fragata.

GMA: Coco and rice farmers obtain more benefits under her administration

SORSOGON CITY – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo says that her government has provided coconut and rice farmers with more benefits than the previous administration.

Speaking at a Pulong Bayan, held Sunday afternoon at the Sorsogon City gymnasium, the President said that the price of copra has increased to P22.00 per kilo under her watch compared with only P2.00 during the term of former President Joseph Estrada.

President Macapagal-Arroyo told the Pulong Bayan, in which her vice presidential running mate Senator Noli de Castro acted as moderator, that the insurance of coco farmers also doubled to P10,000 during the short period of her presidency.

She also pointed that coco manufacturers now produce a variety of high value products out of coconut, like coco diesel, coco oil and coco ethanol.

Turning to rice farming, the President said that her administration makes available two kinds of cards to farmers who are participating in the propagation of the high-yielding Gloria rice variety.

Holders of one kind of card, according to the President, are guaranteed that their rice harvests would be purchased by the National Food Authority (NFA). The other card would entitle them to a P500 discount on fertilizers.

GMA wants parliamentary government for speedy delivery of services

To bring the government closer to the people and speed up the delivery of services to them, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo wants a shift from our current presidential form of government to a federal or parliamentary one, Malacañang said today.

There is also the desire to hasten the progress and development of the country for it to catch up with Japan, South Korea, Malaysia and Thailand, all of which are under a parliamentary or federal system.

Presidential Deputy Spokesman Ricardo Saludo said in a radio interview this morning that local governments have more autonomy under the federal system, thus they can respond faster to the needs of the people.

And if the people do not want their local officials, they can change them faster because they have a stronger hold on them in elections than those in the national government, Saludo added.

Local officials themselves will set policies to uplift the lives of the people who can exert greater pressure on them in elections under the federal system, Saludo further explained.

In the parliamentary system, the executive and legislative branches are merged for faster action in enacting laws for the development of the country, Saludo said.

He said the shift from the presidential to a federal or parliamentary form of government requires a constitutional amendment but how this amendment is realized, via a constituent assembly or a constitutional convention, is for Congress to decide, Saludo said.

Bunye describes GMA as a 'leader with a vision'

Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye revealed today that he enjoys his job even as he has been having difficulty keeping in pace with an indefatigable President who, he described, is a leader with a vision.

Speaking at a CEO (chief executive officer) Leadership Breakfast Forum of the Standard Chartered Bank at the Manila Peninsula Hotel in Makati City, Bunye said he does not mind working "long and odd" hours because President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo works longer than he does.

Bunye said he has been the President's mouthpiece for almost two years now, which is longer than most of his predecessors, but the "wear and tear of the work do not seem to show (on my person)."

The reason for his "comparative longevity," Bunye said, was the fact that he enjoys working for the President. "I fully believe in her and I share in her vision."

“I have accompanied her on most of her foreign trips and I have seen how she worked in the plane long after most of the members of the delegation have fallen asleep,” the Malacañang official recalled.

He added that even presidential security people who are soldiers trained to endure hardships, sometimes find it difficult to keep pace with the President.

Bunye asserted that Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo is full of energy because she is “driven by a very clear vision” for the country and its people.

“She is fighting for change. Change for the people of this country. Change to lift them up from poverty,” Bunye stressed.

To achieve the reforms, Bunye said the President has so much to do in so little time.

He added that President Macapagal-Arroyo is struggling to bring about fundamental changes in the people’s way of life, in policy-making, in the country’s political system and in the delivery of basic government services to the people.

“President Gloria knows she needs to put our economy and our country in good shape if we want to catch up with our neighbors.” Bunye told the bank executives.

He also said the President was able to turn things around in a little over three years, indicating that it was a dramatic accomplishment considering that she inherited an unstable government and a basket-case economy.

He proceeded to recite a litany of accomplishments of the Macapagal-Arroyo administration. “But that is not enough. President Gloria has got to do more,” Bunye added.

Batting for wider support for the President’s bid for a full six-year term in the May 10 elections, Bunye said she must be given a fresh mandate to continue chasing her visions.

“Now, she needs your mandate to change, your mandate to get the job done, your mandate to take us the rest of the way,” Bunye said.

Taxi drivers and operators give GMA solid support

Some 4,000 drivers and owners of major taxi companies operating in Metro Manila have expressed solid support to the candidacy of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, who, they said, was the first Chief Executive to champion their cause and improve their plight.

The Pinag-Isang Lakas ng Taksi Drayber at Operator ng Pilipinas (PILTOP) Inc., through their officers led by Edwin Revilla, chairman; Demetrio Santos, executive vice chairman; and Alexander Macabata, secretary-general, made the commitment to First Gentleman Jose Miguel T. Arroyo during an oathtaking ceremony in Malacañang last Sunday.

Revilla, a taxi driver of Saigon Transport, pointed out that the organization’s leadership and members were very much aware of the present administration’s sincerity in assisting them on their concerns and problems, particularly those pertaining to their safety while on the streets.

These problems were provided with appropriate attention and solutions, he said, citing for one the provision of free P10,000 accident insurance which was very beneficial to PILTOP members, he said.

According to Revilla, some of their members who met accidents and the families of those who died had benefited from the accident insurance.

He revealed that the First Gentleman personally provided the money out of his own pocket if the beneficiaries failed to receive the benefit within three days of the accident.

Aside from accident insurance, the group's members have been extended free medical, financial and burial aid and referral to government agencies, Revilla said.

The PILTOP chairman said they would always treasure the moments they occasionally shared with the First Gentleman, like eating "balut" together during informal fellowship-dialogues in the wee hours of the night in Manila.

In a letter to the President, the group expressed its support for her candidacy in the coming May 10 elections.

"Naniniwala kami na tanging si Presidente Arroyo lamang ang makatutulong na mapaunlad ang bansa(We firmly believe that it is only President Arroyo among other presidential candidates who can lead the country to progress)," Revilla said.

The group's members, as well as their families and relatives, would vote and campaign for the President to ensure her victory and that of her ticket, Revilla assured.

Among the PILTOP officers who signed the letter were Gumercindo Paduga, 1st vice chairman; Gerardo Getopa, 2nd vice chairman; Joseph Tupil, assistant secretary-general; Gerardo Cruz, national treasurer; Rudy Salvador, national auditor; and the 19 members of the board of directors.

In appreciation of her vital role in supporting and promoting their welfare, PILTOP also gave the President a certificate of recognition.

Elizabeth Oviado, wife of Baltazar, a Saigon taxi driver who suffered a heart attack and died in Manila October of last year, took Sunday's occasion to thank the President and Mr. Arroyo for the accident insurance benefit. She said their family received the P10,000 immediately after her husband died.

Members of PILTOP also thanked the First Couple for giving them the opportunity to enter and see Malacañang.

Still in awe over this rare chance, Alfredo Roca, 58, of Ken Taxi, said he could hardly believe that after more than 25 years of being a taxi driver he, together with other drivers, was able to enter the Palace.

"This is a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity," he said. (PNA)

Palace: A big chunk of Filipino-Chinese vote to go to GMA too

The Filipino-Chinese community will not deliver a solid vote to a single candidate in the May 10 elections as claimed by the opposition camp, a Filipino-Chinese businessman said.

In a press briefing presided by Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye this afternoon at the Emperor Villa in Binondo, Manila, Chinese General Hospital (CGH) president Dr. James Dy said that despite claims to the contrary, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has a strong following in the Chinese community.

Dy rebuffed the reported survey that indicates Filipino-Chinese businessmen have thrown their support to opposition standard-bearer actor Fernando Poe Jr.

“I think the Filipino-Chinese community is divided. Filipino-Chinese are rooting for different candidates in the coming presidential polls, some go to Ping Lacson, others are supporting FPJ but there is strong support for President Arroyo. There is no such thing as solid support to one candidate,” the businessman said.

Secretary Bunye supported the statement made by Dy, saying the government is hearing a different tune in the survey conducted by a group of Filipino-Chinese businessmen.

Bunye stressed that the best proof of the wide support of the Chinese community to President Macapagal-Arroyo in the next elections would be reflected by the result on the May 10 polls.

“I hear otherwise and I think the best proof of this will be in the election itself,” Bunye said.

A number of influential leaders of the Filipino-Chinese community, among them Teresita Ang See of the Citizens Action Against Crime (CAAC), had expressed support for the President after her government had shown a no-nonsense anti-kidnapping campaign.

Palace says GMA will be a healing president

Malacañang today indicated that President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo would be a healing leader if given a new mandate in the May 10 elections.

“In the six-year term, she would ensure that this would be a government united or a people united,” Presidential Chief of Staff Rigoberto Tiglao said in a press briefing this afternoon in Malacañang.

Tiglao admitted that it is still too early to talk about the details, but added that the President “would strive to unite all the political forces in her next administration.”

Addressing the Philippine Bar Association Friday evening at the Manila Peninsula Hotel in Makati City, Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo said she intends to put up a government of national unity consisting of the “best and brightest” minds available, regardless of political affiliation.

To attain her objective, the Chief Executive said she would initiate unification and reconciliation talks with all opposition leaders immediately after the elections.

“I also intend to share political powers as broadly as possible,” the President said. “I would invite the political opposition, even my enemies, to forget politics and send their most excellent representative to our government.”

Tiglao expressed confidence that unlike in the past, the President would succeed in her next attempt at national unification because the forthcoming polls would give her a solid mandate.

He stressed that President Macapagal-Arroyo has smarted from her previous attempt at unification immediately after the May 1, 2001 siege of Malacañang by Estrada loyalists.

“Alam na niya kung papaano gawin ito (She already knows how to do this),” Tiglao pointed out.

Malacañang working on 'two fronts' to hike workers' income

As the observance of Labor Day on May 1 approaches, Malacañang "is working on two fronts" to help workers increase their income, Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said today.

Bunye said, in an interview with Radyo ng Bayan this morning, that the Macapagal-Arroyo administration is looking "for wiser means to increase their non-wage benefits" and for possible adjustment of the salary scales through the Regional Wage Boards (RWBs).

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo acknowledged Monday the clamor of workers for better pay to sustain their daily family needs. She expressed confidence in the "capacity of the tripartite wage boards to perform their tasks fairly and in a timely manner."

As for the non-wage benefits, Bunye said that the administration could consider ways to grant them to workers.

"Ito ang mas acceptable sa lahat ng sektor hindi lamang doon sa ating mga manggagawa kundi pati sa ating mga employers (Granting non-wage benefits is acceptable to both workers and employers)," he said.

Bunye said that Malacañang would ask Secretary Patricia Santo Tomas of the Department of Labor and Employment for specific plans on the package of non-wage benefits to be given the workers.

The administration, he said, has so far given discounted diesel fuel to drivers of public utility vehicles in Metro Manila and the nearby provinces, and discounted palay seedlings to farmers.

He said that the health insurance being provided poor families under the PhilHealth program and the scholarship to be given each member of the qualified family could also be considered as non-wage benefit.

Hold me accountable for my pledges, GMA tells Filipino people

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today asked the Filipino people to hold her accountable for the six-point agenda that she promised to accomplish after the May 10 elections even as she challenged the other candidates to bare their programs of government if elected.

In an interview with prominent broadcaster Joe Taruc this morning, the President said that next month's election is not about personalities but about issues. "Ang pagpapatakbo ng kampanya ay sa isyu hindi sa personalidad (The campaign should revolve around issues not personalities)," the President said.

According to the President, the election is about how to resolve the problems confronting the country and the people, and since she has clearly bared the six basic goals that she envisioned if elected, she should be answerable to the people if these pledges would not be realized.

"Nanawagan ako sa inyong lahat (I call on all of you) to hold me accountable for my pledges," the President said in her parting statement during the interview.

The President enumerated the six objectives as 1) create 1 million jobs a year; 2) provide electricity to 1,500 barangays per year and to lower the cost of electricity nationwide; 3) build 3,000 new schools a year, provide one computer for each school, and grant college scholarship for one member of a poor family; 4) triplicate the funds for small and medium enterprises; 5) provide clean and potable water to all the 45,000 barangays; and 6) expand the program of selling medicines at half the ordinary price.

Apparently buoyed by the results of latest opinion polls showing her pulling away from her rivals, the President said that her new administration would be a government of national unity and healing.

"Dapat magsama-sama tayo bilang isang bansa at sirain natin itong psyche of cynicism at pulitika (We should work together as a single nation and put a stop to the psyche of cynicism and politics)," the President said, but added that this is not going to be easy.

She said that in order to achieve this goal, the gap between the rich and the poor should be narrowed and everybody should understand that the key to accomplish this objective is by being united. "Tayo ay lulubog o lalangoy nang sabay-sabay (We either swim or sink together)," the President said.

The President also said that she wished the opposition could unite and present a single presidential candidate so that, according to her, the two sides could provide the electorate with an intelligent choice: one whose campaign is based on a clear vision and platform of government, while the other based on negativism, mudslinging and threats.

GMA favors salary hike for all workers and revamp of gov't machinery

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said that she favors not only salary increases for state and private sector workers but also a reengineering of the government machinery to provide efficient service to the people.

In an interview with broadcast journalist Joe Taruc of DZRH this morning, the President outlined her reorganization plan that would include removal of "redundant employees" by providing them with an "attractive early retirement package."

She said that these employees would be offered early retirement gratuity equivalent to one and a half month pay for every year of service so they could raise enough seed money for their own livelihood projects.

According to the President, the gratuity would be sourced from a fund to be obtained from the World Bank. Thus, the expenditure for retiring state personnel would not be part of the government's budget deficit.

"Ngayon, makaka-save tayo taun-taon sa payroll, at iyong savings magagamit natin para itaas ang suweldo ng mga nalalabing manggagawa (Now, we will be able to save from the payroll to be used for salary increases of the employees who would be retained in the service)," she said.

President Macapagal-Arroyo said that although the military and police salary scales have just been aligned with that of the teachers, the soldiers and policemen would be included in the projected salary adjustments. "Kung anuman ang makuha na suweldo ng mga teachers, ganoon din iyong sundalo at saka iyong pulis (Whatever salary increase the teachers would receive, it is also what the soldiers and policemen would get),” she said.

The President, who has acknowledged the clamor of workers for better pay, said that petitions by labor unions for salary increases are reviewed — and, if found justifiable, approved — by the regional wage boards.

“Ang gusto kong minimum wage ay hindi region by region kundi industry by industry (What I want is a minimum wage based not on the principle of region by region but on industry by industry),” she said.

The President explained that some industries, like call centers, can afford to pay higher wages, while others are dying, like the garment industry.

CalPERS keeps its investments in RP, GMA announces

The Philippines is back on the radar screen of investors.

In a move that could shore up market confidence in the country, America’s largest pension fund, CalPERS (California Public Employees Retirement System), has decided to keep its investments in the Philippines, rating the country highly in recognition of the economic reforms being undertaken by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo.

The President, in a radio interview this morning, broke the good news after receiving word from the CalPERS board that it is retaining its $80 million investments in pension funds.

“Binigyan nila ang Pilipinas ng pinakamataas na rating at kino-konsider nila ang Pilipinas na isa sa mga very attractive investments dahil naniniwala sila sa ating reporma (They gave the Philippines a high rating and consider the country one of the most attractive investments because of the reforms that we are initiating),” the President said.

The CalPERS panel gave the Philippines on Monday a score of 2.12 for the assessment period, higher than the minimum 2.0 which an assessed country must score to qualify in CalPERS list.

The CalPERS investment committee unanimously voted to retain the Philippines in its list of “permissible emerging markets” after giving the government a two-month grace period within which to sharpen merits of the country’s case.

Philippine Ambassador to Washington Albert del Rosario said the decision reaffirms CalPERS’ confidence on the Philippines as a viable location for foreign investments.

“It is also a recognition of the economic reforms being undertaken by the administration of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo,” del Rosario said.

Many foreign investors in Manila had been awaiting the CalPERS decision as a signal on viability of the Philippines as an investment destination.

According to del Rosario, some 600 members of the Filipino-American community who had turned up to hear the proceedings greeted the decision with a roaring standing ovation.

“A delisting would have been a setback for the Philippines,” said Del Rosario, who had been coordinating with Manila to press the country’s case with CalPERS.

Voluminous evidence of Philippine reforms was provided by the Philippine government to back its case, he said.

GMA leads groundbreaking of P821-M Marikina-Infanta road system

GEN. NAKAR, Quezon – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today presided over the groundbreaking ceremony for the construction of the P821.40 million Marikina-Infanta Road System that would connect the provinces of Quezon and Rizal to Metro Manila.

The President lowered the capsule containing a copy of the plan for the 109.30-kilometer infrastructure project.

She was assisted by Koalisyon ng Katapatan at Karanasan sa Kinabukasan (K-4) vice presidential bet Senator Noli “Kabayan” de Castro, Gen. Nakar Mayor Leovigildo Ruzol, Infanta Mayor Filipina Grace America, Quezon 1st District Representative Rafael Nantes, Bishop Julio Labayen, and DPWH Region 4-A Director Bonifacio Seguit.

The Chief Executive said that the M*

The Good News: January-March foreign investments soar to P118B from P6B

Foreign investments accounted for the lion's share of the P130 billion combined figures of the Board of Investments (BOI) and the Philippine Economic Zone Authority (PEZA) for the first three months of the year.

Foreign capital inflow was a hefty P118 billion, a 1,827 percent increase from the previous year's P6.123 billion.

The combined P130 billion BOI and PEZA figures also represented a 1,072 percent growth from the measly P11.09 billion recorded in the same period last year.

Local investments grew by nearly 140 percent from P5 billion in 2003 to P12 billion this year.

The BOI said electricity, gas and water supply sectors accounted for P107 billion of the total.

The manufacturing sector got P19.5 billion or a 371 percent increase from the P4.1 billion last year.

Information technology rose by 45 percent to P2.88 billion in the first quarter from P1.98 billion a year ago.

Bataan received the single biggest investment with the construction of GNPower's liquefied natural gas combined cycle power plant.

Export earnings from the Subic Freeport reached $211 million or 17 percent better than the P180 million recorded in 2003.

Better computer and other electronic products accounted for the improved performance of the export sector, according to the One-Stop Export Documentation Center-Subic (OSED) of the Subic Bay Metropolitan Authority (SBMA).

Leading the pack was computer manufacturer Wistron Infocomm with $125 million worth of shipments.

Sanyo Deki, an electric machinery and appliances manufacturer ranked second with $13.4 million worth of exports followed by automated teller machine (ATM) parts manufacturer Omron Corp. with $10.7 million.

Juken Sangyo Philippines, a Japanese wood processing firm, registered earnings of $6.7 million to rank fourth.

Statement of the President: Re CalPERS

The basis for such decisions as CalPERS' is confidence, confidence in the solidity of economic reforms despite transitory constraints, confidence in law and order despite isolated pockets of lawlessness and most of all, confidence in the prospect of continuity and permanence in good governance.

We are thankful for this development, which is a vote of confidence in the will and capacity of the average Filipino to fight for change and rise above challenges.

Statement of the President: Re Abu Sayyaf

The Abu Sayyaf is a spent force and it can no longer resuscitate itself under other guises or names.

Its remaining leaders and members are constantly on the run.

Ordinary people have pointed to their lairs and movements to the authorities.

The terrorist group has lost whatever mass support it once enjoyed, leaving it open to government surveillance and operations.

We will crush this group of bandits and terrorists in due time.

The countdown has already begun.

Statement of the President: Re NPA abductions

These abductions of local candidates by the NPA are condemnable.

They are acts of terrorism that shall be dealt with accordingly.

I am directing the AFP to back up the PNP in securing local candidates under threat and to see to it that this travesty of democracy does not go unpunished.

Statement of Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye: Re Anti-jueteng drive

The government has conducted a massive anti-jueteng drive nationwide.

The President need not sign a pact against "jueteng" because the intensified campaign against illegal gambling speaks volumes of her stand against the illegal gambling issue.

What is proven in action need not be belabored in words.

Statement of Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye: Re Street crimes

We are not discounting the validity of the survey but we are doing something about the situation.

Poverty is the main cause of these crimes and we are not only fighting poverty but bearing down hard on street crimes through various police and barangay programs such as foot patrols and training of tanods.

Foreign investor confidence buoyed up by economic reforms, prospect of continuity

Foreign investor confidence in the Philippines has taken an upswing, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo said today, citing the unanimous decision of CALPERS (California Public Employees Retirement System) Investment Committee to retain the Philippines in its list of “permissible emerging markets.”

“The basis for such decisions as CALPERS’ is confidence, confidence in the solidity of economic reforms despite transitory constraints, confidence in law and order despite isolated pockets of lawlessness and most of all, confidence in the prospect of continuity and permanence in good governance,” the President said in an official statement.

The President welcomed the development as “a vote of confidence in the will and capacity of the average Filipino to fight for change and rise above challenges.”

Philippine Ambassador to the United States Albert del Rosario relayed the good news to Malacañang.

“We view this development as an endorsement of the economic reforms initiated by the President and a positive statement that the Philippines remains an important investment destination,” Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said yesterday after receiving the news.

“The decision of CALPERS reinforced the important relationship which CALPERS and the Philippines are building. It is a recognition of the economic reforms being undertaken by the administration of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo and reflect the continuing confidence in the Philippines as an attractive investment destination,” del Rosario told the CALPERS Board who asked him to comment on their announcement.

Only 17 out of 27 countries evaluated by the Investment Committee were listed as eligible for investment, Finance Secretary Juanita Amatong said, stressing the Philippines passed the benchmark of two points with a rating of 2.12 from 1.87 in February.

In Asia, only the Philippines, India, Malaysia, South Korea and Taiwan have so far qualified.

Even before CALPERS’ decision came out, foreign investor confidence in the Philippines had already soared as reflected by a big upsurge in investments from January to March this year.

Foreign capital inflow accounted for the bulk of the P130 billion in total investments for the period, according to figures from the Board of Investments and the Philippine Economic Zone Authority.

Foreign investments totaled P118 billion compared to only P6.123 billion for the same period last year.

RP workers had the highest pay hike in Asia over the past three years

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has said that the Philippines registered the highest salary increase in the whole of Asia at 29 percent over the past three years.

In an interview Tuesday night with television host Korina Sanchez of ABS-CBN Channel 2, the President also said that in 2002, the various regional tripartite wage boards have granted increases in the minimum wage.

The President said that although she favors a wage increase, the issue should better be left to the discretion of the regional tripartite wage boards.

In the same interview, the President noted the emergence of new job opportunities offering high salary rates, citing as examples the call centers, the car manufacturing industry, and the shipbuilding industry.

President Macapagal-Arroyo also cited the airlines' service centers and other high-tech industries as potential providers of high-paying jobs.

For his part, Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said the President prefers that wage increases should be based on industry standards instead of by regions.

"Industry standards are different so we cannot compare," Bunye said in a radio interview this morning.

The President has earlier noted that some profitable industries like call centers can afford to pay higher salaries, unlike the moribund garment industry.

The President has also said she favors not only salary increases for state and private sector workers, but also a retooling of the government machinery to enhance efficient service to the people.

This could be done, she said, by granting a higher gratuity of one and a half months for every year of service to state employees who would want to avail of the an early retirement scheme so that they can use the money to invest in a profitable business or livelihood project.

She said that although the salaries of soldiers and policemen have been adjusted to the level of the teachers, those in the uniformed service would still be included in the projected salary hikes.

Palace restates hands-off policy in SMC board election

Malacañang today called on the public not to give any political color to the result of the recent annual stockholders meeting of giant conglomerate San Miguel Corporation where businessman Eduardo 'Danding' Cojuangco retained the chairmanship of the board.

Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye, in a press briefing this afternoon, reiterated President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's hands off policy in the SMC board election.

"I think its best that we leave politics out of the situation," Bunye said. "We know that PCGG is out to protect the interest of the government. They did what they believe is necessary but after the election, the outcome is accepted."

Presidential Commission on Good Government (PCGG) Chairperson Haydee Yorac had also earlier asked the public to respect the outcome of the SMC board election.

Bunye said the government is acknowledging the works done by the present SMC leadership as reflected in their records of expansion, growth and profitability.

"The general guideline is to make sure that the conglomerate continues on its course of being profitable, of seeking opportunities for expansion which would eventually be beneficial not only to the stockholders but also to our economy," explained Bunye.

Palace confident majority of K-4 senate bets to win in the May 10 polls

Malacañang expressed confidence today that majority of the senatorial slate of the administration's Koalisyon ng Katapatan at Karanasan sa Kinabukasan (K-4) would win in the May 10 national elections.

In a press briefing this afternoon, Presidential Spokesman Ignacio R. Bunye allayed fears raised by administration Senator Joker Arroyo that the government could lose its grip on the Senate after next month's polls.

“I think it’s a question of perception but the reality is that the support that can be given to all the candidates is being given,” he said, reacting to alleged complaints of some K-4 senatorial bets that they are not being given full support by Malacañang.

Bunye stressed that the administration is giving all the necessary help and attention to the 12 senatorial candidates.

He added that for a wider coverage in the country, the K-4 bets all agreed, even before the start of campaign season, that they could not all be together in one rally all the time.

This was made clear to everybody, he said, to have a better chance of spreading the K-4 platform in a wider scale in the country.

Bunye said he respects the prerogative of K-4 senatorial bet Miriam Defensor-Santiago in raising a question with the Commission on Elections (COMELEC) on alleged violations by fellow senatorial candidates on the time limits set on airing of political ads.

“I believe she is well within her prerogative to raise questions but we’re also saying that we have monitored the COMELEC chairman himself who said that that based on COMELEC resolution, the time allotment has not been fully used by any particular candidate at this point,” he added.

He also denied any crack on the ruling administration ticket and stresses that the “Gloria-Kabayan” tandem, along with the 12 senatorial candidates, remain solid and united now that they are on the homestretch of the campaign period.

GMA launching Coco Diesel program

SAN PABLO CITY—The government today shifted to high gear its coco diesel development program in a bid to reduce the country’s dependence on imported fuel and create a new market for coconut farmers.

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo formally launched here the Coco Bio-Diesel Program which forms part of her administration’s economic and social reform agenda designed to promote the use of environment-friendly alternative fuel and improve the coconut farmers’ standard of living.

Addressing some 5,000 coconut industry stakeholders gathered at the Doña Leonila Park here, the President revealed that positive results of various technical tests conducted by the Department of Energy indicated that the use of coconut methyl ester (CME), also known as coco diesel, is most effective in abating atmospheric pollution.

Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo said coco diesel can be used on vehicles without engine modification. She said a switch to CME could also help bring down the cost of energy in the country.

The President expressed gratitude to RI Chemicals, Senbel Fine Chemicals and Chemrez for heeding her call to develop the coco bio-diesel technology.

Experts said coco bio-diesel is a mixture of diesel fuel and CME “at a certain proportion volume.”

In most countries like the United States, bio-diesel is a mixture of diesel fuel and ester derived from corn, soya, rapeseed or palm utilizing five percent to 20 percent blend.

It has a density, kinematic viscosity and other properties similar to diesel fuel.

CME can be used as an alternative or substitute to petroleum diesel, or as an enhancer and additive.

Meneleo Carlos, president of RI Chemical which produces CME, said they have been using coco diesel in their vehicles and noted a dramatic reduction of smoke emission by at least 70 percent.

Former singer Claire de la Fuente, president of the Integrated Metropolitan Bus Operators Association (IMBOA), agreed with Carlos' observation that coco diesel brought down emission of their buses by 50 percent.

De la Fuente said IMBOA was the first mass transport group in Metro Manila to use coco diesel.

Energy Secretary Vince Perez, Press Secretary Milton Alingod, Philippine Coconut Authority Administrator Danny Coronacion, and Energy Undersecretary Edgardo Mañalac accompanied the President in her visit to this city.

Among the local officials present during the launching were Laguna Governor Teresita Lazaro, San Pablo City Mayor Florante Aquino, and Nenette Alcantara, president of the Pederasyon ng Magsasaka at Magniniyog ng Lungsod ng San Pablo.

GMA asks OFWs in Middle East to be cautious in wake of bombings in Baghdad, Riyadh

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo Wednesday called on Filipinos abroad, particularly those in the Middle East where terrorists sow death and destruction, to exercise utmost care in the wake of deadly, coordinated terrorist attacks in Iraq and Saudi Arabia that killed and wounded scores of people.

"I call on all Filipinos abroad who are vulnerable to terrorist attacks to be on the alert and take precautionary measures under the guidelines of, and in cooperation with, their host governments," the President said in a statement.

The President acknowledged "the concerns of our people with regard to the safety of our nationals in Iraq" and vowed to "do our best to ensure their safety and well-being while at the same time, stand fast in our international commitments."

The attacks only strengthen our commitment and resolve to the global fight against terrorism, the President said as she condemned the latest bombings in Baghdad and Riyadh.

On April 15, the President ordered the Department of Foreign Affairs and Ambassador Roy Cimatu of the Middle East Preparedness Team to set up an Iraq Team to ensure the safety and possible relocation or evacuation of Filipinos working there.

The Iraq Team is tasked to identify and locate all Filipino nationals and establish working relationships with appropriate peace and order authorities in the country.

The President gave the assurance that there is sufficient transportation and communication equipment and other logistics already on the ground with additional resources to be provided as may be necessary.

The President then called on Filipinos in Iraq to register themselves with the Philippine mission in Baghdad even if they went there on their own without going through the proper procedures.

Business, labor groups express full support for GMA policies, virtually endorse her candidacy

The country's top business and labor leaders today virtually endorsed the candidacy of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo in the May 10 elections as they expressed their full support for her policies, particularly in building a strong Republic and in creating an environment that is friendly to domestic and foreign investments.

During the 25th National Conference of Employers held this morning at the Westin Philippine Plaza in Pasay City, Miguel Varela, chairman of the Employers Confederation of the Philippines (ECOP), presented to the President a social covenant for full employment declaring their commitment to job creation, economic recovery and industrial harmony.

In what was seen as an outpouring of support for her presidency, the declaration embodies six objectives in the spirit of genuine social partnership.

In his brief remarks, Varela told the President that what he was presenting to her was just a draft of the covenant, adding that the final copy would be presented to her in Malacañang "after the elections because we have the gut feeling that you will continue to stay in office" after next month's election.

Also in his speech, ECOP president Rene Soriano said that the business community and the labor force are committed to support the President "in building a strong Republic by strengthening the competitiveness of the local industry and by forging the necessary business partnership with other sectors of society."

In making the covenant, the leaders of business and labor organizations committed themselves to respect, support, and help build the public and private institutions, including workers groups necessary to bring about their goals and objectives.

They expressed recognition of the opportunities for business and workers in the global economy, noting that they are the key in achieving the goals of sustained economic growth, full and decent employment and eradication of poverty.

They also shared the objective of strengthening the policy environment for investments, employment preservation and employment creation. Towards this end, they committed themselves to make mutual efforts to improve the business environment, sustain business viability, uplift conditions of work, and promote harmonious labor-management relations.

The six objectives of the covenant are:

1. to help create a policy environment that is friendly to domestic and foreign investments;
2. to continuously build the economy by reducing the costs of doing business, particularly by reducing red tape and intensifying anti-corruption campaigns, maintaining peace and order, improving revenue collection, and guaranteeing greater transparency in the enforcement of government policies affecting business;
3. to support the development of small and medium enterprises (SMEs) and their workers including rural industries and village enterprises and livelihood programs through appropriate access to credit, technology and training, in the process strengthening forward-backward and formal-informal sector linkages and linking SMEs to markets;
4. to support efforts at expanding access to productive resources such as capital, technology and entrepreneurial skills to informal sector workers, women, out-of-school youth and other marginalized sectors of society;
5. to share responsibility in promoting industrial peace and enhancing constructive and harmonious relations between workers and employers, consistent with democratic principles; and
6. to seek the support of the National Tripartite Advisory Council and the Tripartite Industrial Peace Council within 60 days from the signing of the covenant in designing the action agenda and monitoring mechanism to implement the agreements therein.

Signing the covenant for the workers were Avelino Valerio of the Kilusan Trade Union Congress of the Philippines (TUCP), Victorino Balais of the Philippine Transport and General Workers Organization-Trade Union Congress of the Philippines (PTGWO-TUCP), Dominador Tuvera of the TUCP, Ramon Bajar of the Federation of Free Workers (FFW) and Vladimir Tupaz of the Trade Unions of the Philippines and Allied Services (TUPAS).

Signing for the employers were Rene Soriano of the ECOP, Donald Dee of the Philippine Chamber of Commerce and Industry (PCCI), Sergio Ortiz Luis Jr. of the Philippine Exporters Confederation Inc., Miguel Varela of Philippines, Inc., Francis Chua of the Chamber of Commerce Foundation of the Philippines, Robin Sy of the Federation of Filipino-Chinese Chamber of Commerce and Industry, Meneleo Carlos Jr. of the Federation of Philippine Industries, Inc., Feliciano Torres of the Motor Vehicle Parts Manufacturers Association of the Philippines, Vishnu Hathiramani of the Filipino-Indian Chamber of Commerce of the Philippines, Manolito Madrasto of the Philippine Constructors Association, Inc., George Sy of the Confederation of Garment Exporters of the Philippines, Grace Abella-Zata of the Personnel Management Association of the Philippines and Ernesto Santiago of the Semi-Conductor Electronics Industry in the Philippines.

The document was attested to by Labor Secretary Patricia Sto. Tomas and Trade and Industry Secretary Cesar Purisima.

CBCP urges people to vote for candidate with leadership experience

The Catholic Church today urged the electorate to vote for candidates who meet three basic criteria, the first of which is competence in terms of leadership experience, professional qualifications and a track record of governance.

A pastoral letter, issued by the influential Catholic Bishops Conference of the Philippines (CBCP), also enjoined the voters to choose candidates “of conscience, i.e., with personal integrity, transparency, accountability and respect for human rights.”

The pastoral letter, signed by CBCP president Davao Archbishop Fernando Capalla, said the people should entrust their ballots to the candidate who is a person with “commitment to a vision and program of action on key issues such as family and life, environment, illegal drugs and gambling, justice, peace and order, poverty alleviation, education, etc.”

The CBCP said it is the right and duty of the voters to discern and select the candidates based on these three criteria.

“Beyond elections, there is the greater challenge for all citizens to continue monitoring winning candidates in order to ensure transparency, accountability and people empowerment for good governance,” the CBCP stressed.

“We have been praying for clean elections; we continue to pray and work for reconciliation and the solidarity that is essential to nation-building,” it added.

The CBCP underscored that elections are crucial in the continuing task of nation-building. “They are a timely opportunity to transform society by electing wise, capable and upright leaders.”

The CBCP also called on the people to be vigilant and work together to ensure the conduct of honest, orderly and peaceful elections.

GMA asks business, labor leaders to lead the people in making “right choice” in May 10 polls

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today urged business and labor leaders to lead the Filipino people in making the right and the responsible choice in the May 10 elections to consolidate the gains that her administration has achieved during the past three years.

“The crucial choice we face today is a choice between moving forward to stability and prosperity, or making a U-turn to the crony capitalism and the midnight kitchenomics of the past,” the President told the 25th National Conference of Employers at the Westin Philippine Plaza in Pasay City this morning.

The President was referring to opposition candidate Fernando Poe, Jr., a close friend of former President Joseph Estrada, who was known to indulge in midnight drinking bouts in Malacañang together with his cronies.

She said the question now is whether to simply throw the gains that the government has achieved “by gambling on an inexperienced and untested leadership in the May elections.”

“I trust that you will lead our people in making the right and responsible choice, and I thank you all for your support,” the President said.

President Macapagal-Arroyo also said that minimum wages increased by 11.2 percent above inflation, while foreign investments surged by 26 percent in the “strong start” of her short presidency.

She traced to the improvement of the economy to employers’ “commitment to a social partnership,” which, in turn, helped foster a prolonged industrial peace.

Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo said that the average mining and non-agricultural wages went up by 29.2 percent to P271 per day under her watch compared with only P210 daily under the administration of former President Joseph Estrada. The average daily agricultural wages went up by 19.6 percent to P238 from P199.

“If we talk about average wages, it would be even more because the new jobs created by the new investments under my administration have been the higher paying jobs,” she added.

As a result of the social partnership between government and the private sector, the President said, “we have made a strong start in a short time.”

“Working together we stabilized the mess we inherited. Together in our social partnership, we have low inflation and high growth. We have huge new foreign investments. Foreign investments have surged by 26 percent,” she said.

She said that the number of strikes under her administration has been cut by half, or the lowest in two decades.

With an unprecedented expenditure of P20 billion a year on agricultural modernization, the Chief Executive said her administration expanded the farms covered by irrigation, introduced hybrid crops and improved transport system.

“Our agriculture has grown by leaps and bounds,” she said, adding that farm incomes have improved dramatically. “Copra was P2.50 per kilo when I inherited the presidency, now it is P22.50 per kilo,” she said.

“As a result, too, we will be self-sufficient again in rice within two years,” the President said.

She then pledged that, if elected in the May 10 polls, she would carry out a six-point pro-poor agenda that, hopefully, would end poverty and unite the nation.

Her pro-poor program consists of six pledges to be fulfilled during her new term of office. First is to create a million new jobs each year.

To protect jobs, she said that tariffs of some 1,000 items would be adjusted upwards to give local manufacturers a fighting chance against imports.

Last September, she recalled that the Philippines was among the 21 developing countries that said “No” to a new World Trade Organization agreement until the developed countries reform their system of subsidies for agriculture.

Second is to bring clean water to all 45,00 barangays. Third is to energize 1,500 barangays a year.

“I am prepared to consider industry-government cooperation in addressing some concerns about the power sector and the water issue. There will never be a power crisis nor a water crisis under the Gloria administration,” she said.*

Statement of the President: Re Poll trend

The nation is strongly unifying in the fight for change for the average Filipino.

The poll trend shows the people moving behind a single voice and a single vision of stability and prosperity—winning over stagnation and poverty, over the dark past.

We shall deliver on the rising expectations and hopes of the people—by bringing more jobs, more college scholarships, clean water and health needs.

We shall wield their mandate to shore up confidence in our economy and our political stability.

We will have the clean and credible elections befitting our best democratic traditions.

This election is about the people and the victory shall be theirs.

Statement of the President: Re May 1 celebration

We shall celebrate May 1 in solidarity with Philippine Labor, in an event that signifies the dignity of the Filipino worker.

I appeal to our people to mark this day in its proper spirit, and not use it for cheap politicking and character assassination.

Statement of the President: Re PAGCOR

I direct PAGCOR to deal with this issue with full transparency.

I welcome the help of Archbishop Cruz in any inquiry into these matters and his concern over the proper use of public funds.

Statement of Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye: Re IMF economic forecast

The IMF economic forecast is not as alarming compared to the threat of leaving the country's fate to inexperienced and incompetent leaders.

It is actually an upgrade of a previous outlook and things will look brighter after the President gets a solid mandate in the polls.

Statement of Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye: Re Terror threats

Effective security measures are in place and we assure the public that we are ready to face and thwart terrorist attacks in the country, particularly in Metro Manila and other key urban areas.

The intelligence community is monitoring all threats and is not discounting any reports from allies.

GMA: Poll trend shows Filipinos unifying behind a vision of stability and prosperity

Buoyed by the latest survey giving her a significant 4.5 percent lead over opposition presidential candidate Fernando Poe Jr. in the May 10 elections, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo said today that "the nation is strongly unifying in the fight for change for the average Filipino."

In a statement released by Malacañang this morning, the President said, "the poll trend shows the people moving behind a single voice and a single vision of stability and prosperity – winning over stagnation and poverty, over the dark past."

According to the survey, conducted by the Social Weather Stations (SWS) on April 10-17, 35.3 percent of 1,400 respondents, who were "likely voters" chosen nationwide, picked President Macapagal-Arroyo, leaving behind all her rivals in the presidential derby.

The respondents' other choices were Poe of the Koalisyon ng Nagkakaisang Pilipino (KNP), 30.5 percent; Panfilo Lacson of Laban ng Demokratikong Pilipino (LDP), 10.6 percent; Raul Roco of Alyansa ng Pag-Asa, 8.4 percent; Eddie Villanueva of Bangon Pilipino, 4.0 percent; and Eddie Gil, Independent .05 percent.

The President's lead of 4.5 percent over her closest rival, Poe of KNP, in latest SWS survey, commissioned by Manila Standard, ABS-CBN and Polistrat International, is the biggest she has so far scored since the start of the election campaign last February 10. The survey had a 3 percent margin of error.

The favorable SWS survey result came out ahead of the endorsement of Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo's bid for a full six-year term in the May 10 polls by business and labor leaders during the 25th National Conference of Employers at the Westin Philippine Plaza in Pasay City on Thursday.

Deputy Presidential Spokesman Ricardo Saludo noted, in a radio interview this morning, that the President's lead could still increase. She was behind the KNP bet in the January 2004 survey, but has slowly but steadily bounced back since then in opinion polls of both SWS and Pulse Asia, he said.

"At dito sa pinakahuling survey ng SWS, maliwanag na talagang sumususug ng malakas sa Pangulo ang suporta at dito hindi na malayo na magkaroon na nga nitong bandwagon na ito (It is clear in the latest SWS survey that the President is gaining strong support, and a bandwagon could soon be expected)," he added.

Saludo also stressed the importance of support pledged to President Macapagal-Arroyo by the business and labor sectors.

"Kung saan sumuporta ang negosyo, ibig sahihin kung ito ang mananalo mas magkakaroon sila ng kumpiyansa sa ekonomiya at sa bansa, at kung lumakas ang kanila kumpiyansa ay lalakas din ang kanilang investment at pagpapalawak ng negosyo at pabrika ng trabaho (When business supports a candidate, a win by that bet will inspire confidence in the economy. Strong confidence will translate to investments that will create more jobs for the people)," he said.

In her statement, President Macapagal-Arroyo said, "we shall deliver on the rising expectations and hopes of the people – by bringing more jobs, more college scholarships, clean water and health needs."

She also promised to wield the people's mandate, in the upcoming elections, "to shore up confidence in our economy and our political stability."

The President assured the people that the elections will be "clean, credible (and) befitting our best democratic traditions."

"This election is about the people and the victory shall be theirs," she said.

South Cotabato governor supports GMA

South Cotabato Gov. Daisy Fuentes, a known oppositionist, has announced in Koronadal City, that she is not only supporting President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's candidacy, but would also campaign hard for her to ensure that she wins in the May 10 presidential elections.

"And when I threw my support for Arroyo, this means I carry 100 percent of my people. I will campaign hard for her victory. This is, indeed, an exciting day and a shock for all of you, especially the press," Fuentes told the local reporters during a press conference at the Marvella Plaza in Koronadal.

Fuentes made a similar announcement in a speech at a convention of the Kasangga ni Gloria Movement in the same hotel.

"I'll do whatever I can to help President Arroyo win in South Cotabato, a known opposition bailiwick," Fuentes said.

The decision by Fuentes, who belongs to the Nationalist People's Coalition (NPC), to cross party lines and help push the Macapagal-Arroyo candidacy, completes the list of Central Mindanao governors endorsing the President's quest for a fresh mandate.

The other pro-Arroyo political leaders in the region are Governors Manny Pinol of North Cotabato, Pax Mangudadatu of Sultan Kudarat, Mike Escobar of Sarangani and Cotabato City Mayor Muslimin Sema.

The lady governor clarified that she would remain with the NPC since party chairman emeritus business tycoon Eduardo "Danding" Cojuangco has not endorsed a particular presidential candidate.

Some 45 congressmen, who belong to the NPC, led by Isabela's Faustino Dy III, NPC chairman, have pledged support for the President.

GMA stresses need for teamwork in nation-building

VILLASIS, Pangasinan – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo underscored here today the importance of teamwork in nation-building and ensuring a bright future for the youth.

The President also emphasized the relevance of sports particularly basketball in creating a healthy citizenry.

Addressing supporters during an exhibition basketball game here where she made the ceremonial toss, Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo said a vote for her K-4 (Koalisyon ng Karanasan at Katapatan para sa Kinabukasan) team would ensure a good future for the youth.

The exhibition match, held at the Villasis Gymnasium here, featured the Gloria Team versus Strong Republic Team in apparent reference to the President and her "Strong Republic" slogan.

The President indicated that Pangasinan has a special place in her heart because her late mother, Evangeline Macaraeg Macapagal, hailed from Binalonan town.

Earlier today, President Macapagal-Arroyo attended mass at Rosales town, also in Pangasinan.

After barnstorming Villasis, the President proceeded to San Quintin town where she had a Pulong Bayan or dialogue with local residents.

The President assured the local folk that their problems and concerns would be given immediate attention by the government if she will be given a new mandate in the May 10 elections.

Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo also revisited Lingayan where she launched last Saturday the "Hunger Free Philippines" program under the auspices of the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization.

Today's interaction with the Lingayen people involved discussions with barangay health workers on the government's PhilHealth program.

With the President during her sorties here were K-4 vice presidential candidate Noli "Kabayan" de Castro, K-4 Campaign Spokesman Michael Defensor, Press Secretary Milton Alingod and K-4 Media Bureau Chief Cerge Remonde.

Agri modernization program paying off – GMA

BATAC, Ilocos Norte –President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo said here Thursday night that the fight against poverty is slowly but surely being won due to the agriculture modernization program put in place by the government.

In a speech during a farmer's festival held at the Imelda Cultural Center here, the President noted that the "food for every table" goal of her administration is slowly being realized.

"That aspiration is nearing completion," she said, pointing out that the fight against poverty is gaining victory due to the agriculture modernization program of her government.

The President stressed she is the only President who spent P20 billion yearly for agriculture modernization.

"Now we can show the advances we made in this field," she said, expressing elation at the cooperation the farmers here are doing by engaging in progressive farming activities.

In two years, she said, the country will be self-sufficient in "palay" and "we will begin exporting rice".

The President cited the nine tractors that came from the P19 million fund which are the shares of the town of Batac in the R. A. 7171 (Tobacco Excise Tax Fund) for tobacco producing provinces in the North, namely Pangasinan, La Union, Ilocos Sur and Ilocos Norte.

She also said that she is the only President who paid in full what the government owed to the different tobacco producing provinces as provided for under R. A. 7171.

The President also said that the creation of one million job a year is one of the pro-poor agenda of her administration that will be implemented in the next six years with the help of the residents of Batac.

She enumerated the other pledges of her pro-poor agenda, namely:

- triple the loans extended to the small businessmen;
- provide clean water to all barangays of the country;
- provide electricity to 1,500 barangays every year;
- build 3,000 new classrooms, and provide one computer to each school and one scholarship for college education of one in every poor barangay; and
- reduce in half the price of medicines being bought by ordinary Filipinos.

During the birthday celebration of Cong. Roque Ablan in Fort Ilocandia, the President announced as her birthday gift the following:

- Instruction to Budget and Management Secretary Emilia Boncodin to release the 2003 R. A. 7171 funds allocated to each of the tobacco producing provinces; and
- Signing of a proclamation declaring Fort Ilocandia here in Laoag as Tourism Economic Zone.

This means that the five-star hotel casino complex here can start building additional 200 cottages, and allowing the entry of duty free equipment here.

The President was accompanied in her sorties here by vice presidential candidate Sen. Noli "Kabayan" de Castro and former Ilocos Sur Governor Chavit Singson.

NFA to buy Palay at no less than P10 per kilo even during harvest season, says GMA

SAN QUINTIN, Pangasinan – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo assured rice farmers in this province today that the National Food Authority (NFA) will buy their palay harvest at no less than P10 per kilo at any time of the year.

The President, who flew here this morning, announced the NFA's guaranteed palay price at a Pulong Bayan she presided over with her vice presidential running mate Senator Noli "Kabayan" de Castro.

A local farmers' cooperative official, Cirilo Ferrer, requested on behalf of his group for the President to set a higher price for their palay production. He noted that the palay price usually declines during the harvest season, when there is an oversupply of the staple.

The President responded that the NFA has been procuring palay from farmers at P10.00, plus an incentive of 10 to 30 centavos, per kilo since January 2004 "If private traders are buying palay below the P10.00 per kilo price range, you should go to the NFA, which has a guaranteed price of P10.00 per kilo," she said.

She said that the NFA price was supposed not to be lower than P10.00 per kilo because her administration had raised the rice agency's procurement fund from P1 billion to P4 billion. The bigger procurement fund was precisely intended to influence the commercial price of rice, she explained.

The President noted that NFA has still P12 million for the procurement of palay from farmers in Eastern Pangasinan.

According to the President, her administration would release P1.35 million within this month for three irrigation projects in the towns of San Quintin, Umengan and Tayug, Eastern Pangasinan. Work on these projects include desiltation of the main irrigation canal and construction of shallow tube wells.

GMA posts biggest lead over FPJ in Visayas and Mindanao

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo surged further ahead in the latest Social Weather Stations (SWS) survey, with the biggest lead over closest rival Fernando Poe Jr. posted in the Visayas and Mindanao.

The SWS poll validated an independent survey conducted by equally prestigious Pulse Asia which earlier gave President Macapagal-Arroyo a "significant lead" at 34 percent against Poe's 31 percent.

The SWS pre-election survey conducted April 10 to 17, gave the President an acceptance rating of 35.3 percent against Poe's 30.8 percent.

Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo, the first incumbent Chief Executive to seek a fresh mandate since 1986, improved by 3.9 percentage points from the 31.4 percent she got in the previous SWS survey conducted March 21 to 29.

Conversely, Poe, standard-bearer of the opposition Koalisyon ng Nagkakaisang Pilipino (KNP), suffered a setback of 1.2 percentage points, or from 32 percent in the March 21-29 survey to 30.8 percent in the latest SWS findings.

Sen. Panfilo Lacson overtook former Sen. Raul Roco to grab third place with 10.6 percent. Lacson, however, also suffered a slight decline of 0.6 percent compared to his previous rating of 11.2 percent.

Roco, who had to take time-out from the hustings to seek medical treatment for back pains in the United States, plunged to 8.4 percent from his previous acceptance rating of 15 percent to lose third place to Lacson.

Charismatic leader Eddie Villanueva remained a poor fifth in the overall standing with four percent, although he had an improvement of 1.2 percent over the previous SWS survey.

In the vice presidential race, the gap between front runners Sen. Noli "Kabayan" de Castro of the ruling Koalisyon ng Karanasan at Katapatan para sa Kinabukasan (K-4) and Sen. Loren Legarda of KNP slightly narrowed.

De Castro had a significant decline of 6.1 percentage points, or from 50 percent in the previous survey to only 43.9 percent in the latest survey.

President Macapagal-Arroyo was strongest in the Visayas and Mindanao which gave her 53 percent and 44 percent, respectively, against Poe's 23 percent and 37 percent, respectively.

In Metro Manila which is traditionally an opposition bailiwick, it was a statistical tie between Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo and Poe at 27 percent and 26 percent, respectively.

However, Poe had a slight advantage in Northern and Central Luzon regions which gave him 33 percent against the President's 31 percent. He was strongest in Southern Luzon with 32 percent compared to 20 percent for Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo.

On the voters' choice by social class, the President registered 35.3 percent nationwide against Poe's 30.8 percent. Class A, B, and C gave Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo an overwhelming 43 percent to Poe's 11 percent. Class D also gave her a slight edge at 34 percent to the actor's 31 percent.

Curiously, the two leading presidential candidates are tied in the Class E at 36 percent apiece, negating the claim by Poe's camp that he champions the masses.

The latest survey, the fourth in a series of five, covered 1,400 respondents using "face-to-face" interviews, with an error of margin of three percent.

GMA presents awards, incentives to barangay health workers

LINGAYEN, Pangasinan — It was the turn of the government's basic health services program to take the spotlight here today as President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo attended the 4th Regional Barangay Health Workers (BHW) Congress at the Narciso Ramos Sports Complex.

The President, assisted by Health Secretary Manuel Dayrit and Pangasinan Governor Victor Agbayani, distributed P100,000 seed money to each of the four BHW federations in Region I composed of the provinces of Ilocos Norte, Ilocos Sur, La Union and Pangasinan. Pangasinan Second District Congressman Amado Espino Jr. was also present at the BHW Congress.

Around 50,000 BHWs attended the annual gathering to witness the awarding of government incentives to their respective provincial health units for their exemplary contribution in providing basic health services in the northern part of the country.

Aside from the P100,000 seed money, host province Pangasinan was also presented with a plaque of appreciation along with a P2,500,120 check representing a P280 per head incentive for their BHWs.

The President also awarded a plaque of appreciation to La Union and a P981,680 check; P812,000 for Ilocos Sur and P1,004,360 to Ilocos Norte as their respective incentives for their active participation in bringing the health services to far-flung barangays in Region I.

She also cited seven barangays for having the Model Botika sa Barangay in the region and presented a plaque of recognition to Brgy. Abucay in Piddig, Ilocos Norte; Brgy. Aguing in Sinait; Brgy. Patong in Magsingal; and Brgy. Paing in Ilocos Sur; Brgy. San Vicente, San Fernando City, La Union; Brgy. Centro Toma in Bani; and Brgy. Camagsingalan in Sual, Pangasinan.

The Chief Executive presented to Dr. Nicolas Miguel, Chief of Bayambang District Hospital and Bayambang Mayor Leocadio de Vera, Jr., P5.4 million worth of hospital equipment.

In her visit here, the President was accompanied by her running mate Senator Noli "Kabayan" de Castro and was cheered by a huge crowd at the NRSC sports stadium.

In her speech, the President emphasized that in the three years of her presidency, she was able to distribute eight million PhilHealth cards compared to the 100,000 before she took over the reins of government in January 2001.

Palace hails Sandiganbayan ruling on PEA case

Malacañang today welcomed a decision by the Sandiganbayan junking a series of motions to dismiss graft charges lodged against some ranking officials of the Public Estate Authority (PEA) in connection with alleged overpricing in the construction of the President Diosdado Macapagal Blvd. (PDMB) at the reclamation area traversing the cities of Pasay and Parañaque.

In tossing out the petitions filed by the respondents, the anti-graft court upheld findings of the Office of the Ombudsman that there was probable cause to prosecute the respondents for “conspiring and giving unwarranted benefits” to the private contractor of the PDMB project.

Under Administrative Order No. 53, issued on Dec. 13, 2002, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has permanently barred seven PEA officials from holding public office upon recommendation of the Presidential Anti-Graft Commission (PAGC).

Given the penalty of perpetual disqualification from reemployment in the government service were Ernest Frederick Villareal, Benjamin Carino, Joemari Gerochi, Sulficio Tagud Jr., Martin Sanciego Jr., Rodolfo Tuazon and Angelito Villanueva.

Apart from Gerochi, Villareal, Sanciego and Villanueva, those denied of their motion to quash the charges filed by the Ombudsman were PEA officials Carlos Doble, Cristina Mortel, Ernesto Enrquez, Epifanio Pureza, Jose Capistrano, Carmelita de Leon-Chan, Elpidio Damaso, Theron Victor Lacson and the private contractor, Jesusito Legaspi.

In filing their motions to dismiss the suits, the respondents argued that the information did not conform with the prescribed form and that the charges did not constitute an offense. They also claimed that the Ombudsman did not conduct any preliminary investigation as required by law and that there was no basis for the conspiracy theory.

The Sandiganbayan upheld the Ombudsman ruling that there was sufficient evidence to prove that the accused granted unwarranted benefits to the tune of more than P532.9 million to the private contractor.

“Accordingly, the PEA officials have disregarded the procedures and requirements that were prescribed by law and regulations,” the Sandiganbayan ruling stated.

The PDMB is a 5.1-kilometer, eight-lane road from Pedro Gil to Pacific Ave., with three bridges.

Construction was undertaken by three private contractors—Shoemart Inc., R-I Consortium and JD Legaspi Construction (JDLC). Each contractor was assigned a portion of the road and a bridge to construct. Total cost of the project was placed at P1.1 billion.

However, JDLC allegedly overpriced its job at P262.1 million per kilometer, compared to SM’s P86.8 million and R-I’s P132.7 million per km.

SWS survey result shows people have continued trust in GMA — K-4

The latest survey of the Social Weather Stations (SWS) showing President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo pulling way ahead of opposition presidential bets shows the continued trust and confidence of the people in the administration, secretary Gabriel Claudio, campaign manager of the Koalisyon ng Katapatan at Karanasan sa Kinabukasan (K-4) said today.

“More than anything else the voters preference survey results is a clear indication of the growing maturity of the voters. They are no longer swayed by mere popularity but look into qualification and the performance of the contenders. They are also looking at the true character and personality of the candidates,” Claudio said.

Claudio was referring to the latest SWS survey which showed that 35.3% of the voters would give President Macapagal-Arroyo a mandate of her own, while only 30.8% would vote for her rival Fernando Poe Jr. This is a clear 4.5 % Arroyo lead despite a three percent survey margin of error.

The same survey showed Panfilio Lacson taking third place with 10.6 percent of the voters preference dislodging Raul Roco, who got only 8.4 percent, while four percent of the voters would vote for Bro. Eddie Villanueva.

“The survey clearly shows that the President has been steadily gaining at the polls rising from only 26.5 percent in the January survey while Poe’s popularity is on a tailspin down from 36.3 percent in that same survey to bare 30 percent,” Claudio said.

The President’s support consistently climbed by a cumulative total of about 10 percent from January, while FPJ lost as much as 6 percent.

Roco, who recently dropped out of the campaign from medical reasons, lost more than half of his base from 19.2 percent at the start to 8.4 percent today. Lacson’s loss at 0.6 percent was “marginal,” but his support in the 8 to 11 percent range is marginal, to begin with.

“There’s no gainsaying that the nation is strongly unifying and moving with one voice and vision towards stability and prosperity with determination to win over insecurity and poverty,” said the K-4 campaign manager.

Claudio further said that “this early, the President is already finalizing the blue print of her unity government designed to deliver the expectations of the people—more jobs, more college scholarships, clean water and health needs—with dispatch and dedication.”

“President Arroyo will win in a clean and credible election befitting our best democratic traditions and she is very determined to use the expected strong mandate in upholding economic and political stability,” he added.

“In anticipation of a massive loss at the polls, the opposition is raking up wild charges that this administration will cheat in the election. The figures is already showing us winning because of the long hours we put in and the hard work that went with it. Cheating will never be a substitute for diligence,” Claudio said.

The Good News: GMA eyes RP as world leader in geothermal energy

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has predicted that the Philippines would evolve into a world leader in geothermal power generation. At present, the country is the world's second largest producer of geothermal energy.

The President said four geothermal resources are currently being developed to ultimately install the country as the "Number One geothermal power in the whole world."

In a speech at the launching of the coco bio-diesel program in San Pablo City Wednesday, the President said Laguna province was lucky to have rich deposits of geothermal and hydrothermal energy.

Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo, who is seeking a full six-year term in the May 10 elections, said she needs a fresh mandate to "undertake the more strategic measures," among them implementation of a long-term energy development program designed to ensure efficient supply of electricity at reasonable cost for consumers.

According to the President, the Philippines and China have launched joint exploration for oil and natural gas at the disputed Spratly islands in the South China Sea.

"Kaysa nag-aaway tayo kung sino ang may-ari noon (Spratlys), ginamit natin ang ating foreign policy para magkaroon tayo ng joint exploration (Instead of quarreling over the territorial claims on Spratly, we used our foreign policy to launch joint exploration), President Macapagal-Arroyo said.

The President said any oil or natural gas discovered in the area would be shared by the two countries.

Apart from China, Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo identified the other partners of the country in oil offshore oil exploration as Shell and the United Kingdom.

The President likewise vowed to push the privatization of the government-run National Power Corp. and its sister-company, the Transmission Corp. in a bid to improve power supply and bring down the cost of electricity.

Statement of the President: Re Call for clean, honest and peaceful elections

It is time for the entire nation to focus on the imperative of clean, honest and peaceful elections.

The opposition must shake off its negativism and join the people in meeting this mandate.

This is the least the opposition can do if it cannot forge a credible platform at this late hour.

The preservation of democracy is a non-partisan matter and a universal duty.

Confidence in our nation is rising and we must ride the crest by demonstrating our political maturity and our common quest of positive change and national transformation.

Statement of the President: Re May 1

Any mass actions will be met with the policy of maximum tolerance under the rule of law.

We will respect the rights of all quarters and even bend backwards to accommodate legitimate protest.

But we draw the line on the side of the public interest, which we will never allow to be violated with impunity.

18 Negros Occidental mayors sign covenant of support for GMA's presidential bid

BACOLOD CITY – Eighteen mayors and other leaders of Negros Occidental Friday night signed a covenant of unity expressing their unwavering support for the leadership and candidacy of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo in the forthcoming May 10 elections.

The mayors signed the manifesto Friday evening during a press conference at the Grand Ballroom of the Business Inn Hotel here.

“We stand by a leader whose vision of building a strong Republic has prospered into the forefront of a most difficult and thankless task. This challenge requires that the President harness the State as an enabling force while empowering our people, so that together we can become a strong Republic,” said Isabela Mayor Renato Malabor who read their manifesto of support.

Malabor said the President, an adopted daughter of Negros Occidental as First Gentleman Atty. Jose Miguel Arroyo is from the province, has supported the province and its development through her various programs.

He said the President also gave her “unstinting support” to the sugar industry in consultation with the industry leaders.

The President, he added, is seeking the united support of all sectors of society “so the nation can move forward.”

But President Macapagal-Arroyo said getting elected is not just about the number of mayors or congressmen on each other's side. It is about winning the hearts, minds and confidence of the Filipino people.

“It is our people who in the end will vote and decide who leads this nation for the next six years. And it is the people to whom we leave our fate,” she said.

Three weeks ago, several provincial and municipal leaders in the province defected to the camp of another presidential candidate.

Among those who returned and again supported the President is Talisay City Mayor Anthony Lizares.

“I am most gratified that three weeks since the breakaway of a faction in the province, the people of Bacolod City and Negros Occidental have sent strong signals that they will not let this pass unchallenged,” the President said.

The President said she was informed that surveys conducted in this city and throughout the province showed that she and her running mate, Senator Noli de Castro, “enjoy commanding leads over our closest rivals.”

Signatories to the manifesto of support for the President’s candidacy included Silay City Mayor Carlo Gamban, Escalante City Mayor Enrique Barcelona, EB Magalona Mayor Alfonso Gamboa, Murcia Mayor Esteban Coscolluela, Pulupandan Mayor Antonio Suatengco, Hinigaran Mayor Harold Guanco, La Castellana Mayor Enrique Elumba, Moises Padilla Mayor Jose Garcia Jr., Don Salvador Benedicto Mayor Cynthia dela Cruz, Himamaylan Mayor Carmencita Bascon, Isabela Mayor Renato Malabor, Sipalay City Mayor Oscar Montilla, Victorias City Mayor Remedios Bantog, Talisay City Mayor Anthony Lizares, Calatrava Mayor Samuel Fabros, Bacolod City Mayor Luzviminda Valdez, San Carlos City Mayor Eugenio Jose Lacson, and Toboso Mayor Victor Bedonia Jr.

GMA witnesses signing of agreement on P3.1-B power plant

TALISAY CITY — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today witnessed the signing of a memorandum of agreement (MOA) for the establishment of a P3.1-billion power plant here that would benefit residents and sugar farmers in Negros Occidental.

The MOA was signed by Philippine National Oil Company (PNOC) president Thelmo Cunanan and Graham Stolwell, chairman of Bronzeoak Philippines, and a representative of the Talisay Bioenergy Inc. (TBI). Under the MOA, a pioneering 30-megawatt (MW) power plant would be built. It would use as power source bagasse from at the First Farmers Holding Corp. (FFHC) sugar mill in Barangay Dos Hermanas here.

The signing of MOA was made after the President unveiled this morning the bust of her late father President Diosdado Macapagal at the First Farmers Sugar Mill in Barangay Dos Hermanas here.

The President said her father was instrumental in the establishment of the First Farmers Sugar Mill some 40 years ago.

A book dedicated to the late President was also given to the President by author Nick Ledesma.

Under the MOA, TBI would freely supply FFHC up to 5 megawatts of electricity for its mill operations, while the surplus would be sold to the Central Negros Electric Cooperative Inc. (CENECO).

In turn, FFHC would supply TBI all the factory bagasse that it would produce through its mill operations.

Cunanan said the signing would ensure that Negros would no longer experience brownouts. Power lack had been forecast in 2007.

He said it would also lower the power generation cost of CENECO which is part of the President’s commitment to bring affordable electricity to the countryside.

Cunanan said the administration’s other project is the 40-MW geothermal project in Mailum, Bago City.

New RP-US cooperative mechanisms to provide Filipinos in U.S. $500-M to $1-B savings in remittance

Overseas Filipinos are expected to gain an increase in savings estimated at $500 million to $1 billion in their annual net remittances to the Philippines due to new Philippine-American cooperative mechanisms designed to lower transaction costs, according to Philippine Ambassador to Washington Albert del Rosario.

In a report to President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, Ambassador del Rosario said these mechanisms include a project, supported with a $3.7 million grant from the United States Agency for International Development (USAID) to establish a five-year Cooperative Development Program between the Philippines and the World Council of Credit Unions (WOCCU).

He said this program will connect Philippine credit unions to the international remittance network (IRNet) of WOCCU, adding that it will provide international remittances and shared branching and settlement services to their members.

Due to the wider outreach of credit unions in the Philippines, particularly in remote areas where there are no banks, large communities will now have access to alternative remittance channels, he said.

Del Rosario said the pool of funds that will be retained with the credit unions as savings will become available to the larger community for micro-financing and other productive and provident loans.

Other mechanisms cited by the envoy in his report to Malacañang, through Executive Secretary Alberto Romulo, include the provision of new services and consumer education program.

He said that for new services, discussions are ongoing with the US Federal Reserve for the Philippines to be connected to direct payments links and international automated clearing house (ACH) services.

This will significantly lower the cost of electronic transfers from banks in the US for remittances and other payments to the Philippines, he said.

For consumer education, he said, the US Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC) will organize literacy programs for the Filipino-American communities in the US that will enhance their knowledge on various remittance products and services available in the US.

The FDIC has also expressed its readiness to assist the Philippines in conducting pre-departure financial seminars for departing overseas Filipinos.

Expressing her appreciation to the US government for these latest forms of bilateral cooperation, President Macapagal-Arroyo said: "These initiatives under my administration will redound to the benefit of millions of our kababayan overseas, especially to our OFWs and their families here. Moreover, they will boost our economy, which, in turn, will enable us to pursue more national development programs especially in the countryside."

Ambassador del Rosario said: "These cooperative arrangements underscore the mutual benefit of our close partnership with the United States. They have a direct and positive impact on the economic well-being of our compatriots at home and abroad."

He added that these programs resulted from the Memorandum of Understanding between the Philippines and the United States on Strengthening Remittance Channels which was signed during President Macapagal-Arroyo's state visit to the US in May 2003.

According to a 2003 study by the Asian Development Bank (ADB) entitled "Worker Remittances As a Development Tool – Opportunities for the Philippines," almost half of about $7 billion in remittances reported to the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas in 2002 came from the US and Canada.

However, the ADB contends that with the total stock of overseas Filipinos (emigrants and OFWs) estimated at 7.5 million and a reasonable conservative estimate of an average remittance of $200 ten times a year, these estimates would establish a range of $14 billion to $21 billion for total market size.

The ADB study also notes that the formal channels for the Philippine remittance market such as banks are highly competitive and reasonably priced by Latin American standards.

Philippine bank charges range from around $5 to $16 on the high end.

Estimated total end-to-end costs (fees and currency exchange costs) to send $200 from the US through a Philippine bank average around 8 percent of the amount.

Discipline, unity, experience in athletic competitions can help students attain success in life, says GMA

BACOLOD CITY — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has stressed that the discipline, training, unity and experience in athletic competitions could contribute to the success in life of college students.

The President spoke before more than 3,000 delegates, sports and school officials, and tertiary athletes from all regions of the country at the formal opening of the National Palaro 2004 of the Commission on Higher Education (CHED), held Friday evening at the Panaad Sports and Recreational Park in Barangay Mansilingan.

CHED officer-in-charge Dr. Manuel Punzal, Philippine Sports Commission (PSC) Chairman Eric Buhain, Clark Development Corporation (CDC) and Philippine Sports Athletic Association (PSAA) president Emmanuel Angeles, and CHED Region 6 director Dr. Edgar delos Santos welcomed the President to the athletic tournament.

“Kung gusto nyo manalo hindi lang competitiveness ang kailangan, kailangan teamwork, discipline and unity. Kailangan disiplina at karanasan para magtagumpay (Aside from competitiveness, you need teamwork, discipline and unity to win. Discipline and experience will bring you success),” the President said

Noting that the young students would soon look for jobs in the near future, the President said that she is already implementing various programs “so you will have jobs upon graduation.”

For the poor students who lack tuition money, the President informed them of the Student’s Assistance Fund for Education for a Strong Republic (SAFE 4 SR), an interest-free loan assistance for 3rd and 4th year college students, to help them finish their college education.

In the next school year, the President said every poor family would be given a scholarship for a collegiate or a vocational-technological course “that will be the key to free you from the clutches of poverty.”

When the President arrived at the airport here at 5:00 P.M. Friday, she was welcomed by City Mayor Luzviminda Valdez, Rep. Monico Puentebella, and former Rep. John Orola.

After the games opening, the President had dinner with the leaders of the Chinese community at the Business Inn Hotel where she stayed overnight.

At 7:00 A.M. today (Saturday), the President unveiled the bust of her father, the late President Diosdado Macapagal, at the First Farmers Sugar Mill in nearby Talisay City.

The President left at 8:00 A.M. for Cagayan de Oro City.

Palace calls no-el plotters ‘enemies of democracy’

Malacañang today branded as enemies of democracy those who are hatching a no election (no-el) scenario as it stressed President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo’s commitment to push through with the May 10 elections.

In an interview, Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said that those who plan to thwart next month's polls are doing a disservice to the country and to democracy. He appealed to them to work instead with the government in pushing for clean, honest and orderly polls.

"Ito ay napapalala lamang ng agam-agam ng ating mga kababayan at ito ay hindi nakakatulong sa ating demokrasya (This will only aggravate the doubts of our countrymen and would not help our democracy)," Bunye said.

In a statement, the President said that the opposition must shake off its negativism and join the people and the administration in pushing for the May 10 elections.

"This is the least the opposition can do if it cannot forge a credible platform at this late hour," the President said, adding that the preservation of democracy is a non-partisan matter and a universal duty.

Bunye said that local elections are held only every three years and the presidential elections every six years and yet some groups do not want these to be pushed through.

Surprisingly, it was presidential bet Sen. Panfilo Lacson who admitted that opposition groups were behind the no-el plot, with the scheduled May 1 rally at EDSA as the springboard of such a move.

Lacson has said that the grand plan was for all the presidential candidates, except President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, to withdraw before Election Day to create a crisis that would compel the Macapagal-Arroyo administration to step down.

On the planned May 1 rally, Bunye said that the government would maintain its policy of maximum tolerance under the rule of law.

Bunye, however, asked the organizers to police their own ranks to avoid violence.

"We will respect the rights of all quarters and even bend backwards to accommodate legitimate protest. But we draw the line on the side of the public interest, which we will never allow to be violated with impunity," Bunye said.

Palace not complacent despite surge in SWS, Pulse Asia survey results

Despite her surge in the Social Weather Stations (SWS) and Pulse Asia surveys that have left the opposition behind, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo and her Koalisyon ng Karanasan at Katapatan sa Kinabukasan (K-4) are not being lulled into a sense of complacency, Malacañang emphasized today.

"Instead, they diligently continue to go to the people because many of them are still uncommitted," Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said in a radio interview this morning.

This is an indication of the administration's desire for a truly conclusive decision in the May 10 elections, Bunye said.

"But we are glad many of those who have been on the sidelines are slowly expressing their support," Bunye added.

To press his point, Bunye cited the case of South Cotabato Governor Daisy Fuentes, a member of the Nationalist People's Coalition (NPC), who has moved over to the side of the President and K-4.

"According to Fuentes, she is not only in favor of the President, she has gone out to personally campaign for her," Bunye said.

Fuentes beefs up the array of pro-Arroyo political bigwigs in Mindanao which boast of Governors Manny Piñol of North Cotabato, Max Pagudadatu of Sultan Kudarat, Mike Escobar of Sarangani and Cotabato City Mayor Muslimin Sema.

Not only NPC members have joined the snowballing bandwagon of the President. Koalisyon ng Nagkakaisang Pilipino (KNP) members like Lanao del Norte congressional bet Warlino Relova and Lanao del Sur board member Ahmare Lucman have also cast their lot with the President and expressed their total support for her.

According to Relova, the President will be unopposed in 16 of 22 towns of Lanao del Norte. That's because the KNP candidates for mayor in those 16 towns are Relova supporters who joined him in the move to the administration party.

The situation in Lanao del Sur is even more inspiring for the President and K-4. All the opposition's 20 mayoral candidates, led by Panny Datu Molok of the town of Binidayan, have crossed over to the President's coalition.

And in Misamis Occidental, KNP congressional bet Henry Oaminal has disengaged from the opposition and joined the Lakas-Christian Muslim Democrats which is the main party in K-4.

In vote-rich Pangasinan, Gov. Victor Agbayani, who is running for reelection virtually unopposed, emphasized his unflinching support for President Macapagal-Arroyo.

Agbayani is a top leader of Biskeg na Pangasinan, a combine of the province's most influential political personalities which stands solid behind the President with 38 of Pangasinan's 44 mayors.

GMA inaugurates P7-B facilities of Mindanao container terminal, main port of entry in Southern Philippines

TAGOLOAN, Misamis Oriental – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today inaugurated the P7-billion facilities of the Mindanao Container Terminal (MCT), which is being developed as principal port of entry in Southern Philippines.

The President said the MCT does not only pump-prime the development of Mindanao, but also provides more jobs to the people.

The new facilities of MCT consist of two modern loading and unloading rolley-type quayside gantry cranes. The project cost comes from a $1.3 billion loan provided to the PHIVIDECA Industrial Authority by the Japan Bank for International Cooperation.

The President noted that during the short period of her presidency, the country has moved forward economically.

Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo, who grew up in Iligan City, reminisced that when she was still with the Department of Trade and Industry (DTI) she initiated formulation of the Cagayan-Iligan-Corregidor master plan. But, she noted lack of political will and lack of funds for government projects at that time.

“Sa maiksing panahon mahirap ang dinaanan ko hindi lang dito kung hindi sa buong Asya at buong mundo. Sasabihin ko sa inyo ang totoo naituwid natin ng matiwasay, matagumpay ang ating bansa. Sa maiksing panahon na ako ang Presidente naging mabilis ang development at nakapagbigay tayo ng trabaho (I encountered difficult problems not only at home but also in Asia and the whole world. In my short stint as President, I managed to hasten development and provide more jobs to our people),” she said.

She expressed her gratitude to the people of Misamis Oriental for supporting her administration and her bid for a full six-year term in the May 10 elections.

“Salamat sa inyong lahat hindi ko magagawa itong lahat kung wala kayo, kailangan ko kayo para marating natin ang ating mga pangarap. Para mabigyan proteksiyon ang ating mga anak. Kaya sa inyong lahat natupad na natin ang ating pangarap, ang Mindanao container port (Without your support, it is impossible for me to fulfill our dream to build a Mindanao container port),” she said.

The MCT now has four rubber-typed gantry cranes and 266 reefer van outlets. It’s port safety and security is ensured with the aid of a Vessel Traffic System, with a state-of-art radar equipment installed in the 38.10 meter-high Control Tower.

MCT also features six-lane entrance and exit tollgate with a One-Stop-Shop office for Customs, Coast Guard and Quarantine.

After the MCT inauguration, she paid a plant visit to the Pacific Activated Carbon Co. Inc., also in Tagoloan, which is owned by the family of her daughter-in law Angela Montenegro-Arroyo.

The President arrived here from a sortie to Bacolod City. She was welcomed at the Cagayan de Oro (CDO) Airport by City Mayor Vicente Emano, Presidential Adviser for Mindanao Affairs Jesus Dureza, Congressman Constantino Jaraullo, and Southern Command commander Gen. Roy Kyamko.

She was accompanied by her vice presidential running mate Senator Noli De Castro, Press Secretary Milton Alingod, Presidential Campaign Spokesperson Michael Defensor and Mrs. Gina De Venecia, wife of House Speaker Jose de Venecia, Jr.

The President, accompanied by her official entourage, left for Impasugong, Bukidnon, to preside over the groundbreaking ceremonies for a palm oil mill and plantation.

K-4 reports snowballing support for GMA

There is now snowballing of support for the bid of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo for a full six-year term in the May 10 elections, prompting K-4 Spokesman Michael Defensor to say that the overall objective now is to have the President elected by majority of the electorate.

“It’s no longer a statistical tie. We now have a bandwagon of support for President Arroyo,” Defensor said after the latest Social Weather Stations (SWS) survey showed her taking a significant lead over her main rival, movie actor Fernando Poe, Jr.

Defensor’s pronouncement reflects more conclusive developments that have gelled before the last SWS survey was taken – the defection of opposition candidates and supporters to the President and her Koalisyon ng Karanasan at Katapatan sa Kinabukasan (K-4), the return of a sizeable number of “prodigals” to the K-4 fold and the continued show of unwavering support for the ruling coalition.

From the so-called Solid North in Ilocandia, to Pangasinan, to Bacolod City, to Mindanao, leaders of the main opposition group, the Koalisyon ng Nagkakaisang Pilipino (KNP), have shifted loyalty to the President and her K-4 slate.

Based on the latest SWS survey alone that gave President Macapagal-Arroyo a 4.5 point margin (35.3 against 30.8) over Poe, political analyst Joel Rocamora said: “All indications are that she’s going to win.”

Rocamora added that the increase in the President’s ratings is “close to perfect for her because she doesn’t want to peak too early.”

On Friday night, 18 mayors and other leaders of Negros Occidental signed a covenant of unity expressing unwavering support for the President. Among them was “prodigal” Talisay Mayor Anthony Lizares, who earlier expressed support for Poe.

The day before, while barnstorming in Ilocos Sur and Ilocos Norte, Ilocos Norte Congressman Roque Ablan, chairman of Lakas-Christian Muslim Democrats (CMD) in Northern Luzon, assured the President that despite reports to the contrary, she would win in the so-called Solid North.

Ablan said that 27 out of the 29 congressmen from the Solid North are supporting the President and that she would get 60 percent of the 280,000 votes in Ilocos Norte alone.

A few days earlier, South Cotabato Governor Daisy Fuentes, an oppositionist and a member of the Nationalist People’s Coalition (NPC), also moved over to the side of the President and K-4.

Fuentes said she would do whatever it takes to help the President win in South Cotabato.

Fuentes support beefs up the array of pro-Arroyo political bigwigs in Mindanao which boast of Governors Manny Piñol of North Cotabato, Max Pagudadatu of Sultan Kudarat, Mike Escobar of Sarangani and Cotabato City Mayor Muslimin Sema.

Earlier, a total of 45 congressmen belonging to the Nationalist People’s Coalition, led by its chairman, Isabela Congressman Faustino Dy III, have also pledged support for the President.

Not only NPC members have joined the snowballing bandwagon of the President. Erstwhile KNP leaders like Lanao del Norte congressional bet Warlino Relova and Lanao del Sur board member Ahmare Lucman have also cast their lot with the President and expressed their total support for her.

According to Relova, the President will be unopposed in 16 of 22 towns of Lanao del Norte. That’s because the KNP candidates for mayor in those 16 towns are his supporters who joined him in the move to the administration party.

The situation in Lanao del Sur is even more inspiring for the President and K-4. All the opposition’s 20 mayoral candidates, led by Panny Datu Molok of the town of Binidayan, have crossed over to President’s coalition.

And in Misamis Occidental, KNP congressional bet Henry Oaminal has disengaged from the opposition and joined the Lakas-CMD which is the main party in K-4.

In vote-rich Pangasinan, Gov. Victor Agbayani, who is running for reelection virtually unopposed, emphasized his unflinching support for President Macapagal-Arroyo.

Agbayani is a top leader of Biskeg na Pangasinan, a combine of the province’s most influential political personalities which stands solid behind the President with 38 of Pangasinan’s 44 mayors.

And 34 congressmen, who had been supporting former senator and education secretary Raul Roco, have shifted their support to the President, according to former Ifugao Congressman Gualberto Lumauig.

Lumauig said that the group reaffirmed their support for the President during a meeting last Sunday at the Inter-Continental Hotel in Makati City.

GMA leads groundbreaking rites of P350-M Palm Oil Mill, plantation in Bukidnon

Impasugong, Bukidnon – In line with the administration’s commitment to improve the lives of the small farmers in the country especially in Northern Mindanao, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo led the groundbreaking today of the P350 million Palm Oil Mill and Plantation that would generate thousands of jobs for small farmers here.

The groundbreaking rites of one of the most important job opportunities projects of the President under her Self Reliant Teams (SRT) program is expected to generate an initial 7,000 jobs not only for the residents of Bukidnon but also to nearby provinces like Misamis Oriental and Cotabato.

In her brief impromptu remark, the President said that upon the completion of the project in 2006, some 10,000 jobs would have been created.

The President said more or less 4,000 farmers of Impasugong will be the direct beneficiaries of the Palm Oil Mill.

She stressed that the important investment project in Impasugong is a product of her successful visit in Malaysia last year and her administration’s existing good foreign policy.

The President got a warm welcome from the residents and local officials of Bukidnon led by Governor Jose Zubiri, Jr. upon her arrival here around 11:40 a.m. on board a presidential chopper from Cagayan De Oro city where she inaugurated the terminal facilities of the Mindanao Container Terminal in PHIVIDEC in Tagoloan, Misamis Oriental.

Upon her arrival at the plantation area, the President was briefed by Impasugong Mayor Mario Okinlay and Dr. Walter Brown, president of the A. Brown Energy and Resources Development Incorporated (ABERDI) on the accomplishments and outputs of the palm oil mill project.

During the briefing, Mayor Okinlay reported that since the memorandum of agreement and purchase orders releases to SRTs last February 2004, the resolutions and ordinances supporting the oil palm project were issued by the municipality.

Mayor Okinlay also told the President that since April 15, 2004 at least 14 hectares of the total 4,000 hectares palm tree plantation were already planted in the idle, grasslands, and converted pasturelands in Barangays Dumalaguing, Guihean and Sayawan.

He added that the municipal government also approved the opening of a 30-kilometer pilot road from the oil mill and nursery site to the target areas of the plantation.

After the groundbreaking ceremony, the President motored to the gymnasium in front of the municipal hall wherein she received the pledge of commitment to support her candidacy and priority projects for the small farmers in Mindanao from Manuel Boniao, president of the Oil Palm Industry Association of Northern Mindanao (OPIANOM), and Greg Macabodbod of the National Agribusiness Development Center (NADC).

In her speech in front of some 5,000 farmers the President informed them that the national government is the major investor of the project since P300 million came from the Department of Agriculture while P50 million came from the private sector.

Agriculture Secretary Luis Lorenzo, Press Secretary Milton Alingod, Housing Secretary on-leave and Campaign Spokesman Michael Defensor, Administrator Arthur Yap of the National food Authority, Presidential Assistant for Northern Mindanao Secretary Jesus Dureza and Cagayan De Oro City Mayor Vicente Emano accompanied the President in visit in the cool, beautiful, progressive and peaceful municipality of Impasugong.

The Good News: FAO grants of $3.48M boost RP agricultural modernization

Grants from the Rome-based Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO) totaling $3.48 million in the 1999-2003 period has boosted the Philippines' agricultural modernization program, and the aid will continue up to 2005.

In a report to President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, Philippine Ambassador to Italy Philippe J. Lhuillier, concurrently RP Permanent Representative to FAO in the past five years, said the United Nations specialized agency has been fully supportive of the government's efforts to strengthen food security by modernizing service facilities in the agricultural sector.

The FAO has commended the Philippines for improving farm irrigation systems, distributing post-harvest machinery and building farming service facilities, constructing farm-to-market roads, and initiating the use of high-yielding rice variety.

According to records, the government spent P24.21 billion for agricultural and fisheries modernization in 2001; P24.36 billion in 2002; and P33 billion in 2003.

A FAO study indicates that hunger worldwide is worsened not by lack of food, but by lack of money to buy food, Lhuillier said. Agricultural jobs give rural folks money for food and other basic necessities, he said.

"It has been my focus as FAO representative to achieve these. The grants we have obtained might seem small, but they are a strategic push forward, as we try to regain the old glory of our agricultural sector," he said.

He said the Philippines, which was elected twice to the FAO Council (2001-2003 and 2003-2005), has obtained the following grants:

- "Assistance in Processing Analysis and Utilization of Farm Level Data" valued at $144,000;
- "Strengthening BFAR's Capacity for HACCP-based Quality Assurance", $193,000;
- "Emergency Supply of Agricultural Inputs in Flood-Affected Provinces of Region XI and XII (CARAGA)", $357,500 for nine months;
- "Training for East and South East Countries on Uruguay Round Follow-up and Multilateral Trade Negotiations on Agriculture", $179,000;
- "Strengthening the Devolved Agricultural Extension Services in Support of the Philippine Agriculture and Fishery Modernization Act" $269,000;
- "Emergency Supply of Inputs in Conflict-affected Areas of Central Mindanao", $199,000;
- "Regional Training in Meat Inspection in Asia", $373,000;
- "National Demonstrations on the Lactoperoxidase System of Milk Preservation in Selected Southeastern Asian Countries", $369,000;

- “Farm Income Diversification and Market Development in the Framework of the Special Programme for Food Security”, $348,000;
- “Emergency Supply of Agricultural Inputs to Typhoon-Affected Farmers in Benguet Province”, $246,000; and
- grant of $400,000 for emergency assistance to support the rehabilitation of agricultural and fisheries areas in Central Luzon and Ilocos provinces hit by typhoon ‘Gloria’.”

GMA urges ‘two fisted approach’ to fighting crime, terrorism

CAGAYAN DE ORO CITY – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has urged a “two-fisted approach” to suppress crime and terrorism, as well as maintain peace and peace in the country.

Speaking at the 22nd National Convention of REACT Philippines, held Saturday evening at the Harbor Lights Hotel in Gusa, Cagayan de Oro City, the President said, “Kung lalabanan natin ang mga terorista, mga komunista, mga rebelde, kailangan dalawang kamay ang ginagamit natin. (If we are to fight the terrorists, the communists, the rebels, we must use a two-fisted approach). The left-hand approach and the right-hand approach.”

“The right hand is the pro-arm of the law. Kasama doon ang strong intelligence, kagaya ng tinulong ninyo noon kay Vic (Brig. Gen. Victor Corpuz of ISAFP). The left is the hand for reaching out... reaching out to the poor, reaching out for peace, reaching out to remove the root causes of insurgency and terrorism,” she said.

She attributed the concept of two-fisted approach to crime-fighting to Corpuz whom she cited for giving her the “right intelligence report” on the military adventurism at Oakwood Hotel in Makati City last July. Formerly chief of the Intelligence Service of the Armed Forces of the Philippines (ISAFP), Corpuz now heads the Civil Relations Services of the Armed Forces and is honorary chairman of REACT Philippines.

President Macapagal-Arroyo also lauded REACT Philippines for helping in the government’s peace and order drives, particularly in bringing down the rate of kidnappings to the lowest level in the last 11 years.

“Tayo ay nagtulongan din para bumaba ang ating problema ng shabu. At marami sa mga nadakip na mga druglords o nakumpiska na mga shabu o nasarado ang mga factories ay dahil sa mga volunteers na nagsusumbong (We worked together to reduce the drug menace. Many druglords were arrested; shabu supply, confiscated; and laboratories, shut down, because of information provided by volunteers).

The Regional Emergency Assistance Communications Team (REACT), with national headquarters located in Camp Aguinaldo, Quezon City, emphasizes volunteerism and uses modern communications in its work.

The President said that REACT Philippines “is a true partnership of my administration, and I hope that after (the) May 10 (elections), I will still be your partner for the good of our people.”

GMA calls on Free Masons to help her build a strong republic

CAGAYAN DE ORO CITY – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has called on the brotherhood of free and accepted masons of the Philippines to join her administration in building a strong Republic for the 21st century.

The President spoke Saturday afternoon at the 88th Annual Communication of the Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons of the Philippines, held at the Limketkai Atrium in this city. She has expressed elation to the masons brotherhood in accepting her as a member of the mason family and for recognizing her as a granddaughter of a mason.

Recalling her maternal grandfather, Engr. Juan Macaraeg, was an active member of the masonry, Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo said, “I am familiar with your ritual and I find it as an important and wonderful part of the Philippine culture.”

She narrated that as a little girl, she opened her grandfather's desk drawer in their house at San Juan, Rizal, and saw a set of books about the free masonry movement. She learned from her mother, the late Dr. Evangeline Macaraeg Macapagal, about her grandfather's involvement and membership in the masonry movement in the 1920s.

"I learned what is the life of free masonry. I learned about their brotherhood. I learned about your dedication to the service of others – the characteristics which are very much needed in our country at this time," she said.

She expressed admiration for the mason's "sense of reaching out to your own brethren, but beyond that, about the need for a free mason to make a difference in your community."

As a public servant, President Macapagal-Arroyo said, "I find that it is important to carry out the nation's spirit of reaching out to our brethren, to carry out the need to make a difference in the life of the community."

She pointed out that masons have "lawful purpose and vision" to be significant part of the country's history.

"I am inspired by your values of reaching out, making a difference. I am calling on you to help me build our strong Republic together," she said. Noting that she is "a member of the free mason family," she addressed her appeal to "my brother masons (and) my cousin masons."

Dollar remittances to cost less

Remittances of overseas Filipinos are expected to cost less very soon.

This was the gist of a report submitted Saturday to President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo by Ambassador to Washington Albert del Rosario thru Executive Secretary Alberto G. Romulo.

The savings in remittance costs, estimated at between US$500 million to $1 billion, is the direct result of the implementation of the Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) between the Philippines and the United States on Strengthening Remittance Channels.

The MOU was signed during President Macapagal-Arroyo's state visit to the US in May 2003.

According to Del Rosario, pursuant to this MOU, the mechanism is now being put in place to connect Philippine credit unions to the international remittance network (IRNet) of the World Organization of Credit Cooperative Unions (WOCCU).

The system will provide international remittances and shared branching and settlement services to their members at lower costs.

Due to the wider outreach of credit unions in the Philippines, particularly in remote areas where there are no banks, large communities will now have access to alternative remittance channels.

This initiative is being supported by the US Aid for International Development (US AID) thru a five year grant totalling US 3.75 Million, Del Rosario said.

Discussions are also ongoing with the US Federal Reserve for the Philippines to be connected to direct payments links and international automated clearing house (ACH) services.

The above arrangements would significantly reduce door-to-door costs of remittances which presently average 8 percent of the amount remitted.

An ADB study indicated that almost half of close to $8 billion in remittances reported to the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas in 2002 came from the US and Canada.

Given conditions of faster and cheaper remittance, the potential remittance from Overseas Filipinos (both emigrees and overseas workers) would range from $14 to $21 billion.

GMA lauded for renovation of P50-M district hospital

CAUAYAN CITY, Isabela – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo was lauded by the Provincial Health Officer for the renovation of the Cauayan District Hospital that she inaugurated today.

Provincial Health Officer Dr. Glenn Matthew Baggao credited the present administration for the renovation of the hospital at a cost of P50 million.

Before flying here, the President swore in former leaders and supporters of presidential rivals Fernando Poe, Jr., Sen. Panfilo Lacson and former Senator and Education Secretary Raul Roco at the University of Mindanao in Matina, Davao.

Baggao said Cauayan District Hospital officials made several representations for the release of funds for the renovation of the old buildings since 1982 but it was only during the partnership of Gov. Faustino Dy, Jr. and the President that concrete action was realized.

“Gov. Faustino Dy, Jr. envisioned envisioned these various innovations in the health section including the Provincial Health Care Program. Today marks the inauguration of the new building and the Cauayan District Hospital with Her Excellency President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo as out guest of honor,” Baggao said.

After cutting the ribbon, the President inspected the facilities of the hospital that will service the increasing number of patients coming from 15 of the 37 towns of Isabela. It is one of four district hospital projects in the province worth P200 million. She was accompanied by her vice presidential running mate Senator Noli de Castro.

Prior to the rehabilitation program, the old buildings constructed in 1973 deteriorated due to damages brought about by typhoons that hit the area and it was only through the initiatives of Gov. Dy and Congressman Faustino Dy, with the help of the President, that the district hospital has been renovated.

Prominent among those attending the inauguration were Gov. Faustino Dy, Jr., Vice-Governor Santiago Respicio, 3rd District Representative Faustino Dy III, Cauayan City Mayor Cesar Dy, Department of Health Regional Director Purita Danga, Provincial Health Officer Rita Mariano and Baggao.

The President was met upon arrival at the Tactical Operations Group 2 here by Gov. Dy, Mayor Dy, Congressman Dy III, former Governor Benjamin Dy, Northern Luzon command commanding General Lt. Gen. Romeo Dominguez, and Police Regional Office II Director Jefferson Soriano.

GMA’s anti-terrorism drive nets four Jemaah Islamiyah suspects

DAVAO CITY – The government’s anti-terrorism drive has scored a major victory with the capture of four suspected members of a cell of the dreaded Jemaah Islamiyah (JI) terror group operating in Southeast Asia.

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo presented to media today the suspected “hard target” terrorists at the Davao City International Airport before boarding the presidential plane bound for Cauayan City to barnstorm in Isabela.

The Chief Executive commended the officers and members of the Intelligence Service of the Armed Forces of the Philippines (ISAFP) and the AFP Southern Command for the capture of the JI suspects who were apparently on a terrorist mission in Mindanao.

The suspected terrorists were identified as Sammy Abdulgani, alias Boy, team leader of the group; Datu Puti Ungka, alias Pot; Montasser Ismael, alias Raffy; and Barodin Dalungan, alias Badz.

Lt. Gen. Roy Kyamko, SouthCom commander, told the President that the suspects were caught after a brief chase in Barangay Taviran, Datu Odin Sinsuat, Maguindanao on April 23.

Kyamko said that the suspects were first monitored by intelligence operatives from the ISAFP after they had failed in an attempt to enter Davao City. They were not able to sneak into Davao City due to strict military and police security measures, particularly at the military checkpoints, he said.

Kyamko informed the President that Abdulgani and Ungka had been spotted by the intelligence agents roaming around Mindanao and that they tried to enter Davao City with intention to conduct terrorist activities in the metropolis.

The group of Abdulgani, according to Kyamko, was involved in the Awang Airport attack that used a car bomb on February 20, 2003.

They also found out during tactical interrogation that the group was responsible for the bombing of Parang gymnasium in Parang, Maguindanao, that killed five innocent civilians and wounded 36 others, including Mayor Vivencio Bataga.

The President made her congratulatory remarks to General Kyamko this morning right after she presented to media the four suspected members of the notorious JI international terrorist group.

She also lauded Davao City Mayor Rodrigo Duterte for putting up effective security measures in the city.

GMA to make RP top exporter of coco oil

Davao City – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo will do her best to make the Philippines the top exporter of coconut oil in Asia during her next administration, she promised the million coconut farmers in the country today.

The President issued the statement in her speech during the 1st Coconut Farmers Convention — “Alay sa Bayaning Magniniyog: Programang Pangkaunlaran para sa Kinabukasan” — at the University of Mindanao gym attended by some 10,000 farmers from the different provinces of Mindanao.

Leaders of the coconut farmers responded by reading their pledge of support for the President’s candidacy and assured her thousands of farmers in Mindanao will vote for her.

In her speech, the President assured them that under her leadership and the entire K-4 coalition the coconut industry would have a good future.

“Makakasigurado kayo kay Pangulong Gloria at sa K-4 (Koalisyon ng Karanasan at Katapatan sa Kinabukasan) coalition ng kasaganaan sa industriya ng niyog (You can be sure the coconut industry will prosper under President Gloria and K-4),” the President said.

The President said her heart and wisdom will be on their side and she’s willing to go over with what she has already done to ensure that in the near future, the lives of the small farmers will be improved.

“If I am elected this coming election I will do my very best and continue what I have already done in my short presidency to further boost and improve the coconut industry,” the President said in Visayan.

To date, the Philippines' top export products to the United States, Japan and Europe are electronic supplies, garments come second and coconut oil is third.

She also said that because of her campaign to promote the coconut oil mill in the private sector, a big coco oil mill was established in Davao Del Sur last month.

The President informed them that as part of her campaign to promote the coconut industry and to ensure the stable price of copra, she launched the Coco Diesel Program in San Pablo, Laguna last Wednesday.

Disillusioned opposition followers defect to K-4 camp

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's legions of supporters nationwide swelled further as disillusioned followers of her rivals in the May 10 elections defect in Davao City, in a steady flow to her camp.

This morning, a large group of supporters of opposition presidentiables Fernando Poe Jr. and Sen. Panfilo Lacson switched loyalty and rallied behind the President who is seeking a full six-year term.

The new pro-Arroyo converts were admitted into the fold of the ruling Koalisyon ng Karanasan at Katapatan sa Kinabukasan (K-4) in simple rites held at the University of Mindanao gym in Matina, Davao City.

A leader of the group, Raymundo Matuginan, said he decided to shift political affiliation because of his utter disappointment over Poe's politics of silence.

"I have been waiting and longing to hear his platform of government which is of paramount importance. But until now, nothing has been said," Matuginan said.

He criticized Poe for treating his presidential candidacy "as if it were in the movies."

"We need to know at this time, that is why we are now looking for someone who will certainly support us, especially in our hardship and poverty. We have decided to shift our unified support for President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo," Matuginan stressed.

For his part, Helmer "Bong" Fabian revealed that he was an active supporter of Lacson, but decided to withdraw his support for fear that Lacson, if elected president, might declare martial law.

Fabian scored Lacson for talking about criminality and anomalies under the Macapagal-Arroyo administration "even without basis, hoping that this will make him famous."

President Macapagal-Arroyo reciprocated by promising her followers that she gives high priority to the needs of the masses.

The President reiterated that providing free education, particularly to children of impoverished families, is one of the key concerns of her six-point platform of government if given a new mandate by the people.

The snowballing support for Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo is expected to increase her lead in the pre-election surveys over Poe, her closest rival.

"It's no longer a statistical tie. We now have a bandwagon of support for President Arroyo," K-4 Campaign Spokesman Michael Defensor said.

Local political leaders from the so-called solid North in Ilocandia down to Mindanao have also been rallying behind the President, even pledging to work hard to ensure her victory.

The President's Day: April 26, 2004

26 APRIL 2004

- Statement of the President: Re Need for highest mandate
- Statement of the President: Re JI suspects
- Statement of the President: Re May 10 elections
- GMA's aim now: Clear, conclusive victory
- Big transport group now backs GMA
- GMA: Isabela now a showcase of agri modernization
- No letup in efforts to get to the people, Palace says of GMA's reaction to latest poll results
- Sectoral groups back GMA and her call for clean, honest, and credible elections
- GMA lead is insurmountable — K-4

Statement of the President: Re Need for highest mandate

I need the highest mandate I can get under the most credible electoral process.

I ask the people to give me this mandate and to see to it that the voting is clean, honest and orderly.

If we can all demonstrate that we are fighting for change under a strong democratic system, we shall guarantee a great future for our people.

Let us leave behind all partisan bickering and go for the big one—a new era in Philippine political and economic stability, borne by the dreams of the average Filipino, the respect of the world and our common fight for change and transformation.

Statement of the President: Re JI suspects

I have directed the Presidential Adviser on the Peace Process and the GRP-MILF peace panel to lay the evidence before the MILF regarding the arrest of the four suspected terrorists; and to avail of the ceasefire process to thresh out any controversies.

The peace process must go hand in hand with the anti-terrorism campaign to box out terrorists and deny them sanctuary.

Both the government and the MILF leadership are committed to fighting terrorism and we must not allow a wedge to divide this common stand.

Statement of the President: Re May 10 elections

I shall fight any attempt to derail the May 10 elections and the people are with me.

All enemies of democracy must be forewarned to stand down from violating the popular will.

We will not allow a few desperate power seekers to prevail against the tide of national unity, democracy and the fight for change in the lives of our people.

GMA's aim now: Clear, conclusive victory

A clean, clear, conclusive victory is what President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo now wants.

“I need the highest mandate I can get under the most credible election process. I ask the people to give me this mandate and to see to it that the voting is clean, honest and orderly,” the President said in a statement issued today.

The President also asked the people “to leave behind all partisan bickering and go for the big one – a new era in Philippine political and economic stability, borne by the dreams of the average Filipino, the respect of the world and our common fight for change and transformation.”

Based on the latest survey, the President has a big chance of getting what she wants. The President got 36.9 percent that gives her a comfortable lead over action star Fernando Poe, Jr. who managed only 26.4.

The 10.5 percentage margin more than doubled the 4.5 percent difference (35.3 to 30.8) in the April 10-17 results of the Social Weather Stations (SWS).

The latest survey (April 20-22) was taken by NFO Trends, the group that conducts the interviews for surveys designed by SWS and Pulse Asia. It was commissioned by the Manila Standard.

Clearly, NFO Trends results indicate the support for the President has started to snowball as Koalisyon ng Katapatan at Karanasan para sa Kinabukasan (K-4) spokesman Michael Defensor observed as early Friday when the SWS survey results came out. And indications are that there is no stopping it, much less reverse it.

“We now have a bandwagon of support for the President,” Defensor said.

Defensor also stressed the K-4 objective now is to get the President, who shot up from a “statistical tie” with Poe in less than a month, elected by a majority of the electorate.

Philippine Star political columnist Alex Magno said President Macapagal-Arroyo is now unbeatable even if Poe and Sen. Panfilo Lacson merge forces as that would be too late with the elections only two weeks away.

Magno also cited the difficulties of unifying the Poe and Lacson forces and recruiting new strategists and leaders with time fast running out.

Lacson moved up to third over former senator and education secretary Raul Roco who had to leave in a hurry early in the month for medical tests in Houston, Texas. Lacson garnered 13.2 percent to Roco’s 8.9 while Bro. Eddie Villanueva got 5.2 percent.

In the vice-presidential race, the President’s running mate Sen. Noli “Kabayan” de Castro continues to show the way over Sen. Loren Legarda with 47.6 percent against 35.5 or a margin of 12.1 percentage points.

Big transport group now backs GMA

“We don’t like FPJ anymore.”

Thus declared this morning a large group of mass transport drivers and operators as they withdrew support from movie actor Fernando Poe Jr., standard-bearer of the opposition Koalisyon ng Nagkakaisang Pilipino (KNP) and pledged to work for the victory of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo in the May 10 elections.

Ernesto de Guzman, chairman-president of the Tapat at Organisadong Drivers at Operators (TODO) para kay FPJ, said they were disheartened by the failure of Poe’s camp to deliver their promised support, including identification cards and other materials, as part of their efforts to help push the actor’s candidacy.

De Guzman’s federation now calls itself TODO na para kay GMA. He said TODO has some one million members nationwide, consisting of drivers and operators of tricycles, jeepneys, taxis and buses.

To dramatize their shift of political affiliation, leaders and key members of TODO tore down FPJ posters and streamers from their headquarters and its neighborhood, then replaced them with GMA campaign materials.

They also took off FPJ t-shirts and wore instead new GMA t-shirts provided by a group identified with the ruling Koalisyon ng Katapatan at Karanasan para sa Kinabukasan (K-4).

In pledging support for President Macapagal-Arroyo, De Guzman said they believed that she can truly deliver on her promises to improve the people's quality of life, especially that of the marginal drivers and operators.

GMA: Isabela now a showcase of agri modernization

SAN MIGUEL, Isabela—President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has said here that her administration has transformed Isabela into “a showcase of our agricultural modernization” that could be replicated in other regions of the country.

Speaking before a large crowd at the birthday celebration of Isabela Governor Faustino Dy Jr. in this town Sunday afternoon, the President said that Isabela is one of the provinces that has made good use of her administration's “unprecedented P20 billion a year” program for agricultural modernization.

She said: “Our most important project for Isabela is the modernization of agriculture. The price of palay is good. The price of corn is good. The seeds are modern. The facilities are modern and that's an example of what we like to do in the rest of the country.”

The President pointed out that Isabela has become “a showcase of our agricultural modernization” as a result of “perfect partnership between the national government and the local government in agricultural modernization.”

She said that the Department of Agriculture (DA) can only give the national policy but it is the local government units that really implement the policy.

Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo expressed hope that such partnership “will continue in the May 10 elections and in the years to come”.

The President, who barnstormed in Isabela with her vice presidential running mate Senator Noli “Kabayan” de Castro, noted that recovering quickly from the effects of a recent destructive typhoon, Isabela has produced bumper rice and corn, “two very important products for our country.”

She said that one of the centerpieces of her agricultural modernization program is the propagation of a high-yielding rice variety that she obtained from the People's Republic of China during her state visit to Beijing in 2001.

The hybrid rice, now known as “Gloria Rice,” was planted in some 35,000 hectares in 2002 and 100,000 hectares in 2003. “In 2004, we're planting 500,000 hectares all over the country,” she said. “The topnotcher is Isabela with 16,000 hectares.”

“We are also into modernizing our corn production,” she said, adding that “the price of corn has been going up for the good of our corn farmers.”

She expressed confidence that the price of corn will further increase with the improvement of the quality of corn through modern post harvest facilities. She has presided over a groundbreaking ceremony for the construction of one of the four integrated corn-processing post-harvest facilities, each of which will cost about P120 million.

“So the four will cost P480 million for the modernization of the corn industry of the province of Isabela,” she said.

No letup in efforts to get to the people, Palace says of GMA's reaction to latest poll results

She is relentless in her efforts to relate with the people and earn the highest mandate.

So says Malacañang of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo even as the latest poll survey showed her with a now hefty 10.5-point percentage margin over her closest rival Fernando Poe, Jr. in a big surge from the previous poll.

The three surveys jive, the trend for the President continues to rise while those of the opposition continue to fall, Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye observed in a radio interview this morning.

“This is a welcome development for our President but she is not letting up any in her efforts to get to the people. She continues to explain her platform, she continues to implement programs to uplift the lives of the people,” Bunye said.

The survey, commissioned by the Manila Standard, has the President getting 36.9 percent of the vote against the 26.4 percent of Poe. It was conducted from April 20-22 by NFO Trends, the same group that does the same thing for the Social Weather Stations (SWS) and Pulse Asia.

In the last Pulse Asia survey (March 27-April 4), the President had 34 percent to Poe’s 31 percent. The SWS survey (April 10-17) had the President improving to a significant 35.3 to 30.8 percent margin.

Thus it was a very busy schedule for the President last week that took her on a whirlwind tour all over the islands – Quezon, Laguna, Ilocos Sur, Ilocos Norte, Pangasinan, Negros Occidental, Misamis Oriental, Bukidnon, Davao and Isabela in that sequence.

She announced the expansion of her Botika sa Barangay in Lucban, Quezon; launched the Coco-Diesel Program in San Pablo, Laguna; laid the cornerstone for the Laoag (Ilocos Norte) International Airport; inaugurated a container terminal in Tagoloan, Misamis Oriental; led in the groundbreaking of a P350 million Palm Oil Mill and Plantation in Impasugong, Bukidnon; dialogued with coconut growers in Davao City; and presided over the inauguration of the renovated district hospital in Cauayan, Isabela.

And everywhere the President goes, huge enthusiastic crowds, led by provincial, municipal and barangay officials, sector leaders, mass around her to listen to what she has in store for them and acknowledge what she has already done for them.

Sectoral groups back GMA and her call for clean, honest, and credible elections

Representatives of various sectoral groups banded together today in a show of support for President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo’s desire for a clean, honest and credible elections on May 10.

Eleven party list organizations likewise joined the growing bandwagon for the President and declared their support in her bid for a full six-year term in next month’s polls.

In their meeting with the President at the Malacañang’s Aguinaldo Room, the members of the civil society groups said they are basing their support on the President’s performance and platform, which they believe will be for the benefit of the majority of Filipinos.

“We saw that it’s only President Macapagal-Arroyo who is fighting terrorism while the other candidates are supported by terrorists,” declared Bobby Navida and Jun Alcover of the Alliance for Nationalism and Democracy (ANAD), a group composed mostly of former rebels.

Alyansa, a group made up mostly of fishermen, said they are supporting the President because “she’s the only one who issued an executive order giving us an opportunity to be represented at the Laguna Lake Development Authority.”

“She’s the only President who appointed the most women in her Cabinet, provided micro finance for women, gave them health care benefits and passed two landmark laws against trafficking of women and violence to women,” said Abanse Pinay representative Beth Yang.

The President thanked the sectoral representatives for their show of support and their commitment to clean, honest and credible elections.

“Thank you, thank you. Let us protect democracy together,” she said.

Laying fears of electoral harassments in several areas by communist insurgents, the President said: “I can assure you PTC (permit to campaign) is not allowed. I have instructed the generals in the field not to allow them.”

The sectoral representatives assured the President that their volunteers would watch the ballot not only for the sake of their groups but for the entire nation.

They said they would mobilize more watchers and report election-related violence in their respective turfs.

Among the party-list groups that declared their support for the President were Abanse-Pinay, Aksyon Sambayanan, TUCP, ABA-AKO, COOP-NATCCO, Butil, Buhay, Alyansa, ANAD, Akbayan and Elderly.

Joining them in the meeting were Social Welfare Secretary Corazon Juliano-Soliman, Official Development Assistance and Priority Projects Secretary Marita Jimenez, Special Concerns Undersecretary Abe Purugganan and Public Information Agency Undersecretary Renato Velasco.

GMA lead is insurmountable — K-4

Malacañang today described as “insurmountable” President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo’s lead in the pre-election surveys, adding it is also an indication of the growing maturity of the Filipino electorate.

In the latest survey results released by the NFO Trends, the President mustered 36.9 percent, representing a hefty 10.5 percent margin over second running opposition bet Fernando Poe Jr. who got 26.4 percent.

K-4 campaign manager Secretary Gabriel Claudio noted that the significant decrease in the number of undecided voters was almost equal to the growth in the President’s acceptance rating.

“This could mean that the undecided sector are finally waking up to the fact that a continuation of the present administration would be the best choice for the country,” Claudio said.

“Studies have shown that the people are now generally tired with bad news and negativism,” Claudio added.

Claudio cited independent researches made by the Institute of Public Culture of the Ateneo University as reported by the Philippine Center for Investigative Journalism which showed that “the poor know what kind of leader they want.”

“While President Arroyo is elated with her widening lead in the surveys, she knows she must work even harder for a decisive win and a clear mandate,” Claudio noted. He added that the President continues to gain support as more people “come to grips with the realities of governing the country.”

He said obtaining a majority vote would give the President “the high ground in calling for political and economic stability under a unity government.”

Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye also welcomed the NFO Trends findings, saying the trend now is for Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo to keep increasing her lead in the presidential race while Poe was dropping further behind.

Bunye pointed out, however, that despite her advantage, the President was not taking things in stride as she picks up momentum on the campaign trail, untiringly explaining to the people her platform of government for the next six years.

On the allegation by the opposition camps that fraud attended the NFO Trends survey, Bunye said the Palace “is not in any way involved in the conduct of these surveys.”

He said Lacson’s allegation was just like any of his previous disclosures which were largely unsupported.

The latest survey, commissioned by the Manila Standard newspaper, covered 1,200 voters interviewed on April 20 to 22 by NFO Trends, the same group being used by the prestigious Pulse Asia and Social Weather Stations (SWS).

Previous surveys conducted by the SWS and Pulse Asia showed Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo either slightly ahead or in a statistical tie with the movie actor.

In the April 10-17 SWS survey, the President chalked up a 4.5 percent lead, at 35.3 percent against Poe’s 30.8 percent.

Sen. Panfilo Lacson, came in a poor third with 13.2 percent while Sen. Raul Roco had 8.9 percent. Spiritual leader Bro. Eddie Villanueva picked up the rear with 5.2 percent.

In the vice presidential derby, Sen. Noli “Kabayan” de Castro maintained a comfortable margin over Sen. Loren Legarda, running mate of Poe. De Castro had 47.6 percent against Legarda’s 35.5 percent, for a 12.1 percent advantage.

Hermie Aquino, teammate of Roco, was a far third with 3.6 percent.

In social class preferences, Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo garnered the highest number of votes from the Class C and D which gave her 39.3 percent and 39.8 percent, respectively. On the other hand, Poe got 17.6 percent from the Class C and 23.2 percent from Class D.

Class A and B were 28.8 percent for the President, and 12.7 percent for Poe.

In gender category, 40.9 percent of the women are for Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo, while 23.1 percent are for Poe. More male voters also want the President to have a fresh six-year mandate as they gave her 32.8 percent against Poe’s 29.8 percent.

Curiously, more than half of the women-voters want De Castro as the next vice president by giving him 50.9 percent approval rating, compared to Legarda’s 32.7 percent. On the other hand, 44.3 percent of the males are for De Castro while 38.4 percent are for Legarda.

Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo gave her rivals a run for their money in Metro Manila, Central Luzon, Northern Luzon and in the Visayas, but lost to Poe in Southern Luzon and Mindanao.

However, the latest SWS survey released last week showed that the President was strongest in the Visayas and Mindanao where she garnered 53 percent and 44 percent, respectively, compared to Poe’s 23 percent and 37 percent, respectively.

Statement of the President: Re Senator Raul Roco

I am glad that Raul Roco is coming home and is faring well.

I welcome him back to the campaign and wish him the best.

This election has ample space for those who like him who have waged an issues-oriented campaign.

Our prayers go with him.

Statement of the President: Re Anti-terrorist security precautions

The DFA shall continuously coordinate with various host countries on intensified security measures for our embassies and other Philippine establishments abroad to thwart any terrorist attempts.

Strong security measures are in place domestically, but we urge the citizenry to continue being vigilant to protect the gains that we have achieved in the anti-terrorism drive.

Normalcy and calm must go hand with alertness where Filipinos live and work.

Statement of the President: Re SARS

The public should not be unduly alarmed by the new SARS outbreak in China because all the measures that helped us fight the disease during its peak are still in place and are strictly being implemented.

Our vigilance will be unrelenting to keep SARS out and to strictly check cases coming in.

We have already proven our worth in fighting SARS and there is no reason that we could not combat the threat now.

Statement of the President: Re Clean, honest and peaceful elections

I ask all local candidates to take joint responsibility for the peace and order situation in the areas where they are running.

Even in the heat of the campaign, all candidates must see to it that clean, honest and peaceful elections prevail.

The future not only of their communities, but of the entire nation, is at stake.

Power bred by violence does not make a strong democratic system that will bring us the political and economic stability to create jobs, expand education or deliver on the health needs of our people.

The right of the people to choose freely must be inviolable and be fought for by all.

Statement of Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye: Re PCIJ study

The PCIJ study underscores precisely the terms of the debate we have undertaken, and what we have found in our own surveys and focus groups — namely that the D and E voters are focused on issues which is why this election should not be based on personality.

It is about problems, solutions and experience and the fact that the people want to be treated with respect and seriousness.

We need to respect the intelligence of the voters.

The voters cannot be manipulated, but must be won over with ideas and results, not cheap talk and emotional appeals.

Palace confident arrest of Jemaah Islamiyah terror suspects won't derail GRP-MILF peace talks

Malacañang expressed confidence today that the arrest of four suspected members of the Jemaah Islamiyah (JI) terror group who admitted training in the camp of the Moro Islamic Liberation Front in Mindanao, would not derail the forthcoming peace talks between the government of the Republic of the Philippines (GRP) and the MILF.

In an interview with Radyo ng Bayan this morning, Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye stressed the GRP-MILF peace parley, tentatively scheduled after the May 10 elections, “is the key to the peace and progress of Mindanao.” Malaysia has been brokering the GRP-MILF peace talks in Kuala Lumpur.

“As a whole, iyong MILF leadership ay laban din sa terorismo (In general, the MILF leadership is also against terrorism),” he said.

However, he said it seems that “a breakaway group within the MILF has been coddling the JI cells.”

Bunye said that the issues involving the arrest of JI suspects — Sammy Abdulgani, team leader, Datu Puti Ungka, Montasser Ismael and Barodin Dalungan – and the seizure of explosives from them in Maguindanao last Friday (April 23), would be brought before the Joint Monitoring Committee by the GRP panel.

In a statement issued by Malacañang on Monday, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo said that “the peace process must go hand in hand with the anti-terrorism campaign to box out terrorists and deny them sanctuary.”

He said that the President had already instructed Presidential Adviser on the Peace Process Teresita Deles and members of the GRP-MILF panel to show the Joint Monitoring Committee evidence relating to the arrest of the suspected JI members.

Lt. Gen. Roy Kyamko, commander of the Armed Forces of the Philippines' Southern Command, informed President Macapagal-Arroyo during her visit to Davao City on Sunday (April 25) that the JI suspects appeared to be on a terror mission in Mindanao.

“Sana, itong pagkahuli dito sa mga JI suspects ay hindi maging sagabal doon sa ating patuloy na pag-uusap dahil napakaimportante na matuloy iyong GRP-MILF peace talks. (Hopefully, the arrest of JI suspects would not be an obstacle to the crucial GRP-MILF peace talks),” he said.

GMA lopsided victory forecast in Bohol

TAGBILARAN, Bohol – A province-wide survey shows that 53 percent of the Boholano electorate will vote for Koalisyon ng Katapatan at Karanasan para sa Kinabukasan (K-4) standard bearer President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo in the May 10 polls.

According to the Bohol Poll 2004, conducted March 28-April 12, 2004 by the Holy Name University (HNU) Research Center, the President enjoys a very comfortable lead over her rivals in the presidential race.

Koalisyon ng Nagkakaisang Pilipino (KNP) presidential bet Fernando Poe Jr. lagged far behind the President with 14 percent; former Senator and Education Secretary Raul Roco was third with 11 percent; Senator Panfilo Lacson, 4 percent; and Bro. Eddie Villanueva, 3 percent. Fifteen percent of the Boholano voters were either undecided or did not participate in the survey.

In the vice presidential derby, the survey showed President Macapagal-Arroyo's running mate, Senator Noli "Kabayan" de Castro, was endorsed by 57 percent of the respondents, compared with only 20 percent for Senator Loren Legarda and 4 percent for Hermie Aquino.

The pollsters interviewed 400 respondents, 100 each from the three congressional districts and another 100 from Tagbilaran City. They were asked a wide range of economic, social and political issues, including their choices for national and local leaders in the coming polls.

Boholanos said that the President's active role in unifying Bohol's political leaders was responsible for her getting wide support in the island-province.

President Macapagal-Arroyo presided a unification meeting in October 2003 that was attended by former Senator Ernesto Herrera, Governor Erico Aumentado, Vice Governor Julius Herrera, and Congressmen Edgar Chatto, Roberto Cajés and Eladio Jala.

Later, the Sangguniang Panlalawigan members, except Godofreda Tirol, joined the unification process in Bohol.

According to the HNU provincial survey, the margin of error for this poll was +/-10, and that final pre-election survey would be conducted April 22 to 30, 2004.

GMA distributes lot certificates to informal settlers in Cebu City

SM MALL, Cebu City – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's latest visit here today is aimed at providing city residents with the benefits of her two important programs – the right to own a house and lot and access to clean water.

The President distributed today Certificates of Lot Allocation (CLAs) to informal settler-families in various barangays of Cebu City.

The President pointed out that this is part of her program of providing security of tenure for poor families whose houses are located in government-owned lands.

“This was done in accordance with the directives I had issued declaring that government lots could be used for low cost housing,” the President said.

Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo personally handed to representatives of 30 families the lots formerly owned by the Department of Social Welfare and Development (DSWD) in Barangay Labangon through Executive Order 136; some 1,200 families in Barangay Apas, through Proclamation No. 409; 700 families in Duljo Fatima, through Proclamation No. 278; and more than 1,000 families in the lot owned by the Department of Health in Sambag 2 at Carreta, Cebu City.

Starting today, the President said these families have graduated from being squatters to owners of their own lots.

“In my short term as President, some 280,000 poor families have been given security of tenure,” she said.

The President said the government’s low-cost housing program is the largest in the history of the nation, stressing that some 400,000 workers and poor families have been given housing within the last three years.

A total of 2,269 households in Cebu, almost half of them in Cebu City, were provided with housing assistance, while 3,987 households, also almost half of them from Cebu City, were given security of tenure.

According to the President, proclamation of government lands for housing project have benefited more than 700,000 families, or 3.5 million Filipinos.

On the supply of clean water in Cebu, the President said that this problem could be alleviated after the rehabilitation of the source of water in Carmen, Cebu.

The President said there is already a Memorandum of Understanding for the provision of a watershed in Luyang River in Carmen.

She said the Luyang River is the source of 50,000 cubic meters of water per day for the Carmen Water Supply project in Metro Cebu Water District. The completion of the rehabilitation of this source of water will add 35 percent to the supply of water today in Metro Cebu.

Since the start of the “Patubig ni PGMA Program,” more than 600,000 families in Metro Manila and neighboring provinces have been provided with clean water.

“We will not stop until all the 45,000 barangays in the country are provided with clean water,” the President said.

She said this is part of her pro-poor agenda that she wishes to implement in the next six years.

The President said she takes pride in her accomplishments in the last three years. However, she said that there are still many things to accomplish.

The President then asked for unity and cooperation for a good future.

“Let us together finish this change which we started, let us together eliminate poverty, and unite the whole nation,” the President said.

GMA attends reenactment of Battle of Mactan

CEBU CITY – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo arrived here this morning to join the 483rd annual commemoration of the Battle of Mactan.

The celebration was highlighted with the reenactment of the historic battle between Ferdinand Magellan and Lapu-Lapu that occurred on the island of Mactan on April 27, 1521.

She also joined the 10th Regional Barangay Health Workers General Assembly and attended the inauguration of Talisay City's new city hall complex.

Her latest visit came just two weeks after her participation in the 50th anniversary of the Associated Labor Unions-Trade Union Congress of the Philippines (ALU-TUCP), the country's biggest labor union.

During the convention, labor leader Democrito Mendoza and other officers of ALU-TUCP endorsed the President's candidacy in the May 10 elections.

After her arrival here, President Macapagal-Arroyo proceeded to the Waterfront Cebu City Hotel in Lahug for a meeting with Cebu Governor Pablo Garcia.

She returned to the "Kadaugan sa Mactan" celebration and later went back to Cebu City to speak before the barangay health workers assembly at the Cebu Coliseum.

The President also attended a convention of the Housing and Urban Development Coordinating Council (HUDCC) held at the SM Mall in Cebu City. (PNA)

GMA moves SOCCSKSARGEN Regional Center to Koronadal City

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has designated Koronadal City as the regional center and seat of the SOCCSKSARGEN region in Mindanao to improve government operations and services in the area.

In Executive Order No. 304, the President ordered the transfer to Koronadal City of all departments, bureaus and offices of the national government in the SOCCSKSARGEN Region composed of the provinces of North Cotabato, Sarangani, South Cotabato, Sultan Kudarat and the cities of Cotabato, General Santos, Kidapawan, Koronadal and Tacurong.

In signing the EO last March 30, the President cited the policy of the state to institute changes in existing administrative structure of government according to the changing requirements of the country and the administrative regions.

The prevailing political and socio-economic conditions in the region, she said, point to the need for designating the regional center and seat of the region to improve government operations and services.

The SOCCSKSARGEN Region came into being through Executive Order No. 36 dated Sept. 19, 2001 reorganizing region 12 but did not specify its regional seat.

Unification day proposed after May 10 elections

The Association of BGen/PC Supt./Commodore Pensioners of the Philippines, Inc. (ABCOPOP) has approved a resolution proposing the creation of Unification Day, a national holiday, two weeks after the proclamation of winners in the May 10 elections.

In a meeting held last April 22 at Camp Aguinaldo, the board of directors of the group, in a majority vote, passed the resolution that it will present to President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo as soon as possible.

The resolution was signed by ABCOPOP corporate secretary Police Chief Superintendent George Andan Carbonnel and authenticated by ABCOPOP chairman and president Juan Gallardo Abuan Jr., also a police chief Superintendent.

In the resolution, members of the association, more popularly known as the Fusiliers, expressed support for the proposal in line with President Macapagal-Arroyo's unification efforts.

They expressed belief in the unification of warring ideologies and the principle of human relations, saying men, after a period of conflict, war and contested political campaigns should have the time to heal all the wounds and bruises, including its casualties, through a National Unification Day.

The Fusiliers affirmed their trust and confidence that the Filipino people as a nation can resolve their differences after the elections.

OPS, ARMM pledge cooperation in information dissemination

In line with the administration's efforts to boost reconciliation, reintegration and rehabilitation in Mindanao, representatives of the Office of the Press Secretary (OPS) and the Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao (ARMM), signed today a memorandum of agreement (MOA) to foster strong collaboration in information dissemination in the ARMM provinces.

The agreement was signed by OPS officials led by Press Undersecretary Roberto Mananquil and Atty. Emma Salman, special consultant to the Office of the Regional Governor, at the Arlegui Guest House in Malacañang.

Under the MOA, the OPS would provide support for the ARMM in communication planning, research system and institutional development, project implementation and evaluation, production capability building, and coordination of information and advocacy.

In return, the ARMM will allow the OPS bureaus and attached agencies, like Radyo ng Bayan, National Broadcasting Network (NBN), Philippine Information Agency (PIA) and Philippine News Agency (PNA), which were signatories to the MOA, in using the ARMM facilities.

Also present in the signing were Assistant Press Secretary Martin Antonio Crisostomo; Director Dante Cruz of the Bureau of Broadcast Services; Director Lucita Sanchez of the News and Information Bureau; and Directors Abebakrin Lukman (Bureau of Public Information, and Abdulmuin Ahmad, Technical Management Service, ARMM; and Irene F. Gonzales, BPI, ARMM for ARMM.

The agreement was pursuant to the final peace agreement signed between the government and the Moro National Liberation Front (MNLF) on September 2, 1996. It was brokered by the Organization of Islamic Conference (OIC).

The agreement brought about a lasting partnership between the government and the MNLF aimed at addressing the decades-old Mindanao secessionist problem.

The ARMM is composed of the provinces of Lanao del Sur, Sulu, Tawi-tawi, and Maguindanao. Its regional headquarters is in Cotabato City.

GMA to renew commitment to develop Mindanao

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo will renew her commitment to vigorously push the economic development of Mindanao as she swings through the Southern Philippines with the campaign period now entering the homestretch.

The President earlier directed Agriculture Secretary Luis Lorenzo to hold office in Mindanao to bring government services closer to the farmers and other agriculture stakeholders.

“There is no agriculture to speak of in Metro Manila,” Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo told Lorenzo.

President Macapagal-Arroyo will be revisiting Mindanao almost on a daily basis as the campaign period enters the homestretch.

The President will grace this evening a general assembly of bishops in Zamboanga City, then lead a political rally of the ruling Koalisyon ng Katapatan at Karanasan sa Kinabukasan (K-4) in Prosperidad town in Agusan del Sur tomorrow morning.

Last Saturday, Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo, her running mate Sen. Noli “Kabayan” Castro and the administration senatorial ticket barnstormed Misamis Oriental, Bukidnon and Cagayan de Oro City, where she presided at the formal opening of the Mindanao Container Terminal Port and groundbreaking for the Palm Oil Mill Plantation.

She also delivered the keynote address at the 22nd National Convention of REACT Philippines in Cagayan de Oro City.

Urging the people of Mindanao to support her bid for a fresh mandate as well as the candidacy of the entire K-4 team in the May 10 elections, the President said she wants to continue what she has started.

“I am asking for your help in order for us to fulfill the six-point plan of action that would give the people a better life,” the President said.

Her six-point platform includes creation of one million jobs a year, reducing by 50 percent the price of common medicines, energizing 1,500 barangays a year and bringing down the cost of electricity to the lowest level in Asia, construction of 3,000 new schools and providing a computer to every school, tripling of loans to self-employed and small entrepreneurs, and delivering potable water to 45,000 barangays nationwide.

Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo also said her administration has gained headway in its efforts to unify the country, adding that Muslims, Christians, Visayans, Tagalogs, and Lumads (natives) should be “one in fighting for change for the future.”

The Macapagal-Arroyo government has drawn up a number of high-impact infrastructure projects in Mindanao such as the Laguindingan Airport and a 200-megawatt coal-fired power plant.

Her administration was also credited for the reopening of the mothballed National Steel Corp. in Iligan City and the strengthening of the palm oil industry in Bukidnon.

Another milestone accomplishment of the government under President Macapagal-Arroyo is the establishment of a chain of roll-on, roll-off ferry services in strategic points of the country under her Strong Republic Nautical Highway program.

The President said she already discerned the growth potentials of Mindanao while she was still an undersecretary of trade and industry, prompting her to strongly push for its development, particularly along the Cagayan-Iligan corridor.

GMA cites need for Lapu-Lapu’s heroism to fight ‘new enemies’

LAPU-LAPU CITY – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today called on the people to emulate the heroism of Lapu-Lapu, although not to do battle with foreigners but to fight “new enemies” in the country.

The President flew to this City this morning to participate in the observance of the 483rd anniversary of Lapu-Lapu's victory over Ferdinand Magellan, head of a Spanish expeditionary force, in the Battle of Mactan on April 27, 1521.

Speaking before a big crowd at the "Kadaugan sa Mactan" Day celebration here, the President said the victory of Lapu-Lapu, the first Filipino hero, underscores the message to the whole world that every Filipino will not allow foreign aggression to trample our sacred shores.

But, the President stressed that the country is now fighting "new enemies" – destabilizers of government, insurgents and those engaged in dirty politics. Moreover, the country has to fight – and defeat — poverty, she said.

She reiterated the six-point program that she promises to implement, if given mandate by the people in the May 10 elections. The program, which includes creation of 1 million jobs a year, energization of all barangays, scholarship for a member of each poor family, and medicines at half their usual prices, would boost the economy and well-being of the Filipino people.

In commemoration of the heroism of Lapu-Lapu, President Macapagal-Arroyo approved for implementation the Lapu-Lapu City North Reclamation Development Program.

After her arrival here, the President proceeded to Waterfront Cebu City Hotel in Lahug for a meeting with Cebu Governor Pablo Garcia and other local officials. She then went back here to grace the annual Kadaugan sa Mactan Day.

The President also went to Talisay City to inaugurate its new City Hall complex in Barangay Lawaan 2.

President Macapagal-Arroyo also joined barangay health workers in this city in commemorating the 10th anniversary of their association at the Cebu City Coliseum. The barangay health workers gave their pledge of support for the President in the May 10 elections.

Representatives of the informal settler families from various barangays in Cebu City, who received their Certificates of Lot Allocations, expressed their gratitude to the President for giving them a chance to own houses and lots.

"Kailangan lang pala natin ay isang sincere and hardworking President (What we only need is a sincere and hardworking President)," they said.

She also witnessed the signing of a memorandum of agreement (MOA) for the construction of the first of medium-rise buildings, a project of the Poverty Alleviation Fund of the President. Some 330 urban poor families in Mandaue City are to benefit under the program. The MOA was signed by Mandaue City Mayor Thadeo Quano and NHA Assistant General Manager Jopet Sison.

She also witnessed the signing of a Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) for security of the watershed of the Luyang River in Carmen under the PGMA Clean Water project.

GMA pledges more infrastructure projects for Bohol

TAGBILARAN CITY, Bohol—Aside from the P1.510-billion Bohol Circumferential Road Improvement Project (BCRIP), President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today assured Boholanos that her administration would pursue the construction of Baclayon International Airport to further boost tourism climate in the province.

In a big rally at the Carlos P. Garcia Sports Complex here, the President made known her next priority project if given a fresh mandate in the May 10 elections.

The Chief Executive stressed the need for an international airport in Baclayon town to make the island-province of Bohol competitive in the international tourism arena.

“To be able to attract foreign tourists to see the world famous Chocolate Hills, the Baclayon Church, Panglao Beach Club and other tourism destinations in Bohol, we need to construct the Baclayon International Airport in my next administration,” the President said, to the cheers of some 25,000 Boholanos in the jam-packed sports complex.

The President also acknowledged the Boholano’s way of describing her as their “Patroness to Gigantic Bohol Projects” because of the multi-billion infrastructure and road projects she implemented in Bohol.

The President said that the P1.5 billion BCRIP that she inspected in Guiwanon, Baclayon is the second phase of the Arterial Road Links Development Project designed to speed up agricultural and economic development in this part of Central Visayas.

She said that once completed, the 136.2-kilometer two-part Calape – Tagbilaran City – Valencia Section and the Candijay – Jagna – Valencia Section Road improvement project would further uplift the living conditions of residents of the municipalities along the route.

The major road rehabilitation program is being funded by the Japan Bank for International Cooperation (JBIC) and the government.

The President also thanked the Boholanos for their hospitality and the big majority that she garnered in Bohol when she ran for senator in 1992.

She added that Bohol province is really a “Gloria country” because she topped in her 1995 reelection bid for the Senate and when she ran for vice president in 2001.

The President then appealed for the Boholano’s support, this time not only for her bid for a full six-year term but also for the entire Koalisyon ng Katapatan at Karanasan sa Kinabukasan (K-4) slate in the May 10 polls.

Those who expressed their full support for the President during the provincial proclamation rally were Bohol Governor Erico Aumentado, Vice Governor Julius Herrera, 1st District Representative Edgar Chatto, 2nd District Rep. Roberto Cajés, 3rd District Rep. Eladio Jala and Tagbilaran City Mayor Jose Torralba.

She also proclaimed all the K-4 provincial and local candidates in next month’s simultaneous polls led by Mayor Torralba’s wife, city mayoralty bet Alberta Torralba.

Help GMA heal the wounds of the nation, Bunye exhorts MMC graduates

Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye called on graduating interns of the Makati Medical Center today to help President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo heal the nation in their own personal way by living lives imbued with integrity, truthfulness and fairness.

Speaking at the MMC commencement exercises this afternoon, Bunye cited the President’s goal of healing, uniting and reconciling “our deeply divided nation.”

“She cannot do this alone,” he noted. “She is counting on each one of you, as the new generation of healers, to help heal our nation in your own personal way.”

Bunye said Filipinos are approaching the May 10 elections as a deeply divided and hurting nation not only politically and economically “but in the way we deal with one another.”

“There is much rancor and partisanship, instead of goodwill and partnership. There is much buck-passing and blame-laying, instead of asking what can I do to help? Or conversely, what can I do so as not to add to the problems,” Bunye said.

Bunye asked the interns to be not only healers of illnesses or injuries but also of hearts and souls, of families and of the nation.

“Leading others need not be in grand or public ways. One does not have to hold public office or be publicly recognized in order to serve,” he said. “Rather the true test of leadership, of our commitment, our core values and fundamental principles, lies in the quiet, even unseen moments of the day-to-day – how we live our lives; the small choices we make; the simple daily acts.”

Bunye said the true test of a person’s character is in the small things we do when no one else is watching.

In closing, the Presidential Spokesman paraphrased what the late President Diosdado Macapagal once said: “You only fail when you give up. In everything you do, always do your best and God will take care of the rest.”

Filipinos in Iraq safe, Palace assures

Malacañang gave assurances today that Overseas Filipino Workers (OFWs) in Iraq are safe and that their situation in the war-torn country is “well in hand.”

Deputy Presidential Spokesman Ricardo Saludo, in a press briefing at the Palace, said head of the Philippine humanitarian team in Iraq, Ambassador Roy Cimatu, visited the camps and other areas where the Filipinos are staying to get a first-hand information about their situation.

“Ambassador Roy Cimatu is confident that we have the situation well in hand. In fact, he has visited dozens of camps where Filipinos are situated. He counts about 4,293 OFWs, and the great bulk of them are in camps that he has already visited,” Saludo told reporters at Malacañang.

Nonetheless, a contingency plan is in place and could be immediately set in motion in case of exigency to keep the OFWs out of harm’s way.

For the time being, Saludo said there is no need yet to transfer the OFWs to “safer areas.”

“Not at the moment. As I said, the situation now is that they are secured where they are, and there are contingency plans to put in motion once the situation deteriorates,” Saludo explained.

He added, however, that OFWs who might wish to either transfer to another camp or facility or be repatriated would be assisted by the government.

Director of FPJ “Panday” and producer wife back GMA

Along with his Cebuana movie producer wife Donna Villa, Carlo J. Caparas, the director of the blockbuster 1980’s movie “Panday” that starred Fernando Poe, Jr., is a staunch supporter of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo’s bid for a six-year mandate this May.

The showbiz “power couple” that had produced blockbuster true-to-life stories and massacre films, reiterated their support for the President when they attended the Battle of Mactan ceremonies held in Lapu-Lapu City in Cebu today where the President was the guest of honor.

“Panday” was the movie based from a Pinoy comics legend classic that cemented the fame of FPJ in the 1980’s with the actor and blockbuster film-maker being associated together. The movie’s enduring popularity had even led to its being remade in the 1990’s into another movie starring Ramon “Bong” Revilla, Jr., now running for senator under the administration ticket of Arroyo.

For her part, Villa, a true blue Cebuana, confirmed that Cebu is “GMA country”. This overwhelming support of Cebuanos could be traced to President Macapagal-Arroyo’s concern for the needs of the province in her three-year administration.

GMA inaugurates new Talisay City Hall

CEBU CITY—President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo inaugurated today the new Talisay City Hall in Barangay Lawaan 2.

The three-story building with a combined floor area of 10,000 square feet sits on a 4.6-hectare lot that used to be a poultry farm owned by the family of Gabriel Yap, Sr.

It is just 50 meters away from the recently inaugurated six-lane Cebu South Coastal Road that cuts across the city.

The completion of the P110-million edifice came two months before Mayor Eduardo Gullas ends his term as first elected chief executive of the three-year-old component city.

Gullas said the old city hall complex will be converted into a public college by June to be run by the city, making Talisay the first local government in Cebu to open a public college.

Gullas is seeking a return to Congress in the May 10 elections as first district representative.

Also present during the inauguration was Mayor Gullas’ brother, incumbent Rep. Jose “Dodong” Gullas, who is retiring from politics at the end of his term.

In a brief speech, the President thanked the people of Talisay for their support when she first ran for senator, plucking first place in Talisay and in Cebu’s first district.

She cited the unprecedented growth and development of the three-year-old city which will further improve with the completion of the Cebu South Coastal Road.

The P7 billion highway stretches from Cebu City to Talisay City, an alternative to the south road which is choking traffic in the area.

The President also acknowledged the need for a stable water supply to the province, newest component city, through the Metro Cebu Water District (MCWD), Metro Cebu’s lone water utility.

We are committed to the compensation of human rights victims during martial law and this commitment will be carried out under our laws.

Statement of Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye: Sandiganbayan

The executive has never interfered with the judiciary.

We have supported a policy of humanitarian treatment for former President Estrada but we have not imposed it on the courts.

New Zealand to fund P75-M RP ecotourism LGU projects

The Philippines and New Zealand recently signed an agreement to implement two programs worth P75 million to address poverty in the country.

Socioeconomic Planning Secretary Romulo L. Neri stressed that the two programs — the Local Government Unit Management Training Program and the Philippine National Ecotourism Program, Phase II — stand as another testimony of the many contributions of the New Zealand Government to the country's social-economic development.

“The realization of these programs also gives greater meaning to the development partnership among the New Zealand government, the Philippine government, the civil society, the private sector and other Filipino stakeholders,” Neri said.

The Philippine National Ecotourism Program, Phase II, seeks to continue building on and extending the institutional development of key partners implementing the National Ecotourism Strategy.

A particular focus of the project is strengthening the capacity of the Protected Areas and Wildlife Coastal Zone Management Services of the Department of Environment and Natural Resources (DENR), through the National Ecotourism Program Office, so they could manage protected natural areas and provide for visitor services.

Four key sites — the Hundred Islands National Park, the Mayon Volcano Natural Park, Bohol and Lake Sebu — will be targeted for site level interventions and new approaches towards public/private partnerships.

The Local Government Unit Management Training Program, on the other hand, aims to build the capabilities of locally-based institutions to provide technical and managerial training to local government units (LGUs).

The project hopes to establish a regional network of highly-skilled training providers in program and project development and management. It also hopes to strengthen the capabilities of selected LGU staffs in program and project development and management by actually working on their priority programs and projects.

For this particular project, the National Economic and Development Authority (NEDA) shall be its counterpart agency. A project steering committee to be chaired by the NEDA Regional Office-CARAGA Regional Director shall provide overall guidance to the project.

New Zealand has committed a total of P75 million to fund the two programs.

Neri expressed appreciation, on behalf of the Philippine government, for the New Zealand government's continued support to the country's development initiatives.

Marker of GMA's inaugural to be put up in Cebu

CEBU CITY—Plans are afoot to set up a permanent marker at the Capitol Grounds here where President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo took her oath of office on June 30.

This was revealed today by Provincial Board Member Victor Maambong who plans to sponsor a resolution proposing the installation of an obelisk or a metal marker to constantly remind the Cebuanos of that glorious moment in their contemporary political history.

“It can be told that the 14th President of the Philippines took her oath of office here. It is not only an honor to the Cebuanos; it is also an affirmation of the clear mandate that she received,” Maambong said.

The resolution has yet to be drafted, but Maambong has already conveyed the idea to Cebu Gov. Gwendolyn Garcia.

President Macapagal-Arroyo opted to hold her inaugural in Cebu City as a gesture of gratitude for the overwhelming support its people gave her in the May 10 elections. The President has also announced the setting up of a Malacañang in the South in this city.

Statement of Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye: Anti-Corruption Campaign

It is our policy to involve, engage and empower all sectors in the anti-corruption campaign.

We welcome the request of the CBCP (Catholic Bishops' Conference of the Philippines) to be part of the bidding process.

The Chief Presidential Legal Counsel has been instructed to study the matter closely in the light of present procedures and statutes, to determine the most feasible way the CBCP can play its desired role.

GMA's 10-pt agenda, core of new dev't plan — NEDA

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's 10-point national development agenda would be the focus of the country's economic master plan for the next six years.

Socioeconomic Planning Secretary Romulo L. Neri said the President herself directed the National Economic and Development Authority (NEDA) to use the 10-point agenda as the substantial basis of the NEDA master plan, also known as the Medium-Term Philippine Development Plan (MTPDP) 2004-2010.

"NEDA is already working towards translating the President's 10-point agenda into an action-oriented plan containing programs, projects and activities of national government agencies," Neri said.

The development, Neri said, marks a distinct shift for the national planning agency from its traditional sector-based approach to one that is more target-based and implementation-oriented.

The President's 10-point agenda covers the creation of six to 10 million jobs, education for all, balancing the national budget, and the development of transport and digital infrastructure to connect the entire country.

The agenda also includes the provision of power and water supply to all barangays, decongestion of Metro Manila by developing new centers for government and housing in Luzon, Visayas and Mindanao, and development of Subic and Clark into the best international service and logistics center in Asia.

The automation of the electoral process, just completion of the peace process, and "closure of divisions" resulting from EDSA 1, 2, and 3 complete the 10-point agenda.

Neri said the President also instructed all Cabinet members to be directly involved in the formulation of the national development agenda and its translation into specific chapters of the MTPDP.

To achieve the 10-point legacy, he cited specific fighting targets, including the creation of 10 million new jobs in six years, increase in growth to a sustainable 7 percent or more up to 2010, and the reduction of poverty incidence from 34 percent to 17 percent.

Other fighting targets are to increase investment rate from 19 percent of gross domestic product (GDP) to 28 percent of GDP in two years, increase exports from $38 billion to $50 billion in two years, develop two million hectares of agri-business land, and develop and support two million entrepreneurs.

GMA to launch “Malacañang in the South” in Cebu tomorrow

CEBU CITY— President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo returns to Cebu tomorrow, Friday, to formally launch the “Malacañang in the South” at the Bureau of Customs Building in Cebu City’s port area.

This is the President’s first visit to Cebu after she took her oath of office last June 30 at the Cebu Capitol Grounds.

The Customs Building is situated near the city’s entrance to the newly-finished P7-billion South Coastal Highway that links Cebu and Talisay cities.

Last July 5, Malacañang has issued a memorandum identifying the Customs Building as the site of the “Malacañang in the South.”

Customs officials are now scouting for another building that would house the entire Cebu Customs District and its personnel.

The President is also set to induct into office the government officials who will man the “Malacañang in the South.”

Presidential Assistant for Central Visayas Felix Guanzon said the President’s move to put up to a presidential office outside Metro Manila shows that she intends to fulfill her promise to bring the national government closer to the people not only of the Visayas but also of Mindanao, Cebu being the center of commerce in Southern Philippines.

He said the President is also expected to attend the fiesta of the Our Lady of Mount Carmel at the Carmelite Monastery here. The President had stayed at the monastery after the elections.

GMA names Vice President as NAPC alternate chair

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today designated Vice President Noli de Castro as alternate chair of the National Anti-Poverty Commission (NAPC).

The President pointed out that as far as the government’s pro-poor programs are concerned, De Castro will not just be vice president, he is also deputy president. The President is chairman of NAPC.

“As such, he will help me not only to hold meetings of NAPC, but also to exercise supervision over the departments that are part of NAPC in so far as their programs are concerned,” the President said at the 14th en banc meeting of the NAPC in Malacañang.

Discussed at the meeting held at the Heroes Hall were the accomplishment report of the Kapit Bisig Laban sa Kahirapan (KALAHÍ) program, report on the People’s Development Trust Fund (PDTF) strategic direction, and the process of basic sector assemblies and resources requirements.

There was also a presentation of the basic sector priority agenda for the Macapagal-Arroyo’s continuing administration.

NAPC also celebrated its sixth anniversary today. Its theme, “Ituloy ang Pagkapit-Bisig Laban sa Kahirapan,” marks the gains of the commission under the leadership of the President in the fight against poverty.

During the program, a compendium of poverty-related researches and studies was launched.

NAPC Lead Convenor Veronica Villavicencio presented a book on micro-finance entitled, “Delivering to the Poor: A Search for Successful Practices in Philippine Microfinance.”

Also launched was the three-year Consolidated NAPC report, which was a fitting tribute to NAPC’s anniversary and in time for the dawning of a renewed administration.

In the spirit of the KALAHÍ convergence, NAPC saw fit that its sixth anniversary would uphold the sacrifices, efforts and dedication of the KALAHÍ stakeholders by giving them recognition for exemplary performance.

The Most Outstanding Basic Sector Council was awarded to the Women Sectoral Council for its unwavering dedication to the poverty alleviation efforts.

It was chosen for its effective and efficient advocacy of its sectoral and cross-sectoral agenda through networking and partnership with the government and other basic sectors.

The Most Outstanding NAPC National Government Agency (NGA) for 2004 was awarded to the Department of Social Welfare and Development (DSWD) for its efficient and effective partnership with the NAPC Basic Sectors, championing in the successful implementation of innovative and anti-poverty programs and projects that effectively addressed the agenda of the marginalized sectors of society.

The line agencies under NAPC’s supervision on their pro-poor programs are the following: DSWD, Department of Budget and Management, Department of Agrarian Reform, Department of Environment and Natural Resources, Department of Tourism, Department of Education, Office of the Presidential Assistant on the Peace Process, Department of National Defense, National Economic and Development Authority, Department of Trade and Industry, Department of Justice, Department of Finance and Department of Health.

KALAHÍ cites gains in poverty alleviation program

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo’s Kapit-Bisig Laban sa Kahirapan (KALAHÍ) convergence programs have reached 696 poor and vulnerable communities in 279 cities and municipalities nationwide, the National Anti-Poverty Commission (NAPC) reported in its 14th en banc meeting held today at the Heroes’ Hall in Malacañang.

It is in these communities where regional government agencies, local government units, basic sectors and other groups working for anti-poverty programs converge their energies and resources through the Regional KALAHÍ convergence Groups.

Approximately P826.8 million worth of anti-poverty programs and services have been implemented benefiting hundreds of KALAHÍ communities.

Thirty-five percent went to asset reform-related programs, including agrarian reform, distribution of ancestral domain titles and socialized housing projects.

Forty-nine percent went to social services delivery, including nutrition, health and education and fifteen percent to livelihood development and increasing employment opportunities for the poor.

The amount does not include those provided by the Department of Social Welfare and Development’s KALAHÍ-CIDSS (Comprehensive Integrated Delivery of Social Services) and Department of Agrarian Reform’s KALAHÍ Agrarian Reform zones.

Through the President’s Social Fund, projects in 305 barangays under rural KALAHÍ, KALAHÍ-Urban and KALAHÍ in Conflict Areas and KALAHÍ-Local Initiatives were given an average of P300,000 support for priority projects.

These projects included small infrastructures like farm-to-market roads, small irrigation and construction of health and day-care facilities (P23,733,633); provision of social services like emergency shelter, potable water facilities and electrification (P34,883,471); and income-generating and livelihood projects (P27,385,568).

Based on its three-year experience, the NAPC concluded supportive environment policy, particularly legislation, should have a clear bias for poor and vulnerable sectors for anti-poverty programs to work. The executive branch and the basic sectors have significant roles in bringing this to reality.

The NAPC also said it is necessary to harness and capitalize on private sector investment through technical and resource support to advance and sustain the poverty-reduction goal.

KALAHI is the President's comprehensive framework and strategy to reduce poverty, targeting the poorest and most vulnerable sectors of society. It is focused, accelerated, convergent and expanded.

KALAHI has allotted three million square meters of land for socialized housing, awarded 11 Certificates of Ancestral Domain Titles covering 367,346 hectares, earmarked P30 billion Marcos ill-gotten wealth for agrarian reform, realized passage of the anti-trafficking of persons and violence against women and their children act.

GMA swears in new set of Laguna officials

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today administered the oath of office to newly elected provincial and municipal officials of Laguna in simple ceremony held at the Heroes Hall of Malacañang.

Those sworn in were re-elected Laguna Governor Teresita Lazaro and Vice Governor Edwin Olivarez, together with 11 provincial board members and 26 mayors.

The mayors who took their oath were Felicisimo Vierendeza of San Pedro, Nila Aquillo of Cabuyao, Caesar Perez of Los Baños, Bruno Ramos of Bay, Buenafredo Berris of Calauan, Dwight Kampitan of Victoria, Rolan Urriquia of Rizal, Cesar Sulibit of Liliw, Rosendo Corales of Nagcarlan, Samuel Bueser of Alaminos, Teresa Nieva Reodica of Magdalena, Victorino Rodillas of Majayjay, Manuel Rondilla of Luisiana, Wilfredo Paraiso of Lumban, Emmanuel Magana of Kalayaan, Emmanuel Cadayona of Paete, Ignacio Martinez of Pakil, Juanita Manzana of Pangil, Guillermo Lucero of Siniloan, Gerardo Fader of Mabitac, Joel Cuento of Sta. #### Gov't leaving no stone unturned in poverty reduction campaign

The Macapagal-Arroyo administration is leaving no stone unturned in its continuing anti-poverty campaign, using the multi-pronged approach dubbed Kapit-Bisig Laban sa Kahirapan (KALAHÍ) to ensure that government services filter down to the grassroots.

Over the past three years, the NAPC and its partners have endeavored to integrate KALAHÍ poverty reduction thrusts in government programs and projects.

In its July 15, 2004 en banc report, the National Anti-Poverty Commission (NAPC) said that about P826.8 million had been poured into KALAHÍ communities in anti-poverty programs and services.

Thirty-five percent of this amount went to what was termed as "asset reform-related programs" that include agrarian reform, distribution of ancestral domain titles and socialized housing projects; 49 percent was allocated for delivery of social services such as nutrition, health and education; 15 percent spent for livelihood development and job creation; and the remaining one percent used for capacity-building programs, particularly of local government units.

During the same three-year period, the NAPC has also identified three million square meters of land as socialized housing sites for the poor, awarded some 367,345 hectares of ancestral domain, earmarked P30 billion in recovered Marcos ill-gotten wealth for agrarian reform and caused the passage of the Anti-Trafficking of Persons and Violence Against Women and Children Act.

The NAPC has also established microfinance, one of President Macapagal-Arroyo's pet projects, as one of the cornerstones in poverty reduction. Microfinance for the poor was accelerated with the creation of the People's Credit and Finance Corp., as well as existing implementing arms such as the Self-Employment Assistance-Kaunlaran of the Department of Social Services and Development targeting one million woman-clients within three years.

The concept of institutionalizing convergence structures and mechanisms for a more efficient implementation of the government's anti-poverty plans and programs formally set in motion with the issuance of Memorandum Circular 33 in 2002.

The memo gave rise to the KALAHÍ which was described as the government's "overarching anti-poverty program" and the convergence mechanisms at the national and regional levels.

Philippines-Canada Business Council to set up chapter in Cebu City

CEBU CITY –To enable companies in this province to take advantage of lucrative trade opportunities in Canada, a Cebu chapter of the Philippines-Canada Business Council (PCBC) is being set up here.

Companies in Cebu can get into fruitful business ventures in tourism, furniture, manpower services and real estate in the major cities in Canada, PCBC president Mina Gabor told members of the Cebu Chamber of Commerce in a luncheon meeting recently.

Gabor especially encouraged real estate developers and brokers to tap Filipinos in Canada who are interested in investing in real estate projects.

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo is now in this city to formally open the “Malacañang in the South” and inspect the site of the main office of the Department of Tourism which is being moved to this city.

There are about 300,000 Filipinos now residing in Canada and many are purchasing properties in the Philippines, according to Gabor.

There is also an increasing demand for high-skilled laborers in Canada, Gabor said.

Member companies of the PCBC in Cebu can join trade missions and events to showcase their products in Canada.

Besides trade exhibits and festivals, member companies can also join business missions to forge closer relationships with human resource groups in Canada, Gabor said.

In cooperation with the Canadian Embassy, PCBC will hold a seminar in September on how to do business in Canada, Gabor added.

RP, U.S. to remain as strong allies — Palace

Malacañang today said that the Philippines would remain as a strong ally of the United States.

“We have always been strong allies. And we believe that this situation will remain,” Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said today in a press briefing in Malacañang.

Bunye was reacting to a statement by US Ambassador to Manila Francis Ricciardone who said that the US would remain as an ally and a friend of the Philippines.

Human rights victims under Marcos would be compensated — Palace

Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye today reiterated President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo’s previously announced stand that she is for the compensation of the human rights victims during the martial law regime.

In a press briefing in Malacañang, Bunye said that the President had earlier earmarked substantial amount of the Marcos recovered wealth for the human rights victims.

“But this needs appropriation on the part of Congress,” Bunye said on how much the recovered wealth of the Marcoses will go to the human rights victims.

In a statement Wednesday, Bunye said Malacañang welcomes the spirit of the US court decision “but all decisions on ill-gotten wealth lie within the sovereign prerogative of the Philippines.”

Bunye was reacting to a decision by US District Court Judge Manuel Real ordering the government to earmark $40 million as compensation for human rights victims.

“We are committed to the compensation of human rights victims during martial law and this commitment will be carried out under our laws,” he stressed.

GMA arrives in Cebu City to formally launch “Malacañang in the South”

CEBU CITY – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo arrived here this afternoon to formally launch the “Malacañang in the South” and inspect the proposed site for the Department of Tourism head office, which will be transferred to Cebu shortly.

The “Malacañang in the South” will be housed at the Old Cebu Customs Building at the city’s port area.

From Mactan Benito Ebuen Air Base, the President and her official entourage were escorted by a motorcade to the Kawit Point at the Cebu South Reclamation Project to inspect the proposed DOT central office.

Cebu City Mayor Tomas Osmeña led local officials who welcomed the President.

Mayor Osmeña said that the city government, which owns the area, would give a discounted rate for the land that would be used by the DOT premises. He also said that the city government would spend for the transfer of the DOT to this city.

The new DOT building to be put up in Kawit Point would cost about P300 million but Osmeña assured the public that he would help in looking for institutional investors who would help provide funds for the building.

The President then proceeded to the Bureau of Customs Building, the proposed site of the “Malacañang in the South.”

The 84-year-old BOC building, which was constructed in 1920, has been chosen as the “Malacañang in the South” office.

The setting up of a “Malacañang in the South” was a commitment of the President in her desire to bring the national government closer to the people not only of the Visayas but also of Mindanao, Cebu City being the center of commerce in Southern Philippines.

Later in the afternoon, the President held a closed-door meeting with national and local officials involved in the setting up of the “Malacañang in the South.” She was also scheduled to have an informal interaction with the local media here.

After staying overnight, the President will leave at 9 a.m. Saturday for Dumaguete City in nearby Negros Oriental, to meet with local officials there and inspect projects.

GMA graces installation of Arguelles as archbishop of Lipa City

LIPA CITY—President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today graced the canonical installation of Archbishop Ramon Arguelles as the 5th archbishop of this city through a high mass held at the Metropolitan Cathedral of San Sebastian here.

Pope John Paul II named Arguelles as archbishop of Lipa City last May 14, replacing Archbishop Gaudencio Rosales who was transferred to Manila following the retirement of Jaime Cardinal Sin.

Arguelles vowed to continue his predecessor’s initiatives in maintaining Lipa as a “drug-free and vice-free” community.

Other ranking officials who attended the affair were Sen. Ralph Recto and his wife, Lipa City Mayor Vilma Santos, Defense Secretary Eduardo Ermita and a host of senior officials of the military and the police.

Arguelles served as Military Ordinary in 1995. Born on November 12, 1944 in Batangas City, Arguelles completed his studies and seminary formation at the San Carlos Seminary.

In 1993, Arguelles was appointed Auxiliary Bishop of Manila. He came home from Rome after his Episcopal ordination on January 6, 1994 and was appointed Military Ordinary on August 25, 1995.

He has been chairman of the Ecumenical Commission on Migrants and Itinerant People of the Catholic Bishops Conference of the Philippines since 1995.

Arguelles was also named Spiritual Director of the National Service Committee of the National Charismatic Renewal Movement.

In his remarks following the canonical installation and liturgical reception, Arguelles urged the people to pray for the safety of overseas Filipino worker Angelo de la Cruz who was being held hostage by Islamic militants in Iraq.

Arguelles also thanked the President and other government officials for attending the special occasion.

Apostolic Nuncio to the Philippines Bishop Antonio Franco turned over the symbolic pastoral staff to Arguelles.

GMA says OPS will undergo major restructuring

CEBU City—The Office of the Press Secretary (OPS) will undergo a major restructuring to streamline its operations, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo announced here today.

In a talk with reporters at the training room of the old Customs house here, the President said she is studying the appointment of a Presidential Assistant for Communications who would supervise the five sub-structures under the OPS.

Among the five sub-structures is the Presidential Spokesman who would give regular press briefings and would handle queries by journalists. She identified the four others as an official who would be in charge of preparing the daily presidential messages, an official who would write the presidential speeches, an official in charge of the administrative functions of the OPS, and another who would handle government-owned publications, television network and radio stations.

One of the five sub-structure officials would be designated as the Press Secretary, Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo said.

“Because the OPS is too big for one person to handle, somebody must handle it, but not the Press Secretary,” the Chief Executive explained.

The President said the timetable for the study on the reorganization of the OPS would be completed before the opening of Congress.

In the same press conference, President Macapagal-Arroyo gave assurances that the projected transfer of the Department of Tourism (DOT) to Cebu City would not upset the national budget.

“It (cost of DOT transfer) will not add to our budget deficit, and I will assure you that no expenditures will be added to our national budget,” the President told reporters here.

Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo said she plans to transport some pieces of furniture in her apartment in Quezon City to the Customs house here which would be converted into what she calls “Malacañang in the South” where she would hold office once a month.

The President pointed out it would not be necessary to hire new staff or reassign employees from Manila, since existing personnel at the President Management Staff in Region 7 would suffice.

Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo also said she chose the old Customs house as the Palace's extension in Cebu because of its beauty and historical value.

Statement of Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye: Malacañang in Cebu

A Malacañang in Cebu is both symbolic and practical.

We always talk of bringing government closer to the people and this is it.

Cebu has been a frontier of progress for a long time but this has not been adequately projected before our people and the world.

By having Cebu host the Presidency part of the time, we bring to the region a greater sense of belonging to the national destiny and future.

Statement of Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye: MILF

The international community is one with the Filipino people in pushing the peace process forward.

This is one item in the President's 10-point agenda that has been gaining ground as far as the MILF is concerned.

Peace and development in Mindanao will bring jobs and prosperity to all our people.

Greece potential market for RP seamen

Greece, the world's largest ship owning country, remains one of the major potential labor markets for Filipino seafarers, according to the Department of Labor and Employment (DOLE).

In a report to Malacañang, DOLE Undersecretary Manuel G. Imson said the Union of Greek Shipowners (UGS) has acknowledged the role of Filipino seafarers in satisfying the crewing requirements of the Greek fleet.

The Greek fleet has 3,500 ocean-going vessels of all types, renewed and modernized on $6.9 billion ship building program with additional acquisitions of second hand quality tonnage amounting to $5.2 billion.

Imson said the Philippine Overseas Labor Office (POLO) in Athens verified during the last couple of years a total of 289 manning agreements between the Philippines and Greece involving 340 vessels and 7,302 Filipino seamen.

The verification of manning agreements is conducted before international shipping firms can employ Filipino seafarers, Imson said, stressing that the process is a measure taken by the government to protect the seafarers from illegal recruitment.

“The number of Filipino seafarers based in Greece right now accounted only for less than 10% of the total Greek fleet of 3,500 vessels,” Imson said. “It means that there still exists a considerable market for Filipino seafarers in Greek shipping.”

But while Greece remains a big potential market for Filipino seamen, Imson said the Philippines has to preserve its existing share in the seabased labor market by intensifying its marketing thrusts because of threat from Greece’s European neighbors.

The Philippines remains the number one global supplier of maritime workers with over 200,000 Filipino seafarers on board international vessels, representing 20 percent of actively employed seafarers in international ocean-going vessels. Out of this number, 50 percent are deployed abroad as hotel and restaurant crew for international cruise liners.

Filipino seafarers are also one of the biggest dollar earners. In 2001, they remitted US$2.3 billion to the country.

GMA to stress 5 packages of gov’t measures in SONA on July 26

CEBU CITY—President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has five packages of government measures that she would stress in her first State of the Nation Address (SONA) as 14th President of the Republic on July 26.

The President divulged this during a one and a half hour informal interaction with the local and national media at the Training Room of the Old Customs House in the Bureau of Customs building late Friday afternoon.

These will be new measures on economic growth, the government’s anti-corruption campaign, modernization of the educational system, energy improvement, and food for the masses.

The President also said she will convene a Legislative-Executive Development Advisory Council (LEDAC) meeting a day after she delivers her SONA to present and explain to the body the specifics of her five packages.

The President also plans to continue her pulong-bayan type of consultations with the people, at least twice a week because in this town hall type of meetings she gets to know first-hand and feel the problems and needs of the community or barangay.

The pulong bayan proved most effective for the President in getting to the masses during the campaign.

The President assured media she would make a formal announcement on her Cabinet at the proper time.

DOT transfer to Cebu City starts December

CEBU CITY—The relocation of the Department of Tourism (DoT) to this city starts in earnest in December, Tourism Secretary Roberto Pagdanganan said here Friday as he stressed that the transfer “gives the signal that the government is looking for other avenues of progress.”

“This will have a big impact not only on Cebu alone, because Cebu is the center, it is the hub of the country,” Pagdanganan, who joined President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo during a visit here Friday, added.

He said the relocation is necessary to broaden the tourism market. “We can’t have five million tourist arrivals if we only have the Ninoy Aquino International Airport (NAIA).”

He said other international airports in Cebu and Davao must be developed as tourism gateways.

Three agencies will be transferring their center of operations to Cebu City, according to DoT undersecretary Armand Areza.

Aside from the DoT, the Philippine Tourism Authority and the government-run Philippine Convention and Visitors Corporation will also be based in Cebu City.

The President herself has promised to work in Cebu City at least once a month to bring the government closer to the people.

In a press conference with Cebu and Malacañang reporters, the President announced she would return to this city on August 31 to see if the “Malacañang in the South” is already livable.

On that day, she will also inspect the South Road Project to see if the contractor shall have complied with the deadline to complete the P784-million project.

“I will be coming back in six weeks time. Maybe they can do the repair (of the BOC building),” she said, referring to the 84-year-old Bureau of Customs Building which will be converted into the “Malacañang in the South.”

While holding office in Cebu, she would accept visiting dignitaries, the President said. “They can follow me where I go.”

PGMA stresses power of prayer

CEBU CITY—For President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, nothing beats the power of prayer.

This, the President emphasized before mediemen here late Friday afternoon prior to visiting the Our Lady of Carmelites Seminary to pray for the safety of Angelo de la Cruz, the Filipino truck driver being held hostage by Iraqi militants since last week.

In her interaction with the members of media, the President said she will ask the Divine intervention of the Our Lady of Our Nation to save De la Cruz in much the same way that she prayed for the release of the Dos Palmas hostages at the hands of the Abu Sayyaf more than a year ago.

The President narrated that during the Dos Palmas hostage crisis, she also made the same prayer to the Our Lady of Our Nation. She revealed that after her series of prayers, the hostages were released one by one by the terrorists.

The visit to the Carmelites seminary was the Chief Executive’s last scheduled activity here following an inspection of the proposed site of the new Department of Tourism at the Kawit Island and the future office of the “Malacañang in the South” at the old but imposing Bureau of Customs Building at the port area here.

She also administered the oath of the newly elected officers of the Press Photographers of the Philippines-Cebu Chapter at the Training Room of the Old Customs building where she interacted with the local and national media, her first since a Malacañang-imposed news blackout on the Iraq hostage crisis.

The President defended the government move to impose a news blackout on the case of De la Cruz, saying she wants to preserve the life of the Filipino overseas worker.

“We strictly implemented a news blackout because the government is very sensitive to the plight of Angelo De la Cruz,” the President said.

PGMA launches major projects in Dumaguete

DUMAGUETE CITY—President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today led the groundbreaking of major projects designed to promote employment, trade, tourism and the Information Technology (IT) industry in Dumaguete City and Negros Oriental.

In her “Pasasalamat Visit,” the President inaugurated these key infrastructure projects that are expected to help realize the 10-point program she promised in her inaugural speech. “In my term and beyond, I am sure that the realization of these dreams will benefit a lot of our countrymen. Your dream is my dream. These infrastructure projects are surely supporting the creation of 10 million new jobs in the future,” she said in her multi-sectoral program speech at the Lamberto Macias Sports and Cultural Center.

The projects include the construction of a P100-million 1,000-seat Convention Center at the Perdices Memorial Coliseum complex, the P35-million Dumaguete passenger port terminal, the Taclobo High School building and the first call center in the city.

She said the new Philippine Port Authority (PPA) port terminal would address the long-felt need for a decent terminal building for passengers and house the offices of the Coast Guard and Customs in Dumaguete. The Dumaguete port is also a priority project of the PPA, which is linked to the Presidential Nautical Highway serving the Visayas-Mindanao area. President Arroyo said the presence of Zamboaga del Norte Governor Roland Nieves in the ceremony proved the importance of her pet project Roll-on-Roll-off (RORO) Nautical Hi-Way that has provided closer links between Negros Oriental in Visayas and Zamboanga del Norte in Mindanao. She also lauded businessman Julio Sy of EPIXTAR Philippines IT-Enabled Services Corporation, a local subsidiary of a Miami, Florida contact center, for its first call center in the city that is set to hire an initial 250 employees. The President also unveiled the new seal of Negros Oriental State University (NORSU) which is also known as Central Visayas Polytechnic College.

Present in the ceremonies were Negros Oriental Governor George P. Arnaiz, Vice-Governor Jose A. Baldado, 1st District Representative Jacinto V. Paras, 2nd Dist. Rep. Emilio C. Macias II, 3rd Dist. Rep. Herminio G. Teves, Dumaguete City Mayor Agustin R. Perdices and Vice-Mayor William Ablong and other elected provincial and local officials who had their mass oath-taking at the Lamberto Macias Sports Center. Included in the Presidential party were Environment Secretary Elisea Gozun, incoming Agriculture Secretary Arthur Yap and Land Bank of the Philippines (LBP) president Garry Teves.

“Fish sleep in transport” technology presented to GMA

DUMAGUETE CITY— A new technology on live fish transport could very well make the Philippines very competitive in terms of marketing live the abundant sea commodity internationally, particularly to Hong Kong and China.

Filipino marine-biologist Bonifacio Comandante presented to President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo here today the new technology on “how fish are put to sleep” using a non-chemical “buhi solution”.

“We can save on air freight costs by as much as 75 percent due to the absence of water during its transport. Survival rates were determined to be between 95 to 100 percent within nine hours in non-aquatic conditions or without water,” explained the inventor to the President.

President Arroyo then received a gift of a “sleeping lapu-lapu” to be brought back to Manila after the presentation witnessed also by Environment and Natural Resources Secretary Elisea Gozun and incoming Agriculture Secretary Arthur Yap.

The President's Day: July 18, 2004

18 JULY 2004

- Provincial planning props pro-poor economic growth – Neri
- Overseas employment continues to grow
- Statement of Foreign Secretary Delia Albert: RP Humanitarian Contingent Finalizing Turnover of Responsibilities

Provincial planning props pro-poor economic growth – Neri

Provincial planning and implementation are keys to pro-poor economic growth as they are more responsive to the needs of the people, particularly the rural poor, Socioeconomic Planning Secretary Romulo L. Neri said.

To bring about quality provincial plans, the National Economic and Development Authority (NEDA) recently conducted intensive capacity-building workshops for about 150 provincial planners nationwide Neri himself conceptualized.

“We targeted provincial planning and development coordinators particularly because they possess the institutional memory that is essential in provincial planning,” Neri said during the workshops.

Unlike local elective officials, local planners stay in their posts across different administrations. This makes it imperative that their capabilities be maximized, Neri explained.

Provinces are central to development because of their broadened responsibilities, increased share in national resources and authority to generate revenues under the 1991 Local Government Code, Neri furthered.

“Provinces can also take advantage of scale economies and inter-LGU networks which can yield greater benefits and lessen the cost of providing goods and services, given its supervisory powers over its component municipalities and cities,” Neri said.

“For example, when one service or good is shared by several municipalities, in effect, cost becomes less because more people are able to benefit from it. This may apply to dams, sanitary landfills and heavy equipment,” Neri said.

Neri stressed the importance of effective planning at the provincial level especially in guiding provinces make sustainable investment decisions. He said this also involves enabling provinces to perform their increasing responsibilities more effectively.

Provinces are the most efficient economic units in government as they are independently wealthy compared to the national government and municipalities.

The workshops were conducted for provincial and regional planners in the Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao, Cebu City, Davao City and Subic Freeport Zone.

Workshop topics included pro-poor economic growth such as poverty alleviation and economic growth. Also discussed were local fiscal management, environmental/spatial planning, micro-enterprise development and knowledge networking.

The project was funded by the German Cooperation for Development and the Asia-Europe Meeting Trust Fund.

Overseas employment continues to grow

The growth of overseas employment has softened the impact of the high unemployment level as reflected by the latest labor force survey (LFS), Labor Undersecretary Manuel G. Imson said.

The total deployment of overseas Filipino workers (OFWs) rose by 12 percent as of June 15 this year as 472,001 OFWs were hired or rehired, surpassing by 50,828 the 421,173 OFWs who were hired or rehired in the same period last year, said Imson who also heads the Department of Labor and Employment's (DOLE) employment promotion and manpower development cluster.

The hiring and rehiring of land-based OFWs grew to 368,431 this year from 319,858 last year and seafarers to 103,570 from 101,315, Imson said.

"The LFS of the National Statistics Office (NSO) does not reflect these facts but they are there. Overseas employment continues to be on the upbeat," Imson stressed.

The number of employed persons in the Philippines continues to increase each year. For April 2004, the number of employed Filipinos rose to 31.520 million, up by 3.6 percent (+1.102 million) from 30.418 in April 2003.

"The number of employed persons will be larger if the LFS accounts for the nation's absent population, the OFWs, Imson explained.

"The government will conduct an employment summit shortly and we are determined to do our share in generating six million local and overseas jobs in the next six years. We shall continue to promote and strengthen decent work, gainful employment, skills development and assistance to informal and other disadvantaged workers," he added.

Statement of Foreign Secretary Delia Albert: RP Humanitarian Contingent Finalizing Turnover of Responsibilities

The remaining members of the Philippine Humanitarian contingent are finalizing the turnover of their responsibilities. Ambassador Roy Cimatu will accompany them in an exit call on the new Polish Commander at Camp Charlie, in Babil Province, Iraq, on Monday morning, July 19.

After the call, the remaining contingent will then proceed to Kuwait and from there return to Manila by commercial flight. Arrangements for their return flight are being made by Philippine Embassy officials in Kuwait. Their exact date and time of arrival in the Philippines will be announced as soon as these details are available.

19 JULY 2004

- Statement of the President: Principled Unity
- Statement of the President: Drug Problem
- GMA reaches out anew to political groups to achieve national reconciliation
- World Bank assures GMA of full support
- GMA's new mandate spurs more investments

- GMA to discuss specifics of her 10-point agenda in upcoming SONA

- Statement of Foreign Minister Delia Albert

Statement of the President: Principled Unity

There should be no barriers to principled unity in a democratic nation.

What is past is past and the people have decided to move forward.

We shall continue to reach out to all political groups in the spirit of just reconciliation as we galvanize our people behind a renewed surge of solidarity and nationalism driven by the train of domestic and international events.

This nation is ready to heal its wounds, embrace a collective leadership with pure heart, and get back to work on its most urgent priorities.

Statement of the President: Drug Problem

We have pushed the drug menace far back but we take the UN report as a reminder that there is more to be done.

The drug problem has been half beaten and the street price of amphetamines has gone up almost five fold.

We will keep moving against drug manufacturers and distributors as we team up with our international allies.

This is not only a domestic problem but one that we share with the rest of humanity.

The Filipino people fight alongside all civilized nations on this issue.

GMA reaches out anew to political groups to achieve national reconciliation

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has renewed her call for the opposition, and the nation too, to join hands with her to move the nation forward to achieve national reconciliation, principled unity and progress.

“We shall continue to reach out to all political groups in the spirit of just reconciliation as we galvanize our people behind a renewed surge of solidarity and nationalism driven by the train of domestic and international events,” the President said in an official statement issued this morning.

After winning the May 10 polls, the President asked the opposition to send her their best minds so she can put their talents of use in alleviating, if not eradicating, the ills that beset the masses, deliver to them the basic necessities and provide them all the opportunities to uplift their lives and be active partners in realizing economic growth.

“The nation is ready to heal its wounds, embrace a collective leadership with pure heart, and get back to work on its most urgent priorities,” the President said.

Thus during her visit to Dumaguete City to launch some new infrastructure projects and inspect the progress of others already in the works, the President said she will set aside for 12 months her thrust to have some constitutional changes to allow Congress time to enact laws needed to push through her 10-point pro-poor program for the next six years.

“There should be no barriers to principled unity in a democratic nation,” the President emphasized. “What is past is past and the people have decided to move forward.”

World Bank assures GMA of full support

The World Bank has pledged full support for the programs of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo’s administration.

“We offer you one hundred percent support for your programs and agenda,” World Bank Country Director for the Philippines Joachim von Amsberg told the President this morning during a courtesy call at Malacañang’s Music Room.

“We can do much more for the Philippines in terms of support but you really have to go on first with important measures,” Joachim added.

The President welcomed a suggestion by Joachim for a seminar-forum in the Philippines that will have in attendance former world leaders whose countries also faced fiscal difficulties like a budget deficit.

She asked Joachim to conceptualize the idea so that it can be implemented after her State of the Nation Address (SONA) on July 26.

The President also instructed Finance Secretary Anita Amatong to tap former President Fidel V. Ramos to coordinate with the world leaders who would attend the seminar-forum.

The President discussed with Joachim her 10-point pro-poor program, placing emphasis on the construction of school buildings, electrification and water for all and the people’s credit finance cooperative.

She also told Joachim her government has focused on agriculture, particularly on irrigation.

Joachim arrived three weeks ago and expressed satisfaction with the social welfare situation in Cebu and Mindanao which he has already visited.

Joachim joined the World Bank in 1993 and rose to become Country Anchor at the World Bank headquarters in Latin America and the Caribbean. His country experience includes India, Brazil, Chile, Paraguay, Argentina, Egypt, Arab Republic, Europe-Part I and North America.

He has a Ph. D. in Finance/Economic Policy from the University of British Columbia, an M.S. in Electrical Engineering from the Technische Universitaet Berlin, and an M.B.A., major in Finance, also from the University of British Columbia.

GMA’s new mandate spurs more investments

In what analysts consider largely as an end result of the proclamation of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, the country’s foreign portfolio reached $254.7 million in the first half of the year, nine percent higher from the $233.6 million posted in the same period last year.

Total inflows and outflows in the first semester, according to the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas, were $1.050 billion and $796 billion respectively.

Analysts said net foreign portfolio, or investments by non-residents in shares of stocks listed on the Philippine Stock Exchange, government securities, money market investments and peso bank deposits, is expected to surpass last year's figures.

Net foreign portfolio investments posted a total of $875.8 million in 2003.

"We're expecting an increase this year, but we don't set targets for this. It will depend on what factors but there would be less political concerns," one of the analysts said.

The cooling down of the political climate following the May 10 elections is also seen as a big factor in the surge of investments approved by the Philippine Export Zone Authority (PEZA).

PEZA investments soared 141 percent, to P27.245 billion in the first semester from P11.278 billion in the same period last year.

PEZA Director General Lilia B. de Lima, in a report to Trade and Industry Secretary Cesar V. Purisima, expressed confidence in the country's ability to attract more investments.

"As we put the elections behind us, we are confident that the investment inflows will be sustained for the rest of the year," she said.

The information technology industry registered the biggest growth with P4.03 billion, an increase of 139 percent from last year's P1.686 billion.

For the month of June alone, the PEZA board approved P3.434 billion in new investments which is expected to generate annual average export sales of $48.592 million and provide direct employment to 3,176 workers.

MTRCB board, employees bat for Laguardia's retention

Members of the Movie and Television Review and Classification Board (MTRCB) and the MTRCB Employees' Association have rallied behind Chairman Ma. Consoliza Laguardia who has been accused of bungling her job.

Laguardia "has competently led and provided our Board with the proper vision and moral directions, and always with due regard for the constitutional rights of members of the television and movie industry as well as their freedom of expression, with a view to self-regulation within the sector," the Board members said in a letter to President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo.

They expressed utmost confidence and respect for Laguardia and hoped there will be no sudden change in the MTRCB leadership "considering the competence and utmost integrity by which Chairperson Laguardia presides over our Board."

Laguardia "has proven to be a very effective head of our agency and has consistently been living up to the standards of a reasonable, just and capable leader," the MTRCBEA said also in a letter to the President.

"Hence, Madam President, may we humbly request for her re-appointment as chairman of the MTRCB for we deem that Chairman Laguardia is the person best suited for the position," the MTRCBEA said.

Msgr. Nico Bautista, a member of the MTRCB Board, has asked the President Arroyo, also in a letter, to immediately replace Laguardia because of the alleged “state of disarray” of the agency due to her alleged “lack of direction and unimaginative leadership.”

AFP to secure safe release of army officers held captive by NPA – Palace

Malacañang today said the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) is exerting all efforts to secure the release of two army soldiers captured by the New People’s Army (NPA) on February 29, 2004.

Army Lt. Ronaldo Fedelino and Pfc. Ronel Nemenon were snatched by members of the Romulo Jalones Command during a seven-hour encounter in Barangay Tamban in Tanambac, Camarines Sur.

One soldier was killed and six were wounded during the battle.

“Of course, like any other hostage situation, efforts cannot be reported in detail, but definitely the AFP top brass are concerned about the safety and welfare of the soldiers,” Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said in a press briefing in Malacañang.

Fedelino’s wife Lea, who complained about the lack of attention given by the government to free the hostages, sought the help of top Army officials to have her husband released in time for their daughter Alea Nicole’s second birthday on August 16.

She also appealed to NPA spokesman Gregorio Rosal who, she said, could secure the release of her husband if he wants to.

Bunye assured Fedelino’s wife that the AFP is exerting all efforts to secure the release of the hostages.

GMA to discuss specifics of her 10-point agenda in upcoming SONA

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo is expected to discuss the specifics of her fighting targets in her first State of the Nation Address (SONA) as 14th President of the Republic on July 26.

Presidential Spokesman Ignacio R. Bunye said in a press briefing that the Chief Executive now devote more of her time in outlining the specific measures that would flesh out her 10-point program for the next six years.

“The President will be devoting a lot of time on threshing out her 10-point program. And then she will be discussing some fighting targets for the year and she will be discussing some principles and values,” Bunye said.

Earlier in Cebu City, the President divulged five packages of new measures to speed up economic growth, strengthening the government’s anti-corruption campaign, modernize the educational system, promote energy independence and savings, and reduce poverty among the masses.

Socioeconomic Planning Secretary Romulo Neri, had earlier enumerated the fighting targets that would operationalize the President’s 10-point legacy.

Among the targets is to promote the business environment so there could be 10 million jobs for the next six years, reduce poverty incidence from 34 percent to 17 percent, increase the investment from 19 percent in gross domestic product (GDP) ratio to 28 percent in the next two years.

Neri also said the government aims to stabilize the foreign exchange rate and bolster the international reserves from $38 billion to $60 billion within two years, develop two million hectares of agricultural business land and support two million entrepreneurs.

According to Neri, to strengthen and sustain the country's global competitiveness, the government must reduce the cost of electricity, modernize infrastructure, and reduce red tape in all government agencies.

GMA's anti-drug war scores big anew

The government's intensified campaign against the drug menace continues to take its toll on big-time drug dealers and manufacturers as elements of the Anti-illegal Drugs Special Operations Task Force of the Philippine National Police (AIDSOTF-PNP) raided today another shabu warehouse in Valenzuela City.

A total of 147 drums of precursor and essential chemicals used in the manufacture of shabu, also known as metamphetamine hydrochloride, and other chemicals were confiscated from the warehouse located at the Villa Liwayway Subdivision.

An elated President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo personally visited the underground laboratory and congratulated AIDSOTF chief Police, Deputy Director General Edgar Aglipay, for their accomplishment, saying it underscored once again the importance of close coordination among law enforcement agencies and the active support of the people in winning the war against illegal drugs.

"We will keep moving against drug manufacturers and distributors as we team up with our international allies," the President said. "This is not a domestic problem, but one that we share with the rest of humanity."

The President said that since she launched the intensified anti-drug campaign, the drug menace has been half-beaten, and the street price of amphetamines had gone up almost five-fold.

Aglipay said he has directed the task force intelligence Chief Police Senior Superintendent Federico Laciste Jr. to lead the operations for the arrest of suspected syndicate leader Jimmy Coo Huo and his transnational drug trafficking group believed to be involved in smuggling into the country of the prohibited substances.

"Efforts are likewise being exerted to locate the whereabouts of the alleged owner of the warehouse identified as Roger Ang to determine his possible involvement in the illegal activity of Coo Huo," Aglipay said.

He added that while the AIDSOTF has already trained its sights on the local tentacles of Huo's syndicate, the campaign against international drug syndicates remains among the primary concern of the task force.

The President was accompanied to Valenzuela by Interior and Local Government Secretary and NAKTAF Chief Angelo Reyes, Philippine Drug Enforcement Agency Director General Anselmo Avenido Jr. and Dangerous Drugs Board Executive Director Jose C. Calida.

- Palace welcomes watchdog function of well-meaning groups
- GMA's SONA to flesh out her vision, program for the next 6 years
- Statement of the President: On the release of Angelo dela Cruz
- Crisis over, news blackout lifted as Angelo is coming home soon

Statement of Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye: Unity Efforts to Continue

The President's efforts to unite this country are for the Filipino people and not for political convenience.

These efforts will be continuously pursued until such time that leaders of all opposition groups are encouraged to participate and do their share in moving this country forward.

We cannot talk about national development with a divided people, and we have faith in all Filipinos coming together behind the fight for change.

Palace welcomes watchdog function of well-meaning groups

Malacañang said today it would always welcome the watchdog attitude of certain quarters towards the government as long as this contributes towards the effective implementation of services to the people.

In a radio interview this morning, Deputy Presidential Spokesman Ricardo Saludo said watchdog groups, such as non-government organizations (NGOs), have been part and parcel of the administration's governance.

"Ang watchdog ay tumutulong din iyan. Ibig nga natin na ang ating mga programa ay mayroong mga sumusubaybay na hindi nasa gobyerno (Watchdog groups also help. We prefer that our programs are monitored by non-government people)," Saludo said.

In related development, Presidential Spokesman Ignacio R. Bunye today said that the President's efforts to unite this country "are for the Filipino people and not for political convenience."

"These efforts will be continuously pursued until such time that leaders of all opposition groups are encouraged to participate and do their share in moving this country forward," Bunye said, in reaction to the reported statement of defeated presidential candidate Eddie Villanueva.

Villanueva reportedly turned down an offer of reconciliation by the President, stating among other things that whoever is President, he would just give his unsolicited advice, if the national interest was at stake.

Bunye stressed that national development could not be effectively pursued "with a divided people". But he added that the government has faith that all Filipinos would come together "behind the fight for change."

GMA's SONA to flesh out her vision, program for the next 6 years

In an era of change and national renewal, the government is eyeing only one direction — putting people first.

This, in a nutshell, is the theme of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's State of the Nation Address (SONA), which she will deliver before a joint session of the 13th Congress next Monday, July 26, as she tries to convey her vision and program of government in the next six years.

In an update on the much-awaited SONA, the fourth since the President took over the helm of government in 2001 and the first under her new mandate, Malacañang said the contents of the President's address is still a work in progress.

It is, however, expected to outline five packages of executive and legislative proposals covering job creation and economic growth, anti-corruption and good governance, social justice and basic needs, education improvement and youth opportunity, and energy independence and savings.

The SONA, according to a Palace statement, will be preceded by an unveiling of proposed executive and legislative package for job creation and economic growth before a group of businessmen in Makati City on Thursday.

Further discussions on the five packages will be taken up during consecutive Legislative Executive Development Advisory Council (LEDAC) meetings after the SONA.

In an effort to bring the proposals down to the people, pulong bayans or small town meetings, which proved quite a success during the last presidential campaign, are being planned by the government.

During the SONA, the President is also expected to discuss the specifics of the 10-point agenda she bared in her inaugural speech last June 30.

Among the fighting targets enumerated earlier by Socioeconomic Planning Secretary Romulo Neri, are to promote the business environment so there could be 10 million jobs for the next six years, reduce poverty incidence from 34 percent to 17 percent, increase investments from 19 percent in gross domestic product (GDP) ratio to 28 percent in the next two years.

The government also aims to stabilize the foreign exchange rate and increase exports from $38 billion to $50 billion within two years, develop two million hectares of agricultural business land, and support two million entrepreneurs.

To strengthen and sustain the country's global competitiveness, the government will try to reduce the cost of electricity, modernize infrastructure, and reduce red tape in all government agencies.

Statement of the President: On the release of Angelo dela Cruz

I am happy to announce to the nation that our long national vigil involving Angelo dela Cruz is over. I thank the Lord Almighty for His blessings.

I just spoke to him. His health is good, his spirits high and he sends his best wishes to every Filipino for their thoughts and prayers.

For Angelo, our nation—Muslim and Christian alike—united around our compassion for an innocent in a world of danger. A father of eight, Angelo has become a Filipino "everyman," a symbol of the hardworking Filipino seeking hope and opportunity.

Your government worked tirelessly for his release; the nation prayed vigilantly for his well-being. I commend the men and women of the government who worked quietly for Angelo's freedom. I am grateful for the unnamed allies, Filipinos and foreigners, who helped facilitate the negotiations and extended goodwill.

Most of all, I thank the Filipino people for their forbearance and prayers.

It was a time of trial and a time of triumph. But it is also a time for sober reflection about the world in which we live and our obligation to our nation and to humanity.

As you know, I committed a small humanitarian force in Iraq to help in reconstruction after the war there, in line with a mandate of the United Nations. I am proud of the work we have done and the courage and determination displayed by our troops and workers there.

With over one million OFWs in the Middle East and over eight million over the whole world, my government has a deep national interest in their well-being wherever they live and work. I made a decision to bring our troops home a few days early in order to spare the life of Angelo. I do not regret that decision.

Every life is important. Angelo was spared, and we rejoice. We are all rewarded for it, particularly his loving family and friends. But our people must also know that will not always be the case. Innocents will come into harm's way, and circumstances may not allow such a successful outcome.

Our people and our nation must remain true to our values and convictions here at home. While remaining committed to other friends and allies abroad.

We must rejoice at the good news, but our happiness must be tempered by the awareness that we live in dangerous times, and that we must work to create a more peaceful world.

To the family of Angelo, he will be home soon. (In Kapampangan)

Salamat at Mabuhay ang Plipino.

Crisis over, news blackout lifted as Angelo is coming home soon

The hostage crisis involving overseas Filipino worker Angelo de la Cruz in Iraq is over.

An ecstatic President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo announced this to the media this afternoon while thanking the Lord Almighty that the crisis that shook the whole nation and tested the Filipino spirit has come to an end.

"I am happy to announce to the nation that our long national vigil involving Angelo dela Cruz is over," intoned the President as she confirmed the release of the Filipino OFW.

In a scene reminiscent of her reaction in the aftermath of the failed Oakwood mutiny, an elated President raised both her fists in triumph after talking to Dela Cruz following his release from the hands of his abductors in Iraq.

With the release, Malacañang officially ends the news blackout implemented to secure his safety and security.

The President said the government "has a deep national interest in the well-being" of over one million overseas Filipino workers in the Middle East and over eight million worldwide.

"I made a decision to bring our troops home a few days early in order to spare the life of Angelo. I do not regret that decision," she said.

She said every life is important. She noted that Angelo was spared, and "we rejoice." "We are all rewarded for it, particularly his loving family and friends. But our people must also know that that will not always be the case. Innocents will come into harm's way, and circumstances may not allow such a successful outcome," she added.

The President said that the Filipino people and nation must remain true to its values and convictions here at home "while remaining committed to other friends and allies abroad."

"We must rejoice at the good news, but our happiness must be tempered by the awareness that we live in dangerous times, and that we must work to create a more peaceful world," she said.

In the press briefing, the President said that when Angelo arrives home, she would bring him to Our Lady of Rosales in Pangasinan, where she prayed for the safety of the Filipino hostage.

The President said the Filipino driver's health is good, his spirits high and, "he sends his best wishes to every Filipino for their thoughts and prayers."

In their conversation, Angelo assured the President that he is in good condition but the President advised him to undergo medical check-up in a hospital in Abu Dhabi, United Arab Emirates (UAE) where he will be brought from Baghdad before proceeding to Manila.

The President also talked to Foreign Affairs Undersecretary Rafael Seguis who was with Angelo at the time of his release.

Seguis informed the President that the UAE government has extended all assistance in helping bring home Angelo to Manila.

Statement of Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye: Budget deficit

Our economic team has already laid down sound, concrete and equitable proposals to address the budget deficit and these are being worked on with Congress.

We assure the public that every ounce of sacrifice that will be levied out of new tax measures will be matched with vigorous steps in revenue collections and in cutting waste in government.

We are bent on doing our share in terms of sacrifice and responsibility.

Statement of Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye: On Angelo possibly attending the SONA

Angelo will be undergoing routine medical checkup at an Abu Dhabi hospital.

He has expressed the desire to have more privacy, and quality time with his family, relatives and townmates.

Statement of Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye: On NY Times editorial

The President does not regret her decision.

But we still consider the United States as our big brother in the security arena.

Our long-standing and maturing relationship with the United States will survive this hostage crisis.

We will maintain our strong stand against terrorism in the face of this isolated event.

A mass at Our Lady of Rosales, Pangasinan, GMA's way of welcoming Angelo

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo will accompany freed hostage Angelo dela Cruz to pray at Our Lady of Rosales in Pangasinan when the 46-year-old truck driver held hostage for over two weeks in Iraq comes home, Malacañang said today.

Before his release, the President prayed for dela Cruz at Our Lady of Rosales.

"They will hear mass at Our Lady of Rosales in Pangasinan. That is the personal welcome of our President for Angelo," Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said this morning in a radio interview.

“We would like to thank many unnamed persons, entities and friends of our government who helped in the release of dela Cruz,” said Bunye, citing in particular the help of the government of Malaysia and the United Arab Emirates (UAE).

Bunye reiterated the government’s concern for overseas Filipino workers (OFWs).

“Our number one consideration is the safety of our countrymen, not only those in the Middle East but all OFWs,” Bunye said.

U.S. expresses relief over Angelo’s release

The United States embassy today expressed relief over the release of Filipino truck driver Angelo de la Cruz but at the same time condemned the targeting of innocent civilians by Iraqi militants.

In a statement following President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo’s announcement that the overseas Filipino worker has been released by his Iraqi abductors after 13 days of captivity, the US embassy said it was glad to hear of the good news.

“Our thoughts and prayers have been with Angelo de la Cruz, his family, and the Philippines throughout this ordeal,” the statement said.

While the embassy said it was glad to hear President Macapagal-Arroyo’s announcement, it also condemns the targeting of innocent civilians such as Angelo de la Cruz.

In a separate statement, Malacañang earlier today said that the President did not regret her decision to order the pullout of the Philippine humanitarian contingent in Iraq ahead of schedule.

Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said that the Philippines still considers the US as its “big brother in the security arena.”

“Our long-standing and maturing relationship with the United States will survive this hostage crisis,” Bunye said, in reaction to a New York Times editorial critical of the Philippine decision.

Bunye said the Philippines would maintain its strong stand against terrorism in the face of the isolated event.

GMA cites alternative to 5th year in high school

LUCENA CITY—Instead of requiring a fifth year in high school, the government will incorporate pre-school in the education ladder to encourage early childhood development.

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo announced this today at the opening of the two-day 4th Annual National Convention of the Philippine Schools District Supervisors Association (PSDSA) at the Queen Margarett Hotel here.

“Education is not only about making our young people competitive in the global market. It’s about providing Filipinos excellence in their work and building our nation around democratic and universal values. That is what a good education is,” the President said.

Among those who welcomed the President were Department of Education (DepEd) Secretary Edilberto de Jesus, PSDSA president Estelita Reyes, and local officials led by Quezon Governor Wilfrido Enverga and City Mayor Ramon Talaga.

To strengthen the implementation of the early childhood development program of the DepEd, the President said there should be coordination between the DepEd and local government units (LGUs) to transform the already devolved day-care centers into kindergarten schools.

The President said this could be done under a memorandum of understanding between the DepEd and the LGUs or through a legislation.

Education improvement and youth opportunity are among the President's five key packages on jobs creation and economic growth.

The Chief Executive said youth welfare would also be prioritized through sustained government campaign against illegal drugs and gambling with the help of the parents and the community.

President Macapagal-Arroyo said she has allowed NGOs to conduct values formation in schools.

Before her term ends in six years, the President said she wants to accomplish the computerization of elections so teachers could concentrate exclusively on education.

Also to be accomplished, the President said, are the construction of at least 3,000 new classrooms every year, grant of vocational-technological scholarship for every poor family, providing all public high schools with computers and the strengthening of Math, Science and English subjects in the curriculum.

GMA vows to strengthen distance learning

LUCENA City—President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo said here today she would ask Congress to pass a bill strengthening the distance learning systems to rationalize the distribution of teachers vis a vis the student population.

Speaking at the opening of the 4th Annual National Convention of Philippine Schools District Supervisors Association (PSDSA) here, the President noted that while some areas in the country have an excess of classroom teachers, others are wanting of educators.

The Chief Executive traced the problem to the Magna Carta for teachers which prohibits the reassignment of teachers to another place without her/his consent.

To make up for the inadequacy of teachers in certain places without violating the law, Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo said a possible option is to institutionalize distance learning through information technology (IT).

“The television can be an additional teacher, so that you can have learning from the main school in the poblacion to the barangay school through information technology,” the President told the school supervisors.

The President also took the opportunity to thank the teachers for their sacrifice and forbearance in “delivering credible elections.”

“I hope that when I step down six years from now, the electoral process would have been completely computerized so that you, the educators of our country, can concentrate exclusively on education,” the President said.

“And I hope that when I step down six years from now, your work would be easier because everyone of school age will be in school, in an uncrowded classroom, in surroundings conducive to learning,” Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo added.

Angelo dela Cruz won't be at GMA's SONA

LUCENA CITY — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said freed Filipino overseas contract worker Angelo dela Cruz would not be attending her State-of-the-Nation Address (SONA) on Monday to give him enough time to recover from his recent ordeal and spend quality time with his family.

In a talk with reporters at the sideline of the 4th Annual National Convention of the Philippine Schools District Supervisors Association (PSDSA) at the Queen Margarett Hotel here, the President said she is also leaving it to Dela Cruz to decide when to visit the Our Lady of Rosales Church in Rosales, Pangasinan, where she prayed for his safe release.

The President also said that the Commission on Appointments (CA) would be constituted a week after her SONA.

The President said all incumbent appointees would remain as caretakers for the time-being.

The President also bared that Oscar Sevilla would be appointed as chairman of the Philippine Ports Authority (PPA) vice Alfonso Cusi who recently replaced Edgar Manda as general manager of the Ninoy Aquino International Airport (NAIA).

DOLE to set policy on deployment of OFWs to Iraq — GMA

LUCENA CITY – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo said here today that she is leaving it to the Department of Labor and Employment (DOLE) to decide on whether to lift or keep the ban on the deployment of overseas Filipino workers (OFWs) in Iraq.

In an informal interaction with the media here, the President said it is important for the DOLE to come up with a system of informing OFWs of the risks of working in strife-torn Iraq.

In Malacañang, Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye reiterated the government’s offer of assistance to OFWs “who feel that they are in danger in their worksite.” If they would need assistance to return home, that will be facilitated,” he said.

Bunye revealed that during the past two months, the government-assisted repatriation program in Iraq has been able to facilitate the return to the country of more than 200 OFWs from that country.

“For information, we have already repatriated more than 200 of our countrymen during the last two months,” he said.

It will be recalled that the President has directed the DOLE to stop facilitating papers of Filipinos who want to work in Iraq after de la Cruz was kidnapped two weeks ago.

GMA orders DOLE to inform OFWs of risks in their country of destination

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has ordered the Department of Labor and Employment (DOLE) to inform Filipinos of the risks they face in getting employment in the Middle East, Malacañang said today.

The President wants each applicant to consult with DOLE which will explain to them the risks they may encounter in the country they want to work in, Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said this morning in his regular radio interview.

Many of our workers are willing to take chances even with the risks so the President wants them to be fully aware of these, Bunye added.

Bunye cited the case of Angelo dela Cruz who was held hostage for more than two weeks by Islamic militants in Iraq before releasing him.

Dela Cruz was employed as a truck driver in Saudi Arabia but he had to follow his employer's orders to go to Iraq, Bunye said.

Conditions like these are what the President wants DOLE to fully explain to Filipino workers applying for work in the Middle East, Bunye said.

Yesterday, the President said DOLE would decide on whether to lift or keep the ban on the deployment of overseas Filipino workers (OFWs) to Iraq.

Statement of Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye: Relocation of key departments

Moving out key departments to the regions must be appreciated in the light of decongesting the metropolis as well as empowering a broader segment of our people.

These operational and political objectives far outweigh the temporary dysfunctions that are bound to happen, if there will be any.

These administrative movements are expected to be carried out in a gradual manner so as not to disrupt essential public services, entail higher costs or prejudice organizational efficiency.

These actions are all about bringing the government closer to the people.

Statement of Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye: Angelo dela Cruz

Many countries, mostly Islamic, as well as groups and individuals, helped us secure the release of Angelo de la Cruz.

At the height of the hostage crisis, we asked the help of both formal and non-formal channels.

In due time, we should be able to formally thank all of them.

GMA spells out proposed tax measures

A comprehensive set of revenue generation and spending reduction initiatives are among the five packages of legislative and executive proposals expected to be outlined by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo in her State of the Nation Address (SONA) before a joint session of the 13th Congress on Monday, July 26.

The measures, both legislative and administrative, are intended to enable the government to eventually balance its budget and reduce the drain on government finances.

The measures were spelled out by the President in her speech before a joint meeting of the Philippine Chamber of Commerce and Industry (PCCI) and the Makati Business Club (MBC) held this afternoon at the Makati Shangri-la in Makati City.

Designed to increase revenues by broadening the tax base and improving tax collection efficiency, the following measures are being considered.

- a gross income tax system;
- the repeal of the value added tax (VAT) to be replaced by a tax that is simpler to administer and would result in increased compliance;
- a tax on windfall telecom income;
- increased tax revenues on sin products and petroleum products;
- rationalization of fiscal incentives;
- use of a targeted tax amnesty; and
- creation of a performance-driven system for revenue agencies.

The administrative actions on the package are designed to maximize the efficient utilization of the nation's resources; reduce costs; increase specific fees, charges, and the duty on petroleum products and capturing more of the revenue potentials of selected government-owned and controlled corporations.

The government is targeting measures that can generate additional annual revenues of over P80 billion and administrative reforms that could generate savings of over P100 billion.

It also aims to achieve its fiscal objectives, aims to create a strong momentum in fostering business confidence, the cornerstone of domestic and foreign investments, and consequently in generating more jobs for the Filipino worker.

GMA says gov't to pursue aggressive trade and investments promo drive

The Macapagal-Arroyo administration is poised to pursue an aggressive promotions campaign for trade and investments in line with its ambitious agenda of reforms to address poverty, corruption, social justice and economic growth.

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo elaborated on her platform of government over the next six years in a speech at a joint meeting of the influential business groups Philippine Chamber of Commerce and Industry (PCCI) and the Makati Business Club held today at the Makati Shangri La Hotel in Makati City. The affair was also dubbed as Business Pre-SONA (State of the Nation Address) 2004.

Parallel to the trade and investment promotion drive, the government would also launch a vigorous infrastructure development program through close coordination between the Office of the President and the Department of Trade and Industry (DTI), the President said.

“That initiative is a resourceful approach to managing government resources. We aim to fast-track the implementation and approval of ongoing or pipeline infrastructure projects through a new Philippine Infrastructure Corporation,” Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo stressed.

The Chief Executive pointed out that stepped-up infrastructure projects would attain three important economic goals. These are:

1. Providing vital infrastructure that will open up the arteries of new economic activities in areas outside Metro Manila;
2. Pump priming the economy through job creation and growth generation in the high-multiplier sectors of construction, especially housing, agribusiness and mining;
3. Raising the revenue base of the government.

The President said the mining sector would be revitalized by “enhancing the industry road map, streamlining its start-up process, privatizing government assets in mining and by intensifying oil and gas exploration.”

The government also aims to establish the Philippines, specifically the Clark Economic Zone and Subic Freeport, as the “best logistics hub” in Asia.

In her speech, the President directed DTI Secretary Cesar Purisima to institutionalize public-private partnerships to help the government meet its employment and income targets.

“It will be private sector-driven and government-enabled,” the Chief Executive added.

Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo also called on government planners to make the country a regional leader in healthcare services given its “reach base of qualified health professionals” and strategic location in the region. “We could be in the forefront of a billion dollar industry within a few years.”

GMA pushes development of more SMEs to propel growth

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today gave a preview of her July 26 State of the Nation Address (SONA) where she will expound on five reform packages she intends to pursue to spur the country’s economic growth.

The occasion was the joint business meeting at the Shangri-la in Makati City with business leaders of the Philippine Chamber of Commerce and Industry (PCCI) and the Makati Business Club (MBC).

On top of the President’s agenda is the job creation and economic growth package.

“We want to mobilize capital at the grassroots level by continuing to promote entrepreneurship and the development of small and medium-scale enterprises (SMEs),” the President said.

This is central to the struggling working class who have the entrepreneurial zeal but who need a boost to move into the middle class, she explained.

“By focusing on this activity, we aim to generate one to two additional jobs per enterprise per year,” she said.

There are over 800,000 SMEs now all over the country so that resources and efforts to enlarge them and the micro-enterprises will surely make a meaningful impact on the economy, the President said.

Last month, the President ordered the Cabinet to systematize government procedures for lending to SMEs in line with her promise to triple the amount available to them for loans.

This year's amount for loans from banks to SMEs should be P644.4 billion, or treble the P214.8 last year, according to the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas (BSP).

For the Sulong (SME Unified Lending Opportunities for National Growth) project, the Small Business Finance and Guarantee Corp. (SBFGC) must offer P80.1 billion which is three times P26.7 billion last year.

The President also ordered then the Department of Trade and Industry (DTI) to have a special undersecretary who would consolidate the various funds that can be put together for more focused lending efforts to SMEs not serviced by the private sector.

GMA unwraps reform packages before business leaders

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today called on every sector, including the opposition, to join hands in helping push her economic, social and political reforms, notably those involving job creation and economic growth.

Speaking at a joint business meeting held this afternoon at the Shangri-la Hotel in Makati City, the President said the package of measures, when fully implemented, would be the most ambitious economic reform agenda in a generation.

The job creation and economic growth package is one of five reform packages that the President aims to enunciate in her State of the Nation Address (SONA) on Monday. The four others are anti-corruption and good governance, social justice and basic needs, education improvement and youth opportunity, and the energy independence and savings.

In her speech, the President said she is open for Congress, members of the business community, and the people, to participate in the lawmaking process.

“But let me also be clear: while the consultative process is wide open, it is not open-ended. We must and we will move quickly to involve the best minds and best ideas from K-4 and our (political) opposition, to build a package that will move the nation forward. But I will not allow infighting to derail legislation for the sake of scoring political points,” the President said.

Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo noted that everyone is for economic reform until the details are revealed. “But let me be clear when I say we are no longer at a point where we can step back from the responsibility and say the package isn't perfect,” she said.

She said it is time to bite the bullet and take fundamental action on the economy. “We cannot let the perfect be the enemy of the good. We have to move with what we have very, very quickly.”

The President said the country does not have the luxury of time. “We must move forward by making the tough choices, or slip backwards into mediocrity. I am very hopeful and optimistic that we would unite around social and economic reform once and for all and make the Philippines the nation we all know it can be,” she added.

The job creation and economic growth package include:

- A gross income tax system;
- The repeal of the value-added tax;
- VAT to be replaced by a tax that is simpler to administer and increases compliance;
- Tax on windfall telecom income;

- Increasing tax revenues from sin products and petroleum products;
- Rationalization of fiscal incentives;
- The use of targeted tax amnesty;
- The creation of a performance-driven system for revenue agencies

The President also said she would be soliciting the help of the people in promoting the early passage of the measures once this package has been introduced in Congress. “I fully intend to use my new mandate to promote the change demanded by the voters,” she said.

Government officials, as well as representatives of the local business community and foreign chambers of commerce, attended the joint business meeting.

Trade and Industry Cesar Purisima introduced the President as guest speaker while MBC vice chairman Ramon del Rosario Jr. and PCCI president Noemi Saludo made opening remarks.

The meeting was attended by officials of the Makati Business Club, Philippine Chamber of Commerce and Industry, the American Chamber of Commerce, Australia-New Zealand Chamber of Commerce, Bankers Association of the Philippines, Bishops-Businessmen’s Conference, Canadian Chamber of Commerce, Chinese Filipino Business Club, European Chamber of Commerce, Federation of Filipino-Chinese Chamber of Commerce, Financial Executives Institute of the Philippines, Japanese Chamber of Commerce, Management Association of the Philippines and the Philippine Exporters Confederation.

The President said the job creation package addresses one of our most formidable challenges, which is consolidating the government budget. It comprises a comprehensive set of revenue generation and spending reduction initiatives, both legislative and administrative that would enable the government to eventually balance its budget and reduce the drain on government finances.

The administrative measures in the package, on the other hand, aims to maximize the efficient use of the nation’s resources, reduce costs, increase specific fees, charges and the duty on petroleum products and capturing more of the revenue potential of selected government-owned and controlled corporations.

The President said the government targets measures that could generate additional annual revenues of about P80 billion and administrative reforms to generate savings of over P100 billion.

On the effort to boost investor confidence in the country, the President said she aims to:

- Heighten promotions for trade and investments;
- Develop infrastructure;
- Fast-track the implementation and approval of ongoing and pipeline infrastructure projects through a new Philippine infrastructure corporation;
- Revitalize the mining sector by enhancing the industry road map, streamlining its start-up process, privatizing government assets in mining and intensifying oil and gas exploration;
- Position Subic and Clark as the best logistics hub in the region;
- Institutionalize public-private partnerships to help the economy meet employment and income targets;
- Develop real strategies to unlock the tremendous advantage in health care services;
- Mobilize capital at the grassroots level by continuing to promote entrepreneurship and the development of small and medium enterprises;
- Generate one to two additional jobs per enterprise per year
- Fast-track the promotion of trade agreements to set the state for a more competitive Philippines in the external sector.

Statement of Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye: Revenue measures

Work with Congress on these tax measures has already begun ahead of the State of the Nation Address (SONA).

There is a consensus building up on the tax plan in the reform coalition led by President Macapagal-Arroyo and leaders of the House and the Senate.

These will be followed up in weekly post-SONA meetings of the Legislative-Executive Development Advisory Council (LEDAC).

The President will also hold a series of town hall meetings (pulong-bayan) to bring this message across backed up by an action plan to carry her pro-poor agenda forward.

Urgent action is needed to push forward vital programs for the benefit of the poor.

While we are vigorously pushing for the passage of the eight new tax proposals, we will also actively go after tax cheats.

Statement of Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye: Pulse Asia Survey

We acknowledge the pessimism about the future that is conditioned by transient socio-economic dislocations.

That is why improving the lives of ordinary people is the priority goal of the President and she would deliver.

President Macapagal-Arroyo's ten-point agenda aims to alleviate the hardship among our people.

The agenda is both an omnibus safety net as well as a strategic vanguard against poverty in the long term.

We aim to cut poverty in half during her term and we have hit the ground running.

Statement of Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye: Electoral Protest

We are glad that Mr. Poe and Ms. Legarda chose only the legal and proper forum to contest the elections.

We welcome their protest in the spirit and in the interest of fair play.

But we are ready to defend our case and we are confident that we stand on solid ground.

Nonetheless, we will continue to extend our hand to all our former adversaries for the sake of unity and reconciliation.

Strategic RP-US partnership remains strong — GMA

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today assured the nation and the world that there is no break in the strategic partnership between the Philippines and the United States with the early departure of the Philippine humanitarian contingent in Iraq.

“Let me set the record straight on exaggerated claims by critics and in the media that there is a break in our strategic partnership with the US. This is not the case,” the President said in her remarks during the 106th Foundation Day of the Department of Foreign Affairs in Pasay City.

She said the two countries have century-old bonds, tightened by a common political tradition, by world wars fought together, by tens of thousands of brave soldiers who died in the battlefields of freedom.

“No president can break that bond because it is held together by a permanent history. Our partnership for a better world is stronger than ever,” the President said.

She said she enjoys a cordial and direct relationship with US Ambassador Francis Ricciardone and values the ambassador’s role in helping the Philippines. “The same is true with our strong relations with the Bush administration,” she said.

The President also emphasized that the Philippine foreign policy has not changed and that it is and has always been shaped and driven by the supreme interest of the Filipino people.

She said these people include the family of Angelo de la Cruz, his eight children and wife who have to let go of a father halfway around the world, across firefights and trenches, just to make a living.

“That we have to bring Angelo home safely is only incidental to my message to his kin and all others in their grim situation”, she said, adding that she has to look them in the eye and tell them she will fight for their better future.

“This is not a tale about politics. It is about human survival and Diaspora, about poverty and families being torn apart, and our will and resolve to bring food on every table,” the President said.

As De La Cruz comes home, she said she is not about to bare a bleeding heart to defend her position. She said she took sole responsibility, made no apologies and she stuck to her oath.

To prove the consistency of the Philippine foreign policy, the President restated the eight realities she enumerated in January 2001 that the country responds to in order to protect the interests of the Philippines.

These are:

- that China, Japan and U.S. have a determining influence in the security situation and economic evolution of East Asia;
- that more and more, Philippine foreign policy decisions have to be made in the context of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN);
- that the international Islamic community will become more and more important to the Philippines;
- that the coming years will see the redefinition of the role of multilateral and inter-regional organizations in promoting common interests;

- that the defense of the nation's sovereignty and the protection of its environment and natural resources can be carried out only to the extent that it gets others to respect its rights over maritime territory;
- that the country's economic growth will continue to require direct foreign investment;
- that the Philippines can benefit most quickly from international tourism; and
- that OFWs will continue to play a critical role in the country's economic and social stability.

On the uniqueness of the Philippine situation, the President said the country's allies must understand that the nation is in a special circumstance as to matters concerning the safety and security of its workers overseas.

She noted that unlike the US, Australia, Bulgaria and other countries, the Philippines has 1.5 million Filipinos who live and work in the Middle East.

The President said that there are at least four thousand Filipinos now working in Iraq, the largest contingent of private foreign workers in Iraq who drive trucks, build bridges and provide medical treatment and other vital services to Iraqis in need.

According to the President, the life and livelihood of these courageous OFWs are hazardous enough even without the threat of being held as "a political pawn in some terrorist chess game."

Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo said, arguably, the 4,000 Filipino private workers are more valuable to Iraq than the 100 peacekeepers, notwithstanding the fine work our troops have performed in Iraq.

She said truck drivers and construction workers are highly vulnerable to terrorist attacks. "Combat troops of other coalition members are by definition not as vulnerable. Our people, OFWs, are vulnerable," the President stressed.

"That vulnerability, that threat has now been relieved as a result of the previously-authorized departure of our Philippine troops," the President said.

GMA cites specific measures to safeguard OFWs in Iraq, other Middle East countries

To put out of harm's way some 4,000 Filipino workers in Iraq, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo said the government has made representations with the coalition camp commanders to enhance security measures for civilian workers, particularly Filipinos, inside their bases.

The President, who spoke during the 106th Foundation Day of the Department of Foreign Affairs (DFA) in Pasay City, said that the government has also advised Filipino workers to stay inside the protection of the camps, exercise vigilance and to always keep in mind emergency procedures.

She also stressed the policy of not allowing further deployment of Filipino workers in Iraq "outside secured and established bases." The President imposed the temporary ban immediately after the kidnapping of Filipino truck driver Angelo de la Cruz in Iraq some two weeks ago.

Later, however, the President said it would be up for the Department of Labor and Employment to decide on whether the ban should be lifted or not. But she ordered the DOLE to set up a system whereby all departing OFWs are briefed about the risks or dangers that they face in their areas of work, particularly in the Middle East.

Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo also said that Foreign Affairs Secretary Delia Albert has issued a directive to Philippine missions abroad to ask respective governments bordering Iraq not to allow Filipino truck drivers to cross to that country.

The DFA's Foundation Day falls on the birth anniversary of Apolinario Mabini, the brains of the Katipunan, and considered the first foreign secretary of the Philippines.

In stressing the important role of the Philippine foreign service in rescuing Filipino truck driver Angelo de la Cruz from the hands of his kidnappers, the President thanked the men and women of the service, “who held the line of duty in Iraq especially those who manned their posts during the hostage saga.”

“There were those who braved great danger to complete the mission, and many more others who assisted the overall effort from the sidelines throughout the Middle East and here at home. I am grateful to you all,” she said.

The President said the Philippine foreign policy recognizes that overseas Filipinos will continue to play a critical role in the country’s economic and social stability.

She said the Philippine economy would, for the foreseeable future, continue to be heavily dependent on overseas remittances.

“On the basis of this and of the nation’s humanitarian responsibilities to its people wherever they are, my government works doubly hard to strengthen workers’ protection – protection from the depredations of domestic recruiters as well as of overseas employers, agents, and officials, and protection from physical harm,” she said.

The President has stressed that unlike the U.S., Australia, Bulgaria and other countries, there are at least 1.5 million Filipinos who live and work in the Middle East.

She further noted the 4,000 Filipino workers in Iraq, who drive trucks, build bridges, provide medical treatment and other vital services to Iraqis in need.

“Truck drivers and construction workers are highly vulnerable to terrorist attacks, combat troops of other coalition members are by definition not as vulnerable. Our people, OFWs, are vulnerable,” she said.

Among those present during the DFA Foundation Day ceremonies were Secretary Albert, Undersecretaries Rafael Seguis, Jose Brillantes and Franklin Ebdalin, and Special Envoy Roy Cimatu.

GMA lauds 10 outstanding youth organizations

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today congratulated the country’s Ten Accomplished Youth Organizations (TAYO) “for proving once more the relevance of youth power in nation-building.”

The President led the awarding ceremonies at Heroes Hall in Malacañang for the best and brightest youth clubs of the nation, a culmination of the second search for TAYO, which is a joint initiative of Senate Majority Leader Francis “Kiko” Pangilinan and the National Youth Commission (NYC).

A distinguished panel of judges headed by NYC Chairperson Paolo Benigno “Bam” Aquino IV and Senator Pangilinan interviewed the representatives of the 20 finalists belonging to the top five organizations from Luzon, Visayas, Mindanao and the National Capital Region.

The youth organizations were judged on the basis of recent programs and projects that have made impacts in the community.

According to Aquino, judges looked into indicators of social mobilization, innovation, creativity, and sustainability and the probability of having the project replicated in other communities.

The ten winners in this year’s TAYO search, which were given P50,000 grants each for future projects of the organization and trophies specially designed by sculptor Toym de Leon Imao, are the following:

1. Students' Association of Management Accountants (SAMA) of the Mariano Marcos State University in Laoag;
2. Sugbuanong Pundok Aron Sugpuon and Child Abuse (SUPACA) of Cebu City;
3. Musical Dramatics Society of Sta. Ana National High School in Davao City;
4. Philippine Rescue 2000, based in Misamis Oriental;
5. Conservation and Restoration Exercise (CORE), Inc., from Bukidnon;
6. Tingog sa Kasanag (TISAKA), in Cagayan de Oro;
7. Watershed Management Youth Council of Davao City;
8. GenRev Student Network, based in Quezon City;
9. Tuklas Katutubo, based in Quezon City; and
10. De La Salle University Manila Student Council.

In her message, the President said the youth of today possess great potential to initiate growth-oriented community programs.

“They have the talent, vigor, and idealism to make things happen. When organized, they can wholly take in the challenges of nation building, as exemplified by TAYO,” the President pointed out.

TAYO is an annual search that aims to recognize, reward, and encourage youth efforts in nation building.

Church, Christian groups express support for GMA programs, moves

Leaders of various Church and Christian organizations today pledged full support for President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's government, including her decision to pull out the Philippine humanitarian mission from Iraq ahead of schedule.

“Please be assured that in the urgency of the hour, we are here to respond to your call to unity, healing and cooperation for our country to move forward. We pledge the best of our support to make your government successful to the end that our people's aspirations as embodied in our Preamble will finally be realized,” they said in a manifesto presented to the President during a luncheon meeting at Malacañang's State Dining Hall.

They also expressed encouragement from the President's strong resolve to achieve her 10-point program that is her legacy to the nation.

The manifesto also quoted a passage from a world renowned Christian leader Dr. Bill Hamon who spoke in June 1992 in a conference at the Philippine International Cultural Center:

“I have a 20-year plan for the Philippines and over the next 20 years, I am going to make it a head and not a tail, says God. . . I'm going to redeem the Philippines from its slavery, bondage, from being used and abused by other nations, by other people and the Lord says, I'm going to turn it around. And by the year 2005-2012 the Lord says, I'm going to have this nation be a Head-nation and not a Third World nation,” the manifesto said.

They look forward to the fulfillment of God's Prophetic word beginning next year and for the duration of the President's term, the manifesto said.

Among the Church and Christian organizations represented were Christ Jesus Our Life Church, International Bible Society of the Philippines, Living Epistles Churches, Hope Churches Philippines, Foursquare Bible College, Full Gospel Businessmen's Fellowship, Bangon Pilipinas, Family Christian Fellowship, Christian Missionary Alliance, Prayer Life Seminars Inc., Christian City Presbyterians, Universal Pentecostal Church and Peace Makes Churches.

Another group, the Philippine Council of Evangelical Churches, also presented a manifesto of support for the President's pullout of the Philippine humanitarian contingent in Iraq read by its secretary general, Bishop Efraim Tendero.

“The President has prayed to God for wisdom and God has given her the wisdom to do what is right. That is what the President has found, the courage to stand by her decision even if some countries criticized her decision as cowardly. . . We supported the President for the Christian act of valuing one human life over and above the interest of commerce,” the manifesto said.

Earlier, Manila Archbishop Gaudencio Rosales also expressed his support for the President’s order for the pullout of the troops from Iraq to save Filipino truck driver Angelo dela Cruz.

RP committed in fight vs terrorism — GMA

Even with the pullout of its humanitarian contingent in Iraq in the wake of the Angelo de la Cruz hostage crisis, the Philippine commitment to its global allies in the fight against terrorism does not waver at home or abroad.

This was stressed by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today in a policy speech at the Foundation Day of the Department of Foreign Affairs where she was guest of honor and speaker.

“We fully support the world community and our allies including the United States in our coordinated fight,” she said.

“And while we are thankful for the release of Angelo, we must unite around our resolve to wipe out terrorism especially in the Philippines but also in accordance with the international commitments especially under the United Nations and our alliances with our friends abroad,” the President said.

The President said the Filipino people and the nation remain committed to its friends and allies abroad “while remaining true to our convictions here at home.”

“We share the same goal but do not always walk on the same path,” she stressed.

Recent capture of terrorists in the Philippines, she said, has continued to decimate their underground cells.

“Our fight (against terrorism) has been successful. And they know their days are numbered, because we will be coming after them everyday I am in this office until the last one is driven from our islands and we return to peace, order and stability,” she said.

The President asked for understanding in her decision to save the life of de la Cruz, saying the Philippines is in a special circumstance, unlike other countries that are part of the coalition.

She said the Philippines has 1.5 million Filipinos working in the Middle East, 4,000 of them are in Iraq.

These make them vulnerable to terrorist attacks, the President said, as she cautioned that “we may not always have such a happy ending when it comes to terrorist situations.”

GMA, Angelo, hear mass together in Rosales, Pangasinan

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today took time out from her hectic official functions to hear a Thanksgiving Mass in Rosales, Pangasinan for Divine intercession for the safe release of truck driver Angelo de la Cruz by Islamic militants who held him hostage for two weeks in Iraq.

The President flew to Rosales onboard the presidential chopper and arrived at the Grotto of Our Lady of Immaculate Concepcion Church at 3:25 p.m.

De la Cruz, his wife Arsenia and their five children arrived at the Church about an hour earlier. They were accompanied by Social Welfare and Development Secretary Corazon “Dinky” Soliman, Labor Secretary Patricia Sto. Tomas, Pangasinan Rep. Conrado Estrella III and Rosales Mayor Ricardo Revita.

The Chief Executive hugged Arsenia and shook hands with Angelo upon arrival at the Church before they sat down side by side to recite the Holy Rosary.

The 40-minute Thanksgiving Mass, officiated by Fr. Gregorio Calix, started at 3:40 p.m., followed by merienda at the nearby house of visionary Ruel Darang.

Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo revealed earlier that she prayed for Angelo’s safety at the Church in Rosales.

Shortly after news of Angelo’s release broke out, the President said she would return to the same Church, together with the former hostage, to say their thanksgiving prayer.

Interviewed later by reporters, Angelo said he considered his safe release as a second lease on life, and expressed hopes that other Filipino overseas workers, particularly truck drivers like him, would not come into harm’s way.

The Good News: Japanese, local businessmen upbeat on RP prospects

Philippine-based Japanese traders are upbeat on business prospects in the next quarter with President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo back in office and political and economic reforms seemingly forthcoming.

A July business sentiment survey of the Japanese External Trade Organization (JETRO) showed Japanese businessmen in the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) were optimistic only in the Philippines as the outlook diffusion index declined in all other ASEAN countries.

The survey was done in the first week of the July shortly after the President took her oath as the 14th President in Cebu City.

Big business is also upbeat as a result of the recent presidential elections according to the most recent executive outlook survey of the Makati Business Club.

Almost seven in every 10 respondents (69 percent) expect economic growth this year to be higher than last year's 4.7 gross domestic product (GDP) growth rate.

"Economic prospects are at its most bullish since 2000 in the eyes of the country's top business executives," the MBC said in a statement.

While MBC interpreted the results as "early signs" of post-election bullishness and optimism, it noted that first quarter GDP already grew by 6.4 percent.

Business sentiment in July compared with June also generally improved, except in oil, chemicals, steel and metals, non-manufacturing, construction and real estate, and other non-manufacturing businesses.

But there was considerable improvement in transportation, machinery manufacturing as well as transport communications, commerce and services segments, the MBC said.

It was the non-traditional manufacturing sector, categorized as "other manufacturing businesses," which made the most headway last month.

Statement of Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye: RP-US ties

We are confident that our allies will eventually appreciate the unique Philippine experience and situation that impelled us to withdraw our contingent.

Even the most stable international relationships can follow divergent paths at a certain point, but these paths always meet again.

We travel along the same road of democracy and share the same burden of global security.

We believe that the just decision of the Filipino people will be accepted by the rest of the world just as we respect the decisions of all sovereign nations and peoples.

Statement of Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye: Abu Sayyaf

The Philippines will continue to do its part in the war against terrorism domestically, regionally and globally.

The domestic arena is our prime focus as we have sustained intelligence operations against the Abu Sayyaf Group and the remnants of the Jemaah Islamiyah.

No week has passed without our forces chalking up gains in capturing and neutralizing their leaders and key operatives.

The noose is tightening on them and their capacity to make trouble is now considerably restricted.

RP now Asia's leader in SMS technology

The Philippines was cited as Asia's leader in short message service (SMS) technology during the recent CommunicAsia 2004, an industry-wide communications and IT-trade event in Asia held in Singapore, according to Center for International Trade Expositions and Missions (CITEM).

With over 23,000 visitors and 18 participating countries, including the Philippines, the trade event recognized the Philippines as a reliable provider of export products in electronics as well as an emerging leader in telecommunications, both for mobile communications and fixed line subscription.

Trade and Industry Secretary Cesar Purisima said that this development only shows that the Philippines is an integral part of IT and telecommunications development in Asia.

The Philippines bested the other countries due to its existing automated information on demand via SMS available to its subscribers over the other countries' basic send and receive SMS.

Foreign visitors commended CITEM, an attached agency of the Department of Trade and Industry, and the Department of Transportation and Communications (DOTC) for the Philippine participation to the said trade event.

The twelve Philippine companies that participated in the event were Globe Telecom, GlobeQuest, Smart Communications, PLDT Business Solutions, PLDT Global, 3D Networks, BayanTel, GiveMe Unlimited, INTEX Telecom Systems, Paysetter International, Institute of Electronics and Communications Engineers of the Philippines (IECEP) and Wireless Services Asia.

Other awards given to the Philippines were: Mobile News Award Most Innovative Service, "Share a Load" by Paysetter International; TelecomAsia Magazine Best GSM Carrier, Globe Telecom; TelecomAsia Magazine Best Telecom CEO, Gerardo Ablaza Jr of Globe Telecom and TelecomAsia Magazine Best Emerging Markets Carrier, PLDT.

Trade Undersecretary for International Trade Thomas Aquino said that Philippine content providers are already very much ahead of their ASEAN counterparts in terms of SMS gateway technology, messaging, gaming, location-based services and mobile commerce applications.

To date, the Philippines' telecommunications industry boasts of progressive ICT infrastructure and policies, competitive rates and a very active mobile market, with an estimated 25 percent penetration rate in Metro Manila alone.

There are 23 million active mobile subscribers in the country, statistics say and this figure is attributed to the affordable and accessible mobile services in the Philippines.

Already dubbed as the 'world's texting capital,' the country's SMS or text messages dominate the traffic by a factor of 8 to 1 (text to voice calls) and is expected to accelerate further in the next few years.

"We see a growing trend towards third generation (3G) applications and mobile commerce and this presents an opportunity to Philippine developers in the telecommunications industry," Aquino said.

Third generation applications enable users to send and receive videos, short film clips and conduct videoconferences at the speed of 128 to 265 mbps while m-commerce uses phone to pay bills, buy grocery and pay for cab or bus rides.

New DOLE order provides for additional insurance for OFWs

The Department of Labor and Employment (DOLE) has issued guidelines providing for additional insurance and other protective mechanisms for land-based overseas Filipino workers (OFWs) who perform tasks requiring them to cross borders, particularly in the Middle East

Department Order No. 63-04, series of 2004, which provides for the guidelines, was signed by Labor and Employment Secretary Patricia A. Sto. Tomas during the Command Conference of Middle East-based labor attaches held last July 19-20.

Acting Labor and Employment Secretary Manuel G. Imson said D.O. 63-04 specifies that all land-based OFWs performing cross-border assignments, in whatever capacity, shall be covered by work hazard premium pay which shall not be lower than 100 percent of the basic pay.

They shall also be entitled to an additional insurance cover in the amount of not less than US$35,000.

Sto. Tomas also issued D.O. No. 64-04 providing for the creation of the DOLE crisis management committee tasked to handle problems involving OFWs especially those who may be caught by acts of violence, terrorism and other similar circumstances abroad.

Imson, in his capacity as Undersecretary for Employment Promotion and Manpower Development, heads the team.

Other members include Philippine Overseas Employment Administration (POEA) Chief Rosalinda D. Baldoz, Overseas Workers Welfare Administration (OWWA) Chief Virgilio R. Angelo, and the DOLE's International Labor Affairs Service (ILAS).

D.O. 63-04 also provides for the following:

- All land-based OFWs who are required to go into countries other than their contracted country of employment shall be informed of the condition at the time of the contract signing;
- All land-based OFWs, already at the worksites abroad, who are required by their employers to travel outside the borders of their contracted country of employment, as indicated in the employment contract, shall likewise be covered by work hazard pay not lower than 100 percent of the basic pay and additional US$35,000 insurance cover. Such amendments to the contract shall be submitted to the Philippine Overseas Labor Office having jurisdiction over the place of employment for verification and approval;

- OFWs shall be entitled to indemnity pay equivalent to one month's basic salary plus cost of repatriation and accrued wages and other benefits in case of accidents, fortuitous events, or acts of violence or terrorism and other similar circumstances causing the discontinuance or non-performance of the OFWs' duties onsite;
- Drivers and other OFWs onsite shall no longer be required to physically turn over their vehicles and other equipment in case they fail to perform their duties in areas outside of their contracted country of employment due to act of violence or terrorism, and when their safety is in danger.

During the 106th anniversary of the DFA last Friday, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo said that Foreign Affairs Secretary Delia Albert has also issued directives to all Philippine missions bordering Iraq to request their host governments not to allow Filipino truck drivers to cross into Iraqi territory.

The President said the Philippines would continue the temporary ban on the deployment of Filipino workers in Iraq outside secured and established bases, such as truck drivers, hotel and household staff, workers in oil refineries, power plants and other infrastructure.

“We have also advised our workers to stay inside the protection of the camps they are working and to exercise vigilance and keep in mind emergency procedures,” the President said.

Some 4,000 Filipino civilian workers are still working inside military bases of the coalition forces in Iraq.

GMA swears in new set of officers of LGP, LCP

Monday's SONA will have 6-year time frame — Palace

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's State of the Nation Address (SONA) on Monday will be different in that it will have a time-frame of six years unlike her previous ones which were one-year projections, Malacañang said today.

The President is submitting very comprehensive reform packages on five issues so that it will take about 40 minutes which will be longer than the usual, Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said in a radio interview this morning.

Because of the comprehensive nature of her coming SONA, the President deemed it necessary to give previews. She presented her education program to a group of public school teachers Tuesday and her economic program to business leaders Wednesday, Bunye said.

After delivering her SONA, the President will also hold consultations with the Legislative-Executive Development Advisory Council and continue to look for a consensus to push through her programs, Bunye added.

The President will also take her programs to the people all over the country in town meetings or pulong bayans so that they will understand her thrusts for the next six years.

"We can say the SONA is not just for one day. It is a continuous event. We had a pre-SONA. We will have the actual SONA and post-SONA activities," Bunye said.

The five issues the President will focus on for the next six years are job creation and economic growth, anti-corruption and good governance, social justice and basic needs, education improvement and youth opportunity, and energy independence and savings.

Palace offers hand of reconciliation anew to political foes despite filing of poll protest

While welcoming the electoral protest filed by the opposition in the interest of fair play, Malacañang said today it would continue to extend its hand to all former adversaries for the sake of unity and reconciliation.

In a radio interview this morning, Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye reiterated the offer even as he expressed confidence that the administration stands on solid ground with its belief that President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo and Vice President Noli de Castro got the clear mandate in the last May 10 polls.

"In the end, this protest would be resolved in favor of the President and the Vice President," he said. "Naniniwala ako na sila ay ibinoto ng mahigit 13 milyon nating mga kababayan (I believe that they were voted by more than 13 million of our countrymen)."

Bunye said Malacañang is glad that actor Fernando Poe Jr. and his running mate Loren Legarda chose the legal and proper forum to contest the elections.

The defeated standard bearers of the opposition the other day formally filed their protest at the Presidential Electoral Tribunal.

"We welcome their protest in the spirit and in the interest of fair play," Bunye said. "But we are ready to defend our case and we are confident that we stand on solid ground."

- The Good News: Gov't foresees record rice, corn harvests this year
- GMA's SONA a work in progress
- Malacañang hails "Kabayan" as a statesman for declining DSWD post

The Good News: Gov't foresees record rice, corn harvests this year

The Macapagal-Arroyo administration is upbeat over the country's agriculture production this year, saying rice and corn harvests would likely hit record levels due to the promotion of the high-yield Gloria hybrid rice and corn varieties.

Outgoing Agriculture Secretary Luis Lorenzo Jr. said total rice production would increase by about six percent from 13.5 million metric tons (MT) last year to 14.28 this year.

Lorenzo noted that this year's production growth would be highest so far under the Macapagal-Arroyo administration, averaging 2.9 percent over the past three years.

The Secretary also said the projected bumper harvests would be realized despite a decline in the harvest area from 4.06 million hectares in 2001 to 4.01 million hectares this year.

Corn production is also expected to hit 5.2 to 5.5 million MT, representing 13 percent to 20 percent improvement over the 4.6 million MT mustered last year.

Lorenzo said the projections indicated that corn harvest for next year could reach 6.1 million MT, enabling the country to attain self-sufficiency in corn.

He attributed the expected hefty growth in rice production to expansions in areas cultivated for the hybrid rice. He pointed out that when the hybrid rice program started in 2001, only about 6,000 hectares were planted to the high-yielding variety. The area continued to widen since, reaching 25,000 hectares in 2002, swelling further to 100,000 hectares in 2003.

For this year, the Department of Agriculture expects to double the area to 200,000 hectares.

"As a result, the national average yield per hectare for rice increased from 3.07 MT per hectare in 2000 to 3.19 MT in 2001, 3.28 MT in 2002 and 3.37 MT in 2003," Lorenzo said.

The average harvest this year is expected to improve further to 3.56 MT per hectare, with the first quarter already hitting 3.43 million MT for a 13.14-percent growth over the same period last year.

Corn, which suffered a 4.55 percent decline in 2002, recovered this year with a first quarter harvest of 1.53 million MT which is 13.27 percent higher than the figure posted for the comparable period last year.

Lorenzo attributed the increase in corn harvest to an expansion in harvest area to 2.5 million hectares from 2.4 million hectares in 2003 and to the sustained improvements in the yield per hectare.

Average yield for corn, Lorenzo said, also showed dramatic improvement at 2.2 MT per hectare this year compared to only 1.80 MT in 2001 and 1.92 MT in 2003.

For the third quarter this year, Mindanao is expected to deliver 60 percent of the country's corn output.

Lorenzo said Mindanao farmers expanded corn cultivation to take advantage of the improved corn prices. The price for yellow corn went up from P8.10 to P9.50 per kilo, while the white variety rose from P9.10 to P10.30 per kilo.

The Secretary also said the world market price for corn is expected to remain stable for the next two years. Hence, it would be easier to encourage more farmers to plant corn, resulting in the stabilization of domestic prices to the benefit of local livestock and poultry sectors.

GMA's SONA a work in progress

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's State of the Nation Address (SONA) she will deliver before a joint session of Congress at 4 p.m. tomorrow is a work in progress, Malacañang said today.

"As is her habit, our President personally is continually reviewing and revising the draft of the speech based on the inputs of her Cabinet and advisers," Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said in a radio interview this morning.

Until the President delivers her SONA, no one can really be sure what the final draft of her speech is, Bunye added.

"It is safe to say, however, that the SONA will be very comprehensive as it will cover all six years of her new term, unlike her previous ones which had time frames of one year," Bunye said.

The President is focusing first on her program of government for the next six years so that any changes that will be made in the Cabinet will have to wait, Bunye said.

Thus, the President had two pre-SONA speeches, first with a group of public school teachers on her education program, then with business leaders on her job creation and economic growth program, Bunye said.

And even after the SONA, the President will continue to explain her programs to the Legislative-Executive Development Advisory Council (LEDAC) and also to the people in town meetings or pulong bayans with the people.

In her SONA, the President will present five reform packages on job creation and economic growth, anti-corruption and good governance, social justice and basic needs, education improvement and youth opportunity and energy independence and savings.

Malacañang hails "Kabayan" as a statesman for declining DSWD post

Malacañang hailed Vice-President Noli "Kabayan" de Castro as a statesman who puts national interest over his personal interest.

Thus Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said after de Castro declined to head the Department of Social Welfare and Development (DSWD) in his regular radio.

GMA bares vision for the country for next 6 years

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today bared her vision for the country for the next six years, vowing to create economic opportunity at home and abroad.

In her State of the Nation Address (SONA) that she delivered this afternoon before a joint session of the 13th Congress at the Batasan Pambansa, the President said that her administration had made a head start during the last three years.

"We must take bolder steps forward in the next six," the President said.

The President's 35-minute speech was applauded 36 times.

Thanking the people for their "overwhelming support" for her during the May elections, the President said "this is a new day, with a new direction, and a renewed confidence in what we can achieve together."

The President also appealed anew to the political opposition to set aside partisan politics so that the roadmap for progress that she has envisioned for the country can be achieved.

"The season of bitter partisanship is over; the season of service is upon us all — majority, minority, opposition, administration," the President said.

The President said that during her inaugural address last June 30, she laid down a 10-point agenda for the next six years, "not Utopia but something practical we can achieve and accomplish on time."

"At the end of her term, the question will no longer be whether we can compete but where else in the world shall we take an indisputable competitive advantage," the President said.

She said that the next six years is when we finally get things right.

She then restated the five key areas where her administration could focus so that the national economy could expand, namely: 1) job creation and economic growth package; 2) anti-corruption and good governance package; 3) social justice and basic needs package; 4) education improvement and youth opportunity package; and 5) energy independence and savings package.

According to the President, tough decisions will have to be made. "It's going to be tough love from here on. It must be tougher on those who've had it easy than on those who've had it tough already," she added.

"We must bear the pain and share the pain to enjoy the gain together," the President said.

The President said that every year, every President tells Congress that it is the last chance for meaningful change.

“The time for change is well past due. This time, let me say, let’s just do it,” the President said.

‘We must have sufficient, cheap energy,’ says GMA

The country must achieve sufficient, efficient and cheap energy to spur economic growth, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo stressed today.

In her State of the Nation Address (SONA) delivered before a joint session of the 13th Congress this afternoon at the Batasang Pambansa in Quezon City, the President said that the privatization of the state-run National Power Corporation (NAPOCOR) is crucial in the thrust for energy independence and efficiency.

The President, however, said that NAPOCOR should be sold “but not in a fire sale.”

She said that investments in infrastructure and energy would provide multiplier effect for the growth and job creation.

“I ask Congress to pass the Transco (National Transmission Corporation) bill that already passed the House in the 12th Congress,” the President said.

The President said that NAPOCOR’s transmission systems will be sold on terms that recognize the lucrative monopoly of its transmission grid.

The Transco franchise bill, which was passed by the House of Representatives during the last Congress, was not acted upon by the Senate.

House leaders assured the President that they would pass the Transco franchise bill anew during 13th Congress.

The passage of the Transco franchise bill is expected to speed up the sale of NAPOCOR and spur new investments in the power sector.

Energy independence is one of the five economic reform packages laid down by the President for her program of government in the next six years under a 10-point agenda that she wants to leave as her legacy to the nation.

The President’s 35-minute speech was applauded 36 times.

GMA pledges to trim down bureaucracy

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today asked Congress to pass a law that would enable her to do away with excess personnel and deadwoods in the government service.

“I ask Congress to pass a law on government re-engineering with a silver parachute for redundant offices,” the President said in her State of the Nation Address (SONA) delivered this afternoon at the opening of the 13th Congress at the Batasang Pambansa in Quezon City.

The President’s 35-minute speech was applauded 36 times.

She said that there is a need to downsize government to reduce “layers of inefficiency.”

According to the President, she has already abolished 80 offices at the Office of the President, vowing to abolish 30 more.

The Chief Executive said part of the savings generated by the trimming of the government workforce would be used to pay for the salary increase of teachers and other employees of a “lean and mean bureaucracy.”

The President said the retooling process also covers a reassessment of the corporate missions of government-owned and/or controlled corporations (GOCCs).

She said that in areas where the private sector can perform better and cheaper, the government would have to step aside.

GMA defends decision on Angelo, offers no apologies to critics

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today defended her decision to pull out the Philippine humanitarian contingent in Iraq to secure the safe release of Filipino truck driver Angelo de la Cruz who was held hostage and threatened of execution by Islamic militants.

In her 35-minute State of the Nation Address (SONA) delivered this afternoon during the opening of the 13th Congress at the Batasang Pambansa in Quezon City, the President said she did not sacrifice the country’s foreign policy, but used it to save the life of an overseas Filipino worker.

Reacting to criticisms that she abruptly changed foreign policy at the height of the hostage drama in Iraq, Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo said she has no reason to apologize for recalling the humanitarian mission just to ensure the safety and welfare of some eight million OFWs in the Middle East.

Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo stressed that her administration “holds human life more dearly than international acclaim.”

“And you have a President who is your friend,” the President told the people.

The President added that she saved De la Cruz “because I stuck to my oath.”

“Since I first became President in 2001, my declared foreign policy focus has been to protect the vital interests of the nation, including our eight million overseas Filipinos,” Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo pointed out.

“I cannot apologize for being a protector of my people,” she stressed.

The President also said the few weeks difference in the scheduled pullout and the actual recall “could not justify sacrifice of a human life.”

“Sacrificing Angelo de la Cruz would have been a pointless provocation; it would have put the lives of a million and a half Filipinos in the Middle East at risk, by making them part of the war,” Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo said.

She explained that war are for combatants, adding that at the moment, communist rebels are holding hostage two soldiers, but the captives could not expect to be released except by the compassion of their captors or by a military operation.

The President said since she has shown that the government cares for a single human life in the recently concluded hostage crisis involving De la Cruz who was reunited last week with his family in Mexico, Pampanga, the more reason for her to show that government cares for the entire Filipino people.

GMA tells Congress to consider Cha-Cha next year

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said she expects Congress to start considering next year the proposed amendment to the Constitution to pave the way for a change in the country’s system of government.

“Once we have proved to our people that we have done what we can within the present structure of government, we can move on to changing the system to one that enhances our freedom and flexibility to do more,” the President said in her State of the Nation Address (SONA) delivered this afternoon during the joint session of the 13th Congress at the Batasang Pambansa in Quezon City.

It was the most applauded portion of the SONA, and the Chief Executive even got a standing ovation among the legislators for her short remark on the contentious charter change issue.

At the same time, Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo called on all sectors, including the political opposition and her critics, to join her administration in the overall efforts at nation-building.

“No one has a monopoly on right ideas. I am reaching out to all segments of society and all parties, be they with me or against me, to join me in those things that should be everyone’s concern because they rise above politics to the level of patriotism,” the President stressed.

Pressing her advocacy for conciliation, the President brushed aside the traditional “honeymoon period” afforded a newly installed government, saying she does not want such honeymoon after which the national welfare is set aside as bitter political rivalry resumes.

“I want a marriage not of convenience but of conviction, across the spectrum of parties and groups, encompassing the range of intelligent political, religious and economic views. I want a marriage for at least the life of this Congress,” the President stressed.

“I do not ask for unprincipled support because it will not hold. I do ask for an end to unprincipled obstructionism because that always succeeds in defeating our best efforts,” Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo added.

The President also warned agitators exploiting the poor and the victims of social injustice that the government would put an end to their practice.

Underscoring her agenda for reforms, the President said change becomes harder to accomplish with each administration failing to accomplish what it sought to do.

“The time for change is well past due. This time, let me say: Let’s just do it.”

GMA gets kudos for SONA message

Former President Fidel V. Ramos today hailed President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo’s call for unity in her State of the Nation Address (SONA), saying it is the only way to succeed in the intense global competition.

“As an ex-president, I support what President Macapagal-Arroyo has done in the case of Angelo de la Cruz. Tamang policy na yon (That policy is right). National interest should come first, including her call for unity and sacrifice. Let’s do it. Kaya natin ito (We can do it),” he said.

Newly elected Senator Manuel Roxas II and Surigao Congressman Prospero Pichay echoed Ramos’ observation.

Roxas, who topped the recent senatorial race with the biggest mandate in history, described the President’s SONA as “an outstanding performance.”

The President’s 35-minute speech was applauded 36 times.

“In basketball parlance, she hit a three-point shot. It was specific and fully explained. The President was successful in encouraging everyone to move the country forward. Ayaw niya ng plastikan. Gusto niya magtrabaho ang lahat ng sama sama (She doesn’t want pretensions. She wants everybody to work together),” he said.

By opening her speech with the successful resolution of the Angelo de la Cruz hostage crisis, Pichay said the President was successful in imparting that hers is a government that cares and the President is everybody’s friend.

“She was able to convey that her administration is ready to protect the interest of our overseas Filipino workers. The case of Angelo on the other hand united our nation. Once she was able to convey this, she appealed for self-sacrifice and sense of patriotism. With that achieved, people would be willing to pay their taxes. With that single appeal, I think there would be no need for tax measures,” Pichay said.

Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said that despite the decision of some opposition members to boycott the SONA held at the joint session of the 13th Congress at the Batasang Pambansa, the President would continue to extend her hand of unity and reconciliation.

He also said that after the SONA, the President would continue explaining her package of reforms for the next six years during the scheduled pulong bayans, or small town hall meetings in various parts of the country.

“It is important that our countrymen know what their government intends to do in the next six years,” Bunye said.

Businessman Raul Concepcion hailed the standing ovation the President got on two occasions during her speech – the first when she said that destabilization by those who urge the poor to rebel against the government must stop and the second when she asked Congress to work for a change in government. The President also got a standing ovation when she closed her speech by saying, “We can do it.”

“I’ve never seen such standing ovation. No other President has done this. The business sector for sure would cooperate. As she had said, those who have more will have to give more,” Concepcion said.

GMA calls for stronger Ombudsman

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today asked Congress to pass a law making the Ombudsman’s function as effective as Hong Kong’s Independent Commission Against Corruption (ICAC).

In her State of the Nation Address (SONA) before the joint session of the 13th Congress at the Batasang Pambansa this afternoon, the President stressed the need for such a measure, saying government incompetence like bureaucratic corruption, with its numerous leakages, is bad.

Unlike in the private sector, where the free market punishes mistakes, government incompetence punishes only the public,” the President said.

She stressed the need to tear away layers of inefficiency piled on by decades of political accommodation.

These, according to her, include redundancy in the national service, waste in local governments, and pointless procedures for getting done what isn’t needed to secure the public welfare.

“Just how does paying off the health inspector banish bacteria from a dirty kitchen?” the President asked rhetorically to emphasize public corruption.

The Chief Executive said her administration will simplify procedures to eliminate fixers.

GMA says budget deficit most urgent problem

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today identified budget deficit as the government's "most urgent problem."

In her State of the Nation Address (SONA) delivered at the joint session of the 13th Congress at the Batasang Pambansa in Quezon City, the President said solving the budget deficit could be tricky.

"Sometimes stamping out deficits too vigorously can slow down growth, but ignoring them can kill the economy. It sends the wrong signal that we don't understand our fiscal predicament and will not help ourselves. This will drive away investments, exacerbate the deficit and hurt job growth," the Chief Executive explained.

In her SONA, Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo also cited a litany of the adverse effects of fiscal shortfalls. She said the problem drastically reduces government's ability to undertake infrastructure investments needed to promote business growth and create jobs, as well as hamper the delivery of social services.

"This is a sure-fire formula for national failure," the President stressed.

To address budget deficits, President Macapagal-Arroyo said the government must strengthen its revenue collection, expand government services and, at the same time, indulge in cost cutting. "It boils down to right priorities," she added.

"The beauty of the fiscal problem is that all the solutions are known, though applying the right ones is tricky," the President noted.

She pointed out that all the solutions require toughness on the part of the government, cooperation on the part of business, patience on the part of the people and active support on the part of Congress.

The President earlier disclosed a set of proposed tax measures designed to raise government revenues by at least P80 billion and generate savings by more than P100 billion.

Addressing a gathering of business leaders in Makati City last week, Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo said the proposed tax measures were designed to maximize efficient utilization of resources, reduce costs, increase specific fees, charges and duty on petroleum products, as well as enhancing revenue-generation capabilities of government-owned or controlled corporations.

The proposed tax measures are:

- gross income tax system;
- repeal of the value added tax (VAT) and replacing it with a tax system that is simpler to administer, resulting in increased compliance;
- a tax on windfall telecom income;
- increased tax revenues on sin products and petroleum products;
- rationalization of fiscal incentives;
- use of targeted tax amnesty; and
- creation of a performance-driven system for revenue agencies.

We are confident that this new era of Philippine democracy will move our nation forward.

Statement of Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye: Principled Fiscalization

The President has emphasized that while she will not brook unprincipled obstructionism, she is keeping an open mind towards principled fiscalization.

We are confident that the opposition will respond positively by enriching the debate and not by pushing back the clock on reforms.

Statement of Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye: Pulse Asia Survey

The Cabinet is closely monitoring developments on a daily basis and taking the necessary administrative measures to provide relief to the public.

The President will tackle the fundamental reform agenda with Congress.

GMA expands scope of NAKTAF to include other crimes

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today ordered the expansion of the scope of the National Anti-Kidnapping Task Force (NAKTAF) so that it would now go after other crimes.

The President said that with the strong recommendation from the board of advisers composed of the business sector and law enforcement groups, the anti-kidnapping agency will now be known as National Anti-Crime Task Force, which will still be chaired by Interior and Local Government Secretary Angelo Reyes.

She made the announcement during the presentation to the media this morning of the Number 5 Most Wanted Kidnapper, Alexander Aldas, also known as "Ali," at the Presidential Security Group's Conference Room in Malacañang Park, Malacañang, Manila.

Aldas has a P1 million reward and is known to be one of the leaders of the notorious Waray-Waray kidnap-for-ransom gang. He was allegedly involved in the kidnap-slay of Betty Chua Sy, a Coca-Cola executive abducted and killed in Quezon City on Nov. 17, 2003.

At the presentation, the President commended Reyes and the other members of the NAKTAF, the Philippine National Police Intelligence Group, and other operative groups involved in the anti-kidnapping campaign for neutralizing 118 gang members and leaders in less than a year, "bringing kidnapping to an all-time low."

"Their teamwork has been excellent and they continue to make us proud," the President said.

She also lauded all kidnap victims who stood up against their kidnappers and filed appropriate charges against them, adding that they have shown their sense of duty and have greatly contributed to the success in the fight against kidnapping.

The President likewise assured the public that the criminal justice would be pursued to the fullest, all the way up to conviction. She also appealed for the continued support and vigilance of the citizenry "because the welfare of the nation rests upon the sense of duty of each and every citizen."

GMA signs 2 new laws aimed at stimulating private sector investments

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo signed into law today two important amended measures designed to support her administration's 10-point agenda that includes stimulating private sector investments in Philippine overseas shipping and providing greater protection to all 26 million bank depositors nationwide.

The newly enacted laws, passed by the 12th Congress, are Republic Act 9301, otherwise known as the Overseas Shipping Development Act, and RA 9302, which amends the Philippine Deposit Insurance Corporation (PDIC) Charter.

RA 9301, which revised certain provisions of RA 7471, is expected to enhance the competitiveness of the Philippine overseas merchant fleet in gaining better access to cargoes worldwide.

Its expansion will allow ship owners and operators to increase investments through the acquisition of ships, investments in overseas shipping, job generation not limited to the deployment of the Filipino seafarers on board Philippine flag-bearing ships and increased shipping activities through acquisition of additional Philippine-registered ships.

The law was a joint effort by Senator Ralph Recto, principal author and sponsor being the chairman of the Senate ways and means committee; Sen. Joker Arroyo, principal author and co-sponsor being the chairman of the public service committee; former senator now Vice President Noli de Castro, principal author, Senate President Franklin Drilon and Sen. Ramon Magsaysay Jr.

On the part of the House of Representatives, Speaker Jose de Venecia Jr., and Negros Occidental 1st District Rep. The enacted RA 9301 was based on the reconciled version of Senate Bill 2732 and House Bill 5770.

The other newly-enacted law, RA 9302, is meant to provide greater protection to all 26 million depositors nationwide through an increase in the maximum deposit insurance coverage (MDIC) from P100,000 to P250,000.

The law will now provide full protection to some 96 percent of deposit accounts amounting to P739 billion as compared to 91 percent or P463 billion under the previous ceiling of P100,000.

SONA report: Agriculture sector posted 8.2% growth in 1st quarter of 2004

The agriculture sector posted a phenomenal growth of 8.2 percent in the first quarter of 2004, the highest recorded in 15 years.

This was contained in a Technical Report on the State of the Nation Address (SONA), which also revealed that growth in agriculture soared to an annual average of 4 percent in gross value added (GVA) in the first three years of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's administration, attaining the highest output in 2002 with an increase of 4.6 percent.

Government efforts to modernize agriculture created 1.87 million jobs in agriculture, fishery and forestry sector (893,000 jobs) and agricultural services sector (978,000 jobs) from January 2001 to January 2004.

It also implemented the Agriculture and Fisheries Modernization Act (AFMA) by utilizing P83.15 billion in three-and-a-half years for irrigation, post-harvest facilities and other infrastructure, credit, marketing assistance, research and development, capability building, national information network and salary supplement.

On March 20 this year, President Macapagal-Arroyo signed into law Republic Act 9281, which extended the effectivity of duty-free incentives on agricultural inputs, equipment and machinery, and provided for continuous funding support for AFMA until 2015.

To ensure food security, the government increased production of basic agricultural commodities with the average annual production of rice reaching 13.2 metric tons from 2001 to 2003.

The sugar industry has also achieved self-sufficiency since 2003 and will soon export the product to prevent the sudden plunge of sugar's farm-gate prices that will spell losses, instead of gains to sugar planters and workers.

As a showcase of the administration's peace and development efforts in Mindanao, the Mal-Mar Irrigation Project in Maguindanao and North Cotabato was completed and inaugurated in Sept. 2001.

Rice security was enhanced by opening up the industry to importation, when deemed necessary, while at the same time strengthening government support to farmers to increase farm productivity and incomes through modern farming technologies.

As part of its efforts to improve delivery of agricultural goods and services and enhance farmers' welfare, the Macapagal-Arroyo administration mobilized 1,500 rolling stores in 2002, of which 1,207 units were converted into stationary stores (Tindahan ni Gloria Labandera Sa Barangay) to better serve the depressed area constituents on a round-the-clock basis and to curb the diversion of National Food Authority (NFA) rice into commercial channels.

Congress leaders support GMA's pro-poor package

Leaders of Congress today expressed full support for President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's "pro-poor package" enunciated in her State of the Nation Address (SONA) and presented to the Legislative-Executive Development Advisory Council (LEDAC) meeting at Malacañang.

In her opening remarks at the LEDAC meeting, the President said Vice President Noli de Castro, acting as alternate chairman of the National Anti-Poverty Commission (NAPC), would oversee implementation of the "social justice and basic needs" component of the "five key reform packages" elaborated in her SONA.

The four other packages are job creation through economic growth, anti-corruption through good government, education and youth opportunity, and energy independence and savings.

During the LEDAC meeting, the first of such conference under her new administration, the Chief Executive presented the conceptual framework of the NAPC consisting of livelihood, asset reform, essential services, protection of the vulnerable and empowerment of the poor.

"To put social justice character to job creation, we have to make sure that we promote micro-finance and agri-business," Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo said. In her inaugural address, the President unveiled her vision of creating three million entrepreneurs through micro-financing and the conversion of two million hectares of land into agri-business hub.

The President said “asset reform” involves three areas of land reform—agrarian, urban and ancestral. “We need to move to the new land reform which is to make farms qualified as collateral,” she told the LEDAC members.

Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo also revealed that she has commissioned Hernando de Soto, head of the Peruvian Institute for Liberty and Democracy, to study the complexity of the urban land situation in the Philippines, as well as the various land documents being used as negotiable instruments.

“The idea is to bring them out from the underground so that they will be officially recognized,” the President said.

The President identified water, power and low-cost medicines as the “most essential (government) services.

The President said there are 200 towns nationwide that still have no supply of potable water. “These will be your specific targets,” she told the LEDAC.

The President also said there are only 4,500 barangays without electricity.

“For low-cost medicines, we want the most essential medicines bought by the poor to be at half the price they were in 2001,” President Macapagal-Arroyo said.

The President identified the vulnerable sector as the children, orphans, out of school youth, battered housewives, the prostitutes and disabled persons.

She noted that De Castro, being the author of the latest law on older persons, qualifies for the job on social justice and basic needs..

On the issue of empowerment, the President said it calls for political participation of the poor.

The Chief Executive also announced that she would institutionalize consultation with the people by creating the Office of the Constituencies as a government arm to know and feel the concerns of the community.

In her opening remarks, the President welcomed the legislators — Senate President Drilon, Senator Aquilino “Nene” Pimentel, Senators Juan Flavio Velasco, Francisco Pangilinan, Ralph Recto, Speaker Jose de Venecia, Jr. and other leaders of the House who attended the meeting.

The President invited them to five LEDAC meetings, corresponding to the five packages, to be held every Tuesday.

The legal counsel of the President will await service of summons and will file an answer within the time required by the Presidential Electoral Tribunal.

We are confident that we stand on solid legal ground.

NAPC cites 3 measures to realize GMA’s pro-poor agenda

National Anti-Poverty Commission (NAPC) Lead Convenor Veronica Villavicencio today said the government would push for the passage of three key legislative measures that are considered very essential in moving forward the pro-poor agenda of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo.

Villavicencio bared this in a media briefing this afternoon after coming out of the Legislative-Executive Development Advisory Council (LEDAC) meeting presided by the President at the State Dining Room in Malacañang.

Villavicencio said the three legislations presented to the President by National Economic and Development Authority (NEDA) Director General Romulo Neri were the Agricultural Lands Collateral Act, National Land Use Policy Act, and the Land Administration Reform Act.

Villavicencio said the Agricultural Lands Collateral Act would only be re-filed and considered as priority legislation as it already passed the committees of both Houses during the 12th Congress.

She said this Act would provide farmers with access to credit such as the use of the Certificate of Land Ownership Award (CLOA) given under the land reform program as collaterals for borrowings or loans from government financing institutions (GFIs).

She said farmers could use these loans for improvements in farming and facilities to enhance their production and marketing.

Villavicencio said the National Land Use Policy Act, on the other hand, would provide guidelines in rationalizing land use, particularly for agriculture, ecological protection, and development of agri-business ventures.

Villavicencio said the Land Administration Reform Act, which was also filed in the previous Congress, is a landmark Act that provides the rationalization of land administration and surveying so that the different agencies tasked in the registration of lands, mapping, and surveying would be consolidated under one roof.

She said this office would be transparent and come up with firm guidelines in redefining land titling activities and transactions such as in land valuation.

She said this would also reinforce the agrarian reform program of government by giving security of land tenure, especially to the poor and the indigenious.

Villavicencio said Senate Minority leader Sen. Aquilino Pimentel is supporting the President's pro-poor programs.

"He (Pimentel) stated explicitly that the pro-poor programs are supported by all members of Congress. In fact, he has very constructive suggestions," she said.

Villavicencio said Senate President Franklin Drilon is also committed to the passage of the Agricultural Lands Collateral Act.

Statement of the President: Investments in the future

We must look at new tax measures as an investment in the future, in the five reform packages that will bring social and economic benefits to the country and a better life to the average Filipino family.

We must bear a short term pain for a long term gain, brought together in the spirit of sacrifice for the common good and the generations to come.

This is not a one-way burden and government will take the same measure, and even more, of the sacrifices asked of the people.

We are now cutting waste, going after the tax cheats and weeding out the corrupt.

Statement of the President: Critical collaboration

We welcome critical collaboration and principled fiscalization.

Democracy needs an opposition that derives its legitimacy from discovering the best solutions and getting things done.

We will fight unprincipled obstructionism because we have to clear the way for reforms to take place quickly.

I am confident the opposition appreciates the exigencies involved and we are ready to work with them across the table.

Statement of Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye: Lean and mean bureaucracy

We are eliminating the layers of bureaucracy and the multiplicity of advisory posts.

The President wants straightforward work done along the simplest command line.

This should result in greater cost and work efficiency.

Six-year plan on anti-terrorism bared

The Task Force for the Security of Critical Infrastructures (TFSCI) under the Cabinet Oversight Committee on Internal Security (COC-IS), headed by Undersecretary Abraham Purugganan, would present the National Critical Infrastructure Protection Plan (NCIPP) to President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo later this week.

The plan in a statement, Purugganan said the plan would enhance domestic preparedness against terrorism by instituting capacity-building in the government and private sectors, and pursuing the strategy of shared responsibility in the government and private sectors and the citizenry.

In the past critical infrastructures were the main targets for terrorist attacks. Some recent examples were the hacking of the PLDT server system, takeover of the NAIA Control Tower, LRT Rizal Day bombing, attacks on NAPOCOR power plants and transmission lines and Globe cell sites.

The NCIPP is a manifestation of the President's continuing commitment to anti-terrorism. It is a timely response to the changing national security environment requiring the active participation of the private sector and the citizenry in securing our critical establishments," Purugganan said.

Among the major initiatives identified for the next six years are the set of instructions for government agencies tasked with protecting the critical infrastructures in their jurisdiction, awareness-building of the citizenry, and the proposed creation of the Office for Critical Infrastructure Protection (OCIP) whose function will be that of a program manager; assisting the agencies in the implementation of programs.

Critical infrastructures (CI) as defined in the plan are "the underlying institutions and facilities essential for the normal functioning of the society, the economy and the government. What defines 'critical' is the indispensability of the facility to the country as a whole, to the local population, to the economy, or to the moral of the people."

The twelve key factors identified in the plan are food and agriculture, transportation, information and communication, water, energy, health, emergency response services, government, manufacturing, banking and finance, strategic commercial centers, and cultural and religious sites and facilities.

A product of many months of consultation with the government and private sector stakeholders, the NCIPP was formulated based on several assumptions. First is that any form of hazard or attack on CI's will disrupt the government and the economy. Secondly, the disruption or destruction of a single infrastructure asset can have a cascading effect. And lastly, the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) and other law enforcement agencies cannot sufficient cover the large number of CI's in the country.

While the task force recognizes that much work remains to be done in order to update, validate and fill-in the gaps in the NCIPP, Purugganan said that the NCIPP represents a milestones in defining a concrete domestic preparedness framework that is responsive to the changing security environment.

The Task Force for the Security of Critical Infrastructure was created last September 24, 2003 by the President under the Cabinet Oversight Committee on Internal Security (COC-IS) to ensure the protection of critical infrastructures.

SONA report cites sustained economic growth in GMA's 3-year rule

The administration of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has pushed for an improved macroeconomic growth performance that sustained economic growth in the last three years.

The technical report of the President's State of the Nation Address (SONA) noted that from 2001 to 2003, the gross domestic product (GDP) increased from three percent to 4.7 percent while the gross national product (GNP) grew from 3.5 percent to 5.6 percent.

In the first quarter of 2004, the GDP grew by to 6.4 percent from 4.8 percent in the same quarter last year while GNP increased by 6.2 percent from 4.6 percent.

This is the highest quarterly growth posted by the economy since the fourth quarter of 1989. The Philippine economy even outperformed the economies of Indonesia, Taiwan, Hong Kong, South Korea and Singapore last year.

The economy also maintained slower increases in the prices of goods and services. Government gradually reduced and maintained inflation at single digit levels from 6.1 percent in 2001 to 3.1 percent in 2002 and 2003.

The economy also maintained interest rates at single digit levels. Interest rates based on the 91-day Treasury bills, used by banks and other lending institutions as a benchmark for lending rates, declined from 9.87 percent in 2001 to 6.03 percent in 2003.

For the first six months of 2004, interest rates averaged 7.02 percent. The lower interest rate regime makes credit and loans more affordable and supports economic growth.

The economy also maintained a generally stable peso-dollar exchange rate.

The government effectively contained the fiscal deficit. In 2001, the deficit exceeded the P145 billion ceiling and grew to P147.02 billion in view of the problems inherited from the previous administration.

However, the government was able to contain the 2002 deficit to P210.74 billion, well within the ceiling, and further lowered it to P199.99 billion in 2003. The deficit in 2003 was 4.6 percent of GDP, which is lower than the 5.3 percent of GDP in 2002.

For the first five months of 2004, the deficit stood at P77.4 billion, which is still below the first semester target of P79.58 billion. By focusing on fiscal discipline and pursuing good governance, the country expects to stay below its P197.8 billion deficit ceiling for 2004.

Revenue collections exhibited increasing trends on a year-on-year basis. Total revenues increased from P563.7 billion in 2001 to P626.6 billion in 2003. The sustained growth in collections is attributed to the continuing recovery of the economy and the improving collection efforts. As almost all agencies remitted higher collections in 2004, total revenues from January to May grew by 12.5 percent to P288.8 billion from P256.7 billion registered over the same period in 2003.

Meanwhile, total approved foreign direct investments expanded to P115.4 billion in the first quarter of 2004 from P6.3 billion in the same quarter in 2003, the highest quarterly foreign direct investment turnout since the third quarter of 1997. This was brought by the huge venture in the power sector and the upbeat prospects in the information and communications technology industry.

Initiatives in the motor vehicle sector likewise generated substantial investments from Ford Motor Company ($50 million) and paved the way for Mitsubishi Motors Corp. to choose the Philippines as its ASEAN production base for its new SUV model. The Mitsubishi project entails P10 billion investments and production of 200,000 units for export in the next six to seven years.

Continued growth in exports were registered despite the weakness of the international markets in the previous years. Exports grew by 11.2 percent from $32.15 billion in 2001 to $35.75 billion in 2003, despite the terror attacks, weakening of the Japanese and US markets, and the spread of the severe acute respiratory syndrome (SARS). Further improvement is expected this year as exports grew by 8.6 percent to $15.42 billion in the first five months, from $14.2 billion during the same period last year, led by the electronic, apparel and clothing accessories sectors.

The administration also pursued the development of the small and medium enterprise with the approval in 2002 of the National Small and medium Enterprises Development Agenda, the country's roadmap for SMEs, which seeks to create a relevant SME sector that would provide stronger domestic supply base for globally competitive industries.

In the last three years, the government was able to maintain industrial peace in 21 years with only 117 strikes recorded from 2001 to 2003, or an average of 39 strikes per year.

The government was also able to enhance domestic and international tourism promotion. Visitor arrivals to the Philippines increased from 1,796,893 in 2001 to 1,932,677 in 2002.

Despite the SARS outbreak, the Gulf war and threat of terrorism in pocket areas, tourist arrivals in 2003 reached 1,907,226. Except for 2003, tourism receipts showed a rising trend from $1.72 billion in 2001 to $1.74 billion in 2002.

From January to May 2004, tourist arrivals reached 954,473, up 36 percent from the same period last year, translating into $609.47 million tourism receipts.

GMA to directly consult people through pulong bayan — Palace

As a corollary to the Legislative-Executive Development Advisory Council (LEDAC) meetings on the five economic reform packages President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo presented in her State of the Nation Address (SONA), she will also hold pulong bayans or town hall meetings with the people to keep them informed.

It will be a LEDAC meeting on one of her reform packages then a pulong bayan by the President so that she can directly explain to the people her measures and their implications, Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said today.

The first pulong bayan after her SONA was held this morning in Barangay Don Bosco, Parañaque City.

It is important for the President to explain her programs to as wide a sector of society so they will understand the direction of government, Bunye said. This way it will be easier to get their cooperation in pushing through the programs of the President, he added.

Yesterday, the President designated Vice President Noli de Castro to take charge of the social justice and basic needs package.

GMA interacts with Parañaque barangay residents in first post-election pulong-bayan

In line with the administration's commitment to serve the people and continue its pro-poor program, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today launched the first of her new pulong bayan sorties in barangay Don Bosco in Parañaque City.

The President arrived at Don Bosco Park in Better Living Subdivision in Parañaque City 15-minutes early from the original 10:00 a.m. schedule.

In her impromptu speech before the actual pulong bayan, the President informed the 2,500 residents gathered inside the covered basketball court that the pulong bayan is the fulfillment of her promise during the election campaign to personally interact with the people and inform them about the government's plans for the welfare of the Filipino people in the next six years.

The President was assisted by Vice President Noli De Castro, the new alternate head of the National Anti-Poverty Commission, in the one-on-one interaction with Parañaque City residents.

She recalled that during the campaign she promised the Filipino people she would create six to 10 million jobs in the next six years, provide clean and potable water and cheap electricity in every barangay in the country, health insurance to all poor, quality education and school buildings in every barangay and food for every Filipino.

In the forum, the President personally urged a jobless lady named Rose, seamstress and a resident of Barangay San Antonio, to organize at least five of her fellow seamstresses and submit their names to Mel Alonzo of the SB Corporation.

She said the SB Corporation would provide them a micro-finance loan for their planned small business for them to be included in the self-employment assistance program of the government.

The President also ordered the Department of Social Welfare and Development-National Capital Region and Parañaque City Social Service workers to supervise the group of Rose.

The President also assured the residents of Barangay Don Bosco that in three months time, their long-time problem on potable water would be solved after Maynilad promised to give priority to the area.

She told them that with the successful implementation of the PhilHealth Card in Parañaque, she will now concentrate on setting up more Botika ng Barangay which sells branded medicines at half price.

According to Mayor Jun Bernabe, there is only one Botika ng Barangay in Parañaque now. The President wants more in Don Bosco, San Antonio and other barangays.

The visit of the President here provided more positive results for the residents. The management of SM Shopping Mall in Bicutan promised to build a pedestrian overpass along the Bicutan interchange all the way to Soledad Street in exchange for a tax credit from the city government.

Metro Manila Development Authority (MMDA) Chairman Bayani Fernando also informed the residents that Parañaque and Taguig have agreed to help each other in solving the traffic congestion at the Sucat and Bicutan interchanges.

Vice President Noli De Castro, Press Secretary Milton Alingod, Health Secretary Dayrit, Interior and Local Government Secretary Angelo Reyes, Public Works Secretary Florante Soriquez, Deputy Presidential Spokesman and Cabinet Secretary Ricardo Saludo, MMDA chairman Fernando accompanied the President in her visit.

GMA greets INC on its 90th anniversary

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today congratulated the Iglesia ni Cristo on its 90th anniversary, which it celebrated yesterday, saying it has remained strong as an institution over the years.

In her message aired over the INC's radio station DZEC, the President thanked the Iglesia ni Cristo for its support and vowed to do her best to live up to its expectations.

“Maraming salamat sa inyong suporta sa akin at asahan ninyo na hindi kayo magsisisi (Thank you for your support and rest assured that you will not regret it),” the President said.

The INC supported the President in the May 10 polls.

“Gagamitin ko ang lahat ng aking kaalaman, lakas at kakayanan upang umunlad at maging mapayapa ang ating bayan (I will use all my knowledge, strength and power to make our country progressive and peaceful),” she said.

She reiterated her State of the Nation Address (SONA) vow that she would put people first in her list of priorities and implement good governance.

“Ito ay kaunlaran na magtataguyod ng mamamayan muna. Sisikapin kong tuparin ang nais ninyong matapat na pamamahala at malinis na pamahalaan (This is progress that would put the interest of the citizens first. I vow to implement good governance),” the President said.

She then urged the Iglesia ni Cristo to help her attain her vision for the country.

Palace to extend assistance to Gracia Burnham

Malacañang will extend all assistance and protection to former Abu Sayyaf Group (ASG) hostage Gracia Burnham during her stay here to testify against her abductors, Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said in his regular press briefing this afternoon at Malacañang.

Bunye added that the government is confident the Department of Justice (DOJ) will get down to the bottom of the case and prosecute all involved in the Dos Palmas kidnapping incident in May 27, 2001.

Burnham, an American missionary, is scheduled to testify in the hearing tomorrow on the Dos Palmas kidnapping in Palawan on her harrowing ordeal in the hands of her abductors which she wrote in her book “In the Presence of My Enemies,” which was published in May 2003.

Seventeen Filipino tourists were also abducted with Burnham and husband Martin who was later killed.

Burnham arrived at the Ninoy Aquino International Airport Monday night aboard a Continental Airlines flight. She was accompanied by agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

GMA restates responsible parenthood as her population policy

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said that her stand on responsible parenthood and birth spacing is based on the Constitution but stressed that the method of attaining this would depend on the beliefs, culture and religion of the parents themselves.

In an interview with radio DZEC of the Iglesia ni Cristo, the President said she did not mention anything about population control in her State of the Nation Address (SONA) because the speech would have been too long.

“Hindi naman puwedeng mailagay sa SONA ang lahat ng aking patakaran at hindi tayo matatapos sa ating diskurso (we cannot put every policy in the SONA or we will not finish our speech),” she explained.

The President said it has always been her policy to follow what is stated in the Constitution about responsible parenthood.

Under the policy, parents are responsible for spacing their children and are left with the discretion on how to attain such according to their belief, religion and culture.

The President also said that some 1,000 barangays are lined up for electrification for the rest of the year in line with her 10-point agenda, one of which is to provide power to all the barangays by year 2008.

Some 3,500 barangays are still up for electrification. The President vowed to provide power to 1,500 barangays every year under the basic services package she expounded in her SONA last Monday.

“Hindi lahat attainable sa first two years. Mayroong timetable bawa’t isa (Not everything is attainable in the first two years. There is a timetable for each program),” she explained.

Aside from providing electricity, the government is set to construct 3,000 school buildings this year, according to the President, as part of her vision of constructing 18,000 school buildings or 36,000 classrooms to close the classroom gap for the next six years.

“Itong 3,000 school buildings at ang 1,000 barangays na malalagyan ng koryente mayroon nang pondo, pero marami sa mga programa malaking kailangang dagdag na salapi ng pamahalaan (There is a fund already for the electrification and the 3,000 school buildings but majority of the programs still need a lot of funding),” she explained.

The President said that there is an urgent need for the government to cut borrowing to be able to attain a balanced budget by 2010 as what she had espoused in her pre-inaugural address last June 30.

“Kaya marami sa gagawin natin ngayon ay babayaran ang utang at hindi lang interes, (That’s why it is important that we pay our debts not only the interests),” she explained.

GMA shifts to high gear her urban land reform program

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today shifted to high gear her urban land reform program by ordering appropriate government agencies to speed up the survey, titling and distribution of lots being occupied by informal settlers in Parañaque City.

The President issued the order during a “pulong-bayan” or multi-sectoral dialogue in Parañaque where she personally heard the concerns of masses as represented by local residents.

Parañaque Rep. Eduardo Zialcita revealed that President Macapagal-Arroyo has already proclaimed a number of communities in the city as “urban land reform” areas. Among them are the sitios of Nais, Maligaya, San Juan, Sta. Rita and Puyat Compound.

Zialcita said residents of these areas have been waiting for more than 50 years for an opportunity to own the lots they occupy.

President Macapagal-Arroyo said apart from the chance of owning the lots, the settlers may also use the lot titles as collateral for loans they could use to set up small businesses under the government’s micro-financing scheme under the Community Mortgage Program.

The President also cited the Gawad Kalinga, a non-government organization engaged in providing decent shelter to the underprivileged sectors of society. She said the government would fully support Gawad Kalinga’s flagship project dubbed “777,” representing 700,000 houses for 7,000 communities in seven years.

The Chief Executive pointed out that “777” was launched last year, hence it would coincidentally bow out of existence in 2010 when her six-year term expires.

Other officials present at the “pulong bayan” were Vice President Noli de Castro, Parañaque Rep. Roilo Golez, Press Secretary Milton Alingod Deputy Presidential Spokesman Ricardo Saludo and Parañaque Mayor Florencio Bernabe, Jr.

Palace lists down abolished offices under the Office of the President

A total of P337.92 million has been saved by the government in the abolition of 102 agencies under the Office of the President since 2002.

Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said in his regular briefing in Malacañang this afternoon that the list does not include the 30 agencies mentioned by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo in her State-of-the-Nation Address (SONA) last Monday.

Bunye said various committees, task forces, and committees under the Office of the President were also transferred to the supervision of the different government line agencies since 2002.

Among these were the 77 agencies abolished under Executive Order 72 dated February 2002.

Statement of the President: Call for Sacrifice

We acknowledge the need for quick financial fuel as well as longer term financial stability.

The quick fuel will be provided by cost-cutting measures, organizational streamlining, going after tax cheats and fighting corruption.

Government will take the brunt of administrative reforms first even before asking the public to take more pain in terms of more taxes for future gains in terms of more jobs and better services.

We are proving to the people that ourselves are worthy of the sacrifices we ask for, and we are confident that Congress will do their share.

This whole nation must do it and every Filipino must be involved.

Statement of the President: Responsible Parenthood

We stand by responsible parenthood, enlightened birth spacing, and free choice.

We have a moral stake in this but we respect the wisdom of Congress and the views of our local leaders.

My priority now is not to deal with overpopulation to overcome the challenges we face in social justice and economic development, but to go directly to the social and macroeconomic issues that strike at the root of these challenges.

I am open to debates on the population issue but I appeal for an agenda of priorities that will deal with foremost issues first, as constrained in my SONA.

Giant multinational drug firm pledges support for GMA's health care program

A giant multinational company has pledged support for President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's health sector agenda, especially in reducing the price of essential medicine for the poor.

In a letter to the President, GlaxoSmithKline's Pharmaceuticals International Chief Executive Officer (CEO) Russel Greig noted the Philippines' adherence to democratic ideals and the President's new presidential mandate.

"Following your Excellency's victory, we renew our pledge to continue working with your administration on various social responsibility initiatives which we have started under your auspicious leadership. These include working with government to provide health insurance to indigents," Greig said.

Greig also assured Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo that in the next six years, GlaxoSmithKline would align its corporate social responsibility projects with the President's vision for health care to serve a broader base of the population.

"In particular, we will double our efforts to eliminate disabling and life-threatening disease in the Philippines' rural areas, such as lymphatic filariasis and tuberculosis."

Last January, Greig called on the President to present the company's VALUE Health program which reduces the price of its essential medicines by as much as 34 percent to give more Filipinos better access to health care.

In the last two years, GlaxoSmithKline led a private sector initiative in partnership with PhilHealth to provide free health insurance or "Pinoy Health Pass" to more than 10,000 indigent families. The employees of GlaxoSmithKline earlier volunteered to donate part of their salary to enroll an indigent family to the project.

The priority programs of the President for the poor are the creation of jobs, livelihood, education, health care, essential services, and electricity.

GMA creates Office of Presidential Adviser for Jobs Generation

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has created an Office of the Presidential Adviser for Jobs Generation (OPAJG) tasked to ensure the efficient and successful implementation of her jobs generation program seeking to provide six million jobs over the next six years as enunciated in her inaugural address.

Under Executive Order 333 issued last July 19, the OPAJG is tasked to "coordinate the effective and timely implementation of the government's roadmap for jobs generation."

The Chief Executive has appointed outgoing Agriculture Secretary Luis Lorenzo as her Presidential Adviser for Jobs Generation. Lorenzo will have the rank and emoluments of a Cabinet secretary.

As defined by EO 333, one of Lorenzo's function is to advise the President on the programs, policies and projects to ensure the full realization of her vision to create six to 10 million jobs until 2010.

Lorenzo will likewise oversee the packaging of credit facilities, guarantee programs and other financial assistance packages for small farmers and fisherfolks, small and medium enterprises, micro-business enterprises and other small entrepreneurs.

He is also authorized to oversee other government agencies and government financial institutions, including the Land Bank of the Philippines and the Quedan Rural Credit Guarantee Corp., and private-sector resources to support the overall job generation program.

SONA report cites positive effects of power sector reform law

The government has ensured fair and reasonable energy prices for everyone with its implementation of the power sector reform law.

According to the technical report of the State of the Nation Address of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, the law provided large industrial commercial end-users with 50-centavo per KWH discount on incremental electricity consumption through the Special Program to Enhance Electricity Demand (SPEED).

Almost P237 million in total discounts were given on 512 million KWH in incremental consumption in 2003 and from January to May 2004, said the report.

The report also noted the additional 10-centavo per KWH discount to the actual monthly energy consumption of all large energy consumers availing of the SPEED program under the Transco Transmission Incentive Program.

It further noted that the Energy Regulatory Commission (ERC) also authorized Meralco SPEED discount of P0.12/KWH for incremental consumption of large electricity end-users to take effect until WESM implementation or when there is no available National Power Corp. unutilized generating capacity in Luzon Grid, whichever comes first.

The government has promulgated the rules of the Wholesale Electricity Spot Market (WESM) where trading of electricity will take place to give consumers the power to choose the cheapest and most reliable electricity suppliers. The WESM rules set the responsibilities of the market operator, system operator, WESM participants and the Philippine Electricity Market Board. WESM market management prototype started operations on May 28 2004.

It also concluded negotiations on 20 of the 35 independent power producers (IPP) contracts with expected savings of up to $2.95 billion in nominal terms of $1.036 billion in discounted present value.

The government also implemented a restructuring program for electric cooperatives to improve their performance and efficiency, which reduced systems losses from 16.81 percent to 15.82 percent on the average, translating to additional revenues of P265 million.

The government also granted, through the ERC, provisional authority to 118 electrical cooperatives to reduce existing rates, ranging from 12 to 76 centavos per kilowatt-hour. Average rate reduction in Luzon is 21 centavos per kwh; in Visayas, 16 centavos; and in Mindanao, 23 centavos. Total savings based on average annual sales of the electric cooperatives is P900 million per year.

It has also launched a natural gas vehicle program for public transport in October 2002, outlining the government policies and strategies in developing the commercial use of natural gas to make public transportation less vulnerable to volatility of world oil prices. Among the initiatives to bring down fuel cost for public transport through the use of natural gas are: enhancement of incentive packages for investment in natural gas and grant of franchises for three natural gas bus fleets (one for Batangas-Bicol route and two for Batangas-Manila route).

On providing stable and secure energy supply, the government increased the use of indigenous natural gas resulting in an 8 percent increase in energy self-sufficiency level from 45 percent in 2001 to 53 percent in 2003.

It also formulated a 10-year Philippine Energy Plan (2004-2013) that embodies the government's commitment to institute reforms in the power sector through, among others, the diversification of energy sources.

The government commissioned new power generating plants, such as the use of the idle 850 Megawatt Sucat facility and maximizing the potential for natural gas pipeline; setting up of a new 250 to 400 Megawatt baseload power plant in Luzon to be commissioned in January 2008; setting up of a new 200 Megawatt baseload power plant in Visayas which will be commissioned by May 2008, and operation of the 200 Megawatt Mindanao Coal Power Plant Project by 2006.

It also updated the Oil Contingency Plan to include emergency procedures for ascertaining the security and stability of oil supply, including tapping non-traditional oil suppliers such as Russia and pursuing the development of indigenous oil sources, particularly natural gas, by enhancing incentive packages for investments on this product.

Palace backs DFA response to Australian rebuke on RP

The government used the proper way to tell the world it is not taking the rebukes from Australian high-ranking officials on the pullout from Iraq sitting down, Malacañang said today.

“We have our own decision on this matter and we took into consideration first the safety of our countrymen, especially overseas Filipino workers (OFWs),” Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said this morning in a radio interview.

Bunye believes, however, that the good relationship between the Philippines and Australia will remain.

“On the whole, I think our good relationships with Australia will remain. Our countries will continue to cooperate with each other,” Bunye said.

President Gloria Macapagal Arroyo believes that on a long term basis, our relationships will stay because we have a long-standing partnership and this temporary misunderstanding will be resolved, Bunye added.

Bunye was commenting on the diplomatic protest the Department of Foreign Affairs (DFA) lodged with Australian Ambassador Ruth Pearce because of harsh statements made by Australian Foreign Minister Alexander Downer on the Philippine pullout from Iraq, which was later backed by Prime Minister John Howard.

“I conveyed the fact that we strongly object to the broad characterizations made by these officials in these statements, particularly those that question the resolve of the Philippines to fight terrorism,” Foreign Affairs Secretary Delia Albert said after a closed-door meeting with Pearce Wednesday.

Palace to institutionalize ‘pulong bayans’

A positive response to the maiden post-election “pulong bayan” in Parañaque City yesterday has prompted Malacañang to continue holding the small townhall meetings and explain to the masses the government’s 10-point agenda.

Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said in his regular press briefing today that President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo was encouraged by the warm response of the public to the “pulong bayan” she held with Vice President Noli de Castro at the Don Bosco Park in Better Living, Parañaque City.

“The President felt very positive on the outcome of the first pulong bayan,” Bunye said. “As you very well know, she has done this before together with the Vice President and they just intend to continue on with this practice. They have found the pulong bayan as very effective mechanism for dealing directly or communicating directly with the public.”

The Palace Spokesman assured the public that the future holding of pulong bayan would have bigger representation as compared to the previous gatherings.

Bunye said the President’s vision for the country in the next six years which she outlined in her State of the Nation Address (SONA) last Monday will be tackled in future pulong bayans.

These are the job creation and economic growth package, anti-corruption and good governance package, social justice and basic needs package, education improvement and youth opportunity package and the energy independence and savings package.

“As far as the venue is concerned, this is flexible. The important things is, the President will try to meet as many of our people in various geographic locations as possible. But the idea is in each pulong bayan, the subject will be one of the basic legislative and executive reform packages mentioned by the President during her SONA,” he said.

A new office, the Malacañang Office for Constituency Affairs has been created by Malacañang to oversee the holding of the “pulong bayans,” according to Bunye.

- Palace announces transfer of 4 OP offices to line departments
- GMA lauds PDEA for success in anti-drug campaign
- CCI hails GMA's creation of OPAJG

Statement of the President: Gracia Burnham

I admire Gracia Burnham's courage and faith and her determination to bring terrorists to justice.

The trial of the Abu Sayyaf who abducted her and her husband is living proof of our determined fight against terror in partnership with all nations and peoples.

Her testimony also upholds the integrity and uncommon valor of our Armed Forces, and I thank her for her concern for our people's peace and security.

Statement of Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye: Standard and Poor's Peso Rating

It should be noted that Standard and Poor's has maintained our long term foreign currency rating while slightly lowering our local currency rating.

Despite our relatively strong economic fundamentals, this is a signal for us to act quickly and decisively to put our fiscal house in order, which is being done.

The President has already spelled out the steps we have to take and the pains we have to endure for long term economic stability.

Standard and Poor's has acknowledged that following the election, the President is in a position to move boldly on reforms, and that is what she is doing.

SONA report cites gains in anti-crime drive, peace efforts

Various reforms in the country's police and military institutions have resulted in creating a climate that is conducive to investment and crucial to the realization of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's 10-point agenda of governance.

A technical report on the State of the Nation Address (SONA) showed that the creation of the Police Anti-Crime Emergency Response (PACER) and the National Anti-Kidnapping Task Force (NAKTAF) has resulted in the neutralization of most wanted kidnap-for-ransom (KFR) groups in the country.

Among those apprehended were the mastermind and others involved in the Betty Sy case, Abu Sayyaf leader Galib Andang (Commander Robot) and Abu Sabaya, four members of the Abu Sofia group and Nurodjinn Salik, the leader of the Kalong Pened KFR group.

The arrests of these masterminds and their cohorts resulted in the neutralization of 15 of the targeted 20 priority KFR groups in the country while rendering the remaining five groups inactive.

Republic Act No. 9165, the Comprehensive Dangerous Drugs Act of 2002, created the Philippine Drug Enforcement Agency (PDEA) to strengthen the anti-drugs campaign.

Intensified drug operations resulted in the neutralization of eight international and 191 local drug syndicates, and clearing about 5,140 out of the 8,163 drug-affected barangays in the country.

These also led to the arrest of 100,733 financiers, big and small-time drug users and pushers, and the seizure of P35.56 billion worth of illegal drugs and essential chemicals.

The dismantling of 37 shabu laboratories and warehouses, including the largest shabu factory in Antipolo which yielded P2.2 billion worth of illegal drugs, cut the supply of illegal drugs as shown by the increase in shabu price from P800 per gram to between P3,000 to P5,000.

Efforts to eliminate illegal gambling were intensified by Republic Act No. 9287 which increased the penalties for illegal numbers game (jueteng) and defined the responsibilities of local chief executives and police directors in the campaign.

This resulted in the arrest of 88,331 bettors, collectors and “cabos,” the neutralization of 380 financiers, confiscation of P31.2 million cash bets and gambling paraphernalia, and the filing of 31,051 criminal cases against known gambling lords, jueteng financiers and bettors before various courts.

Crime incidents were also reduced by 15.6 percent and a monthly average of 87.3 percent street crime solution efficiency rating was achieved from April 2003 to March this year.

Intensified operations by the Philippine National Police (PNP) and the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) also decreased by 27 percent the strength of the Communist Party of the Philippines-New People’s Army (CPP-NPA) from 11,930 in 2001 to 8,763 in March 2004.

The threats posed by international terrorist groups were also reduced through intelligence gathering and cooperation with our partners in the Association of South East Asian Nations (ASEAN), resulting in the neutralization of Jemaah Islamiyah operative Fathur Rohman Al-Ghozi in Sulu and the arrest of wanted terrorist Taufiq Rifqui.

All these were attributed to the enhancement of police and military welfare and capability, including the allocation of P10.8 billion for the modernization of the AFP and the upgrading of the salary of PNP and the AFP personnel that is now at par with the salary grade level of public school teachers.

Added to these are monthly allowances and housing and scholarship programs to promote the welfare of the policemen, soldiers, and their families.

The government also initiated reforms to address the recommendations of the Feliciano Commission on the legal grievances of young military personnel involved in the Oakwood incident. These include the creation of an Enhanced Grievance System, a Special Task Force to monitor the cases involving the AFP retirement and pension scam, and a single Bids and Awards Committee (BAC) to handle contracts worth over P50 million and simplify logistics and procurement process in the AFP.

To professionalize the PNP, the curriculum in the Philippine National Police Academy (PNPA) was revised from the old para-military training system to a disciplined and community-based system in order to have technically proficient law enforcement officers imbued with integrity, and moral and ethical standards.

The government has pursued peace negotiations with the CPP-NPA-NDF and the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF), which was stopped for almost two-and-a-half years by the previous administration in favor of an all-out war.

To move the peace process with the CPP-NPA-NDF further, preparations are being undertaken by the government panel for the drafting of a Comprehensive Agreement on Social and Economic Reforms (CASER). The government is also processing the release of a number of alleged political offenders or prisoners as a confidence-building measure.

Renewed peace negotiations with the MILF, under the “President’s Peace Initiative for Mindanao,” resulted in a bilateral ceasefire in July 2003 that continues to hold on the ground, the signing of an interim peace agreement on relief and rehabilitation of war-torn communities, and a commitment from the MILF, in a show of good faith, to assist the government in the interdiction and isolation of terrorist groups seeking refuge in MILF communities.

At the same time, the government ensured that the final peace agreements with the Moro National Liberation Front (MNLF), the Revolutionary Proletariat Army (RPA-ABB) in Negros province, and the Cordillera People’s Liberation Army (CPLA) are substantially complied with.

To advance the government’s advocacy and promotion of a culture of peace, institutionalized inter-faith dialogues were held in partnership with the local governments and the private and public educational institutions as a peace process mechanism to strengthen solidarity among Christians, Muslims, and the indigenous peoples.

Palace announces transfer of 4 OP offices to line departments

Malacañang today announced the transfer of four agencies under the Office of the President (OP) to several departments, paving the way for a tighter supervision, according to Presidential Spokesman Ignacio R. Bunye.

From OP, the Philippine Amusement and Gaming Corporation (PAGCOR) and the Cooperative Development Authority (CDA) will now be under the Department of Finance (DoF).

From the Department of Public Works and Highways (DPWH), the Public Estates Authority (PEA) will also now be under the DoF.

Meanwhile, the Manila Economic and Cultural Office Inc. (MECO) and the Philippine National Construction Corp. (PNCC) have been transferred from OP to the Department of Trade and Industry (DTI).

“The idea of putting these agencies to the respective departments is for them to have a tighter supervision,” Bunye said.

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, through Executive Order No. 330, said it is necessary to place PAGCOR under the DoF to facilitate coordination of policies and programs between the agencies.

The President said that the DoF is responsible for the generation and management of the financial resources of government, ensuring that said resources are generated and managed judiciously and in a manner supportive of the development objectives of government.

The CDA, on the other hand, has been placed under the DoF, according to E.O. No. 332, because the latter’s mandate is to formulate, institutionalize and administer fiscal policies.

The transfer of the PEA from OP to the DoF is provided for under E.O. No. 320.

In E.O. No. 331, the President placed the PNCC under the DTI since the development of expressways requires huge investments, which is in the realm of the DTI.

The President said the DTI is the “primary coordinative, promotive, facilitative and regulatory arm of the Executive branch of government in the area of trade, industry and investment.”

The operational supervision of MECO has been transferred to the DTI through E.O. No. 328 since the office was established to promote cooperation in the fields of economic, trade, cultural and economic matters between the Philippines and Taiwan on a people-to-people basis, a domain of the DTI.

All the executive orders of the President took effect two weeks ago.

GMA lauds PDEA for success in anti-drug campaign

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today expressed confidence the Philippine Drug Enforcement Agency (PDEA) will continue the fight against the drug problem with the same zeal, diligence and vigilance as the country moves closer towards the realization of a drug-free Philippines.

In a message on the occasion of the PDEA's second anniversary, the President noted that the relentless anti-drug campaign under the operational supervision and control of the PDEA has resulted in the substantial reduction of the illegal drug trade in the country.

The President said the anti-drug campaign has resulted in the following:

- the discovery and dismantling of several clandestine shabu laboratories and warehouses;
- the arrest of big fishes in the illegal drug trade;
- the seizure of billions of pesos worth of illegal drugs, controlled precursors, essential chemicals and laboratory equipment; and
- the clearing of drug-infected barangays.

According to the President, since its activation, the PDEA has dutifully discharged its responsibilities as the lead agency and implementing arm of the Dangerous Drug Boards in anti-drug operations and coordinator of all drug-related activities.

The President then appointed Interior and Local Government Undersecretary Anselmo Avenido as the first director general of the PDEA.

The PDEA was mandated to implement R. A. 9165, or the Comprehensive Dangerous Drugs Act of 2002, which President Macapagal-Arroyo signed on June 7, 2002.

CCI hails GMA's creation of OPAJG

An organization of cottage industries hailed today a move by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo to create the Office of the Presidential Adviser for Job Generation (OPAJG) to ensure the success of her ambitious jobs generation program.

The formation of the OPAJG "will really help leapfrog the country into a more progressive nation," the Chamber of Cottage Industries (CCI) said in a statement.

"We appreciate President Macapagal-Arroyo's establishment of OPAJG since this will ensure that at least six million jobs are generated for Filipinos during the next six years," CCI executive director Felix Sario said.

Sario added that the President has made a lot of progress in improving the Filipinos' standard of living. "President Arroyo is determined to make her government program aimed at improving the quality of life of Filipinos an institutional legacy of the entire government."

In her inaugural address, President Macapagal-Arroyo promised to create six to 10 million jobs before she steps down in 2010.

The President issued last July 19 Executive Order 333 creating the OPAJG and appointed outgoing Agriculture Secretary Luis Lorenzo to head the new office.

The CCI also cited the potential “fruitful impact” of the President’s guarantee programs, packaging of credit facilities and other financial assistance for small farmers and fisherfolk, small and medium enterprises and other micro-business enterprises.

- The Good News: Special ecozones exports soar to P15.344 billion
- SONA report: GMA has been a reformist President since 2001
- GMA continues to receive congratulatory messages from various heads of government
- Health services sector could be a $1-B industry, says DTI

Statement of the President: UNDP report

Quality of life as much as the alleviation of poverty is our aim for the next year.

The synergy of our five reform packages and our 10-point agenda will elevate the quality of life of our people by delivering the totality of jobs, good governance, justice, education and basic needs.

The UNDP (United Nations Development Program) report mirrors a slight improvement but our gains are threatened by economic and fiscal constraints.

We must break through these constraints and find the bold and creative opportunities to overcome cyclical poverty and bring all our people to the threshold of dignified life.

Statement of Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye: Foreign relations

We have expressed our sentiment through diplomatic means.

We follow this road and we expect others to do so.

We learn lesson from every international controversy.

It is time to move on.

Statement of Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye: Salvaging

Salvaging has no place in a civilized society where we value human life and protect human rights.

Further, it demeans the uniform and is a surefire recipe for others taking the law in their own hands.

The President has already ordered the speedy investigation and prosecution of those involved in this barbaric act.

The Good News: Special ecozones exports soar to P15.344 billion

Special economic zones exports reached $15.334 billion in the first half of 2004, a 19.44 percent increase over the same period last year, according to the Philippine Economic Zone Authority (PEZA).

PEZA Director-General Lilia B. De Lima said most of the exports came from private ecozones whose first semester figures reached $11.944 billion, an impressive 22.05 percent growth over the January-June 2003 exports of $9.750 billion.

The four public ecozones added $3.304 billion, a moderate growth of nine percent over the comparable period last year.

“As we put the elections behind us, we are confident that the investment inflows will be sustained for the rest of the year,” said De Lima as she expressed confidence in the country’s continued ability to attract investments.

Of the P27.245 billion investments for the first semester this year, P4.03 billion went to the information technology industry, jumping over last year’s investment for the same six-month period of only P1.686 billion.

The investments that came in during the first half of the year, de Lima said, created direct employment for 394,237 workers and indirect employment for 591,355 workers.

The country’s information technology (IT) buildings and parks contributed $85.225 million in exports of services, growing 51.962 percent over the first half exports last year of $58.03 million.

A sign that it is now an integral part of IT and telecommunications development in Asia, the Philippines was recently cited as Asia’s leader in short message service (SMS) technology during the recent CommunicAsia 2004, an industry-wide communications and IT-trade event in Asia held in Singapore, according to the Center for International Trade Expositions and Missions (CITEM).

With over 23,000 visitors and 18 participating countries, including the Philippines, the trade event recognized the Philippines as a reliable provider of export products in electronics as well as an emerging leader in telecommunications, both for mobile communications and fixed line subscription.

The Philippines bested the other countries due to its existing automated information on demand via SMS available to its subscribers over the other countries’ basic send and receive SMS.

Trade Undersecretary for International Trade Thomas Aquino said that Philippine content providers are already very much ahead of their ASEAN counterparts in terms of SMS gateway technology, messaging, gaming, location-based services and mobile commerce applications.

To date, the Philippines’ telecommunications industry boasts of progressive ICT infrastructure and policies, competitive rates and a very active mobile market, with an estimated 25 percent penetration rate in Metro Manila alone.

There are 23 million active mobile subscribers in the country, statistics say, and this figure is attributed to the affordable and accessible mobile services in the Philippines.

Already dubbed as the ‘world’s texting capital,’ the country’s SMS or text messages dominate the traffic by a factor of 8 to 1 (text to voice calls) and is expected to accelerate further in the next few years.

“We see a growing trend towards third generation applications and mobile commerce and this presents an opportunity to Philippine developers in the telecommunications industry,” Aquino said.

Third generation applications enable users to send and receive videos, short film clips and conduct videoconferences at the speed of 128 to 265 mbps while m-commerce uses phone to pay bills, buy grocery and pay for cab or bus rides.

SONA report: GMA has been a reformist President since 2001

Using the gains in job creation of her previous three-year administration, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo’s targeted six million jobs over the next six years of her fresh mandate seems attainable contrary to apprehensions by critics and skeptics alike.

The technical report of the President's State of the Nation Address (SONA) said that from January 2001 when President Macapagal-Arroyo took over the presidency following the collapse of the Joseph Estrada administration to December 2003, the government generated 3.4 million local employment compared to only one million for three years under the Estrada leadership.

The report showed that the government facilitated the deployment of 3.1 million overseas Filipino workers (OFWs) to over 200 foreign destinations from July 2001 to June 2004. These workers remitted a total of $22.77 billion to help prop up the national economy.

To reciprocate, the government strengthened further the OFW protection mechanisms, particularly in the light of the US-Iraq conflict. This involved the creation of the Middle East Preparedness Team and the allocation of P1 billion as standby fund from the Overseas Workers Welfare Administration for the implementation of the preparedness plan.

The government also organized 964 OFW families into Family Circles that shall serve as a vehicle for the delivery of government services.

Not to be left out, out of school youths were also beneficiaries of a package of social services ranging from skills training and financial assistance, vocational education, livelihood projects, and introduction of agri-fishery technology.

Over the past three years, the Macapagal-Arroyo government also provided micro-credit to the tune of P3.54 billion to over one million women. Even the banking sector was encourage to open its lending windows wider, with micro-credit provided by six finance-oriented banks reaching P2.9 billion as of May 2004.

The Self Employment Assistance-Kaunlaran (SEA-K) also chipped in P201.6 million in capital assistance for micro-businesses, home improvement and housing construction.

In the health care department, the government enrolled a total of 30.6 million urban and rural poor beneficiaries in the National Health Insurance Program, ensuring them access to quality health services through an enhanced Medicare system. The people were also assured low-priced but quality essential drugs under the GMA 50 (Gamot na Mabisa at Abot-kaya) program.

To ensure a better future for the youth, the government enhanced access to quality education by building more classrooms and providing instructional equipment and materials. In spite of the yearly increase in student population, the government managed to reduce teacher-pupil ratio to 1:50 from 1:60 under the previous administration.

A total of 964 school buildings were put up in remote barangays from July 1 to June 2004.

The government also set in motion the Student's Assistance Fund for Education for a Strong Republic (SAFE-4-SR) which offered P300 million in loans to some 50,000 graduating college students.

President Macapagal-Arroyo also launched the Iskolar para sa Mahirap na Pamilya program whereby one child each from five million indigent families would be granted a four-year college scholarship or free technical-vocational course for two years.

GMA continues to receive congratulatory messages from various heads of government

A month after her inaugural, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo continues to receive congratulatory greeting cards, messages and correspondence from various heads of state, heads of government, heads of missions and international organizations.

The Department of Foreign Affairs (DFA) reported that among those who sent their congratulatory correspondence were H.M. King Juan Carlos I of Spain who has been known to be a champion of democracy in his country; President Vicente Fox Quesada of Mexico, whose country is currently exploring the exercise of Overseas Absentee Voting for the next scheduled elections; and from the Royal House of Cambodia, H.M. King Norodom Sihanouk and his son H.R.H. Prince Norodom Ranariddh, who is the President of the National Assembly of Cambodia.

Dr. Mohamed Ahmed Sherif, Secretary of the World Islamic Call Society, also expressed his warm congratulations to the President.

Other prominent leaders from predominantly Muslim countries such as President Seyed Mohammad Katami of Islamic Republic of Iran, President Islam Karimov of Uzbekistan, President Ahmet Necdet Sezer of Turkey, President Bashar al-Assad of the Arab Republic of Syria, and Amir of Kuwait Sheikh Jaber Al-Ahmad Al-Sabah, also sent their warm congratulatory messages to President Macapagal-Arroyo.

Israeli President Moshe Katsav also expressed his felicitations for the President and, through Israeli Ambassador to the Philippines Yehoshua Sagi, expressed his wish for limitless opportunities for advancement during her second term of office and the continuing enhancement of Philippine-Israeli bilateral relations.

The city mayor of Los Angeles, James Hahn, sent a congratulatory message extending good wishes on behalf of the City of Los Angeles. In his message he expressed his wish that her wisdom and leadership “reap fruitful rewards in your efforts to establish an improved institution of government and in enriching the quality of lives of Filipinos throughout the world”.

He also commended the Macapagal-Arroyo administration’s efforts in combating terrorism and for preserving democratic ideals. Los Angeles is home to the largest number of Filipino-Americans in the entire North America.

Health services sector could be a $1-B industry, says DTI

Trade and Industry Secretary Cesar V. Purisima said the country’s health services sector could become a US$1 billion industry.

In a report, Purisima noted that the country’s medical professionals are world class, capable of performing and delivering complicated medical treatment and that “by supporting the development of this industry, the country can offer cheaper but world-class medical services to overseas patients from the United States, Europe and Japan.”

The DTI Secretary explained that rising health care costs and the aging population have put a heavy burden on the public health system in many developed countries.

Purisima noted that in Japan alone, 20 percent of the population is over 65 years old and is projected to reach 26 percent by 2015. Germany, on the other hand, has 1 out of 4 of its people over 65 years old and by 2040, the ratio will be 2 to 1.

The aging population is adding strain to the pension system while the younger generation is beginning to resist paying cost for caring for the elderly. These factors are driving people from developed countries to look for cheaper sources of medical care, Purisima said.

He further explained that this puts pressure on governments to consider using public funds for outsourcing health and medical care overseas. Thus, private health insurance such as US Blue Shield and Blue Cross are accrediting foreign medical facilities for their insured.

On the potential of the country’s health services sector, Purisima cited Thailand, Malaysia and Singapore as countries that have already taken the lead in offering world-class medical services to overseas patients.

Last year alone, these three countries were able to attract more than 600,000 patients and earn US$500 million in revenues, he said. Purisima said Singapore projects that it can bring in as much as one million patients by 2010 while India projects that it could earn US$1 billion.

To make the industry viable, Purisima said medical institutions need to upgrade their facilities to meet world-class standards. "Philippine hospitals also have to be accredited with public health care system in the US, Europe and Japan and with private sector health insurance providers," he added.

Meanwhile, the Philippine Overseas Employment Administration (POEA) announces that the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia needs at least 2,000 nurses and other medical personnel for immediate employment.

The POEA said the Saudi Ministry of Health is in urgent need of:

- 1,500 female nurses,
- 100 female ICU/NICU (intensive care unit/neonatal intensive care unit) nurses,
- 50 male/female CT (computed tomography) Scan technicians,
- 50 male/female MRI (magnetic resonance imaging) technicians,
- 50 nuclear medicine technicians,
- 50 Angiography and Interventional Radiology technicians,
- 100 female dental assistants,
- 50 male/female technicians, and
- 50 female respiratory therapists

According to POEA, applicants must be a graduate of nursing, dental, or the appropriate technician courses; licensed, except for dental technicians and Muslim applicants; and, they must have at least two years hospital experience, except for female nurses or Muslim applicants.

The President's Day: August 1, 2004

- DFA realigns programs with GMA's 10-point agenda
- SONA report on communications, transport projects
- Palace observes Day of God the Father

The Good News: Agriculture, manufacturing, exports spur economic growth

Positive growth in April and May has made the government upbeat on the economy, according to the National Economic Development Authority (NEDA).

NEDA assistant director-general for National Planning and Policy Staff Scholastica D. Cororaton said the economy was expected to have grown by 5 to 5.5 percent in the second quarter on the back of higher export earnings, a recovery in the manufacturing sector and sustained agricultural growth.

"Agriculture will continue to be a source of growth, there's an improvement in the manufacturing sector and our exports are moving up," Cororaton said.

Based on forecasts of the Bureau of Agricultural Statistics, Cororaton said palay and corn production would grow by about 9 to 14 percent.

For January to March, the farm sector posted a 7.7 percent growth given upturns in the crops, livestock and poultry and fishery sub-sectors.

The government, Cororaton said, is confident that increased earnings registered in April and May will contribute significantly to gross domestic product (GDP) for the second quarter.

April exports, according to the National Statistics Office, rose by 8.9 percent while May exports jumped 15.3 percent year on year, mainly due to an increase in shipments of electronic products.

The government, according to Cororaton, is confident that despite a ten percent drop in production last March, the manufacturing sector will continue to show signs of recovery in the coming months.

"With a 5 to 5.5 percent growth expectation for the second quarter and indications of a stronger performance for the rest of the year, the country can easily achieve a 4.9 percent growth for 2004.

For 2005, she said the government is optimistic that the economy will expand by 5.3 percent due mainly to higher export earnings, the sustained growth of the agriculture sector and the continued expansion of the services industry.

"Our GDP forecast remains at 5.3 percent for next year," Cororaton said. "Indicators point to the strengthening of the economy."

She cautioned, however that the forecast growth is dependent on the government's continued support of agriculture, addressing the fiscal deficit and continued backing of growth areas such as information and communication technology related services.

DFA realigns programs with GMA's 10-point agenda

The Department of Foreign Affairs (DFA) has started to realign its programs with President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's 10-point agenda.

"It will be our challenge to give life to the 10-point agenda. We have already began the process of identifying our place in this agenda but it will take all our collective efforts to succeed," DFA Secretary Delia Albert said.

Albert cited the initiatives of the Philippine foreign service posts in China that have recommitted themselves to vigorously promote tourism and trade with the country, attract investments to the Philippines and continue to protect and enhance the welfare of Filipinos in mainland China, Hong Kong and Macau in line with the DFA's realignment.

The heads of the Foreign Service posts from the embassy in Beijing and consulates in Shanghai, Guangzhou, Xiamen and Hong Kong SAR made the commitment after a two-day consultation last week.

Tourism Secretary Roberto Pagdanganan and DFA Assistant Secretary for Asia and Pacific Affairs Alicia Ramos were present to guide the posts. Also present were service attaches of the Departments of National Defense, Trade, Tourism, Labor and Agriculture.

Philippine Ambassador to China Willy Gaa called the consultation to assess the current state of RP-China relations, establish priorities and future areas of bilateral cooperation and align the plans and programs of the posts to the President's agenda.

Pagdanganan emphasized the importance of tourism in poverty alleviation and job creation. "One tourist arrival creates one job," he said.

The thrust is to attract more of the growing number of Chinese tourists to the country. Initial target is to double the number of Chinese tourists by the end of the year from that of last year.

Only one of every 600 tourists from China visited the Philippines last year in contrast to more than 600,000 from Japan and South Korea, Pagdanganan said.

Besides tourism, the meeting also noted the need to further promote Philippine products and services such as electronics and semi-conductor products/devices, fresh fruits, aquatic and marine products, resource-based products, high-end jewelry, furniture, professional services, medical tourism and logistics management.

The meeting also agreed to intensify efforts to attract Chinese investments to the Philippines, especially on infrastructure.

It also discussed ways to better resolve consular and labor issues affecting Filipinos and provide more effective service to them in China and HKSAR.

"Such consultative meetings are encouraged among our foreign posts so that we may assess and re-allocate our resources in order to better perform our mandate to protect and promote our country's interests abroad in their respective areas of responsibility," Albert said.

SONA report on communications, transport projects

Transport facilities and services have greatly improved with the implementation of the 919-kilometer Strong Republic Nautical Highway, an inter-modal transport system connecting the islands of the entire archipelago using roll-on roll-off vessels.

The system, which seeks to spur inter-island farm trade and improve distribution of food and agricultural products in the countryside and promote local tourism, has three routes.

These are: Manila-Batangas-Calapan-Roxas-Caticlan-Iloilo-Bacolod-Dumaguete-Dapitan, Manila-Batangas-Dumaguete-Cagayan de Oro, and Manila-Orion, Bataan.

According to the technical report on the President's State of the Nation Address, the RoRo system decreased transport cost by 37 to 43 percent for passengers and 24 to 34 percent for cargo. It also reduced travel time by 12 hours for the first route and 10 hours for the second route.

To energize this transport system, the government provided incentive packages and cheaper ship financing to entice shipping companies to expand and modernize the RoRo vessel fleet and constructed RoRo ramps in 53 percent of ports under the Philippine Ports Authority (PPA).

On land transport, the government has reduced traffic congestion in Metro Manila by increasing travel speed from 13.5 kph in July 2001 to 26.85 kph in February 2004 through efficient traffic flow management and provision of infrastructure and other support facilities.

The government has also implemented the following: the use of yellow lanes by buses plying EDSA, the establishment of six Metro Manila Development Authority (MMDA) road emergency stations to accelerate response to traffic accidents and unexpected traffic gridlock, the establishment of 30 U-turn slots in Buendia/Roxas Boulevard-Taft Avenue, Katipunan Ave., along C5 Libis, Commonwealth Philcoa, Mindanao Ave./Rd. 20, Mindanao Ave./Congressional Ave., C5 Julia Vargas to Kalayaan and Commonwealth to COA, the installation of 9,543 traffic signs all over the metropolis, the construction of interchanges along C5/Ortigas Ave., EDSA/Quezon Ave. Extension, EDSA/Quezon Ave., C5/Boni Serrano/Katipunan Ave., Interchange and Ortigas Ave. Extension (C5 to Tikling) and 12 footbridges in Metro Manila, traffic management activities such as road widening and sidewalk clearing, parking discipline program, registration and monitoring of tow trucks, "no-contact apprehension," upgrading and professionalization of traffic enforcers.

It has also developed the Motor Vehicle Inspection system and the Vehicle Modernization Program to improve vehicle roadworthiness.

Meanwhile, the government completed the Metro Manila commuter train loop from Blumentritt to Pasay through Light Railway Transit (LRT) 2 and back to Blumentritt through the Philippine National Railways line.

On air transport, the government pursued the policy of continued liberalization of the airline industry. It held air services consultations with Singapore, South Korea, Macau, Qatar, Bahrain, United Arab Emirates, Vietnam, Palau and Japan, which resulted in increased passenger and cargo capabilities, additional frequencies, and flexibility in routes and airline designation.

It also espoused multi-carrier, multi-point policy in air talks, started operations of Asiana Airlines at Diosdado Macapagal International Airport on October 30 2003, initiated development of new airports in Iloilo and Laguindingan, Misamis Oriental and completed facilities in the Laoag International Airport and Vigan Airport. Existing airports in Mactan, Antique and Jolo were also improved.

It also improved safety and efficiency of the air transportation system and retained the Category 1 rating of the Philippines based on the re-assessment of the U.S. Federal Aviation Administration on the Air Transportation Office's oversight capability. Proficiency training for air traffic controllers was also conducted.

- Palace says Lorenzo's appointment to new post final
- RP stands firm in commitment vs. terrorism – Palace
- Palace sees silver lining in budget-setting process

Statement of Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye: National Budget

We consider the budget process as an opportunity to build upon the executive-legislative partnership to meet the priority agenda of the President.

The Palace proposes, Congress disposes.

This is a principled relationship based on the interest of the people.

Statement of Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye: National Government Payroll

We have to acknowledge that the national government is saddled by a huge payroll that can be reduced in certain places, except in those that are actively involved in the delivery of vital public services.

The President has made a clear start in the abolition and consolidation of some government agencies and offices, but the larger effort will have to be participated in by all departments and agencies.

Those up for reengineering will be offered incentive and alternative employment packages that will not impact heavily on the budget.

This will be reinforced by other cost-cutting measures which are also underway.

Statement of Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye: Anti-Terrorism

Our commitment to the campaign against international terrorism is firm.

The gains we continue to achieve in the anti-terrorism campaign is a result of the vigilance of Filipinos, our alliances with other nations and our strategic partnership with the United States.

Palace cites steps to reduce dependence on imported fuel

The government has been engaged in the search and development of locally available alternative fuel sources to lessen dependence on crude oil, Malacañang said today.

Energy independence and savings is the one of the five economic reform packages of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo that she unveiled in her State of the Nation Address (SONA) last week.

The government is propagating the widespread use of natural gas, which can be used to fuel buses and coco-diesel as an additive, Deputy Presidential Spokesman and Cabinet Secretary Ricardo Saludo said in a radio interview this morning.

There are also the construction of small hydro-electric plants, the use of bio-gas or bio-mass and even wind or solar power.

These will slowly lessen the country's dependence on crude oil even if most are on a long-term basis, Saludo explained.

Saludo stressed that the use of natural gas for buses can help much in attaining energy independence.

The country has rich natural gas deposits in the Malampaya fields in Palawan which have been operational for some time.

Saludo also pointed out that the price of natural gas is more stable and its use will result in a cleaner environment.

The Department of Energy is at the forefront of these government efforts to harness locally available alternative fuels and lessen dependence on crude oil, according to Saludo.

Also involved are the Department of Science and the Department of Agriculture, especially the Philippine Coconut Authority which has been propagating the use of coco-diesel.

Oil importing countries received another rude shock with oil prices rising to record levels last week in New York primarily because big Russian oil firm Yukos is in financial straits and likely to reduce production.

Business groups heed GMA call, pledge to keep prices of major items stable

Manufacturers, traders and retailers have signed a resolution heeding the call of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo to keep the prices of basic necessities and prime commodities stable for the benefit of consumers.

The resolution, signed last Wednesday at the National Price Coordinating Council regular meeting in Makati City, expresses the solidarity of tin can manufacturers, coconut oil refiners, flour millers, canned goods manufacturers, bakers association and retailers with the government in exploring other ways to improve their productivity and efficiency.

Recognizing the problems besetting the economy and their impact on all consumers, the signatories vowed to participate actively in the government's price stabilization program through price monitoring, policy reform recommendations, innovative programs and projects.

They also promised to exercise restraint and reasonableness in adjusting prices of basic necessities and prime commodities when warranted.

In their resolution, the signatories cited President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's reform program and call for unity to improve government services and save the economy.

"The President has made it crystal clear that her aim is to create economic opportunity at home and abroad... but it can only be done with focus, with energy, and with a common purpose to do that which still lies within our power, put our economic house back in order before it finds itself beyond hope or repair and doomed to share the fate of failed nations," the resolution said.

“We therefore heed the call of the President for unity of purpose for a common goal and for self-sacrifice and express our solidarity with her administration,” it added.

Signing the resolution were Henry Tañedo for the Tin Can Manufacturers Association; Jesus Arranza, Coconut Oil Refiners Association; Ric Pinca, Philippine Association of Flour Millers (PAFMIL); Alex Lim, Chamber of Philippine Flour Millers (CHAMP); Lucito Chavez, Phil. Federation of Bakers Association (PFBAI); Atty. Federico Ples, Philippine Association of Supermarkets (PASI); Steven Cua, Philippine Amalgamated Supermarkets Association (PAGASA); May Gonzales, National Association of Market Vendors Confederation of Cooperatives (NAMVESCO);

Tay C. Tan and Lawrence Kiok, Permex Producer and Exporter Corp; Francis Lim, Bagumbuhay Industrial Corp.; Ricardo Po and Ted Po, Century Canning Corp.; Gregory Tung, ATC Trading; Francisco Buencamino, Philippine Association of Meat Processors (PAMPI) and Geraldine Yu, Philips Food Corp.

Palace says Lorenzo’s appointment to new post final

Malacañang today said the decision of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo to appoint outgoing Agriculture Secretary Luis Lorenzo as Presidential Adviser for Jobs Generation is final.

Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye, in his regular press briefing at the Palace, said the President deliberated on whether or not to retain Lorenzo at the Agriculture department before announcing his new designation.

“This is something that is more or less final,” Bunye told reporters at the Palace.

The Chief Executive has named National Food Authority Administrator Arthur Yap as Lorenzo’s replacement.

As Presidential Adviser for Jobs Generation, Lorenzo is mandated to ensure the successful and efficient implementation of the President’s jobs generation program targeting the creation of six million to 10 million jobs within the next six years.

Under Executive Order No. 333 issued recently by the President, Lorenzo is tasked to coordinate an effective and timely implementation of the government’s roadmap for jobs generation.

Lorenzo is also tasked to apprise the President on programs and financial assistance packages for small farmers and fisherfolk, as well as small and medium enterprises, micro-business and other small entrepreneurs.

He is likewise empowered to oversee the lending programs of such government financial institutions as the Land Bank of the Philippines and the Quedan Rural Credit Guarantee Corp. (QUEDANCOR) and private sector resources in support of the overall jobs generation program.

RP stands firm in commitment vs. terrorism – Palace

The Philippines stands firm on its global and regional commitments against terrorism.

In a press briefing this afternoon at the Palace, Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye affirmed President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo’s staunch stand in the fight against terrorism.

“We have made significant gains, especially during the last few weeks, the last few days and we will continue to be active fighting terrorism in this part of the world,” Bunye said.

“We will continue to cooperate with our neighbors, regionally and internationally and definitely we expect to lick the problem of terrorism in the country,” Bunye continued.

He added the Philippines will continue cooperating with its allies and strategic partners in dealing with international terrorist groups and its relationships with its allies will remain strong.

“We are saying that we will fight terrorism the best way we can, the best way we know how. We are confident our relationship with our strategic partner, which is the United States, will continue to remain strong,” Bunye said.

Bunye lauded the active support of the Filipinos in the recent gains in the war against terrorism.

“The gains we continue to achieve is a result of the vigilance of Filipinos, our alliance with other nations and our strategic partnership with the United States,” Bunye said.

Palace sees silver lining in budget-setting process

Malacañang considers the budget process as an opportunity to build upon the partnership between the executive and the legislative to meet the priority agenda of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo.

Presidential Spokesman Ignacio R. Bunye said today that insofar as the budget is concerned, “the Palace proposes, but Congress disposes.”

“This is a principled relationship based on the interest of the people,” Bunye said.

In his regular press briefing, the Secretary said Malacañang is trying to come up with a well-studied budget proposal that would give maximum flexibility to the different departments.

He assured that the Palace would submit the budget proposal well within the thirty days allowance after the opening of Congress.

“As far as the budget is concerned, according to Budget Secretary Emilia Boncodin, we have thirty days within which to submit the budget for consolidation,” Bunye said.

Last year, Malacañang submitted a budget proposal for P865 billion but Congress failed to pass the measure, forcing it to make do with the reenacted 2003 budget of P804 billion.

The President is seeking the passage of several tax measures, including the indexation of excise taxes on cigarettes and alcohol, as well as a shift to gross income taxation.

Active dialogues with manufacturers and producers are ongoing to temper price increase.

Peso strengthens, follows appreciation of regional currencies

The peso gained strength today as it closed firmer at P55.760 compared to yesterday's close of P55.780.

According to the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas (BSP), this was mainly due to the continued appreciation of other regional currencies against the US dollar.

"Dollar inflows from overseas Filipino workers remittances, as well as some banks' dollar short selling, likewise supported the local unit," the BSP said.

However, some banks' dollar buying for their maturing obligations and short positions later weighed on the peso, it added.

For the morning session, the peso moved within the range of P55.730 to 55.830, with the last transaction dealt at P55.820. Volume of transactions amounted to $104.8 million.

Meanwhile, the Bureau of Customs reported a total collection of P10.724 billion for July, P1.569 billion more than the target of P9.842 billion for the month.

The bureau continued to exceed its assigned monthly tax collection target despite the low volume of importation during the first few months of the current year on account of the high rate of exchange between the dollar vis-à-vis the peso.

Customs Commissioner Antonio Bernardo is optimistic that the coming months would be good for the government in terms of increasing the revenues through tax collections. "The last six months of every year is where the volume of importation is high," he added.

He said that the Department of Finance has increased to three times the assigned tax collection target of the bureau from its original target of P107 billion to P110 billion and to P112 billion for the year 2004.

Palace urges Filipino in U.S. to be extra cautious amidst new terror threat

Malacañang today advised all Filipinos abroad, particularly those in the United States, to undertake extra precautions for their safety and that of their families in light of the latest terror alert raised by the US government.

"All Filipinos abroad are best forewarned to undertake extra precautions for their safety and that of their families," Presidential Spokesman Ignacio R. Bunye said in his regular briefing this afternoon.

He said that Philippine government does not take the new terror threat lightly.

According to the US government, Al-Qaeda militants in the US plan to target the country's most powerful symbols of Western capitalism, including the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank in Washington, D. C.

Bunye said that here at home and in the region, "our vigilance and fight against terrorism will be unrelenting." "It is better for us to be prudent," he added.

Meanwhile, Bunye noted the strong partnership between the Philippines and the US.

"We never doubted the steadiness and firmness of the strategic partnership of the two countries," he said.

Bunye said the bridge of understanding and solidarity between Americans and Filipinos has been built through more than a century and has withstood the test of time.

“It will continue to stand as a platform of our common fight against terror and for the defense of democracy,” Bunye said.

Palace justifies transfer of agencies to line departments

Malacañang today said that the objective of transferring existing agencies under the Office of the President to line departments is to have tighter supervision and smoother operations.

In a radio interview this morning, Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said objections will always be a part of any reorganization but in the end, it would be for the good of the bureaucracy.

“Ang No. 1 objective dito ay magkaroon ng mas mahusay na superbisyon ang mga government agencies. Alam naman natin na marami na ang mga ahensiya na nakadikit o naka-attach sa Office of the President (The No. 1 objective here is to have a better supervision of government agencies. We all know that there are already so many agencies attached to the Office of the President),” Bunye said.

He said these agencies would be better off in departments “where their services are allied with what they do.”

Recently, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo ordered the transfer of several agencies under the Office of the President, among them the Philippine Amusement and Gaming Corp. (PAGCOR) and the Cooperative Development Authority (CDA), to the Department of Finance.

Also placed under the DoF from the Department of Public Works and Highways (DPWH) was the Public Estates Authority (PEA).

The Manila Economic and Cultural Office Inc. (MECO) in Taipei, Taiwan and the Philippine National Construction Corp. (PNCC) have been transferred from OP to the Department of Trade and Industry (DTI).

The President, through Executive Order No. 330, said it is necessary to place PAGCOR under the DoF to facilitate coordination of policies and programs between the agencies.

The President said that the DoF is responsible for the generation and management of the financial resources of government, ensuring that said resources are generated and managed judiciously and in a manner supportive of the development objectives of government.

GMA to head commission on values formation

Malacañang today announced that President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo will head the new Presidential Commission on Values Formation.

Presidential Spokesman Ignacio R. Bunye said that the President herself bared her new job during today’s Legislative-Executive Development Advisory Council (LEDAC) meeting in Malacañang.

“The President mentioned that she herself will be chairing the Commission,” Bunye said in his regular briefing.

Bunye said that the President mentioned some high-profile religious leaders she had invited to join her in the commission. Aside from the chairman, the commission has six members, which would be co-terminus with the President.

According to Bunye, the President had mentioned some possible names as members, “but again at this time, we do not have any exact status of whether these personalities have actually accepted the invitation of the President.”

“The President feels that we have to come up with an integrated approach. If you want to solve the problem of corruption, which has been with us for a long time and you cannot solve it by just enforcement of laws. You cannot solve it by just improving the system. You really have to improve the orientation of the people who are running the system,” Bunye added.

Bunye said the President decided to head the commission herself because she feels that “this is a very important agency and the program is really the priority of the President.”

The President earlier signed Executive Order No. 314 creating the Presidential Commission on Values Formation.

According to the E.O., the commission shall serve as the lead agency by which government may work hand-in-hand with civil society and the private sector in the establishment of a strong foundation for moral value formation in the government bureaucracy.

The commission shall also prepare the Implementing Rules and Regulations (IRR) of the E.O. It shall then subsequently proceed to design and implement programs such as seminars and congresses directed to values such as honesty, modesty, integrity and good work ethics in the government bureaucracy.

The commission will likewise make periodic recommendations to the President with regard to any duly supported and substantiated information on incorrigible and undesirable government personnel. Upon the written approval of the President, the commission may appear as complainant in any case filed pursuant to such recommendations before the appropriate government agency.

Lastly, the commission shall coordinate with, and support, non-governmental organizations (NGOs) and the private sector in the effort to eradicate from the government bureaucracy every form or manner of graft and corruption, patronage politics, apathy, passivity, mendicancy, factionalism and lack of patriotism and to replace them with honest public service and love of country.

Reported arms shipment won't affect peace gab with MILF

Malacañang today said the reported arms shipment to the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) would not imperil the ongoing peace negotiations between the government and the secessionist group.

Presidential Spokesman Ignacio R. Bunye made the assurance after newspaper reports said that a large shipment of automatic rifles and ammunition to the MILF was discovered two weeks ago by security officials in a coastal town in Mindanao.

In a regular press briefing, Bunye told Malacañang reporters that the government is very optimistic that the ongoing peace talk will continue after both GRP and MILF panels decided to conduct an investigation in this particular issue.

“This is something that has been brought to the attention of the joint GRP/MILF panels. And the panels have decided to look into this specific allegations,” Bunye said.

Bunye said the Philippine National Police and Armed Forces of the Philippines will continue to conduct operations against lawless elements and bandit groups and terrorists.

He noted that even without the threat of terrorist attack, the government is prepared and ready to implement its own program to counter the terror threat in the country.

“It has been our program. It has been our intention to fight terrorism here in our country, and in the region, and we are cooperating with our friends and allies as far as the anti-terrorism campaign is concerned,” Bunye added.

GMA to strengthen fight vs. corruption

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo set in motion today a mechanism designed to eradicate corruption in the bureaucracy, instill moral values and discipline among state workers and retool government service.

Presiding the second Legislative-Executive Development Advisory Council (LEDAC) meeting at the State Dining Room of Malacañang, the President urged leaders of Congress to pass measures strengthening the Office of the Ombudsman and government re-engineering.

The Chief Executive opened the LEDAC meeting by giving its members a brief overview of the three-pronged approach she intends to pursue to flesh out the reforms she has enunciated in her State of the Nation Address (SONA) last month.

In his regular press briefing at the Palace following the LEDAC meeting, Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye outlined three objectives of the President's anti-corruption campaign. These are: effective law enforcement with the Bureau of Customs and the Bureau of Internal Revenue as showcases; continuing lifestyle check on ranking government officials; and strengthening of the Ombudsman using Hong Kong's Independent Commission Against Crime as a model.

The President also eyes the improvement of government frontline services, automation of elections, strengthening the government's procurement law and giving the influential Bishop-Businessmen's Conference wider participation in policy-making processes.

During the meeting, Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo also cited the need for specially trained prosecutors and investigators to handle graft cases, and enhance transparency and accountability in transactions pertaining government projects.

The President reiterated her statement in the SONA that she wants a downsizing of government personnel, but providing what she termed "silver parachute" or adequate bailout assistance for those affected by the retrenchment.

Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo also told the LEDAC members that she would chair the Presidential Commission on Values Formation created to institutionalize morality in the bureaucracy.

Those who attended today's LEDAC meeting were Vice President Noli de Castro, Senate President Franklin Drilon, Speaker Jose de Venecia Jr., Senators Miriam Defensor-Santiago, Richard Gordon, Manuel Villar, Juan Flavio and Aquilino Pimentel Jr., Congressmen Teodoro Locsin, Jr., Agapito Aquino, Jesli Lapuz, Benigno Aquino II and Guillermo Luz of the Makati Business Club and Cabinet members.

Gov't mulls increase in number of prosecutors to strengthen anti-graft drive

Presidential Chief of Staff Secretary Rigoberto Tiglao has proposed an increase in the number of well-trained investigators and prosecutors to handle cases involving graft and corruption during today's meeting of the Legislative-Executive Development Advisory Council (LEDAC) in Malacañang.

Under his "A Roadmap for the Campaign Against Corruption," Tiglao proposed the amendment of Republic Act No. 6770 (Ombudsman Law) to increase the number of prosecutors and investigators until a sufficient ratio is reached for the government's anti-graft campaign to be fully successful.

Tiglao noted that the main weakness in the country's fight against corruption is the high incidence of dismissal of anti-graft cases due to insufficiency of evidence.

At present, Tiglao said that the Philippines has only 145 graft investigators for its 1.4 million bureaucracy or a ratio of 1:10,000 civil servants.

Tiglao said this pales in comparison to Hong Kong which has 800 graft investigators for 150,000 government workers or a ratio of 1:2,000 civil servants.

Tiglao noted that Hong Kong's Independent Commission Against Corruption (ICAC), which the Philippines is trying to imitate, has a budget of P5 billion compared to the total P515 million budget of the Ombudsman, the Presidential Anti-Graft Commission (PAGC), and other anti-graft bodies.

It was also noted that Hong Kong's Department of Justice with a budget of P2.7 billion has a conviction rate of 79 percent or 330 out of the 416 cases it handled in 2003.

During her State of the Nation Address (SONA) last month, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo asked Congress to pass a law making the Ombudsman as effective as Hong Kong's ICAC.

The President also challenged government officials to craft enforceable, doable and not motherhood anti-corruption programs to speed up the country's economic development and reduce poverty.

Thirty years ago, Hong Kong was considered one of the most corrupt countries in Asia before the establishment of the ICAC in 1974.

Today, Hong Kong is perceived as the 2nd least corrupt country in Asia.

Gov't re-engineering to do away with inutile posts, officers

Government offices and agencies that have outlived their usefulness will have to go.

Budget Secretary Emilia Boncodin announced this during the second meeting of the Legislative-Executive Development Advisory Council (LEDAC) presided by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo in Malacañang today.

In her State of the Nation Address (SONA) last July 26, the President said she would trim down the bureaucracy and asked the leaders of Congress to pass a bill on government re-engineering.

"We will downsize the government, motivate excess employees to become entrepreneurs, and increase the pay of a lean and mean bureaucracy," the President stressed in her SONA.

In her presentation during the meeting, Boncodin outlined the three main objectives of the President's government retooling program. These are:

1. Abolition of functions or agencies whose activities are no longer relevant. Most of these agencies have been created a long time ago and their functions have become unnecessary at this time.
2. Consolidation of the redundant functions.
3. Strengthening of offices and agencies that need additional resources. An example is the Department of Education.

Under a voluntary separation program, Boncodin said affected employees would be given the option of early retirement, in which case they would be provided with what the President called a "silver parachute."

Apart from the normal retirement benefits being provided by the Government Service Insurance System, the retired employee would also receive an additional benefit from the national government.

Boncodin said the additional incentive could be as high or twice the employee's monthly basic salary if the worker has been in the service for forty years or more.

For those who opt to stay in the service, Boncodin said the Civil Service Commission would implement a system designed to attain a balanced and fair redeployment.

Boncodin assured the public that there would be no mass lay-off of government employees.

In the 2004 national budget, Boncodin said Congress has appropriated P15 billion for the incentive package to be given to employees who may want to retire.

Second post-election ‘Pulong Bayan’ held tomorrow in Caloocan City

The government’s anti-graft campaign takes center stage at tomorrow’s second “Pulong Bayan” of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo to be held at a public market in Caloocan City.

Malacañang said the President wants to sustain this process of close interaction with the masses to feel their pulse about significant issues, as well as to provide quick response to the people’s complaints.

A salient point of the President’s series of small town meetings is discussion on the government’s 10-point agenda set for implementation over the next six years of the Macapagal-Arroyo administration as outlined in her State of the Nation Address last July 26.

Forthcoming pulong bayan or public consultations would be thematic in nature, and would make government officials have a clearer focus on addressing the needs and concerns of the people.

The first post-election pulong bayan, held last week in Parañaque City, focused on social justice and basic needs package. The affair received positive responses prompting Malacañang to institutionalize it.

Other visions of President Macapagal-Arroyo’s as elaborated in her SONA, are jobs generation and economic development, education improvement and youth opportunity, and energy independence and savings.

In tomorrow’s pulong bayan, Vice President Noli de Castro will assist the President and newly elected Caloocan City Mayor Enrico Echiverri in elaborating on the government’s thrust to weed out corruption

Before the interaction, Mayor Echiverri will present to the President at Caloocan City Hall 20 units of confiscated video karera machines.

The newly created Malacañang Office for Constituency Affairs (MOCA) has been tasked to oversee the holding of the pulong bayan.

Statement of the President: Anti-Terrorism

The arrest of the two JI suspects behind the Rizal Day bombings is a clear indication of the undiminished and unrelenting vigilance of our people in the global alliance versus terror.

We will continue waging this fight to clean up our shores of terrorists and alongside our neighbors, to sweep the region of their clandestine cells.

We will do our best to bring the battle against terror forward, and we will continue to be a strong link in the global chain of constricting terrorism.

I commend our Armed Forces for this accomplishment.

Statement of Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye: Protection of Children

The government has been vigilant against exploitation of children.

The basis of the UNICEF report was the rescue of 70 exploited children in Laguna last month.

We are addressing this problem, but the cooperation of the parents and the local community is imperative.

Stamping out child exploitation is part of the fight against crime and poverty.

No letup in government drive vs. terrorism

Malacañang said today that the government has not wavered on its drive to stamp out terrorism on the home front, as well as help fight it in the global arena.

This relentless campaign gained added impetus when President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo created last March 22 an inter-agency Anti-Terrorism Task Force (ATTF) under the general supervision of the Department of National Defense.

Records of the multi-agency ATTF showed that during the first five months of its existence, the task force has proved to be a deadly nemesis of organized terrorism. From March to July this year, ATTF operatives, backed up by the police and other law enforcement units, captured a total of 67 suspected terrorists, seven of them foreigners believed to be elements of the dreaded Al-Qaeda and its Asian cell, the Jemaah Islamiyah.

Most of those arrested were believed to be members of the Muslim fundamentalist Abu Sayyaf group which is blamed for a spate of bomb attacks, kidnappings and other terrorist acts in the country.

The Abu Sayyaf also pulled off the kidnapping of more than 20 tourists, most of them Europeans, from the Malaysian resort of Sipadan. Most of the hostages were freed allegedly upon payment of undetermined amount of ransom.

At least 10 suspected Abu Sayyaf gunmen were killed last April in encounters in separate incidents in the island province of Basilan.

The ATTF operations also resulted in the confiscation of large cache of explosive materials ranging from blasting caps, detonating cords to ammonium nitrate.

The 15-agency ATTF is headed by Defense Secretary Eduardo Ermita as National Anti-Terrorism Coordinator, with Defense Undersecretary Edgardo Batenga as his deputy.

As an anti-terrorism superbody, the ATTF formulates strategies, policies, plans and measures necessary to prevent and suppress acts of terrorism.

It also coordinates with ASEAN-member countries and other nations to promote intelligence sharing in the global fight against terrorism.

The task force is also authorized to organize or tap government officials including retirees, private individuals, corporations and other stakeholders to serve either as advisers, resource persons or active participants.

Palace cites 2-pronged approach in the fight vs. graft in public offices

While the function of the Presidential Anti-Graft Commission is punitive, the Presidential Commission on Values Formation (PCVF) recently created by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo will be preventive in nature.

This was explained today by Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye in a radio interview as he expounded on the two-pronged approach of the government in implementing its anti-graft campaign.

“Magiging dalawa ang approach natin (We will approach the problem two ways),” he said. “The anti-graft commission will investigate and prosecute suspected corrupt officials while the Values Formation Commission will teach values, to change the way we see things, and prevent corruption in government.”

The creation of PCVF, according to Bunye, was one of the things expounded by the President in her State of the Nation Address (SONA). It is one of the executive efforts that will go hand in hand with the legislative efforts in Congress.

In her recent meeting with the Legislative Executive Development Advisory Council (LEDAC), the President announced that she herself would head the PCVF.

Bunye said the President decided to head the commission herself because she feels that “this is a very important agency and the program is really the priority of the President.”

He said one of the pro-active measures in the drive against corruption is the President’s invitation to the business group to be active in various pre-bid awards and awards committee (PBAC).

“Tatal naman yang mga PBAC ay kasalukuyang umiiral sa iba’t ibang local governments, iba’t ibang ahensiya. Ang gustong mangyari ng ating Pangulo ay almost automatic, mayroong kinatawan ang business group. (Anyway the PBAC is already in the local governments and different government agencies. What our President wants is for a representative from the business group to be part of the PBAC),” he said.

According to Executive Order No. 314 creating the Presidential Commission on Values Formation, the commission shall serve as the lead agency by which government may work hand-in-hand with civil society and the private sector in the establishment of a strong foundation for moral value formation in the government bureaucracy.

The commission shall also prepare the Implementing Rules and Regulations (IRR) of the E.O. It shall then subsequently proceed to design and implement programs such as seminars and congresses directed to values such as honesty, modesty, integrity and good work ethics in the government bureaucracy.

Caloocan City mayor vows to support GMA’s programs

CALOOCAN CITY – Caloocan City Mayor Enrico Echiverri today vowed to support President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo’s program of improving the quality of life of every Filipino during her six year term.

In a chance interview at the Caloocan City Hall Plaza after the “pulong bayan” held here, Echiverri said he has thrown his support to economic reforms and vision the President has elaborated in her State of the Nation Address (SONA) last July 26.

Echiverri, who ran under the opposition party Koalisyon ng Nagkakaisang Pilipino (KNP), said that it is now time to set aside politics and everybody should instead focus in supporting government’s plan for economic recovery.

“In a political party, we have a president or a chairman of the political party and as soon as the election is over I believe there should only be one party and that’s the party of the Republic of the Philippines. So the common goal or objective here is improving the life of every Filipino,” Echiverri said.

Although he maintained that under a democratic country, there is a need for constructive criticism, Echiverri said important measures of the Macapagal-Arroyo administration, especially if they are for the good of the people, should be supported.

“Each has his own belief and platform but after Election Day and when the people has spoken, we only have one politics and that is for the country,” said Echiverri, adding that too much politicking would only cause divisiveness in the country.

The President was warmly received here in her first post-election visit to the city, where she held her second “pulong bayan” which tackled measures aimed at eradicating graft and corruption in public offices.

Curbing corruption and good government tackled in 2nd post-election ‘pulong bayan’

Improvement of front line services in national and local government agencies is one way by which President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo intends to curb corruption and provide good governance to the people.

In her second post-election “pulong bayan” with Vice President Noli de Castro and Caloocan City Mayor Enrico Echiverri, the President said that the implementation of “pro-speed” or anti-red tape law would improve government services such as issuance of permits, civil registry records as well as payment of real estate taxes.

She explained that during her visits to underprivileged communities in early 2003 along with Social Welfare Secretary Corazon Soliman, she learned that poor front line services was on the top of the list of grievances among the masses.

“One of the most important measures for speedier service that was tackled during yesterday’s LEDAC (Legislative-Executive Development Advisory Council) meeting was to have a transaction manual as raised by Senator Miriam Santiago,” the President said in the “pulong bayan” held at the Poblacion Public Market along 10th Avenue in Caloocan City.

President Macapagal-Arroyo pointed out that this manual would be used in local and national government agencies to improve the services of the line agencies.

The government is also pushing for the creation of facilitation express lanes that will check business transaction with the fixers that proliferate in some government agencies.

Caloocan Representatives Oscar Malapitan and Luis Asistio assured the President that they would sponsor a bill in the Congress that would set up express lanes in government agencies to speed up transactions and fees collected used to increase allowances for government employees so that they will not be tempted to resort to some shenanigans.

After the thematic small town meeting, President Macapagal-Arroyo had a light luncheon with de Castro, Malapitan, Asistio, Metro Manila Development Authority Chairman Bayani Fernando, event organizer Secretary Conrado Limcaoco, Mayor Echiverri and wife Purificacion, Barangay Captain Miguelita Limpo, Market Vendors Association president Lito Buenaobra, Neighborhood Association President Edgar Ybanez and Tricycle and Operators and Drivers Association (TODA) president Renato Buaceno.

Other officials present in the “pulong bayan” were Secretary Soliman, incoming Agriculture Secretary Arthur Yap and heads of government agencies.

Earlier, the President and Vice President de Castro made a brief visit at the Caloocan City Hall Plaza, where they were presented 20 units of confiscated video karera machines by Mayor Echiverri.

The first “pulong bayan” held in Parañaque City focused on social justice and basic needs package.

Forthcoming small town interactions would deal with the President’s other reform packages that she elaborated in her State of the Nation Address (SONA) like jobs generation and economic development, education improvement and youth opportunity, and energy independence and savings.

No travel advisory but only advice for extra precautions for Filipinos traveling to U.S.

Malacañang today reiterated its advice to Filipinos who are already in the United States or are planning to go there to take “extra precautions” amid new terror threats in some US cities.

In his regular press briefing this afternoon, Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye also said that the Department of Foreign Affairs (DFA) has not issued any formal travel advisory for Filipinos to travel to the United States.

“What we said yesterday is that we are asking our compatriots who are in the United States to take the necessary precautions. We know that some of them are working in areas which have been identified as possible targets but there has been no formal travel advisory as far as traveling to the United States is concerned,” Bunye said.

Bunye added that traveling to the United States is an individual “judgment call” by Filipinos but still advice them to take necessary precautions for their safety while in the United States or any part of the globe.

Bunye said that if ever the DFA decides to issue a travel ban, it should have a sufficient justification for issuing such an advisory.

GMA bats for e-payroll to curb graft

Caloocan may soon be the first city government to implement electronic payrolls in line with the President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's program of using information technology (IT) to curb corruption in government.

This surfaced today during the second post-election "pulong bayan" hosted by the President along with Vice President Noli de Castro and Caloocan Mayor Enrico Echiverri at the Caloocan City hall.

Echiverri said the city government plans to enter into agreement with the banking institutions to pave the way for the use of electronic payrolls through automated teller machines (ATMs).

"Ang tutoo niyan, last Friday kausap ko iyong ibang bangko na gusto ko sana upang hindi na mahirapan ang mga empleyado namin dito at hindi na mabawasan ang kaunting suweldo (The truth is, last Friday I've already talked with some banks on the possibility of using ATMS for their payrolls to help the employees)," Echiverri said.

The issue stemmed from a complaint by an employee that most of the time, they don't get their complete salaries from the cashiers. Echiverri said the use of the ATMs will eliminate this.

The President said that the use of the e-payroll would benefit the entire government bureaucracy, particularly line departments like the Department of Education, which has thousands of employees.

The Chief Executive revealed that nearly half of the one million government employees are from the DepEd, mostly teachers.

"Yes, kaya DepEd din ang nagpa-pioneer dito sa e-payroll. So makukuha na nila ang kanilang pera, halimbawa iyong mga teacher sa Bacolod City, makukuha na by electronic means (That's why the DepEd is pioneering on the e-payroll. So teachers, say from Bacolod City, can now get their pay through electronic means)," she said.

De Castro said that by using ATMs, employees would also be spared from the risk of getting held up during payday by unscrupulous elements because they can only get money that they need and not the entire amount as in the case of manual payrolls.

The President and the Vice President were warmly received in the "pulong bayan" which tackled measures aimed at eradicating graft and corruption in public offices.

Palace reiterates: No forced retirement of gov't employees

Government workers are free to choose if they want to remain in public service or avail of the optional retirement package being offered by the government.

This was emphasized in a radio interview this morning by Budget Secretary Emilia Boncodin as she assured that there would be no forced retirement in the proposed reengineering plan of the government.

"Hindi natin sila pupuwersahin. Katulad nang parati kong binabanggit, it is a voluntary means (We will not force them. It is voluntary as what I have always reiterated)," Boncodin said.

Under the reengineering plan, Boncodin said employees who would be given the opportunity to retire are those working under an office whose functions would be determined by Congress as either for abolition or no longer relevant.

Boncodin cited as an example teachers who are not included in the early retirement program as the government is still hiring teachers to fill in the backlog.

She said that the government could save between P6 to P7 billion a year from the reengineering program that she hopes could take off this year.

Boncodin assured those who would avail of the retirement package that they would get their retirement pay on their last day of office aside from other incentives, such as alternative livelihood and one-half to 2 months premium, depending on the length of service.

Boncodin also gave assurance that the Civil Service Commission (CSC) would take care of the rights of government employees in the event that their offices would be abolished or merged with other line agencies upon the approval of Congress.

Gov't, MILF agree to conduct joint probe on alleged arms shipment — Palace

The government and the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) are now jointly conducting a probe on the reported arms shipment allegedly received by the MILF some two weeks ago in Mindanao.

In his regular briefing in Malacañang, Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said the joint probe by the government and MILF peace panels means that both sides want the peace process to continue.

“The fact that the joint GRP-MILF panels are looking into this jointly is already a confidence building measure. It means that both sides want the peace process to continue and not be hindered by any isolated incidents,” Bunye said.

It was reported that the MILF allegedly received a large shipment of smuggled arms in the coastal towns of Lanao del Sur and Sultan Kudarat provinces some two weeks ago.

“Itong napabalita na arms shipment ay sinusubaybayan o sinusuri ngayon ng isang joint panel kaya ang mga alleged violations ay open at puwedeng suriin ng joint probe team (The reported arms shipment is now being looked into by a joint panel and the alleged violations are open for scrutiny by the joint probe team),” Bunye said.

Renewed peace negotiations with the MILF resulted in a bilateral ceasefire signed in July 2003 that continues to hold on the ground.

It also resulted in the signing of an interim peace agreement on relief and rehabilitation of war-torn communities, and a commitment from the MILF to assist the government in the interdiction and isolation of terrorist groups seeking refuge in MILF areas.

Romulo expresses personal grief over ‘Ka Turing’ death

Executive Secretary Alberto G. Romulo, in a press statement, today expressed his personal grief over the death of former Senator Arturo Tolentino, who he considered as a personal friend having worked closely with him in the Senate from 1992 to 1995.

Romulo’s statement in full:

“I was the majority leader during the term of the late Senator Tolentino and I recall always seeking his advice on parliamentary rules and procedures because he was considered the sage of the Senate.

“His bereaved family is assured that Arturo Tolentino has now achieved immortality. Our people shall remember him with reverence and affection. After all, his record as a legislator and constitutionalist is perfection personified.

“The challenge remains for our legislators to live up to the intellectual standards set by the humble ‘Ka Turing’ who despite his genius, was a voracious reader and assiduous student of both history and current affairs.”

Statement of Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye: Anti-Terrorism

The gains we have achieved are of great help in crippling the operation of Al-Qaeda-linked terrorist cells in the Southeast Asian region.

Terrorist linkages across the country are being crippled one by one.

But we are not taking any chances for there are still a few who have to be accounted for.

Proactive intelligence measures will continue to ensure that our people are safeguarded.

The manhunt will never relent until terrorists are brought to justice and the world is a safer place to live in.

Statement of Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye: Revenue Measures

The administration is pushing for new revenue measures as a matter of national interest and survival.

We expect stiff opposition to these measures but we hope that the detractors of the administration will stick to reasoned debate and sobriety.

Grandstanding and obfuscation will defeat our common objective of socioeconomic progress and political stability.

We are depending on the allies of the President in Congress to lead and win this fight and the executive branch is prepared to do its part by stepping up fiscal disciplinary measures while pursuing our pro-poor agenda, and sustaining the effort against corruption and waste.

Statement of Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye: Executive-Legislative Partnership

The President has never interfered with the internal prerogatives of Congress but extends support and counsel as part of the executive-legislative partnership for the interest of the people.

Any interaction between the Presidency and Congress has something to do with carrying forward the social and economic reform agenda that the entire administration is committed to work for, both at the executive and legislative levels.

G-CSIRT: Cyber watchdog launched

The Task Force for the Security of Critical Infrastructures of the Cabinet Oversight Committee on Internal Security under Undersecretary Abraham Purugganan will formally launch the Government Computer Security Incident Response Team (G-CSIRT) today.

It will be inaugurated by Executive Secretary Alberto Romulo at the Crime Investigation and Detection Group Headquarter in Camp Crame.

The G-CSIRT will be the focal point for reporting computer attacks intrusions on information and communications system. It will also provide a coordinated support system in response to such incidents.

In line with President Arroyo's campaign to protect the nation's critical infrastructures against terrorist organizations, the G-CSIRT is launched in response to the growing threats in Philippine cyberspace. Its launching marks the beginning of a coordinated and integrated effort to build the nation's capabilities in responding top threats in cyberspace.

"Our increasing interdependence on information and communication technology (ICT) and the interdependence of critical infrastructures coupled with the increasing value of information, and the convenience of using ICT to wage war have increase the risks in Philippine cyberspace," explained Purugganan.

The "I Love You" virus has extensively damage countless computer systems all over the globe. It has caused US-based telecom giant AT&T an estimated $10 billion loss in revenues not to mention the losses incurred by several local companies and firms.

Purugganan stressed the need in preventing and mitigating electronic crimes particularly network intrusions and hacking, telecommunication fraud, malicious virus transmission and other forms of cyber crimes that can affect critical infrastructures.

The G-CSIRT will focus on intrusions into information and communication systems of the twelve key sectors mentioned in the National Critical Infrastructure Protection Plan (NCIPP) namely: government, food and agriculture, transportation and communication, water, energy, health, emergency response services, manufacturing, banking and finance, strategic commercial centers, and cultural and religious sites and facilities.

One of the key factors in the success of this campaign to protect the Philippine cyberspace is the active participation of the private sector, the business community, the academe and the citizenry in general.

Jointly managed by the TFSCI and the Philippine National Police (PNP) through the Anti-Transnational Crime Division (ATCD), it will be supported by other agencies and the private sector who will comprise the executive and advisory boards respectively.

Critical infrastructures, as defined in the NCIPP, are comprised of two aspects—the physical and the cyber. The G-CSIRT is a manifestation of the Macapagal-Arroyo government's effort to address security requirement of the cyber aspect of critical infrastructures.

The G-CSIRT is one of the initial programs of the TFSCI that will trigger other programs for securing the Philippine cyberspace, such as the conduct of vulnerability assessment and security audits, building databases and capacity-building namely training and advocacy, to name a few.

Statement of the President: Olympic team

I am proud to send off our small contingent to the forthcoming Olympic Games in Athens.

They sally forth in a mission of friendship and goodwill at a time when these values must take precedence in a troubled world.

Like millions of Filipinos abroad, our athletes will be a symbol of Filipino excellence and competitiveness in all fields, and our commitment to the universal values of peace and solidarity among all nations and peoples.

May they reap the glory that they and our people deserve.

GMA's lead role in PCVF shows her firm resolve to wipe out graft in public offices

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo will personally head the Presidential Commission on Values Formation (PCVF) to lead the efforts in the fight against corruption as she has done with the National Anti-Poverty Council (NAPC), Malacañang said today.

The PCVF is a very important body, being one of the primary weapons of government to combat corruption so that the President will head it herself, Presidential Deputy Spokesman and Cabinet Secretary Ricardo Saludo said in a radio interview this morning.

She will spearhead the efforts of the PCVF to inculcate moral values through programs that will elevate the standards of service of government employees and to get feedback from the citizenry and the private sector on government officials who are allegedly engaged in corrupt activities, Saludo said.

As head of the PCVF, the President herself can order the transfer or immediate prosecution of errant officials if the lawyers of the Office of the President deem there is enough evidence to warrant it, Saludo explained.

During the Legislative-Executive Development Advisory Council (LEDAC) that tackled the anti-corruption and good governance part of the President's five economic reform programs, it was proposed that a law be enacted to protect "whistle blowers," those who report corrupt actions of officials, and to strengthen the office of the Ombudsman to make the PCVF truly effective.

The proposal to strengthen the Ombudsman will give it more funds, more personnel like investigators and more power like Hong Kong's Independent Commission against Corruption (ICAC) that was instrumental for the success of the former British colony's fight against corruption.

Saludo noted that during his stay in Hong Kong, the ICAC had the authority to appoint lawyers to defend witnesses.

They are also studying the possibility of placing the investigators of the Presidential Anti-Graft Committee under the Ombudsman, Saludo said.

GMA presents awards to 5 model barangays for their Eco-Waste Management Programs

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today honored this year's top five winners in the nationwide search for Model Barangays for Eco-Waste Management in a simple ceremony held this morning at the Ceremonial Hall of Malacañang.

The five barangays have the most efficient solid waste management program among the 42,000 barangays nationwide and out of more than 500 barangays that participated in the search.

This year's P1-million five-star Gold Award winner was Barangay Linomot, Jones, Isabela for being a role model for having an innovative ecological waste management (ESWM) program.

The ESWM program of Barangay Linomot includes maintaining a vegetable and flower garden in schools and households, using bamboo as aerator for compost piles and sack hanger to segregate usable materials from the collected garbage.

The 500,000 four-star Silver Award went to Brgy. Panoypoy, Calbayog City; the P250,000 three-star Bronze Award to Brgy. Holy Spirit in Quezon City; the P100,000 two-star awardee was Brgy. Bued, Calasiao, Pangasinan; and the P50,000 one-star winner was Brgy. Sta. Cruz, Sto. Tomas, Batangas.

According to Department of Environment and Natural Resources (DENR) Secretary Elisea Gozun, only 181 barangays had qualified for the final evaluation of the screening committee and this was further trimmed down to 35 barangays as finalists in this year's search.

Aside from providing the P1 million top purse from the Office of the President (OP) through the Office for Special Projects, President Macapagal-Arroyo also donated 10 presidential trophies for this year's winners.

The President's personal interest in the project stems from the fact that Republic Act (R. A.) 9003, the Ecological Solid Waste Management Act, was the first bill she signed into law after EDSA II.

The donors in the nationwide search were Senator Manuel Villar, who gave P1 million, and Sen. Francis Pangilinan, who gave P500,000.

Assisting the President during the awarding of prizes were Gozun, former First Lady Amelita Ramos, Interior and Local Government Undersecretary Agnes Devanadera, Misamis Oriental Representative Augusto Baculio and Iloilo City Mayor Jerry Treñas.

Quezon City Mayor Feliciano Belmonte, Jr., attended the ceremony to receive the bronze award and the special recognition for Quezon City which got an award for dumpsite conversion with power generation.

Other barangays that received special recognitions were Brgy. Calao-an, Candon, Ilocos Sur, Model Barangay for Household Composting; Brgy. Lubiano, Pilar Sorsogon, Model Barangay for Broad-Based Community Participation; Poblacion (Patay), Sagada, Mountain Province, Model Barangay for Eco-Volunteerism; and Purok II, San Joaquin, Iloilo, Model Barangay for Eco-Entrepreneurship and Youth Participation.

GMA sends off small RP contingent to 2004 Athens Olympic Games

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today sent off with pride the small Philippine Olympic Team set to leave this week to participate in the 2004 Olympic Games in Athens, Greece.

The 34 members of the Philippine Olympic Team, composed of 18 officials and 16 athletes, paid a courtesy call on the President this morning at the Malacañang's Heroes Hall.

"Like millions of Filipinos abroad, our athletes will be a symbol of Filipino excellence and competitiveness in all fields, and our commitment to the universal values of peace and solidarity among all nations and peoples," the President said.

"May they reap the glory that they and our people deserve," she added.

At the brief courtesy call, the President presented the Philippine flag to Stephen Hontiveros, chef de mission of the Philippine Olympic Team as her gesture of total support.

The delegation presented the President an Olympic jacket as a souvenir for the centennial Olympic Games starting on August 13.

Celso Dayrit, President of the Philippine Olympic Committee (POC), said the 16 athletes were chosen based on their performances and for passing the standards set by the International Olympic Committee.

Philippine Sports Commission Chairman Joseph Eric Buhain said Filipinos will positively watch a full television coverage of the 2004 Olympics through the government's NBN-channel 4, thanks to the President's timely intervention.

Buhain added that President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has offered a P5 million incentive from the government for each athlete who will win a gold medal. This has been augmented by P1 million by the private sector and another P1 million by South Korean firm Samsung.

"It is something to look forward to and I believe the athletes have paid their dues already and they deserve this one moment in time so to speak," Buhain said.

Four boxers, three taekwondo jins, two tracksters, five swimmers, one archer and one shooter make up the 16 athletes.

Aside from Dayrit and Buhain, officials present included POC Secretary General Romeo Ribano and Bacolod City Congressman Monico Puentevella, designated Olympic attaché.

Members of the Philippine Olympic Team present were Miguel Molina, Miguel Mendoza, Jackie Pangilinan, Elmer Dipuso, Mary Ann Rivero, Jose Santos, Rafael Chua, Jasmine Figueroa, Eduardo Buenavista, Lerma Babito, Donald Geisler III, Tshomlee Go, Jose Andoni Santos and Leah Coline Langit (athletes) finance officer Benjamin Ramos, Jr., finance officer Carlos Viola, swimming team leader Francisco Rivera III, swimming coach Anthony Lozada, archery coach Henry Manalang, athletics team leader Go Teng Kok, athletic coach Joseph Sy, boxing team leader Gemiliano Lopez, Jr., shooting coach Jose Ramon Corral, taekwondo head coach Jesus Morales III, taekwondo coach Tae Hyung Kim, boxing president Manuel Lopez, taekwondo president Roberto Aventajado, and taekwondo vice-president Sung Chun Hong.

Price of unleaded gasoline, diesel in RP still lowest in Asia, says Perez

Despite the unabated oil price increases in the world market, the Philippines still enjoys the lowest pump price of unleaded gasoline in Asia.

Energy Secretary Vince Perez revealed this today in a press briefing in Malacañang in the midst of the uncomfortable situation of oil prices in the international market.

"Yes, it is still no comfort to the riding public, but at least, it's maybe a consolation that price (of oil) in the country is still one of the lowest in the region," Perez said.

Perez said that based on the comparative oil prices dated August 3, 2004, the Philippines still has the lowest pump price of unleaded gasoline compared to its neighboring countries.

Aside from this, Perez revealed that the country ranks number two among those with the lowest pump price of diesel in the region.

He said Hong Kong tops among the countries with the highest prices of unleaded gasoline in peso per liter at 84.74 and diesel 49.08; next is Korea, 65.27 in unleaded gasoline and 41.42 in diesel; Singapore, 48.99 in unleaded and 27.86 in diesel; New Zealand, 44.81 and 24.07; Australia, 41.33 and 40.74; Cambodia, 36.25 and 24.65; Thailand, 26.10 and 19.64; and the lowest is the Philippines at 25.73 in unleaded gasoline and 20.23 in diesel.

Perez insisted that the uncomfortable phenomenon in world oil prices should not be a reason for Filipinos to be alarmed because the country is enjoying the lowest pump price of unleaded gasoline and diesel products.

He warned the public, especially the oil companies, not to engage in any unscrupulous activities nor use the situation to raise their oil prices because the government is ready to use the full force of the law to prosecute them.

Perez also assured that the country will not have an oil crisis because it has ample supply of oil products.

Perez explained that among the reasons why oil prices hit an all-time high are the limited spare production and refining capacity, the terror alerts in the United States, unresolved tax problems between Yukos, Russia's biggest oil exporter, and the Russian government, and the sabotage on Iraqi pipelines which have caused crude prices to appreciate 72 percent over the past 14 months.

The situation has further worsened after the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) proved powerless in halting the oil price surge, Perez said.

Perez says gov't willing to assist transport groups put up own gasoline stations

Qualified transport group cooperatives can now avail of training and financial assistance from the government in putting up their own gasoline stations amid the continuing hike in the prices of crude oil in the world market.

In a press briefing this afternoon in Malacañang, Energy Secretary Vincent Perez, Jr., disclosed the assistance package that the Macapagal-Arroyo administration is extending to public transport groups.

The assistance will help transport cooperatives become entrepreneurs by buying wholesale diesel and selling it at a low price to their members through their own pump stations.

“The second assistance we could have is the P30 million to P50 million from PAGCOR (Philippine Amusement and Gaming Corporation) that we could lend to qualified groups of transport cooperatives or even a transport association. We could also lend money through DBP to allow them to build and construct their own gasoline stations,” said Perez.

However, Perez cited some government conditions to be followed by the groups in having their own gas stations — that they only buy un-smuggled diesel product and meet the minimum safety environment standards that also comply with the Department of Energy (DOE), Bureau of Fire Protection and Local Government Code.

Aside from the financial assistance, the government could also help qualified groups through training programs which include pump station operation, marketing and financial trainings.

“The President has made it very clear that she's very sympathetic to the plight of the transport sector. And the DOE is willing to assist the jeepney cooperatives or the bus cooperatives if they wish to form a business to run their own gasoline station,” he added.

Perez appealed to the transport groups not to push through with their planned transport strike because it would only bring inconvenience to the commuting public and would not change the prices of petroleum products in the world market.

He said the government is monitoring companies that might be doing unauthorized calibration of pumps, selling adulterated diesel and other illegal practices.

Statement of Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye: Iraq aftermath

The President has stuck to her oath, taken responsibility, and has no apologies.

If this is the price to pay for being a Filipino and for leading the Filipino nation, so be it.

There are other, perhaps even more meaningful, ways to sustain and strengthen our strategic relationship with the United States.

We shall always work to keep the relationship firm in propelling the common commitment to fight terrorism domestically, regionally and worldwide.

Gov't taking all steps to keep prices of fuel, other main items from getting too high

The government is taking all steps to keep the prices of fuel and prime commodities from getting too high, Malacañang said today.

On the price of fuel, Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said the Department of Energy (DOE) is ready to offer training, and if possible, seed money to the transport sector so they can set up their own fuel outlets or avail of wholesale prices from suppliers.

If that happens, that will be a big help to the transport sector and may defer the request of some to increase fares, Bunye explained.

Energy Secretary Vince Perez is also having dialogues with the oil companies to make gradual their price adjustments when they have to.

On prices of prime commodities, Trade and Industry Secretary Cesar Purisima has also been having dialogues with manufacturers, retailers and distributors.

The good news, according to Bunye, is that they have promised to cooperate with the government by keeping their prices within reasonable range.

The Department of Trade and Industry is also linking up with local government units, which have price committees, to keep close watch on the prices of prime commodities, Bunye said.

Oil prices in the world market hit record levels this week because Russian oil giant Yukos is in deep financial trouble with its government and the Organization of Oil Exporting Countries (OPEC) said it cannot immediately hike its production.

GMA orders PNP to get killers of Batangas newsman

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has ordered the Philippine National Police (PNP) to go after the assailants of DZRH and Bulgar correspondent Arnel Manalo who was slain in an ambush in Bauan, Batangas Thursday.

In a radio interview this morning, Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said the President has also instructed the PNP to give protection to those seeking the help of the police especially those who think their lives are in grave danger.

“The President wants a thorough probe of the ambush and other past incidents involving journalists,” Bunye said.

Manalo was shot three times in the head and neck after dropping off his children at school. He was the second journalist slain in five days.

Last Saturday, a radio broadcaster known for his hard-hitting commentaries was gunned down in Ilocos Norte. A total of 56 newsmen has been slain since the restoration of democracy in 1986.

Bunye said the P1 million reward offered by President Macapagal-Arroyo for those who can give information that could lead to the arrest of perpetrators of crimes against journalists still stands.

“Iyang offer na iyan ay mananatili. Kaya kung mayroong makakatulong sa pag-solve sa mga pagpaslang sa members ng media, iyan ay pasasalamat at gagawaran ng kaukulang pabuya (That offer still stands. That’s why if there is anybody who could help solve the cases of slain journalists, there is a corresponding reward waiting),” he said.

Bunye cited the importance of everybody’s cooperation in the resolution of crimes, particularly those who were near the site of the ambush. “We will need the cooperation of the community to be able to solve these kinds of incidents,” he said.

Last June, the President ordered the creation of a task force to solve the killings of media men in the country who, according to her, are the champions of democracy.

The task force is composed of members of the PNP under Director General Hermogenes Ebdane and the National Press Club of the Philippines (NPC).

Appointed by the President as liaison for the NPC with the PNP was NPC Director Cris Maralit, a retired police general.

The President’s directive was made in the light of the killing then of Ely Binoya, the 49 year-old manager and commentator of the community radio station Radyo Natin in Malongon, Sarangani.

Community press rallies behind GMA’s 10-point agenda

The Publishers Association of the Philippines, Inc. (PAPI) has exhorted members of the community press to reach out to all sectors to enlist citizen participation and responsibility in rallying behind President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo’s 10-point economic agenda as their share in building a strong Republic.

PAPI President Juan P. Dayang, in a conference with mediemen from various parts of the country, solicited the help of the community press, including editors, columnists, correspondents, publishers and broadcasters, to support the five key reform packages presented by the President in her State of the Nation Address (SONA).

Members of the working press from print and broadcast have vowed the cooperation of their respective media offices in the realization of the President’s five reform programs aimed at producing more jobs through economic development, curbing graft and corruption by trimming the bureaucracy, providing social justice and basic needs, providing education and opportunities for the youth, and achieving energy independence and savings.

PAPI, Dayang said, is pledging its decisive support to the administration and the President's call for unity of purpose and patriotism for a common goal and self-sacrifice.

Dayang said members of the Fourth Estate should now unite and rally behind the President as a matter of patriotism and national interest. "The role of the community press in catalyzing the Filipino nation towards a better country cannot be overemphasized in the face of a ballooning budget deficit, growing unemployment rate, and the sluggish economy, among others," he said.

"Our country," Dayang said, "has just gone through a divisive electoral exercise and it is just incumbent upon us to stand four-square behind the President in her efforts to heal the wounds and forge a stronger bond of national unity."

GMA bares 5-point framework in achieving energy independence and savings

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today bared a five-point framework on the energy independence and savings reform package she promised in her July 26 State of the Nation Address (SONA).

The overall objective is to reduce energy importation to achieve a 60 percent self-sufficiency by 2010, the President said in her address at the general membership meeting and silver anniversary celebration of the Philippine Rural Electric Cooperatives Association, Inc. (PHILRECA) at the Philippine Trade Training Center in Pasay City.

This can be achieved, the President said, by:

- increasing reserves of indigenous oil and gas through exploration and becoming the world's top producer of geothermal energy in the world;
- developing renewable energy potential such as biomass, solar, wind and ocean resources;
- increasing use of alternative fuels like natural gas;
- firming up strategic alliances with other countries, particularly long time energy partners like Saudi Arabia, ASEAN neighbors, China and Russia; and
- saving on energy through strong efficiency and conservation programs.

"We need a reform package industry-wide of energy savings and independence because we have always been dependent on imported energy and therefore, vulnerable to the vagaries of global politics and economics, particularly events bearing on oil supply such as war, terrorism, and currency fluctuations," the President emphasized.

The Philippine National Oil Corp. (PNOC) will be upgraded to improve success rates in discovering new oil and gas reserves, she said.

The government has launched the first ever international geothermal bid round to invite private sector investment in 10 geothermal fields throughout the country and several major Japanese companies have already indicated interest, the President added.

There are opportunities for the development, utilization and commercialization of 16 wind power areas in the country, she pointed out.

The use of natural gas in public transport was introduced early this year and government will ensure that natural gas powered-buses will start plying the major routes in Metro Manila up to Calamba by 2005.

Inactive power plants such as Sucat, Limay, Malaya and the Bataan Nuclear Plant will be converted to gas-fired plants in 2005.

The program for coco-diesel as an alternative fuel will be accelerated.

In strategic alliances, the Philippines and Thailand are arranging for the use of the former US-Naval fuel storage facility in the Subic Freeport to make it a regional facility.

The President has directed the Department of Energy to spearhead a nationwide energy efficiency and conservation program.

“All these initiatives will significantly reduce our energy importation that will lead to 60 percent energy self-sufficiency for the Philippines by 2010,” the President said.

“I have laid down these frameworks upon which future leaders can build. We must brace for more work ahead of us. But I can tell the whole Philippines before our pioneering electric coops, our electric cooperatives have been able to do it. Now the rest of the country can do it in the future,” the President concluded.

The Good News: Electronic products lead seven-month export surge

For the seventh consecutive month, exports grew in June, posting an 8.2 percent increase over the same period last year.

According to the National Economic Development Authority (NEDA), total export revenues surged 17.7 percent to $2.275 billion led by electronic products which accounted for as much as 68.7 percent.

NEDA Director General and Socioeconomic Planning Secretary Romulo Neri said electronics components and devices accounted for 47.3 percent of the country's total exports, followed by semiconductors with 12.5 percent, or $1.567 billion in revenue.

"The 8.5 percent year-to-date growth of electronic products strengthens hopes that the country will achieve its 10 percent exports target for the year," Neri said.

Other electronic products that showed significant gains were electronic data processing, which increased by 40.3 percent and registered a 16.7 percent share in total exports; communication radar by 56.8 percent and a 1.68 percent share; and office equipment at 15.7 percent and a 0.54 percent share.

"The strong demand for electronic products is understandable because the US is projected to grow 4.6 percent (gross domestic product) this year, Japan by 4.4 percent," said Bienvenido Oplas Jr., economist at Think Tank, Inc.

Other top exports were apparel and clothing accessories, which continued to be the second highest earner for June with a combined share of six percent of total exports, or $199.92 million in revenues.

The third and fourth top exports were ignition wiring sets used in vehicles, aircraft and ships, up 10.9 percent or contributing a total $46.3 million revenue; and coconut oil, up 7.1 percent or contributing $36.64 million.

The fifth top export were other products manufactured from materials imported on consignment basis, registering a one percent share in June exports, or $33.05 million in revenues.

Export earnings from January to June increased by 8.52 percent to $18.734 billion last year.

The first semester's top five growth gainers were led by manufactured fertilizers with a 79.68 percent growth from the first six months of 2003; followed by a 56.49 percent increase in iron ore agglomerates, a 27.33 percent growth in seaweeds and carageenan, a 26.83 percent increase in processed tropical fruits and a 21.53 percent growth in metal components.

Statement of Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye: Energy independence

The President's energy team is already moving to get the five-point energy independence plan fully in place.

We have to turn our vulnerabilities to the international oil situation into opportunities for self-reliance.

We have to rely on our vision, our own hands and our own resources.

The road to energy independence and stability will not be easy but we must be ready to pay a price to achieve a better future for our children.

Statement of Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye: Ibon survey

There is no sense in beating a dead horse.

This is a recycled story and everybody knows that the entity that conducted the survey has a history of being biased against the government.

The fuss about the fraud is already in the hands of the electoral tribunal and our lawyers are handling it.

U.S. will continue to be a dominant factor in RP's foreign policy, says GMA

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo reiterated Friday night that the United States would continue to be a dominant factor in the country's foreign policy and that no single leader can break the strong partnership between the two countries because of their shared history and common democratic traditions.

In her speech last night at the President's Night of the Manila Overseas Press Club (MOPC) at the Hotel Intercontinental in Makati City, the President said Filipinos have enduring historical, cultural and economic ties with America personified by the three million Filipinos who now live in the US.

"No President can break those bonds because they are held together by permanent history," the President said, alluding to reports that there is now a crack in Philippine-American relations because of the President's decision to withdraw the Filipino humanitarian mission to Iraq ahead of schedule.

The President told some 500 top corporate leaders, government and military officials, media men, and members of the diplomatic corps that Philippine-American relations have been held together by a century-old bond and further tightened by common political tradition, by world wars fought together, by tens of thousands of brave soldiers who died in the battlefield of freedom.

After 9/11, the President said, RP-US ties became even stronger after she committed the Philippines to join the US-led fight against global terrorism with the full support of the Filipino people.

The President said that the decision to withdraw the Philippine contingent from Iraq was reached after the turnover of sovereignty to the Iraqi people on June 28.

The abduction of Angelo dela Cruz merely accelerated the timetable for the withdrawal that has been decided beforehand, the President explained.

"I have no apologies, and I stuck to my oath. But let me emphasize that our people and our nation remain committed to our friends and allies abroad even as we remain true to our conviction here at home," the President stressed.

The President said she ordered Filipino troops back home from Iraq trusting that allies will come to understand that the Philippines is in a special circumstance unlike the US, Australia, Bulgaria and other countries because eight million Filipinos live and work abroad, including 1.5 million in the Middle East, with 4,000 of them presently working in Iraq.

She said the anguish brought about by the death of Flor Contemplacion among the Filipinos and the fact that the Philippines gets one-tenth of its GNP (gross national product) from overseas workers, indeed, is one of the eight realities of our foreign policy.

“Many of these workers, in fact, are in the Middle East, so that resonates throughout our foreign policy,” the President said.

The President said the Filipinos in Iraq are the largest contingent of private foreign workers who are highly vulnerable to terrorists’ attacks, unlike combat troops of other coalition members who are armed and who stayed mainly in well-guarded camps.

She said she sought to reduce that vulnerability by authorizing the departure of Philippine troops after the turnover of sovereignty to the Iraqi people.

The President said that the Philippines enjoys a strong relationship with the Bush administration and values its role in helping the Philippines. “We share the same goal even if we will not always walk in the same path,” she said.

The President said there are other, even more meaningful, ways to strengthen the Philippines’ strategic relationship with the United States and both shall always work to keep the relationship firm in propelling the common commitment to fight terrorism, domestically, regionally, and worldwide.

In her speech, the President reiterated that her foreign policy consists in protecting the interest of the Philippines by responding to eight realities in the global and regional environment, namely:

- The United States, China and Japan, have a determining influence in the security situation and economic evolution of East Asia;
- More and more Philippine foreign policy decisions have to be made in the context of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN);
- The international Islamic community becomes more and more important to the Philippines;
- The coming years will see the re-definition of multilateral and inter-regional organizations like the World Trade Organization (WTO) in promoting common interests;
- The defense of the nation’s sovereignty and the protection of its environment and natural resources can be carried out to the extent possible while it gets others to respect its rights over maritime territory;
- The country’s economic growth will continue to require a lot of direct foreign investments;
- The Philippines can benefit most quickly from international tourism; and
- Overseas Filipinos will continue to play a critical role in the country’s economic and social stability.

Selling PEA’s reclaimed lands to raise funds — GMA

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo plans to use the Public Estates Authority (PEA), to be renamed Philippine Reclamation Authority, to raise much-needed funds for the government as part of the overall plan to privatize 70 percent of the government’s generating assets.

This will be through the PEA bidding out reclamation rights along Roxas Blvd. in full transparency with the Bishop Business Conference which has agreed to help the government in its bidding committees, the President said last night in the open forum after her main speech at the Manila Overseas Press Club’s (MOPC) “President’s Night” at the Intercontinental Hotel in Makati City.

The President’s comments came in answer to suggestions that government privatize assets and sell reclaimed lands to meet its fiscal problems other than sourcing revenues.

She made clear it is “in addition to” rather than “other than” raising revenues through taxes.

The idea for the PEA will be part of plan to privatize government assets like the National Transmission Company (TRANSCO).

The President recalled saying the government is also prepared to save or raise a hundred billion pesos during her July 26 State of the Nation Address (SONA) when she asked Congress to raise P80 billion through eight tax measures she proposed.

“I think what I will do is to let the authority (PEA) bid out the reclamation rights in full transparency,” the President said, adding that her economic managers agree with the idea.

The President had asked Congress to abolish the PEA but since it has not, she intends to bring it back to its original mandate, which was to administer the bidding out of reclamation rights.

There are ways and means of raising revenues in addition to the revenue measures she has asked Congress to pass and the plan for the PEA is part of the government’s way of saving or raising a hundred billion pesos, the President said.

RP-US joint efforts in fight vs. terrorism crucial to peace and stability in Mindanao

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo said Friday night the partnership of the Philippines and the United States in fighting terrorism in Mindanao is crucial in achieving economic growth and job creation in the country.

The President disclosed this Friday night during the “President’s Night” hosted by the Manila Overseas Press Club (MOPC) at the Hotel Intercontinental in Makati City.

“My highest priority for our country is economic growth and job creation. That drives our foreign policy. And to achieve economic growth and job creation, we need to come to terms with the Mindanao problem,” the President said.

The President said the importance of the fight against terrorism in Mindanao overshadows whatever the Philippines could contribute to the “Coalition of the Willing” in Iraq itself.

“Anything distracting our administration from getting its act together for the struggle for Mindanao needs to be put aside. And if our country is divided over the issue of Angelo dela Cruz, we will not be able to effectively address the Mindanao problem. I took that into consideration,” the President said.

To combat terrorism in Mindanao, the President said, the Philippines and the US have conducted the Balikatan exercises where Filipino and American troops share fighting skills and intelligence as well as humanitarian services.

“Even as I speak now, American troops are in joint training with our own troops in Carmen, North Cotabato. They are also conducting medical services among the poorest communities in Mindanao where the recruits of terrorism are bred,” the President said.

The President said humanitarian aid from the United States has also provided livelihood opportunities for former rebels of the Moro National Liberation Front (MNLF) which the Philippine government has forged a peace agreement in 1996.

The President thanked US Ambassador Francis Ricciardone, who was among those present, for being instrumental in these endeavors.

“Thank you, Frank for your passion. I have been witness to that passion. Ambassador Ricciardone grabs the chance to go with me whenever I go to those difficult places in Mindanao,” the President said.

The President said the Philippines is also sharing intelligence and operational information with Indonesia and Malaysia to curtail the movements of the Jemaah Islamiyah (JI) and the Al-Qaeda cells that are suspected to be building up in Southeast Asia.

She said the Philippines has crippled the Abu Sayyaf kidnap-for-ransom group and JI cells “are falling one-by-one” with the neutralization of their operatives Fathur Roman Al-Ghozi and Muklis Yunos and the recovery of deadly explosives.

“Yes, we are committed to the war against terrorism and it’s neither lip service nor posturing. Filipino soldiers and Filipino civilians had given up their lives beside Americans in this fight. And this fight will last as long as our shared democratic traditions and love for freedom hold. This fight is true for the Philippines, it is true for the rest of the world,” the President said.

GMA cites DoF’s ‘oversight’ function over PAGCOR

Although the Philippine Gaming and Amusements Corp. (PAGCOR) has been moved from the Office of the President to the Department of Finance (DoF), the latter will not run the former, President Gloria Macapagal said.

The decision she made with her economic managers was for the DoF to exercise oversight functions over PAGCOR, the President cleared this last night during the open forum of the Manila Overseas Press Club’s (MOPC) “President’s Night.”

“The meaning of this is not with the DoF to run the day-to-day affairs of PAGCOR,” she said. “Rather, the DoF will provide financial benchmarks comparable to the performance of the gaining corporations that are listed in the United States Tax Exchange. And PAGCOR must comply with these benchmarks.”

This means DoF will set targets for PAGCOR to realize.

The President placed PAGCOR under DoF through Executive Order No. 330 to facilitate coordination of policies and programs in the revenue-earning agency.

Several agencies under the Office of the President have been moved to other departments for tighter supervision.

In a related development, Finance Secretary Juanita Amatong said they have alternative administrative measures to meet the fiscal deficiency of the government.

“We are doing this by implementing our tax laws properly. Enforcement is very important. We have to tell the BIR (Bureau of Internal Revenue) that they have to look after the stores and other establishments that are not paying taxes,” Amatong said.

The BIR has been doing that lately through the so-called “tax mapping.” They went to stores not issuing receipts and asked them to pay more taxes, Amatong added.

GMA says China, one of RP’s most important neighbors

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo cited Friday night the close historical and cultural ties that bond the Chinese and the Filipinos as well as the fruitful economic relations between the two countries.

“China represents one of the most important neighbors for the Philippines aside from its being an economic power in the world or globally,” the President said during the open forum that followed her speech at the Manila Overseas Press Club’s “President’s Night” at the Intercontinental Hotel in Makati City Friday night.

China, she said, will continue to play a determining factor in the regional stability and economic security of Asia, along with the United States and Japan.

“I just want to say that we appreciate our very good relationship with China,” the President said when asked about her expectations of the trip to Beijing, which she claimed has yet to be confirmed.

Should the China visit push through, the Chief Executive will attend the International Conference of Asian Political Parties slated Sept. 3-5 in Beijing.

It would be her first trip abroad since her new term began last June 30.

Since China joined the world trade, the Chief Executive said, the Philippines has enjoyed a very robust increase in its exports, a surplus in its balance of trade with the mainland and a tremendous amount of assistance, particularly in the country’s agricultural development.

She said that hybrid rice, which has doubled the income of many Filipino farmers, comes from China. China, she added, is also financing the North Rail project, one of the many important undertakings of her administration in the next six years to decongest Metro Manila.

“So indeed, our relationship with China is very, very fruitful economically in addition to the old historical and cultural ties that we have been enjoying together,” the President said.

The Good News: ADB forecasts 4.8 percent GDP growth for RP this year

The Philippines would most likely post a 4.8 percent growth in gross domestic product (GDP) this year, about 0.8 per cent higher than expected, according to the Asian Development Bank (ADB).

In its semi-annual Asia Economic Monitor report, the ADB said the Philippines was among the “positive surprises” among East Asian economies along with Singapore, Malaysia and the People’s Republic of China.

The report said the Philippines was benefiting from the turnaround in global electronics demand, driven by strong growth in US capital spending.

“This trend is likely to continue in the months ahead,” the report said. “Remittances from overseas workers are also likely to remain strong, given the global economic rebound.”

Coupled with the end of political uncertainties tied to this year’s presidential election, the ADB report said these factors should support domestic demand and growth.

Even with the revised forecast, however, the Philippines is seen as posting one of the slowest growths in the region, outpacing only Brunei’s 4 percent and Indonesia’s 4.6 percent.

China is seen to post the strongest growth at 8.7 percent, while Malaysia, Singapore, and Thailand are projected to expand by 6.5 percent, 6.9 percent and 6.6 percent respectively.

Overall, the 2004 growth projection for East Asia was upgraded to 7.3 percent from earlier forecast of 6.6 percent, taking into account healthier economies in the United States and Japan, buoyant intra-regional trade and continued strength of domestic demand in most countries.

The robust growth of East Asia, considered the fastest growing region in the world, is expected to peak in the aftermath of the 1997 Asian currency crisis, the ADB said.

East Asia covers the 10 Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) member countries plus the People’s Republic of China and the Republic of Korea.

But the region’s synchronized economic growth is expected to peak this year close to its post-crisis high of 7.5 percent in 2000 and moderate somewhat next year to 6.5 percent as growth in the major industrial countries and China slows to more sustainable levels.

The Philippines’ growth is also seen to soften to 4.3 percent in 2005.

GMA minimizing impact of oil price rise on food and transportation

The soaring price of oil worldwide is a problem the nation has to face squarely, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo admitted.

“The most important thing is how to minimize the translation of the oil price increase into very rapid and big increases in the prices of our basic commodities, especially our food and transportation,” the President said in the open forum of the Manila Overseas Press Club’s (MOPC) “President’s Night” Friday.

Thus the government has embarked on a concerted thrust for the country to become less dependent on imports for energy, the President said, referring to the five-point framework to achieve this objective which she presented to the Philippine Rural Electric Cooperatives Association Friday on its silver anniversary celebration.

Explaining the immediate and long-term efforts geared to this objective, Energy Secretary Vince Perez said the country has reduced oil importation for a power mix.

From 50 percent when the President took over, oil importation has been reduced to only 13 percent today, thanks to the Malampaya natural gas, Perez said.

The country was 48 percent self-sufficient in energy when the President took over and today it’s up to 52 percent and the President intends to bring it further up to 60 percent by the end of the decade, Perez furthered.

For the moment, government is trying to help transport groups, the bus and jeepney operators who are caught in the squeeze between the deregulated oil market and a regulated fare market and thus minimize the effect of imported oil on the prices of basic commodities, Perez said.

“What we are trying to do is using the power of persuasion, asking the oil companies to give assistance and even encouraging these bus and jeepney cooperatives to own and operate their own gasoline stations where they can avail of wholesale prices,” Perez explained.

“That is the initiative of the President over the last few months,” Perez said.

Malacañang brushes off Ibon survey

Presidential Spokesman Ignacio R. Bunye has questioned the integrity of Ibon Foundation, saying the survey firm has not been fair and has a history, in fact, of being biased against the government.

Bunye disputed the survey results supposedly undertaken by the firm that claim most of Filipinos do not believe President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo won the May 10 elections.

“Alam ninyo ito ay recycled na istorya at alam naman natin ang katayuan ng survey firm na nagsagawa ng survey na ito. Talagang may history itong grupong sa pagiging biased laban sa gobyerno (This is a recycled story and we all know the reputation of this firm that conducted this survey. This entity has a history of being biased against the government),” Bunye said.

Nevertheless, Bunye said the fuss about the supposed fraud is already in the hands of the electoral tribunal and the lawyers of the President and the opposition are tackling it.

“Kaya hintayin na lang natin kung ano ang magiging resulta (That is why what we should do is wait for the results),” Bunye said.

Statement of the President: UN Aid

We appreciate the UN's development agenda for the country.

It is a close companion of our ten-point agenda and five reform packages.

We have always adhered to the human development principles of the UN and the holistic approach combining good governance and equitable economic programs.

Our quest for human progress extends beyond our borders, enveloping eight million Filipinos abroad and their host nations.

Statement of Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye: Towards Energy Independence

The fate of the Bataan Nuclear Power Plant is subject to technical feasibility.

Meanwhile, we will push ahead with the essential items in the President's energy independence package such as the more extensive use of natural gas, developing coco-diesel and enlisting alternative sources of energy to stabilize prices and supply in the long term.

We have to with the reality of a global oil crunch in the future.

We must exhaust all options to secure our economic future.

Statement of Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye: Economic Outlook

The positive view on our economy despite the series of oil price hikes indicates that both our crisis management efforts and our macroeconomic management are sound.

Rising oil prices will have a dampening effect on the economy but we must seek all opportunities to gain ground by being more productive and cost-effective in our development programs.

We have made a strong start over the recent years and we must keep to our targets despite deepening constraints.

Statement of Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye: 9/11 Report

The report is outdated and there is no sense on inflicting this label on the Philippines when we have already neutralized terror in various fronts.

We have been up against terrorism even before 9/11 and that is why we were the first to join the global fight against terror.

Since then we have successfully mounted offensives that have virtually crippled the Abu Sayyaf and pushed the JI deep underground.

We acknowledge that there is still work to be done and we are doing it in close cooperation with our allies.

Fate of Bataan Nuclear facility still subject to technical review – Palace

It's still an idea subject to a thorough checking out, Malacañang said today of the conversion of the mothballed Bataan Nuclear Power Plant (BNPP) into a natural gas-fired facility.

“The fate of the Bataan Nuclear Power Plant is subject to technical feasibility,” Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said in a statement this morning.

“Meanwhile, we will push ahead with the essential items in President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo’s energy independence package such as the more extensive use of natural gas, developing coco-diesel and enlisting alternative sources of energy to stabilize prices and supply in the long term,” Bunye continued.

Bunye said the country must live with the reality of a global oil crunch and must exhaust all options to secure its economic future.

“The road to energy independence and stability will not be easy but we must be ready to pay a price to achieve a better future for our children,” Bunye said.

The President expressed a desire to have the BNPP converted to use natural gas facility when she initially bared a five-point framework on her energy independence and savings reform package Friday to the Philippine Rural Electric Cooperatives Association.

The Department of Energy (DOE) has been looking into the feasibility of the conversion as part of the total effort to help lower electricity rates and ease the country’s dependence on imported oil which has been hitting record price levels in the world market.

The DOE will make the final recommendation since it has all the information on the expenses government will incur in the conversion and is aware of all the reasons for and against it, Presidential Deputy Spokesman Ricardo Saludo said Sunday.

DOE Secretary Vince Perez said the BNPP is ripe for privatization and may be auctioned off after 70 percent of the generating assets of the National Power Corporation has been sold so the private sector can undertake the conversion.

Peso closes stronger today – BSP

The peso today opened firmer at P55.66 compared to last Friday’s close of P55.715, as the US dollar weakened following the lower-than-expected US non-farm payroll data for July.

The Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas (BSP) said some banks' dollar short-selling and remittances from the overseas Filipino workers (OFWs) also buoyed the peso.

These allowed the peso to post gains up to a high of P55.60 in early trade, the BSP said.

The peso's gains, however, were capped by other players' dollar buying to cover their short positions and maturing obligations.

The emergence of dollar demand from the oil, manufacturing and power sectors also weighed on the local currency, the BSP said. These caused the peso to weaken slightly to P55.695 in late morning trade.

But for the morning session, the peso moved within the range of P55.60 – P55.695, with the last transaction dealt at P55.69, still stronger than its performance last week, the BSP said. Volume of transactions amounted to $110.10 million.

Year-to-date, the peso has depreciated by about 0.34 percent, P55.69 as of 12:00 noon today versus P55.50 at close of trading December 2003, the BSP said.

RP committed to ASEAN's goals and vision – DFA

The Philippines will continue to honor its commitment for a strong Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) as the Department of Foreign Affairs (DFA) climaxes its weeklong celebration of the grouping's founding 37 years ago with a diplomatic high tea reception August 12 at the DFA.

The diplomatic reception is a joint activity of ASEAN-Philippines, the embassies of ASEAN member countries and Dialogue/Sectoral Partners, said DFA Secretary Delia Albert who will be guest of honor and speaker.

It will focus on the continuing ASEAN efforts to promote regional peace and stability through abiding respect for justice and the rule of law in the relationship among countries in the region as well as in adherence to the principles of the United Nations Charter.

The ASEAN was established August 8, 1967 in Bangkok by the five original members – Indonesia, Malaysia, Singapore, Thailand and the Philippines. Brunei Darussalam joined it in 1984 followed by Vietnam in 1995, Laos and Myanmar in 1997 and Cambodia in 1999.

The ASEAN Declaration states the aims of the association is to accelerate economic growth, social progress and cultural development through joint endeavors in the spirit of equality and partnership in order to solidify and strengthen the foundation of a prosperous and peaceful community of Southeast Asian nations.

In 1997, a presidential proclamation declared August 7-13 annually as ASEAN Week in the Philippine.

In commemoration of ASEAN's 37th anniversary, the DFA is flying the national flags of its member states during the whole month of August.

Foreign investments in RP's E-services sector continue to rise – DOLE

Labor and Employment Secretary Patricia Sto. Tomas said opportunities and investments in the Philippines' e-services sector continue to strengthen due to the country's human capital and other strengths.

Sto. Tomas said that Nu Comm International, one of Canada's 50 best managed companies, has chosen to bring its call center business to the Philippines in recognition of its qualified human resources and the rapid development of its information and communications technology (ICT) infrastructure.

“Overseas, ICT-skilled Filipino workers are preferred in countries like Ireland and other European states, Canada, Korea, Singapore, Japan and similar emerging labor markets for overseas Filipino workers (OFWs),” Sto. Tomas said.

The Department of Labor and Employment (DOLE), through its Technical Education and Skills Development Authority (TESDA), she said, will strengthen skills training and upgrading efforts in response to the call of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo to focus on technical education and English, technology and science so as to optimize the opportunity.

The fact that e-services investors are able to provide round the clock and world-class ICT services efficiently and effectively to worldwide clients is a clear proof of the country’s strategic advantages that have ensured its position as a valuable e-services hub, according to a TESDA Labor Market Intelligence Report (LMIR).

Such advantages include the country’s affordable, quality human resources, its well-developed ICT infrastructure, friendly and hospitable lifestyle and affinity with Western culture.

“Experts agree that the demand for e-services from the Philippines will continue to grow,” the LMIR said, stressing that the Information and Technology and E-Commerce Council chaired by the President had identified customer contact, or call centers, medical transcription services, and construction-related engineering design as some of the country’s ICT priorities.

Contact centers in the country, according to the LMIR, are projected to reach an aggregate growth rate of 50 percent this year, citing data provided by the Department of Trade and Industry.

From a state of infancy two or three years ago, ICT member companies now employ some 30,000 to 40,000 workers, a figure that is expected to grow four-fold due to their increasing client base.

OSG challenges CA ruling before the Supreme Court

The Office of the Solicitor General (OSG) has asked the Supreme Court (SC) to reverse a decision of the Court of Appeals (CA) declaring that the Office of the Ombudsman has no authority to impose administrative sanctions against erring government officials and employees.

In filing the case, the OSG asserted that the CA ruling would weaken the Ombudsman’s powers necessary in pursuing its lifestyle checks on ranking officials suspected of having illegally enriched themselves while in government service, notably those in the Bureau of Customs, Bureau of Internal Revenue and the Department of Public Works and Highways.

Over the past several months, the Ombudsman has been imposing administrative punishments on officials who have flunked the lifestyle check.

The OSG, in its petition, emphasized that the CA decision may have unwittingly amended the Ombudsman Act of 1989.

The ruling might have also abrogated existing jurisprudence upholding the Ombudsman’s administrative disciplinary powers over erring government officials and personnel.

The case stemmed from a complaint for alleged violation of the Code of Conduct and Ethical Standards filed against Ana Marie Madriaga of the San Juan Elementary School and the canteen manager of the school.

After conducting administrative adjudication proceedings, the Ombudsman held the two respondents liable for grave misconduct and ordered their suspension for six months without pay.

The respondents filed a motion for reconsideration, but the Ombudsman denied it, prompting them to elevate the case to the Appellate Court.

The CA ruled that the findings of the Ombudsman in administrative cases are merely recommendatory in nature, and that the decision to impose penalty belongs to the proper disciplinary authority. In the case of Madriaga and her co-accused, the Department of Education has the power to punish them.

The OSG argued that the CA ruling has set a “dangerous precedent” which, if left unchallenged, could negate efforts of the Ombudsman to stem the tide of graft and corruption in the bureaucracy.

According to the OSG, the Constitution and the laws have given the Ombudsman ample authority not only to prosecute criminal offenders in the government service, but also to impose administrative sanctions, including preventive suspensions, during the pendency of the administrative case.

Palace calls on gov’t info officers to attend VISCOMNET meet in Cebu City

Malacañang today called on all information officers of agencies at the regional and local government level in the Visayas to attend the annual general assembly of the Visayas Communicators Network (VISCOMNET) to be held next week in Cebu City.

In Memorandum Circular No. 62, Executive Secretary Alberto Romulo said all heads of government departments, bureaus and local government units in the Visayas are enjoined to authorize their information officers to participate in the VISCOMNET convention on August 18 to 20 at the Cebu Grand Hotel.

Romulo stressed that such attendance would be on official time and with expenses, such as transportation, per diems, registration fees, and other necessary fees and expenses at rates prescribed in accordance with existing policies of the Department of Budget and Management (DBM), the Commission on Audit (CoA) and the Civil Service Commission (CSC).

Romulo said that the expenses would be chargeable against the funds of their respective agencies/offices, subject to the availability of funds and the usual accounting and auditing rules and regulations.

In his memorandum, Romulo cited VISCOMNET as a network of government information officers in the Visayas that was organized through the efforts of the regional directors of the Philippine Information Agency-Visayas Cluster and aims to enhance the professional growth of government information officers in the Visayas.

He said the convention seeks to consolidate government information in the Visayas for the enhancement of good governance, promote and advocate the ten-point agenda spelled out by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo and tap the private and non-government sectors and share the best practices in communication.

DTI chief supports bill on hiked excise taxes on fuel

Trade and Industry Secretary Cesar Purisima today expressed support to a bill imposing additional taxes on petroleum products, saying it is needed to “squarely address our budget deficit problem.”

“The additional excise taxes on petroleum products is one of our most viable alternatives considering that it is easy to collect, monitor and, when necessary, adjust,” Purisima said.

He pointed out that notwithstanding the projected increase in fuel prices due to the new measure, the country would still have the lowest prices of petroleum products in the ASEAN.

Rep. Danilo Suarez (LP, Quezon) filed House Bill 1323 imposing P2 per liter increase in taxes on petroleum products. The measure is expected to generate an additional P29.7 billion in revenues for the government.

Purisima noted that these additional taxes could be structured to be “as progressive as possible” so that the effect of the increase in fuel prices may be mitigated for the great majority of the consumers.

“I support the exemption of highly sensitive fuel products such as LPG (liquefied petroleum gas) from this additional tax. I also believe that diesel should be spared, or at the very least, have a much lower tax rate,” Purisima said.

The secretary assured the people that the Department of Trade and Industry (DTI) would exhaust all avenues to ensure that traders would not take advantage of the surges in fuel prices.

“With or without these tax measures, the DTI will continue to monitor the prices of goods and bring to task those unscrupulous sellers who impose unwarranted burdens on consumers,” Purisima stressed.

RP-U.S. ties would transcend disagreements over Iraq, says Albert

Relations between the Philippines and the United States would go beyond disagreements over the issues of Iraq, Foreign Affairs Secretary Delia Albert said today.

“Our relationship continues to be strong because of our deep respect for each other,” Albert issued this statement after meeting today with US Ambassador Francis Ricciardone.

She assured the nation that joint military training exercises, particularly in counter-terrorism, peace-building efforts in Mindanao, and trade and investments missions would continue. “Cooperation will also continue over the next five years on the Philippine Defense Reform Program,” Albert said.

Albert said interest in the Philippines remains high and is reflected in the investment mission organized by the US-ASEAN Business Council for September.

Ambassador Ricciardone, meanwhile, said he agrees that the two countries did have a very serious disagreement. “Nonetheless, we are going to work as hard as we can on all things that are important to both our countries,” he said.

Ricciardone said the US welcomes the remarks made by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo last Friday at the Manila Overseas Press Club where she reaffirmed the Philippine government’s resolve in fighting terrorism and rebuilding Iraq.

“She was very clear about the firm commitment of her government in rebuilding Iraq with the contributions of the Filipino workers over there and her own commitment to continue working with the country’s allies on the global war against terrorism. These are things that are important to both our countries,” Ricciardone said.

The President has repeatedly said that U.S. would continue to be a dominant factor in the country’s foreign policy and that no single leader can break the strong partnership between the two countries because of their shared history and common democratic traditions.

“No President can break those bonds because they are held together by permanent history,” the President said, alluding to reports that there is now a crack in Philippine-American relations because of the President’s decision to withdraw the Filipino humanitarian mission to Iraq ahead of schedule.

The President also noted that Philippine-American relations have been held together by a century-old bond and further tightened by common political tradition, by world wars fought together, by tens of thousands of brave soldiers who died in the battlefield of freedom.

She said the decision to withdraw the Philippine contingent from Iraq was reached after the turnover of sovereignty to the Iraqi people on June 28.

“I have no apologies, and I stuck to my oath. But let me emphasize that our people and our nation remain committed to our friends and allies abroad even as we remain true to our conviction here at home,” the President said.

Loans to SMEs to triple to P9 billion for the next 6 years

In line with President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's 10-point agenda, the Small Business Guarantee and Finance Corporation (SB Corp.) will triple its lending to small and medium enterprises (SMEs) from the present P3 billion to P9 billion within the next six years.

SB Corp., a government financial institution (GFI), would also set up an SME Exchange within 6 years to mobilize equity funds for SMEs similar to what the Philippine Stock Exchange (PSE) does for publicly listed companies, SB Corp. Chairperson Zorayda Amelia C. Alonzo said.

Alonzo added that the SB Corp. would also expand its fund base from local and foreign sources and increase its presence in the countryside through the accreditation of rural and thrift banks.

Meanwhile, SB Corp. President Benel P. Lagua said they consider rural and thrift banks as main delivery units in the provinces. He added that SB Corp.'s approach towards lending is through active partnerships.

SB Corp. released a total of P1.4 billion to 924 firms in various industry sectors nationwide in the first semester of this year, up by 57 percent from a year-ago level.

Lagua said the increase in lending was due to SB Corp.'s active participation in the SME Unified Lending Opportunities for National Growth (SULONG) Program. Apart from SB Corp., other GFIs that issue loans under the "Sulong" program are the Development Bank of the Philippines (DBP), the Land Bank of the Philippines (LBP), and Philexim.

"We also attribute the increase in our lending portfolio to our aggressive marketing efforts, more liberalized accreditation process for our bank partners, and our competitive interest rates," he said.

SB Corp. lent some P962.2 million under its wholesale lending program, P339.2 million under its retail lending program, and certified a total of P124.8 million worth of loans under its guarantee program.

The other priority thrusts of SB Corp. within the next six years are:

- Advocacy for policy measures to facilitate easier lending to SMEs by banks;
- Review and strengthening of the implementation of the provisions of the Magna Carta for SMEs on mandatory lending to SMEs, thereby improving their access to formal private sector credit sources;

- Setting up a stable framework for improvement and implementation of SME development policies, programs, and strategies consistent with the SME Development Agenda; and
- Funding of the SME Development (SMED) Council to improve its ability to link with and mobilize private sector organizations in efforts to improve SMEs' credit absorption capacities.

GMA declares September as Social Security month

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has declared the month of September, and every year thereafter, as Social Security month as part of the 47th anniversary of the Social Security System on September 1.

In Proclamation No. 682, which she signed last August 4, the President said it is in the national interest to stimulate public awareness on the matters and issues involving social security protection and “to encourage every citizen to take personal responsibility in uplifting their economic and social conditions through their active membership in the SSS.”

The same proclamation said there is a need to highlight the role of the SSS in developing and promoting a viable, universal and equitable social security protection scheme through world class service.

The SSS, established Sept. 1, 1957 through the Social Security Act of 1954, marks a significant milestone in the efforts of the Philippine government to institute a mechanism for providing social security to the Filipino people.

The one-month period covered by the proclamation is intended to mark the celebration of the milestones achieved by the agency in realization of its mandate, to promote the importance of membership in the SSS and to publicize the programs and benefits available to SSS members and the role of SSS in nation-building.

The President enjoined all departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of government, local government units, and government owned or controlled corporations, as well as the mass media and the entire citizenry, to extend their whole-hearted support and cooperation by conducting specific programs in coordination with the SSS.

Statement of Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye: RP-US Relations

We appreciate the position of the US government, as well as the candor of the US Ambassador.

The strains brought about by recent events are part of a maturing and mellowing partnership that recognizes the uniqueness of each other's interests within a larger strategic universe.

The US is still the Philippines' strongest ally in the world, considering our long history of friendship and sacrifice for freedom.

It may take some time to patch things up but time will do the healing as we strive to resolve our principled disagreements.

Statement of Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye: New Revenue Measures

This is a matter of national survival and we have always emphasized that we have to endure the pain now if we expect to enjoy any future gains.

Government will take the hit, too, and the cutdowns have already begun.

We will not impose anything upon the people that we are not willing to impose upon ourselves.

We are willing to listen to the opposition and all well-meaning sectors but they must present alternatives to ensure our national survival and not means to delay the pain.

We are all in this together and let us not make this another stage for national division and political strife.

Palace: U.S. remains as RP's strongest ally

Malacañang said today that the current strains in US-Philippine relations notwithstanding, the United States remains as the Philippines' strongest ally in the world.

Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said in a statement that the "strains brought about by recent events are part of a maturing and mellowing partnership that recognizes the uniqueness of each other's interests within a larger strategic universe."

Relations between the two countries have cooled following the Philippine government's decision to advance the pullout of its 51-humanitarian contingent from Iraq to secure the release of kidnapped Filipino truck driver Angelo dela Cruz.

Malacañang had called for understanding by its allies of the special circumstance the Philippines is in. There are 1.5 million Filipinos working in the Middle East, 4,000 of them deployed in Iraq.

Bunye said that the US and the Philippines were bound by a "long history of friendship and sacrifice for freedom" and while it "may take some time to patch things up . . . time will do the healing as we strive to resolve our principled disagreements."

He said the Philippine government understands Washington's position on the issue, which was conveyed to the government by US Ambassador Francis Ricciardone through Foreign Affairs Secretary Delia Albert.

Asked about Albert's statement on the Philippine commitment to continue working with its allies in rebuilding Iraq, Bunye said the foreign secretary emphasized two things: first, that the government is prepared to help to the extent that it is in a position to do so, and second, that national interest will be of highest priority.

Malacañang not keen on revival of OPSF

Malacañang said today it is not so keen on reviving the Oil Price Stabilization Fund (OPSF), claiming that such a step would not help stop increases in oil prices in the world market.

In a radio interview this morning, Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said even if local measures were adopted in an effort to put the breaks on oil price surges, such steps would have no effect on world oil market prices which are dictated by such factors as supply and demand and other global developments.

"How do you address attack on pipelines," he asked, referring to the bombing of Iraq's oil infrastructures by insurgents. "How do you address the economic difficulty being faced by the biggest Russian oil supplier?"

Last week oil prices in the world market hit record highs because of the deep financial problems of Yokos, Russia's oil giant.

Bunye was reacting to clamors from the transport sector for a possible scrapping of, or introducing amendments to, the oil deregulation law.

The OPSF was imposed in the 1980s when oil prices were still regulated. The fund served as a buffer against wild swings in world crude oil prices.

“Itong mga ganitong panukala ay napag-aralan na rin noon (These kind of proposals have already been studied before),” Bunye said. “But this time, sa palagay ko ay hindi naman makaka-solve yan, hindi naman makakapigil iyan sa pagtaas ng presyo sa world market (I don’t think it would help solve the problem. It cannot stop the rise in world crude prices).”

The government is invoking its strong ties with Kuwait and Indonesia in its quest for alternative ways to arrest spiraling fuel prices in the local market. The Philippines has also started buying crude from Kazakhstan.

In an earlier interview, Bunye said the Philippines is also eyeing the use of compressed natural gas (CNG) to ease the country’s dependence on imported oil.

The rich Malampaya natural gas deposits off Palawan are expected to dramatically reduce the country’s fuel import.

Bunye disclosed that CNG, which costs practically half the price of diesel, is now being experimented as an alternative fuel for motor vehicles.

Gov’t-NDF peace talks to resume August 24 in Oslo, Norway

Notwithstanding the continued captivity of two Army soldiers by the communist New People’s Army and fresh encounters between government troops and the insurgents, peace talks between the government and the National Democratic Front (NDF) will continue, according to lead negotiator Silvestre Bello III.

Bello said the second of seven substantive reforms agreed previously by both the government and NDF peace panels would be discussed when the talks resume Aug. 24 to 30 in Oslo, Norway.

“It would not affect the resumption of the next round of talks,” said Bello who was also chairman of the panel that held previous negotiations with the NDF headed by Luis Jalandoni.

“But I’m sure this would be brought out during the formal table negotiations,” he said, referring to the two soldiers held captive by the rebels in Bicol.

Previous rounds of formal peace talks were held Feb. 10-14 and Mar. 30-Apr. 3 this year with Oslo as the third party facilitator.

Bello said that previous members of the peace panel are also set to sit down with him at the negotiating table including Presidential Adviser on the Peace Process Teresita Deles, Risa Hontiveros-Baraquel, Chito Gascon and Tarlac Governor Jose Yap.

He said the forthcoming talks is crucial in that the two panels will discuss the nitty gritty, including land reform and economic sovereignty, among others.

The two panels have previously agreed to finally set in motion the full operationalization of the Joint Monitoring Committee (JMC), which is the principal mechanism tasked to monitor the implementation of the Comprehensive Agreement on Respect for Human Right and International Humanitarian Law (CARHRIHL).

They have also agreed to work for the indemnification of human rights victims of the Marcos regime.

‘Patubig’ will continue — Palace

Malacañang today belied reports that the “Patubig” program of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has been scuttled.

Presidential Spokesman Ignacio R. Bunye dismissed reports that “Patubig” was only good for the duration of the electoral campaign last May, saying the President is determined that people, especially in the waterless barangays covered by the program, are assured of adequate supply of safe drinking water.

Launched in December 2003, Patubig seeks to provide piped-in water to 956,541 waterless households in Metro Manila and the provinces of Rizal, Cavite, Bulacan and Laguna.

The President has also ordered the expansion and improvement of the water distribution service in Metro Manila by Manila Water Company and Maynilad Water Services, Inc.

From 8.84 million in 2000, the number of Metro Manila residents provided with potable water rose to 10.8 million in June 2004.

The government has also completed several major foreign-assisted water supply projects in various parts of the country, including the Cotabato City Water Supply Improvement Program, Gen. Santos Water Supply Improvement Program and the Pili Water Supply Improvement Program.

A total of 24 water supply expansion projects were also completed in various cities nationwide, while 138 water supply projects were rehabilitated at a total cost of P981 million.

LEDAC tackles GMA’s proposed tax measures

The Legislative-Executive Development Advisory Council (LEDAC) today focused on the country’s fiscal situation with Finance Secretary Juanita Amatong presenting several Malacañang-proposed revenue generating measures for consideration of the lawmakers.

In a press briefing following the four-and-a-half hours LEDAC meeting, Cabinet members and Congress leaders agreed to work together to turn around the country’s finances.

Trade and Industry Secretary Cesar Purisima said the measures included accelerated development of infrastructure, promotion of the small and medium enterprises to generate more job and livelihood opportunities, expansion of basic services and upgrading of educational facilities.

“One thing that was raised is that if we send a signal to the international business and financial community that (we have put) our act together, there is a chance we can get upgraded in terms of our credit ranking,” Purisima told reporters.

He said a one-notch improvement in the country’s credit ranking would mean a P20-billion savings in interest alone.

The LEDAC meeting, the third under President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo’s new mandate, also explored avenues to bring down the country’s consolidated public sector deficit (CPSD), currently placed at P317 billion, or 6.7 percent of the gross domestic product (GDP).

The President wants to trim down the CPSD to only three percent of the GDP at the end of her term, along with the national government deficit estimated at P198 billion, or 4.2 percent to zero percent by 2010.

“The important point here is this is a joint agenda (on which) we will work together to make sure that we consider the needs of our economy and our people,” Purisima said.

The financial measures tackled by the LEDAC were:

- Gross income tax system for corporations and the self-employed;

- Indexation of the excise tax on sin products;
- Increased excise tax on petroleum products;
- General tax amnesty with submission of statement of assets and liabilities;
- Lateral attrition system;
- Franchise tax on telecommunications to replace the value added tax (VAT); and
- Two-step increase in the VAT rate.

Purissima pointed out, however, that a joint LEDAC task force would still have to work on the prioritization scheme and the details of each measure.

He added that the LEDAC members have initially agreed to raise P100 billion in administrative and expense savings.

Among those who attended today's LEDAC meeting held at the State Dining Room of Malacañang were Vice President Noli de Castro, Senate President Franklin Drilon, Speaker Jose de Venecia, Jr., Senators Aquilino Pimentel, Juan Flavio, Ralph Recto, Francisco Pangilinan, Manuel Roxas II, and Representatives Jesli Lapus, Benigno Aquino III, Junie Cua, Herminigildo Mandanas, Agapito "Butz" Aquino and Rolando Andaya, business leader Donald Dee and former Prime Minister Cesar Virata.

GMA thanks civilians for help in arresting wanted kidnapers

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today thanked the civilians who helped in the apprehension of the most wanted kidnapers in the country even as she asked victims and their families to cooperate with the government in solving kidnapping cases and bringing the perpetrators to justice.

"I would like to thank our citizens who cooperated with our law enforcers. Now that we have made several spectacular arrests of the most wanted kidnapers, the next step is the prosecution," the President said.

The President made the statement when she handed over P2.5 million in cash rewards to three civilian informants in simple rites held this afternoon at the Heroes' Hall in Malacañang.

The three informants provided information that led to the arrest of Arnel Suellen, one of the most wanted kidnapers; and Waray-Waray kidnap-for-ransom (KFR) group leaders Zosimo Lauzon and Alexander Aldas, who both carry P1 million bounty on their heads.

Suellen was involved in the 2002 kidnapping of Martin Angelo Guevarra in Balibago, Angeles City; Lauzon was involved in at least eight KFR cases; while Aldas was involved in the Betty Chua Sy kidnap-slay and 10 other kidnapping cases.

Present during the ceremony were National Anti-Kidnapping Task Force (NAKTAF) chief and Interior and Local Government Secretary Angelo Reyes, Philippine National Police (PNP) chief Director General Hermogenes Ebdane, and NAKTAF Board of Advisers Teresita Ang-See, Julio Tan, Emily delos Santos, and Francis Chua.

The President said that as in previous awarding of rewards, the three informants were wearing masks to protect their identities.

The President said she is hoping that victims of kidnapping cases would persist in pursuing cases against their kidnapers until they are put behind bars.

"We hope the victims will cooperate in seeing their cases through. They should follow the example of Jackie Rowena Chiu who, despite her case dragging on for two years now, and despite difficulties, prosecution and harassment, she has persisted in seeing her case through to the end," the President said.

The President said the government continues to support the efforts of the prosecution.

She also congratulated the Department of Justice (DOJ), Senior State Prosecutors Richard Fadullon and Perfecto Lawrence Chua Cheng, and the others involved in the resolution of the Chiu case.

For his part, Reyes said the informants recognized the suspects through their various infomercials and posters.

So far, Reyes said they have neutralized 14 of the 25 most wanted kidnappers listed in their Order Of Battle, and captured 125 kidnapping suspects in the past nine months.

GMA's third post-electin 'pulong bayan' to tackle economic reform package

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's "Pulong Bayan" that would tackle her economic reform package will be held tomorrow, Wednesday, at the Ford Philippines plant in Sta. Rosa, Laguna.

Expected to be discussed are the President's 10-point agenda and five reform packages that she presented during her State of the Nation Address (SONA) last July.

The President would hold her third "Pulong Bayan" with Vice President Noli de Castro, and program hosts Secretary Ricardo Saludo and Giselle Sanchez.

Also expected to answer the queries of participants are Cabinet secretaries and officers of the Department of Trade and Industry (DTI), Department of Finance (DOF), Department of Agriculture (DA), Department of Science and Technology (DOST), National Economic Development Authority (NEDA), and the National Anti-Poverty Commission (NAPC).

The President would also meet with officials of Ford Philippines, before having lunch with the "pulong bayan" participants and the rest of the Ford employees at the automotive plant's canteen.

Palace thumbs down four-day work week plan

Malacañang today frowned on the proposed four-day work week in a bid to generate savings for the national government.

In his regular press briefing at the Palace, Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye described the proposal raised by certain pro-administration members of the House of Representatives as "counter-productive" and does not sit well with President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's desire of enhancing efficiency of the government service.

"I think this deserves further study because what we are trying to promote is more efficiency in government, and we would like to improve the work ethics among government workers," Bunye said.
